A singular case was tried before Mr. Baron Pollock and a special jury at Oxford, Eng., on July 5th, arising from the action of two ladies, who had been shopping in town, endeavoring to secure the whole of a railway compartment by spreading their purchases over the seats, so that it might appear that all were occupied. The guard having directed Capt. Preston and his wife, who were going by the same train, to take their seats in the compartment, the captain removed some of the parcels to obtain room for himself and lady. This was done, according to the evidence of an independent witness, in a perfectly cool manner; but the owner objected, especially to the removal of a large miliner's cardboard box, and there appears to have been some force used, as the defendant stated that her hand was cut by the string in her endeavor to prevent the removal by Capt. Preston. Leaving the carriage at Reading, the lady said she had been grossly insulted, and subsequently her husband wrote to the captain demanding an apology. This was very naturally refused, when a blow was inflicted on the plaintiff, but in the struggle which ensued the defendant's finger was broken. The action was for slander, libel, and assault. The judge held the words uttered by Mrs. de Windt were not slanderous, and that there was no publication of a libel in the letter sent to the plaintiff but the assault was regarded as proved, and the jury gave a verdict for Capt Preston, the plaintiff, awarding damages of £50. The fact that a railway passengar has only a legal right to the particular seat occupied, appears not to be recognized by many persons. Mrs. de Windt had not the slightest legal right to occupy the seats with her luggage, to the inconvenience of other passengers, nor to prevent their removal of it, if it annoyed them or occupied the space they desired to use. Luggage may be tolerated on the seats but it is only there on sufferance. Nevertheless, there are many persons who imagine that if they are the first occupants of a carriage, the can place their boxes, &c., where they please. It is a not uncommon practice for a lady to secure one corner seat for herself and to place a favorite box in the opposite one, thus monopolising two of the best and most comfortable places, and instances are not unknown of their regarding themselves as discourteously treated if their property is removed, and the seat occupied by a passenger. Of course there is neither legal nor moral defence of such selfish actions, and, as is instanced by the case under notice, the appeal to a husband to avenge the supposed wrong may end in his not even getting the better of the encounter, and having to pay a heavy sum in damages and costs.

Plantation Philosophy.

Smiles ain' no sign o' a good disserposishun. De red apple ain' allus de sweetes'.

Good sense doan' hanker arter fine close. De stalk ain' nigh so bright arter de co'n is ripe.

De abidin place o' good sense doan' b'ar no sartin mark. De rabbit doan' allus hide in de talles grass.

De man carried away wid hats is like de man carried away wid love. It is mighty seldom dat he's tempered wid good sense.

I hab never knowed or wise man to spread hisself. De mike kivers mo' groun' dan de grabbin' hoe, but it doan' go down nigh so deep.

HORRORS OF DELIRIUM TREMENS.

The Personal Experience of a Drunkard.

I had been on an unusually protracted jamboree, and to lighten me how to recall the immense quantity of mixed drinks I had imbibed during its continuance. For about three weeks I had been industriously putting one drunk on top of another, but during odd fleeting intervals of partial sobriety thought of "leaving up" and "swearing off" for a season. One night a shadow passed swiftly before my face, preceded by a peculiarly dull sensation in that portion of the cranium which is allotted by phrenologists to the organ of veneration. The numbness (which in the main very nearly expresses the nature of the sensation) from this point spread gradually downward. Its progress was so alarmingly apparent to me that I hastily made my excuses to the party, bade them good night, and repaired to my room, hoping that an application of cold water and a good night's rest might bring relief. Before reaching home the numbness had begun to effect my eyesight to such an extent that all objects had to me a shadowy, uncertain appearance, and to my vision the letters in the names of the streets on the corners ran together in such an unreliable, go-as-you-please manner that I wouldn't have known the name of the thoroughfare by any knowledge I gained from the sign. Arrived at my room I saturated a towel with ice cold water, enveloped my head with it, turned the light low and retired. While walking along the street, when my sight began to be affected, several times a shadow seemed to flit past me to the right and left and sometimes directly across my face—very similar to the flight of a bat. Now, while lying on the bed, this singular experience was often repeated, the shadow seemed to pass before my vision and the ceiling, completely obscuring it from view for the instant. I was perfectly aware that this was a vagary of but still hoped and believed that rest would bring relief. Confident in this conviction, I endeavored to compose myself to sleep, but the numbness increased rather than diminished, the bewildering shadows continued to annoy my vision, and I was soon convinced that sleep, under such circumstances, was out of the question.

A DISORDERED BRAIN,

At last the uncanny thoughts and feelings consequent upon my delirium became too much for my nerves to stand, and disturbed me to such an extent that I arose and repaired to the nearest all-night barroom hoping amid the cheerful convivial company I was sure to find there, to get rid of the oppressive sensations. I took a seat near a party who were engaged in some game of cards and endeavored to divert myself by watching them play. While doing so I imagined I saw a monstrous rat scoot across the floor. The sober second thought, which I was enabled to evolve from my reasoning faculties by an extraordinary exertion of will, demonstrated to me satisfactorily the utter absurdity of such an idea. I was now pretty well satisfied that I was in the early stages of the "jim jams," and on the impulse of the moment, realizingfully the cause to which was attributable my deplorable condition, firmly resolved that not another drop of liquor of any description should pass my lips as a beverage. Some of my intimate friends who were in the barroom, and who had noticed my singular conduct, engaged me in conversation, and from their remarks I discoved that they, too, were satisfied that I was in the early stages of the "horrors." I had now been without sleep for forty-eight hours, and while my reduced physical condition (I weighed only eighty-five pounds) as well as my mental disquietude sadly demanded rest, still I had not the slightest inclination to sleep. The next day and night passed in a similar way, and the fourth, fifth, and sixth. At the beginning of the fifth day I first experienced the distress and suffering arising from loss of sleep, but, in spite of all efforts to compose myself, not one moment's slumber came to my relief.

If any one had assured me that the sacrifice of a hand or an arm would insure me a nap of fifteen minutes' duration, I would gladly have submitted myself to the tender mercies of the most unskilled sawbones in that behalf, and could have undergone the operation, too, without the administration of chloroform My was now so intense that I made two deliberate attempts to destroy myself—once by the gunpowder and once by the water route—but was circumvented by watchful friends.

SUFFERING FROM WANT OF SLEEP,

Having reached this condition of mind and body I was at length prevailed upon to seek medical advice, but before I enter upon the details of my visit to the doctor and its results I propose to describe some of the vagaries which took possession of my disordered brain. It is proper that I should explain, in this connection, that, so long as I was in a barroom or any other place where general conversation, or singing, or general hilarity was in progress, I was comparatively free from the annoying "presence" to which I have alluded, but the moment I repaired to my room, turned the light low, and strived to sleep, the room was at once peopled (if I may be allowed that expression) with grotesque and hideous shapes that are not satisfactorily accounted for in any work on natural history I ever encountered. Tawny little devils, about three inches in height, sat upon my shoulder and peered into my face with the most terrible grimaces. Every now and then troops of them would rush pell-mell down the length of my arm, and make marvellous leaps from the ends of my fingers, vanishing for the time being, only to appear in some other locality, having lost none of their horrible and repellant ugliness during their temporary absence. Then strains of music greated my ears, as if rendered by a Lilliputian brass band, and raising myself in bed and resting my body upon my left arm I beheld a multitude of the tawny tribe marching in military order and keeping step to the miniature music—their tramp being as distinct to me as if caused by the tread of elephants. On their heads they wore tin hats or helmets. As they passed along on the floor, regiment after regiment, brigade after brigade, they greeted me by name, and vociferously invited me to come down and "fall in." While I gazed upon this grotesque vision, suddenly every one of those tin hats began to rise slowly from their heads—up, up, up, until they almost touched the ceiling; and while marvelling upon this remarkable transformation, and leaning forward to secure a better view, the phantasm vanished in thin air. Now my attention was called to the odd conduct of the lower window sash, which was in its frame, and of the door, which was swinging to and fro. Of course, in the moment or so that I was enabled to concentrate my thoughts, I remembered that I had secured both the window and door; but the movement seemed so genuine that I was actually impelled to rise and satisfy myself of the fact by touching them. Having done this I returned to bed, determined to secure some sleep if possible, and, turning my face to the wall to avoid the light, was confronted by a hideous snake coiled on the pillow, apparently anxious to put its fangs where they would do the most good—judged from a snaky standpoint. That settled it! No amount of money could have induced me to pass the balance of the night in that room, and I hastily vacated, again seeking relief in the rough and noisy crowd of a barroom, thankful for a few minutes' respite from such horrible illusions. My stomach peremptorily rejected the little nourishment I attempted to absorb; in fact I had no cravings for even the most inviting viands.

RAPIDLY MOVING UP AND DOWN

It was while in this most pitiable plight that I at last had recourse to a physician. I detailed to him my condition, described the vagaries of which I had been the victim, and my earnest longing for and utter inability to sleep. "Of course you are taking liquor once in a while to taper off on?" "Of course I am not," I replied: "I know that liquor caused me this trouble, and I shall not touch it again." "But my dear fellow," expostulated the doctor, "in your condition, if you suddenly stop its use altogether, you will soon die." "Very well," I rejoined, "if I die you can bet your bottom dollar I'll die sober. But for God's sake, doctor, give me something that will make me sleep." Thus urged, he administered what would be, under ordinary circumstances, a powerful opiate; but it had no more effect on me as an inducement to sleep than so much water. This I reported to the doctor, and begged him to renew his efforts and spare no means within the scope of his skill to produce the much desired result. The physician's face bore a grave, troubled look, and after a few minutes deep thought he said: "Young man, I will be candid with you. Your condition is critical, probably more so than you suspect. If you don't sleep, and that very soon, you must either die or

BECOME A RAVING MANIAC.

I am about to prepare for you a most powerful potion. If you decide to take it, the result will be that you will secure a long refreshing sleep, and waken in a desirable state for supplemental treatment, or—you will never wake at all. You must accept these fearful chances if you decide to take the potion."

The possibility (aye, probability) of death as the result had no terrors for me at that moment, and caused no hesitation. I hastened to my room, swallowed the sleeping draught, sank into a sound and refreshing slumber, and, on awakening, found that I had been locked in the arms of the drowsy god for nearly nineteen hours. I awoke feeling like a new man. The numbness had subsided, the tawny little devils were conspicuous by their absence, and I was hungry as a wolf. I believe I could have tackled a roasted ox with a very fair prospect of absorbing all but the bones. However, I realized that in my condition I must take food in moderation, and governed myself accordingly in ordering my first "square meal" for nearly a week. Much to my delight I found that my stomach had "resumed," and concluded to permit the gastric juice to perform its allotted duty.

My gradual but sure recovery dated from that hour. But I had an awful close call. My will power was of sufficient strength to enable me to keep my vow to abstain from intoxicants, and as one of the happy results I gained in four months time about fifty-five pounds in weight. From that day to this—over ten years—I have faithfully remained a total abstinent, and I tell you in all seriousness, that you couldn't pile enough money in the largest sized room to induce me to violate the pledge which I made to myself during that dreadful epoch when I first so vividly realized what a fearful wreck I had become under the dominion of strong drink.

An Insect with Hot Feet.

Some of the insects have electric organs for defense. Gen. Davis, of the British army, who was a famous insect collector, once picked up a wheel bug in the West India Islands, and received a blow that paralyzed his arm for some time. As he shook the insect off he noticed where it had stood on his hand six red marks, the impression of its feet. Kirby and Spence also refer to this peculiarity of the insect, and other naturalists have received shocks from certain of the luminous beetles. In one case, that of Capt. Blakeney, life was almost destroyed. The gentleman took up an unknown caterpillar, and immediately received such a shock that his entire right side became paralyzed, and for a long time he was dangerously ill.

Black vs. White.

A European who has travelled on foot four thousand miles down the African coast declares that in manliness and shrewdness, in intelligence and honesty, and in the essentials of government, the black man is quite as good as the white. Boil down your idea of civilization as much as you please, and unless you make it consist of the mere use of pocket-handkerchiefs, you will find that these so-called savages are as civilized as any Europeans. They are traders, and keen traders too. They have their own religion, their own laws, and their own patriarchal methods of life. All the best of them are Mohammedans. They administer justice in their own way, and show more hospitality to the stranger than does the ordinary foreigner. They have no penny newspapers, but they have what still serves the Spanard and the Portuguese as a very effective substitute in the shape of their barber shops, which are the accepted news centres of the neighborood. Every one goes to the barber shops to learn the news.

Getting a Boy Out of Bed.

Mamma (at foot of the stairs)—Come Bobby, dear, it's time little boys were out of bed. Breakfast is nearly ready.

Bobby—Yes'm-um m

Big sister (a little later)—Bob-by-e-e, breakfast is on the table. Come right down this minute.

Bobby—Yes-yes-um-m.

Old Gentleman (a little later still)—Robert!!

Robert—Yes, sir!

The Standard.

MARKDALE AUG. 7, 1884.

New Improvements.

The present age is full of inventions; some of them wise, and otherwise; but the other day we devoted a spare hour in "Milling," which our enterprising friend, Ford, has introduced. The process by which flour is manufactured, is not only a novelty, but solves a chemical problam which has long held a discussion in ur editorial ranks.

Under the old process of "Mashing" grain, previous to seperation (bran from kernel) a certain amount of injurious fermentation took place, during this process. The chemical sanitary committee of the City of New York, reported five years ago, that the present (then) state of "Milling," was the direct cause of nine-tenths of the endemic disease that plagued their city. However, a better state of things has taken place in our own country. Mr. J. W. Ford has introduced a very expensive assortment of machinery in his grist mill, by which the flour is extracted from the bran, without producing the noxious effect before described. The wheat is first crushed, and then carried by an elevator to the second story, where it descends to another, and finer crusher; and, in a similar manner, until five such operations are gone through without in the least heating the mass. Another feature is the putting the bran through a novel process, by which a fine quality of flour is extracted—every atom of albuminous food is extracted; and our only objection to Mr. Ford's dissectant mode of giving a large yield of Flour to the bushel, is, that it will cheat our poor "bossy" of a large share of the nutriment she ought to receive. Nevertheless, we are not going to blame Mr. Ford: We'll give "bossy" a double dose, to make up for deficiencies. We trust, however, that Mr. Cave, the contractor and builder of Mr. Ford's Mill Works, will not construct any more in this locality, as it will have a tendency to cause a growl amongst the housewives who have milch cows.

Better Than The Best.

GRAND OFFER GOOD FOR AUGUST ONLY.

We will send to any adress the STANDARD and The Weekly News the balanse of 1884 for 40 cents, or the STANDARD and Montreal Star, six months for 65 cents, or the three papers mentioned the balance of the year for 70 cents. This is the best oportunity yet presented to secure the news at a small cost. Do not delay, but send in your subscrsption early in the month and thereby secure the greater bargain. The cash must accompany the order in all cases. Mail all orders to STANDARD office, Markdale.

Personals.

Miss Lizzie Mundy, of Penetanguishene, is visiting at Mr. D. J. Shanahan's.

Mr. Thos. Mathews left last week on a trip to Perth, he went by boat from Toronto and will return by the Ontario & Quebec Railway.

Mrs. McDonald, of Toronto, is visiting her sister-in-law Mrs. A. McDougall, of this village.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Walker of Manitoulin, are visiting friends in this place,

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Reid, of the Queen's Hotel, Dundalk, spent Wednesday afternoon in Markdale. Mr. Reid gave us a pleasant call.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the Standard.

MR. EDITOR,—I see your Meaford Road correspondant is a good deal better at denying than at proving anything. He talks about the discussion of the meeting. I always thought it was a subject or topic that was discussed and not a meeting. The S. School is not a private, but an organization, and the members of any organization are the proper parties to authorize any one whom they think fit to publish their minutes or any part of them, and as I said before that the Secretary is more likely to give a correct report than your correspondent, who was not at the meeting at all. He says that report had it that there was a decision arrived at about the excursion. He would do well to write facts and not reports always. He then speaks of me flying off at a tangent! Well, I must confess that I don't know much about geometry, and so cannot well make out what he means by this expression except it be that he is the curved line, and I the straight one meeting it. Is that it? He says he is as good a friend of the Sabbath School as I am. Well perhaps so, I will leave others to judge. But I think I am perfectly safe in saying that he has not been in the school to take any part in it more than twice a year, as the Secretary's book will show; and maybe he would make a good teacher, or even Superintendent, but I am afraid he is spoiling badly for want of practice. However I am glad to hear he is a friend of the S. School, and hope he will continue to be, and that he will show it elsewhere as well as he does in the columns of your valuable paper.

Thanking you for your space.

I am yonrs truly,

W. B.

Too Good to Miss.

Markdale, August 2nd, 1884.

To the Editor of the Standard.

DEAR SIR,—In your last issue I noticed a letter by one M. Norris. He starts out to tell the good folks of Markdale something about the wonderful country called "Lyon's Head." He fails, however, to tell us much about the place; but with a faint effort he tells us a little about his journey to Owen Sound. He describes his fellow-creatures who accompanied him on the journey as a fat man; a tall, lean man; and the conductor—a strapping, pompous fellow, etc. Mr. N. seems to have a spite against railroad men by the way in which he expresses his feelings towards them. Whether Mr. N. was trying to travel on a half ticket and got put off, or whether he at one time tried to raise himself to one of those honorable positions as punching tickets, we are not prepared to say; but in the meantime Mr. N. must not compare railroading to school teaching. It was certainly something new for him to travel by rail, by the way he takes every little thing in. He, as I suppose, does the most of his travelling by foot, or probably lumber wagon. This in which he takes a great interest in is nothing new to railroad men, only an every day occurrence. The side show which Mr. N. describes as being really refreshing and most beautiful, is easily accounted for. You see Mr. N. has only one eye, hence we get a beautiful illustration of a side show, therefore if he had the other eye no doubt but Mr. N. would have furnished us with a more exact account of his journey. He only seeing one side of the show. If he had changed his seat, we dare say he would have seen a great deal more. And when he got to Owen Sound he gave us a brief account in the way which his companions left the car. They all more or less seemed out of the way only himself. Probably a little hot coffee with a stick in it would make this difference, as he seemed to think it was raining lanterns or some other thing he could not describe until he touched upon religious subjects which probably wakened him up. If your readers had seen the 2 x 6 valise which he carried it might lead them to think it was a side show itself, and no wonder such were his imaginations when the crowd met his gaze. Our letter is growing rather long, but we would advise Mr. N. to take the other side of the car on his return, and furnish us with the other side of the show, also a full report of one side of the Salvation Army would not at all discourage us. The account of the newly married couple was simply immense, but the way he seemed to follow them up would lead one to think he would like a similar position, of course not with the same lady. Go on friend N., only draw it milder next time. Thanking Mr. Editor for allowing me this space in your paper.

RAILROADER.

Lyons Head Continued.

Staying in Owen Sound a few days, and having done the town in other respects, I must needs see and hear the Salvation Army. To this end, after tea on Saturday evening July 5th, I girded up my loins, so to speak, and set out for the market square which I reached just in time to see the Army enter it with flourish of banners and music: At the word of command the Army gets on its knees and is soon surrounded by a promicuous crowd of sinners of both sexes, some of whome listen respectfully while others treat the preformance with considerable levity. The Captain leads in a prayer in which she gives the Lord a description of her audience the reverse of flattering. Indeed she plainly states that we are going straight to the devil and that we need to right about turn pretty soon or we'll reach our destination.

After a short time we adjourned to the barracks where the performance was repeated on a large scale, the singing of rather grotesque hymns with song tunes and interminable choruses being a leading feature of the exercises. Then there was speaking, anyone who chose taking a part. All the speaking amounted to about this much, that the speaker was once a pretty bad citizen, which no one seemed to doubt, and, that he, or she, was now saved and free from sin, which every right minded man or woman hoped was the case. Of course there was a good deal of advise to us poor miserable sinners to come forward and do likewise but no one obeyed. Then there were prayers similar to the first one, and more music vocal and instrumental, especially the latter. Indeed the noise was at times almost intolerable, and while they spoke glibly of casting out the devil, I couldn't help wondering whether the noise had something to do with this "Consummation devoutly to be wished." Certainly if his majesty has anything corresponding to the human nervous system, or an ear for music, the wonder is, that he doesn't leave sooner.

One can hardly help smiling at some of the incidents that occur at some of their meetings. At this particular, one a soldier was praying fervently and just as he was expatiating on the vileness and misery of his hearers an enthusiastic fellow soldier shouted "Hallelujah" with a vim that was truly startling, and as if the fact of our being sinners was a most delightful piece of news. It forcibly reminded me of a somewhat similar incident that took place at a prayermeeting not not a thousand miles from Lyons Head. Attending the meeting was a very earnest old brother who was also very deaf: But the fact that he didn't hear everything, in no wise restricted the number and fervency of his responses. On one occasion some one in praying quoted the text "The divel as a roaring lion goeth about seeking whom he may devour" when the deaf brother convulsed the worshippers by a fervent "Glory be to his holy name."

Another thing that struck me was the nonchalant, almost flippant, use of names and expressions usually looked upon as sacret. One couldn't help wishing that they were uttered more reverently. Speaking seriously, few thoughtful persons I think can attend their meetings without being sorely puzzled as to the propriety and utility of the whole thing. Of course if they do good they can well afford to endure the sneers and the affected superiority of their opposers what if they are doing more harm than good: What if their noise and childish display and apparent irreverence repels more than they attract, and only for the time and by virtue of their novelty? Who shall say? Though the town opinions differ widely as to their methods and their success. Some say they are doing good; others deny this; while still others say that they have done good; but their day of usefulness in Owen Sound is past. Some respectable citizens join in and help them, while others stand aloof in cool contempt of the whole thing. As for the rabble, they seem to look on the Army as the lawful butt for their puny shafts of rediculc. Perhaps Gamaliel's counsel to the Jews of old is equally applicable to the opposers of the Salvation Army of the present.

On Monday and Tuesday I visited the High School where the examinations were in progress and couldn't help sympathizing with the unhappy victims of these barbarities of civilization. On Tuesday evening I took passage for Wiarton by the Pacific. The passage up was extremely pleasant, everything was seen so distinctly yet softened and beautified by the moonlight, Islands and capes and buoys and rocky cliffs and woodland shores seemed to belong to fairy-land rather than to this grim, old, care-laden, world of ours.

On Wednesday morning I awoke with a sense of coming calamities, I hurry into my clothes, and then into the dining room where porridge fish, potatoes, coffie, and toast, disappeared Yankee fashion for the Lions Head Stage is coming and there's no time to consider hygiene. I walk a few rods to the top of the hill and there is the Stage; The cargo consists of the following items:—on the front seat, a 200 lb. man from Lyons Head, and the driver; on the other seat, a man and two woman from Saukes Bay; at the back, some pakages and a keg of beer; under the seats, a miscellaneous assortment of valises, boxes &c., in the front right hand corner, a large stone jug of whiskey with a wad of bed-ticking in lieu of a cork; and in the other corner the mail bag. The driver relenquishes his seat and the rains to the fat man; I take the place of the latter, resting my feet on her majest y's mail, the driver proper alternately runs behind and mounts on the beer barrel for a rest; and away we go.

"Six precious souls (beside the spirits) and all agog to dash through thick and thin."

The first few miles of the road is pretty good and we enjoy the ride immensely, cracking jokes, and singing songs, and chaffing one another to our heart's content. But soon a change comes over the spirit of our dreams. There are the rocks. We hold our breath. The driver nervously tightens his hold of the reins. Bang goes the right fore wheel against a rock, the whiskey jug bounds into the air and alights on the toes of the fat man, a shadow comes over his face and I can hear him muttering energetically under his breath, perhaps he is reciting Milton or Shakespeare or some other of those old humbugs who philosophize so beautifully on the patient endurance of evils. He may be reciting a psalm, or a Peter Noster; but I have my doubts however their is no time to speculate, the same wheel strikes another boulder, while my side sinks into a hollow, and the fat man is hurled upon me with the force of an avelanche, crushing me into utter helplessness. We pack ourselves up, feel for damages and prepare for the next. Here it is a spot covered with large stones where the bumping and shaking is simply indiscribable. But the end is not yet, suddenly the waggon drops bodily into a hollow in the roads, so sudden is its decent that we do not follow for a moment; but remain in the air. The fat man looks like a great newly fledged bird trying his wings for the first time. He looks as if he were about to fly away and he at rest; but he doesn't, In sted of that he sits down suddenly and forcibly Again the shadow steals over his face, and the recitation begins but ends abruptly, for another jolt takes place, and I am shot against him so violently as to stop his breath and his speech at the same time this continues with short periods of repose until amid barking of dogs and blast of horn we puled up at "Coldwell's" the half way house, for dinner, Mine host of the halfway is well known and is a character in his way, His jolly face, his strong Milesian brogue, his keen wit, his ever ready repartee, and his great good nature, render him a favorit with travellers, notwithstanding that he loves the bottle too well, and has a penchant for using certain verbs and adjectives of a highly improper character.

The road from Coldwell's to Lions Head is but a repetition of the other half, now climbing over rocky hills, now dipping into picturesque wooded valleys, and presently emerging into a clearing, where the smooth, level, road seems like the calm between storm bursts. After four or five hours paintul riding the stage halts and your traveller alights a short distance from home. A few minutes tramp through woods and clearings, and there it is! home! everywhere the symbol of love and peace and rest.

A hearty supper, a few hours answering all sorts of questions about Markdale and its people and some music, prepare me for bed where I soon fall asleep and dream that I am riding on the moon on an earthquake, with a team of volcanoes for horses, a very fat mastodon for driver, and a geyser in the corner for a whiskey jug.

M. NORRIS.

Williamsford.

Carson Price is building a large addition to his store.

Mr. Vogan is doing a large business he takes 200 lbs of meat per week from Rutledge of Markdale, the butcher.

Lilburn's new steam saw mill is doing fine work, and runs like a top.

A number of Italians are working on the gravel train here.

Preperations are being made for the Agricultural show.

What we may Expect.

A bountiful harvest.

And general prosperity.

Lively times over the Scott Act forthwith.

Our police trustees to complete the repairing of sidewalks by Christmas.

Some one to get their leg broken in the rickety Station platform.

And afterwards, the company to put down a new one.

Another change in the railyay time table shortly.

And then close connections with the Ontario & Quebec to Montreal.

A learge increase in the circulation of the STANDARD.

And another wedding shortly.

MARKDALE ROLLER MILL.—Mr. J. W. Ford has just completed the overhauling of the flour mill having re-fitted it throughout and put in a full line of rolls, this has been done at considerable expense, the change having cost over $4,000. He has now a first class mill and will be in a position forthwith to give the very best satisfaction and let every man have his grist home with him the day he brings it to mill. We bespeak for Mr. Ford a most generous patronage.

METHODIST GARDEN PARTY.—Notwithstanding the rain yesterday evening there were over 100 assembled at the garden party, and had it not been for the shower, we are confident the attendance would have been double that number, as it was a very pleasant time was spent. It was held at the residence of Mr. Wm. Armstrong, adjoining the village, to whom the Ladie Aid Society are very thankfull for his generous hospitality in throwing open his house and grounds for the occasion. Mr. Armstrong's farm is one of the most beautifull places in Ontario, comprising 200 acres of choice land in a magnificent location, the grounds surrounding the residence are beautifully laid out, has an abundance of shade and ornamental trees and is kept with commendable care and taste making it altogether a most delightfull place of residence.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and ... twenty-five cents.

DEATHS.

WALSH—In Glenelg, on the 1st ... Mr. James Welsh aged 72 years.

His ways were just;
In righteousness he put his trust
To meet his Saviour—God.
And from earths release
He found a place
Unknown, but to the good.

Monthly Fairs.

Markdale—Saturday before ... erton.

Chatsworth—Monday before ... ham.

Dundalk—Tuesday before ... ville.

Flesherton—Monday before ... ville.

Orangeville—The second Tu... in each month.

Mount Forest—Third Wed... in each month.

Priceville—Monday before ...

Durham—Third Tuesday in ... month.

Hanover—Monday before ...

Walkerton—Last Wednes... every month.

New Butcher Sh...

The best meats the country can ... kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS ... THE TOWN WHERE ORDER...

A share of public patronage res... solicited.

Remember the stand in McNeil's ...

RUTLEDGE & TRELF...

181

325 ACRES.

FONTHILL NURSERI...

THE LARGEST IN THE DOM...

SALESMEN WANT...

To begin work at once on Fall sales ... employment at fixed salaries to all w... work. Men and Women ... pleasant

WORK THE YEAR RO...

Good agents are earning from $4... per month and expenses.

Terms and outfit free. Address

STONE & WELLINGTON ... Toronto

TO SCHOOL TRUST...

The undersigned is manufacturing ... cellent assortment of School Furnitur...

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and ... TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the ... design and most approved pattern ... recommended by School Trustees and ... ers, for cheapness, comfort and comp... wherever tried. An assortment of Fa... School Bells kept always on hand. ... catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW Mc...

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath M...

Having made extensive improvem... my Grist Mill I feel confident I ca... good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON H...

Chopping Done Every D...

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled ... shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALW... ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Elm, ... Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs w...

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugen...

AN ACROSTIC.

Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a man
It's true, Lardine's the best oil
Nothing its equal, cast's aside
External its use, on every coil

Use Lardine Machine Oil unexcelled ... machinery, sold manufacturer, McColl ... Toronto.

HAGYARD'S

YELLOW OI...

CURES RHEUMATIS...

FREEMAN'S

WORM POWDER...

Are pleasant to take. Contain their ... Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effec... destroyer of worms in Children or Adu...

WALTHAM,

ELGIN, SWISS

WATCHES.

Large stock Clocks, Quad... Plated Ware, Wedding ... 18 k., Rings, Chains, ... Lazzarus & Morris and ... Specks, good Violin Str... Musical Instruments.

Careful and accurate re... ing personally attended to ... fully warranted.

Square Dealing. - Fair Pr...

W. A. BROWN.

MARKDALE

Local and Other Item...

NOTICES in these columns intended to b... any individual or Society will be charge... cents a line for the first insertion and ... cents a line each subsequent insertion.

MCFARLAND advertises nothing but fac...

THE brick work on Benson's build... is complete.

MCFARLAND don't keep trashy auc... goods.

A LITTLE sun and air; improves ... little son and heir.

MCFARLAND pays spot cash for all ... goods.

THE only people who enjoys h... health are the doctors.

MCFARLAND imports direct from Europe... markets.

IT is a weak religion that cann... stand on its own merits.

Dye Stuffs at the Medical Hall. Turner & Co.

A LARGE quantity of shipping ta... at the STANDARD office.

SEE J. R. Trimble's Chashmeres (... shades) before you make your selections.

MARKDALE cheese factory has mad... their second sale of cheese.

A CHOICE lot of Tweeds and Suitings ju... opened out at J. R. Trimble's, cheap for cas...

IT takes as much wit not to di... please a woman as it does to pleas... her.

FOR cheap Grain Cradles and Harves... Mitts go to J. R. Trimble's. He is bound t... plea se you.

200 quire of paper and 5,000 ... envelopes just opened at the STANDARD ... office.

J. R. TRIMBLE'S is the place to get the ... newest, cheapest and best selection of goods ... in Markdale.

THE whisper of a beautiful woman ... can be heard further than the loudest ... yells of duty.

J. R. TRIMBLE has received this week large ... consignments of seasonable goods in all lines ... cheaper than ever.

WHEN will the married people of ... Markdale have their pic-nic to Eugenia ... Falls? Don't all speak at once.

1000 yards Black and Colored Empress ... Velveteens: lovely goods: Direct Importa... tion. at McFarland's.

LOVE IS BLIND; that is why the ... lover never see's the dog until it is too ... late to save the seat of his pants.

National Pills the favorite purgative and ... anti-bilious medicine, they are mild and ... thorough.

Correspondents will please remem... ber to forward their letter so as to ... reach us by Tuesday each week.

I will give bargains in Watches, Clocks, ... etc., for cash, during the balance of this ... month. Call and invest. W. A. Brown, ... jeweller.

BUSINESS MEN.—Order your billheads ... in good time, a large stock of excellent ... material just opened at this office.

MCFARLAND has built up his immense and ... increasing business by keeping sound, ... reliable goods, and selling them at a reason...

MR. SMITH, the barber has a good ... Winchester repeating rifle he wishes ... to exchange for a double barrel shot ...

MR. [illegible] now giving up business in ... Markdale. He is going to give the people ... a chance to buy goods yet before he move to ... [illegible] Bay's Lake.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and D... twenty five cents.

DEATHS.

WALSH—In Glenelg, on the 12th Mr. James Walsh aged 72 years.

His ways were just;
In righteousness he put his trust,
To meet his Saviour—God.
And from earths release
He found a place
Unknown, but to the good.

Monthly Fairs.

Markdale—Saturday before F... erton.

Chatsworth—Monday before ...ham.

Dundalk—Tuesday before O... ville.

Flesherton—Monday before Or... ville.

Orangeville—The second Tue... in each month.

Mount Forest—Third Wedn... in each month.

Priceville—Monday before Dur...

Durham—Third Tuesday in ...month.

Hanover—Monday before Dun...

Walkerton—Last Wednesda... every month.

New Butcher Sho...

The best meats the country can p... kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS ... THE TOWN WHERE ORDER...

A share of public patronage respe... solicited.
Remember the stand in McNea's bl...

RUTLEDGE & TRELFO...
181

325 ... RES. ...

FONTHILL NURSERIE...
THE LARGEST IN THE DOMI...

SALESMEN WANT... begin work at once on Fall sales. ...ployment at fixed salaries to all wi... ...k. Men and Women ca... pleasant

WORK THE YEAR RO... ...ood agents are earning from $40 ...month and expenses. ...erms and outfit free. Address STONE & WELLINGTON, ...
Toronto, ...

SCHOOL TRUST...

...undersigned is manufacturing ...cellent assortment of

School Furnitur... ...isting of SCHOOL SEATS and D... ...CHERS' DESKS, etc., of the ...n and most approved patte... ...mended by School Trustees and ... ...cheapness, comfort and compa... ...ever tried. An assortment of Far... ...Bells kept always on hand. S... ...te to Chatsworth P. O.
ANDREW McG...

EUGENIA
...st, Saw and Lath M...
...ng made extensive improveme... ...st Mill I feel confident I can ...atisfaction.

FLOUR ALWAYS ON H...

...epping Done Every D...

...m Sawing and Bills Filled o... ...notice.
...ER AND LATH ALW... ON HAND.
...Butternut, White Ash, Black ..., Pine and Hemlock Logs w...
M. AKITT, Eugeni...

AN ACROSTIC.

Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a man
...t's true, Lardine's the best O...
Nothing its equal, cest's aside t...
Exte...nal use, on every soil,
...dine Machine Oil unexcelled ...
...sold manufacturer, McColl ...

...AGYARD'S
...LLOW OIL
...ES RHEUMATISM
...FREEMAN'S
...M POWDERS
...sant to take. Contain their ow... Is a safe, sure, and effectua... ...of worms in Children or Adul...

WALTHAM,

WATCHES.

Large stock Clocks, Quadruple Plated Ware, Wedding Rings 18 k., Rings, Chains, Seals, Lazzarus & Morris and Boss Specks, good Violin Strings, Musical Instruments.

Careful and accurate repairing personally attended to and fully warranted.

Square Dealing. - Fair Prices.

W. A. BROWN.
MARKDALE.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

McFARLAND advertises nothing but facts.

THE brick work on Benson's building is complete.

McFARLAND don't keep trashy auction goods.

A LITTLE sun and air; improves a little son and heir.

McFARLAND pays spot cash for all his goods.

THE only people who enjoys bad health are the doctors.

McFARLAND imports direct from Europerian markets.

It is a weak religion that cannot stand on its own merits.

Dye Stuffs at the Medical Hall, A. ...rner & Co.

A LARGE quantity of shipping tags at the STANDARD office.

SEE J. R. Trimble's Chashmeres (all ...ades) before you make your selections.

MARKDALE cheese factory has made their second sale of cheese.

A CHOICE lot of Tweeds and Suitings just ...pened out at J. R. Trimble's, cheap for cash.

It takes as much wit not to displease a woman as it does to please her.

FOR Cheap Grain Cradles and Harvest ...ts go to J. R. Trimble's. He is bound to ...se you.

200 quire of paper and 5,000 envelopes just opened at the STANDARD office.

J. R. TRIMBLE'S is the place to get the newest, cheapest and best selection of goods in Markdale.

THE whisper of a beautiful woman can be heard further than the loudest yells of duty.

J. R. TRIMBLE has received this week large ...signments of seasonable goods in all lines ...earer than ever.

WHEN will the married people of Markdale have their pic-nic to Eugenia Falls? Don't all speak at once.

1000 yards Black and Colored Empress ...lveteen: lovely goods: Direct Importa... ...at Markdale.

LOVE IS BLIND; that is why the lover never sees the dog until it is too late to save the seat of his pants.

National Pills the favorite purgative and ...tibilious medicine, they are mild and ...ct right.

Correspondents will please remember to forward their letter so as to reach us by Tuesday each week.

I WILL give bargains in Watches, Clocks, ...c., for cash, during the balance of this month. Call and invest. W. A. Brown, ...weller.

BUSINESS MEN.—Order your billheads in good time, a large stock of excellent material just opened at this office.

McFARLAND has built up his immense and ever increasing business by keeping sound, ...liable goods, and selling them at a reasonable profit.

MR. SMITH, the barber has a good Winchester, repeating rifle he wishes to exchange for a double barrel shot gun.

McFARLAND is not giving up business in Markdale. He is going to give the people ...lue of cheap goods yet before he moves to ...is farm near Bell's Lake.

THE English Church and Presbyterian S. Schools held their pic-nic this week in Walkers bush. They were both a success.

BIG SALE of remnants now going on at McFarland's. Remnants of Tweeds, remnants of Prints, remnants of Dress Goods, remnants of Flaunels, remnants of Cashmeres, less than cost at McFarland's.

The A. O. U. W. excursion to Owen Sound on Monday last was a success. A large number went on at this station and a good time was spent.

PAIN from indigestion or sick head ache is instantly relieved by one dose of Rejuvinator Bitters, made from roots and herbs.

NEXT Saturday will be cattle fair in Markdale, and we hope to see a large turn out, the meat market are not very satisfactory, but that should not hinder a good fair.

The magical power over pain that Hagyard's Yellow Oil possesses, outrivals the marvels of ancient times. It acts in a natural manner to subdue inflammation; cures Rheumatism, Croup, Deafness, Sore Throat, and painful injuries.

What would you think of a person who would stop and look over your shoulder while reading a private letter? It's just as bad to read printers copy over the compositor's shoulder.

FOR SALE.—One pair of first class bay mares 3 and 4 years old in good condition, guaranteed in every way weight from 1,300 to 1,400 each. Apply to J. R. Trimble, Markdale.

MR. PLEWES is weekly replenishing his stock so that his customers may depend on fresh groceries every time. He also keeps an excellent brand of Oatmeal, Indian Corn Meal, Graham flour and cracked wheat &c.,

If you should be so unfortunate as to Burn Scald or Wound yourself in any way the proper thing to keep clean and heal it is McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Insist on having, and be sure you get, McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Price 25 cents. Hill Bro's. has the genuine. J. & J. 2

MR. GEO. HUTCHINSON and Sons of the 7th line Euphrasia, is bringing in a new "Abel" Threshing Machine, which they well have ready for the first fall wheat threshing.

THE generous man wins gold to share it; the miser; to spare it; the banker, to lend it; the foolish man, to spend it; the wise man to use it; the gambler, to loose it.

EVERY business man should have his business, name and address printed on his letter paper, and envelopes, it looks so much better and only costs a trifle over the cost of the bare paper.

THE study of literature nourishes youth, entertains old age, adorns prosperity, solaces adversity, is delightful at home, unobtrusive abroad, deserts not by day or by night, in journey nor by retirement.

A COMPLETE stock of Harvest Tools, Cradles, Forks, Rakes and Binding Mitts, etc. selling very cheap at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

MR. GEO. FLEMING. Post Master of Berkeley, has erected a fine house in the center of the town where the P.O. will be kept. This will be a great convenience to the public who had to travel nearly quarter of a mile out of the way to the old stand.

REDUCED PRICES.—D. J. Shanahan will run off the balance of his large and superior stock of wheel'd rigs at reduced prices in order to clear out the whole stock before commencing on his winter work. Give him a call and examine for yourselves and get prices.

A FULL stock of those celebrated Self Sealing Gem Jars and all other kinds of Preserving Jars selling very cheap. Call and examine at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

UNDERTAKING.—Mr. R. Askin of this place has an extensive and well stocked undertaking establishment comprising coffins, caskets, shrouds, and all necessary furnishing together with a very handsome and valuable hearse. He also does all kinds of picture framing on short notice. Next door to J. R. Trimble's.

THE BEST YET.—By special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Montreal Star together with the STANDARD six months for 65 cents. The Star is allowed to be the best family paper published while the STANDARD is hard to beat as a local paper, and the two are offered for about the price of one. Send in your subscription at once to this office for one or the both, you can have the Star for 30 cents or the STANDARD for 35 cents to any address, balance of year, cash in advance.

THRESHERS—you will always find the best machine oils at Haskett Bro's.

A. O. U. W.—A monster excursion from Fergus, Elora, Salem, under the auspices of the Ancient Order of United Workmen passed through to Owen Sound on Thursday last, there were 21 cars drawn by two heavy engines. The O. S. Advertiser says it was the largest excursion party that ever visited that town.

THE Editor of the Advance endeavors to give the public to understand that our tender for the printing of East Grey Ag. Prize List was a crooked one and therefore dishonest. It was nothing of the kind, It was both straight and honest, and had he not thrown out uncalled for insinuations in reference to the job, we should not have referred to it publicly.

WE trust all our subscribers will feel interested in the prosperity of the STANDARD, and to that end keep us thoroughly posted with the happenings of their several neighborhoods. Get the facts together and send them while fresh; don't be afraid of poor spelling and bad handwriting, we will fix it up, there's not a locality but something transpires occasionally which the people of the next neighborhood would like to know; then send along the news from all sides and our word for it, the STANDARD will team with the most interest ing news.

Artemesia Council.

This Council met on July 7th, members all present. The Reeve in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

A letter from John Olliver was presented and read. A petition from J. H. Stewart, re 10th Con. presented and read.

Accounts as follows:—Jas. Stewart repairing bridge $7; R. J. Sproule, postage $4.90; H. Cairns, repairing scraper $1.10; J. Hargraye, gravel for road $4.50; Moffatt Bros., for scrapers, $120; W. Wright, timber for culvert $3; the above were ordered to be paid.

Patrick Welsh presented an account for right of way on 9th Con.—$100 which was laid on the table. Hugh Walton presented an account $110 right of way in town line, Artemesia and Euphrasia.

The committee appointed to examine gravel roads presented their report recommending an expenditure on the gravel roads as follows:—Between Flesherton and the Station $150; Station and Priceville $100; near Markdale $75; East from Flesherton $50; South of Flesherton $25, which on motion was adopted.

Mr. McArthur.—That Ann. McKinnon be exempted from statute labor for 1884.

Mr. Blakley.—That Chas. Hales be paid $55, contract on Tyrone bridge.

Mr. McArthur—That John Turner be refunded $3, for statute labor for 1883, on lots 28 and 29, 3 S. D. R. said labor having been performed.

Mr. Pedlar.—That Jas. Fisher, $24.20; J. W. Hoath, $14; H. Fenwick, $16; John Williams, $17.50; Jas. Little, $5; George Rutledge, $16, be paid for road jobs in Ward No. 4.

Mr. McArthur.—That Messrs. Blakley and Elliott be paid $4 and $3 respectively for services on gravel road committee.

Mr. Pedlar.—That Jas. H. Stewart's petition be entertained, and $25 be expended on 10th concession.

Mr. Blakley.—That $10 be granted to repair bridge on 200th side road, E. T. and S. Road.

Mr. Blakley.—That $15 be granted to improve hill opposite lot 135, W. T. and S. Road.

Mr. McArthur.—That $20 be granted to improve town line Glenelg and Artemesia, South of Irish Lake provided Glenelg grant an equal sum.

Extracts from the report of special committee appointed to examine gravel roads in Artemesia. That speaking in a general way the gravel roads may be called rough, even at this season when they are perfectly dry, that the worst portions of gravel roads and the portions most in need of repairs are, viz Between Flesherton and the Station, One mile on each side of Markdale, between the Station and Priceville, road East and South of Flesherton.

Your committee are of opinion that $400, are required to make the repairs, and would suggest the following places for it to be expended, between Flesherton and the Station $150, between Station and Priceville $100, say one mile on each side of Markdale $75, East from Flesherton $50, and South of Flesherton $25.

Council adjourned.

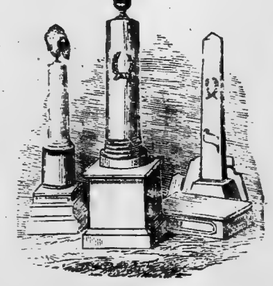
W. J. BELLAMY,
Clerk.

INVALUABLE TO EVERY LADY!

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun burn, Tan, Ringworm, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness; imparting a perfectly healthy, natural and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price, $1. When ordering mention this paper.



Address all letters to the MAY DEW AGENCY, 167 Church Street, Toronto, Ont. Parlor and Reception Room for Ladies.

Trade Mark.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble

And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

J. G. IRVING,
MARKDALE,
Manufacturer of all Kinds of

PUMPS.

Drop Valve, Cylinder, Force, and Cistern Pumps.

All kinds of

IRON - PUMPS
SUPPLIED.

ROOKE'S BAKERY.

BREAD, the staff of life and PASTRY that will please your wife, always on hand, to supply the demand.

So when your stock is low
Step in and let us know,
And we'll your wants supply,
Or you'll know the reason why.

E. ROOKE,
Markdale.

VALUABLE
FARM FOR SALE.

A splendid farm for sale two miles from the rising town of Markdale, an important station on the Toronto, Grey & Bruce division of the C. P. R. Being lots No. 108 2nd and 108 & 109 in 3rd range, West of T., & S. Road, Glenelg; Co. Grey, containing 150 acres. The farm is admirably adapted for grain or stock and especially for the latter, is watered by a beautifull never failing stream of spring water. There is 110 acres cleared and is in a good state of cultivation, well fenced with cedar rails, balance hard wood with sufficient cedar for fencing the place, also a comfortable house, with splendid well adjoining, good out buildings, young orchard bearing. This is a most desirable farm for stock raising. Title indisputable, for further particulars and terms apply to EDWARD RUTLEDGE, on the premises, Markdale P. O., or to STANDARD Office, Markdale. 200 4

FIRST-CLASS FLOUR

For sale at

BARRHEAD :: MILLS

For $4.50 per Barrel.

Will deliver to any part of the yillage.

W. J. ROWE.

July 22, 1884.

DR. FOWLER'S
EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY
CURES
CHOLERA
CHOLERA INFANTUM
DIARRHŒA,
AND
ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS.

ALEX KAY
BOOT & SHOE
MAKER,
Mill Street, - Markdale

FARMS FOR SALE.

Lot 117, con. 1 west, T. & S. Road, Artemesia, containing 50 acres, 40 of of which are cleared and under ultivation. Lot 8 part 15, con. 12, Holland 63 acres, 40 cleared; all necessary buildings thereon. Lot 13, con. 13, Glenelg, 100 acres, all bush. For terms and particulars apply to

J. G. IRVING,
Markdale.

AGRICULTURAL.

At the New Jersey Experiment Station dried corn-fodder was tested with ensilage, and the following conclusions were reached: 1. Green-fodder corn dried in shocks was preserved as well as that in a silo. 2. Dried fodder-corn cut and crushed was eaten with as little waste as silage. 3. In three cases out of four the quantity of milk was not increased by silage. The quantity of food given was in each case the same, as shown by analyses; 18 per cent, ot dry matter was lost in preserving green fodder-corn; the loss was the same whether the corn was packed in a silo or shocked for drying.

Many persons fancy that because they live on small farms, it is less important as to what class of stock they keep. In reality, the very reverse is true. The limited area from which the feed is to come makes it a matter of prime importance that the animals kept are of that class that will give the very best results in proportion to the food consumed. Indeed the chances are on the whole in their favor of having a better class of stock all around than the large land owner. In the first place it is much easier to commence well on a small scale, and in the second, a limited number of animals can be better cared for than a large number, other things being equal. The facilities for feeding are usually in favor of the smaller number, while the individuality of animals is most likely to be lost sight of where the number is large. While it is true that in a small herd there may be more proportinate outlay in procuring suitable males where one is kept for home use, in many instances this need not be done, as a considerable number now in very many neighborhoods have suitable animals, the service ot which may be secured if need be. In some instances males may be thus selected adapted to the special requirements of the different females. Men who have but one beast should be most anxious to have it of the very best of its kind.

The Short-Horns in England as Seen by a Frenchman.

In matters relating to cattle breeds of renown, I have lately met with nothing which has interested and instructed me more than the report of an accomplished expert, a French gentleman, named Grollter, who, writing recently of the most widely known and locally celebrated herds of Short-horn in England, has given the results of his observatious in late issues of the Journal d'Agriculture Pratique.

The first stable inspected was that of Mrs. McIntosh, at Havering Park, near Pomfret. All the country dwellinge of these English farmers are kept in a remarkable neat condition; but the neat cattle are badly kept and deprived of all hand care. This is, no doubt, due to the fact that during the Winter they run at full liberty in paddocks, lying down in wet straw and manure. On one or two sides of the paddocks there are sheds for the protection of the animals in bad weather, and here they are fed with cut fodder, which is distributed in the feeding toughs. Water is also freely furnished, and the cattle drink at their pleasure. There are, besides, stables with stalls for the sick and for cows approaching the end of their term, and boxes for calves. Each bull in service is kept in a separate shed, with a paddock attached, where he runs at will Great was Mr. Grollier's astonishment to find that the most celebrated breeders, possessing the best of illustrious families of Short-horns, representatives of which sell at enormous prices, do not devote themselves exclusively to breeding the pure race. At Havering Park, at Audley End, at Harewoods, and in all other Short-horn stables, there were common and half-blood cows alongside of the pure-bred Short-horns. One may see Jersey and Angus cows, and even the French Contentines, which have been bred to full-blooded Durham bulls. The conclusion from this fact is, that English breeders do not believe, in common with most Frenchmen, that a full-blooded bull which has served a common cow, will transmit to a full blood cow he is subsequently bred to, the scrub mark and stigmates—of the common cow, like the black nose, the markings of the coat and other characteristic peculiarities.

Mrs. McIntosh's Short horns were all of the best stock and st ain, including representatives of the Princess and Oxford tribes; but it must be avowed that, with a few exceptions, the visitor did not find them what he expected to see. The English are accomplished dealers, who know how to set forth the merits of what they have to sell by carefully drawn and high-sounding advertisements, well calculated to take in the inexperienced. Their faith in the power of blood, and in the merit of certain tribes where near relationship exists, perhaps in excess, is no doubt justified by the reality. "But after what we have seen," says he, "we find exceptions to this. Certain bulls which were shown us appeared very inferior though they came of the noblest ancestry."

The above paraphrase gives M. Grollier's first impressions, which were confirmed by subsequent observations. In fact, his report abounds in statements of facts of interest enough to breeders to be further drawn upon.

Milk vs. Meat.

I received, the other day, a letter to the following effect, says Sir J. B. Lawes in the Farmer and Chamber of Agriculture Journal: "Please will you let me know the difference of the manure from one ton of linseed cake, passing through a bullock or a cow?" His correspondent then goes on to say that he sends milk to London for sale. There can be no doubt regarding the object of this question, which is evidently to find out whether the production of milk is more exhausting than the production of meat, and whether the general opinion on the subject—that the production of milk is more exhausting—is correct. His correspondent wants this opinion to be placed before him, not in a scientific formula, but in the more easily understood form of dollars and cents.

Says Dr, Lawes, "I will try and work out the answer required from my own farm results. I have a dairy of about 30 cows. For the last two months each cow has consumed daily a little over 100 pounds of food, consisting of cake, bran, hay, and straw chaff, and mangels. The dry weight of this food is 28 pounds, while the average daily product of milk is a little over 28 pounds, but if we call it 28 pounds it will very much facilitate our calculation, as we shall thus have one pound of dry food producing one pound of milk.

Milk contains about 13 per cent. of dry substance: 1,000 pounds of dry food will produce 130 pounds of dry milk. If I had fed oxen with the same food, I should have expected that the 1,000 pounds would have produced about 85 pounds of increase in live weight, containing 63 pounds of dry matter. The 130 pounds of dry milk will contain about seven pounds of nitrogen; the 63 pounds of dry animal will contain hardly one per cent. The 1,000 pounds of dry food will contain about 20 pounds of nitrogen, therefore the milk will abstract seven pounds—or about 35 per cent.—while the meat will take only five per cent.

In dealing with these figures, it appears to be the fairest way to show the loss of manure generally upon the whole of the food equally. If I were merely estimating the meat or milk produced by the foods, such a proceeding would be evidently unfair; or if I were estimating the separate manure value of the different foods, a different course would have to be pursued; but here we have to deal with a certain number ot ingredients contained in a mixed diet—part home-grown, part purchased—and it is required to know what amount of these ingredients is abstracted by a dairy cow as compared with the amount abstracted by a fattening ox.

If we assume the manure value of one ton of linseed cake to be 60s. before feeding, it would be worth 57s. if fed by oxen, as against 38s. if fed by dairy cows; these figures representing the value of the ingredients removed in the milk and meat, though making no allowance for the waste or loss of manure.

If, instead of charging the loss of the manure upon the whole of the food consumed, we charge it upon the cake alone, it will require all the nitrogen in four pounds of cake to furnish the quantity contained in two gallons of milk. Under these circumstances, a cow receiving one-fourth cwt. of linseed cake per week, and yielding 14 gallons of milk, would reduce the manure value of a ton of linseed cake to a very few shillings. It is quite evident, therefore, that the popular idea of dairy farming, taking much more out of the land than grazing is fully borne out by the figures given, and unless the loss is compensated by imports in the form of foods or manures, pasture land will soon deteriorate.

Love-Letters.

Among English novelists no one has even approached the late Anthony Trollope in the composition of a love-letter. Where others were stilted, flowery, or too affectionate, he alone unites the life-long devotion with the spice of espieglere and the soupcon of passion which compose the ideal love-letter. And he has had a just perception of the length to which a love-letter should run. Too lengthy an epistle is a great mistake. The little twisted note of three lines which a man can put next his heart, the scrap he finds in his candle-stick when going to bed, the few touching heart-broken phrases thrust into his hand at parting—these are love-letters, indeed, to be treasured and read over again. Tennyson's conceit of the rose sent floating down the stream to the beloved one's garden comes too near an Oriental love letter. Lallah Rookh might have received such a one, and a princess in the "Arabian Nights" responded to it by sending back a sprig of myrtle under a snow-white dove's wing. There is no sadder object after the death of beloved one than a love-letter written in the plenitude of health and spirits. As the few lines written in ink now fading away are opened, they exale the perfume of kisses and caresses which breath like messages from another world. Let no one leave love letters behind him. The matter-of-fact executor tosses the whole bundle into a corner; the house-maid exhibits them in the servants' hall, and takes the choicest phrases to send to her "young man" in the Sunday letter. Finally, worse than imperial Cæsar's fate when dead and turned to clay, they are wrapped around rush-lights or sold to the marine store dealer. But love-letters have a final cause in domestic life; they point the great moral that all sentiment is evanescent, all affection eternal; that the substance is better than the shadow; the settled sanctities of wedded life more satisfying than all the cupids and bright-hued butterflies which hover around new born love. They emphasise the feeling of honor which forbids every English man or woman to write a love-letter unless the sentiments it conveys are really felt; and when the love-letter has done its work, and drawn twin souls together by the magic affinity of affection, they warn its recipient as soon as may to commit it to the flames.

Result of a Practical Joke.

A paragraph in a Cleveland paper not long since told the sad story of a hoax practised by three women upon a friend. It seemed harmless to them. It proved almost fatal to the friend, and illustrates a fact that should not be forgotten, that frights may kill, or may craze the brain permanently. Such jokes are criminal, and deserve a serious penaly. The victim of this hoax—Mrs. Burns—had gone away for a short time, leaving her husband and little ones at home.

The husband went to work, and the three women thought it would be extremely funny to scare Mrs. Burns. The chairs and tables were upset, and everything was put "topsy-turvy." A figure was made and clothed in a suit of Burn's clothes, and was laid on the floor, its head tied with a white bandage, resting against the sewing-machine.

Then the women secreted themselves. Mrs. Burns, who is of a nervous temperament, came home and was struck speechless with horror at the scene. The poor woman, seeing the inanimate form, immediately supposed that her husband had committed suicide. Tottering to the house of a neighbor, she gasped out that her husband was dead, and fainted away.

A physician was called, but she went from one spasm into another. When she finally revived sufficiently to talk, it was found that her reason had left her. For days she hovered between life and death. Although she is now considered out of danger, the shock has left its impression upon her mind, and she may never fully recover.

An ingenious Southerner has conceived the idea of opening an hotel for suicides. He acts upon the American idea of the largest liberty for the largest hallucinations.

PIN HISTORY.

Lemuel Wright's Invention—Origin of the Term "Pin Money."

A question involving research and worthy the attention of a Philadelphia lawyer, is what becomes of the 10,000,000,000 pins yearly manufactured in the United States and therein consumed. True, a few of these 10,000,000,000 are swallowed by children, some are bent up at school and placed in vacant and inviting chairs. A few million get into cracks of floors, and the rest, for the most part, are scattered along the highways and byways, cropped from woman's appasel, and there left to work their way into the earth.

The origin of pins, and whether it is an ancient or modern invention, is still a matter of doubt, and the solving of the problem is equal to the deciphering of a paradox in Greek. Insignificant in size, they have been prized in the boudoir of royalty, and used only by nobility until American ingenuity stepped to the front, with a machine, and Lemuel Wright got out a patent for his invention.

It was not until 1824 that Lemuel Wright, the American inventor, introduced his machine that, during the revolution of a single wheel, made a perfect pin. When steam was added the revolution was complete. The machine takes the wire at one end and presents a perfect pin as it comes out of the other end, performing alternately the operation of cutting it, heading it, rough and smooth and then drops it into a receptacle below. The whitening and sticking, minor labors, complete the operation of making ready for delivery to consumers. Pins known as blanket pins, about three or four inches in length, to the smallest ribbon pin, which takes 300,000 to weigh one pound, are all turned out by the same machine. One manufactory alone consumes three and a half tons of brass wire every week, and turns out more than ten tons of pins each six days. The operation of sticking pins by hand and usually performed by children, is now done by machinery. Pin papers are marked by means ot a molded piece of wood, the molds corresponding to those portions representing small folds, through which pins pass, and are held. The paperer is usually a girl, who gathers together two of the folds of the paper and places them, with a small portion projecting between the jaws of a vice. Herein are grooves channeled to serve as a guide for passing of pins. When filled the paper is released and held so that the light strikes it, when the eye at once detects any defective pin and the ready hand removes it.

The expense incident to the manufacture of a pin, ere machinery came to the rescue, made them articles of intrinsic worth. In 1614 pin makers offered Sir Ralph Winwood £4 000 or a moiety of the profits of the commerce in pins for his influence in their behalf. Two years later their charter was confirmed, securing them the sole pre-emption of foreign pins, forbidding them being landed at any port but London In 1635, by the renewal of their privileges by Charles I., pinners covenanted to pay his majesty £500 per year. The monarch disposed of this gift by presenting it to his queen, when it received the title of pin money. Soon the custom was inaugurated of bestowing upon wives a certain small pension for their use in trifles, which received the same name. Finally it was used as a dowry to a bride. Addison condemns the practice of bestowing pin-money, and says: "In proportion as a woman is more or less beautiful and her husband advanced in years, she stands in need of a greater or less number of pins, and a treaty of marriage rises or falls in her estimation. What would a foreigner," he continues, "think if he were informed that his bride demanded 500 or 600 pins a year? better had it been called 'needle money,' so as to have implied something of good housewifery, and not have given the malicious world occasion to think that dress and trifles have always the uppermost place in a woman's thoughts."

Arctic Exploration.

It is but eight years less than three centuries since the first Arctic exploration reached the region of polar ice and spent a dreary winter locked in by the iceburgs and shut up in their huts by wolves, snow storms and white bears. Two lives were sacraficed in this expedition, which reached a latitude of 80 degrees and 11 minutes.

Three hundred years have passed and the latest, the Greely expedition, touched 83 degrees 24 minutes, the highest lattitude reached since the Dutch navigators spent ten months in the ice off the island of Nova Zembla. In all those three centuries only three degrees of the journey to the pole have been overcome—a distance something less than the distance between New York and Boston, a little more than between New York and Albany.

This fact alone is a significant comment upon the value of these expeditions which have cost a prince's revenue and as many lives as have been lost in some noted battles.

The Dutch were the great navigators of the sixteenth century, and soon after achieving their nation's independence, began to speculate upon a passage to China and India by way of the North Pole. Their ideas of that region were fanciful indeed. Some believed that those seas inclosed a polar continent of perpetual summer and unbroken daylight, whose inhabitants had obtained perfection in virtue and intelligence. Others thought it peopled with monsters having horses' hoofs, dogs' heads and ears so long that they coiled them around their bodes in lieu of clothing. Other tribes were headless with eyes in their breasts, living in incessant fogs and tempests during the summer, but dying every winter and, like plants, revived to life by the advent of a brief spring. It was believed that the voyagers would have to encounter mountains of ice and volcanoes of fire, together with monsters on land and sea, more ferocious than the eye of man ever saw.

But in spite of these terrors, on the 5th of June, 1594, the first expedition designed to navigate these frozen seas set out from Amsterdam. Their ships and appliances were of the rudest description. In place of the staunch modern steamboats built for the purpose they sailed in small, unwielding vessels built like a tower at stern and stem, scooped in the middle and scarcely able to plow their way through the water, to say nothing of the ice. Instead of the delicate and ingenious scientific instruments constituting an exploring outfit of the present day they had a clumsy astronomical ring three feet in circumference on which they depended for ascertaining the latitude. They had no food, no rifles, no compact ammunition, no heavy clothing of fur, no rubber garments, no logarithms, log or nautical almanacs, no tea, coffee, or the hundreds of luxuries, stimulants, medicines and other [illegible] which now abound in such profusion.

The first expedition was turned back by the ice and polar bears, but the problem of a northeast passage to China was considered solved, and the next year a second ship was sent with a cargo of boadcloth, linens and tapesteries for the Chinese market which the explorers were expected to reach. Again the ice and the bears frightened them back.

But an offer of 25,000 florins to the discoverer of a north east passage to the east led to a third expedition, the first that outlived a polar winter and amidst perils and sufferings, whose story reads as much like the narratives of Kane and De Long, of Hayes and Greely, as the story of shipwreck and rescue in the days of Robinson Crusoe read like those of the days of Enoch Arden.

Notwithstanding all the discoveries and appliances of the year 1884, the Greely and De Long parties suffered quite as much as the Duch explorers of 1596; which anyone may see who cares to read the account in the third volume of Motley's "United Netherlands."

HAREM LIFE.

How Women is Treated in Pharaoh's Land.

Gen. Loring throws as much light as circumstances permit, in his recent book on Egypt upon life in the harem, One can naturally see that from the peculiar manner in which marriages are made in Egypt there is little domestic life of the sort we understand.

"They amuse themselves in crunching melon seeds, eating candy, smoking cigarettes and showing their jewelry and fine toilets to their friends. Living a life of ease and indolence, they are never supposed to soil their hands with labor or rack their brains with thought. When they toil their sole occupation is to beautify themselves. when young they are well made; their extremeties are fine and their hands are soft, white and supple, and they might be likened to the hudding flower which opens at the rays of the morning sun. Their complexions are white and their cheeks tinged with rose; their eyes are sometimes blue, but that is exceptional; they are generally black as jet, and when fully open are of almond form and full of sensibility and delicate sweetness.

"So binding is the law that no man shall see the face of a woman not his property, that, in case of a violation of its sanctity, it looks with favor on the the action of the injured husband should he solace his jealousy with the life of the intruder. It is not even permitted to recognize a woman outside of the harem.

"Society among the inmates of the harem means simply smoking cigarettes and pipes and the most trivial amusements. Instead of the sparkling conversation and pleasant music with which the sexes reciprocally entertain each other among Western people, horrible screamings, the monotonous noise of a drum and the clang of tambourines are are here the solace of woman in her hours of of ease. The boasted luxury of the palaces offers in its isolation no attraction to a refined nature."

The English Universities.

The universities are not now the last refuge of conservative thought; they are the very foci of all the energies that work for change. The long resistance to the advancing tide has only added to its momentum, and so to the sweep and speed of its action. The church has lost or is losing control of the universities, and the danger is that religion may do the same. The fight for the freedom of the universities was a fight against the freedom of the church, but for the authority of religion, and it is the duty of those who prevailed to see that the end of the tyranny does not also become the death of the authority, The nation has entered the universities and asserted its rights there in a marvellous way. Education is another thing than it was, harder, higher, taxes more severely the skill of the teacher and the strength and mind of the student. Honors become every year more difficult to win, competitors multiply, schools and subjects increase. There may be, there is, much room for reform. The teacher has too little freedom, is becoming too much the mere coach, that most helpless of intelligent beings, the drudge of the examiner, working to pass, not to educate his pupils. The student may be forced to grind too much at text books, and may know too little of the inspiration that comes to students who study under a man who is master of his subject, and teaches it as a master and not as a coach. There may be great waste of energy, too many men teaching one subject, and there may be too few subjects for the number of available teachers on the one hand and students on the other. But whatever the faults of the present system, one thing is certain, it is worked with zeal, with energy, with consummate skill and success. No man who knows what the universities were and what they are can doubt that the recent changes have all tended to make education, if not better, yet more real, requiring on all sides a sterner discipline, more arduous and actual work. Education reformers may regret that the change adhered too much to old and not too fruitful lines, but they at least must rejoice that academic rewards now mainly depend on academic honors and attainments.—Quarterly Review.

A Curious Relic.

There is a curious relic of Gustavus Adolphus in the possession of a private family at Augsburg. It is an embroidered collar, said to have been worn by the King at a ball, and is now kept in a glass case, together with the following note: "This collar has been worn by Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweeden, and was given as a keepsake to my beloved wife, Jakobina Lauber, who at the time of the King's sojourn in this town was the most beautiful among the maidens. His Majesty deigned to dance several times with her, but on his becoming too familiar she 'collared' him, and as a reward for this act of valor received the collar he wore that night." The Dagblad, which publishes the story, abstains from making any comments, except the innocent remark: "The Queen was at that time at Stockholm."

English as She is Spoken.

"Will you please pass the catsup," said the new boarder.

"Sir!" exclaimed the landlady, with fire in her eye. "Do you mean to insult me?"

"Excuse me, madam, I meant the catchup," and he pointed to the bottle.

"I catch on," said the landlady as she passed it.

HOUSEHOLD RECEIPTS.

COLD DISHES.

It is a great help to the housek... the hot weather to have a number o... dishes which can be used at noon and... evening and to spare the necessity fo... day cooking over the hot fire. There... great choice too of such dishes, which... be prepared early in the morning b... the week and especially upon ironing d... when one must have a fire. There is... corn beef boiled; boiled ham; boiled... tongues; potted chicken with calves h... calves head, or ham; and a great many... dishes which it may be interesting to d... cribe as follows:—

COLD RICE.—Wash and drain some o... best rice; put it down to boil and co... dry as possible. Add a little salt to it w... cooking. Turn it out into an earthen... pudding mold or a nappy and set it away... cool. When served turn it out on to a... and use sweet cream, ice cream, custard j... ly, preserves or any other desirable sauce.

BOILED HAM.—For a ham, proceed... above as regards boiling. When boiled... it to cool in water, first however remov... the skin which can easily be torn off w... if the ham is cooked enough. Stick cl... in the fat all over about 2 in ches apart... the ham is dished Before removing it... the water carefully take off the fat. ... should be cut in very thin slices w... served.

COLD BEEF.—Take a piece of rum... round or brisket and put it in pickle... three days; let the pickle cover it and p... stone on it to keep it down. After three... four days in the pickle, dip it in cool w... and plunge it in boiling water in a ... pot; put one onion, a few red peppers ... a dozen cloves in the pot, and after it h... boiled up well for five minutes set it on... side where it will simmer slowly; give... minutes for each pound. Then set away... cool in the liquor. When cold put it in... dish in a cool place.

POTTED CHICKEN.—Stew or roast a ... fowls and while hot remove the flesh fr... the bones. Put it in a stew pan with a ... of the gravy to keep it hot. Then have... readiness a calves head boiled, a tongue... a ham. Slice these into convenient p... and pack them down firmly into bowls... jars. Then pour off sufficient of the liq... from the calves head to cover the m... Spice and flavoring and a few sweet he... rubbed fine should be added to the m... When wanted for use, dip the fowl in... water for a second or two and turn out... meat on a dish.

CUSTARD.—A very nice cheap custard... made as follows: 1-2 pint of milk is put... to a sauce pan with half the thin rind of... lemon and a stick of cinnamon broken... this is simmered for 20 minutes and strai... add to it 3 oz. of sugar, a spoonful of arr... root, corn starch, or rice flour, rub... smooth with a little milk, and beat... with the yolks of eggs at least 10 minu... mixing it by degrees with a little of the... milk and then gradually adding the wh... Mix by pouring back and forth sev... times and then heat up until it thickens... do not boil it or it will curdle. When thi... pour it out and keep stirring until it is c... adding vanilla or other extract to t... Serve in cups or glasses or for sauce to... cold pudding.

COLD ROAST FOWL, prepared as follo... Kill the fowl early in the morning befor... is fed, and in the following manner: H... it up by the feet and take hold of the h... with the left hand, push a small sharp bl... ed knife through the throat close to the b... and near the head, then cut quite thro... dividing all the vessels at one quick str... Then leave the bird to bleed. This is a p... fectly painless death, as all the blood is ... off from the brain and the nerves are p... lyzed. As soon as it is dead, plunge it... scalding water and lift it up and down;... hold it by the feet and pour the water... the bird from the kettle, holding it ov... pan, then souse it two or three times in t... pan, strip off the feathers quickly with... tearing the skin, dress the bird and pu... few slices of bacon in it with no stuffing... bake it; for the first have the oven hot t... let the fire down a little and bake slowly.

Storing Furs in Summer.

"When we put furs into storage for t... season," said a furrier recently, "our fi... care is to beat them thoroughly with ratt... to drive the dust out, and get rid of t... moth eggs that may have been laid in th... or been blown into them from the air. T... done, they are hung on wire frames that d... tend them, and put into closets that a... lined with tar paper. Moths cannot st... the strong odor of tar, and never live lo... under its influence. Every three or fo... weeks the furs are taken out of the clo... and beaten with rattans; and so, in t... course of a season, every article has to ... handled at least a dozen times. In o... times camphor was used; but it has b... discovered that it had a tendency to detr... from their color, and make them mo... lighter in hue. I suppose there is som... thing in the dyes used for sable and ot... dark furs that camphor influences. ... women still use that drug, however; ... when you see a sealskin sack or cloak ... dolman that shows streaks of gray or ... muddy yellow, you can be sure that it h... been kept in camphor through the h... weather. The whole secret of keeping f... is to beat all the dust out of them and k... them in a close closet impregnated with t... odor of tar. Another old preventive w... pepper, either Cayenne or common bl... but this has been abandoned; and ... good housekeepers used to keep their furs ... tobacco cuttings I have seen moths flour... in tobacco; and, where I have seen in... powders used, they have sometimes injur... the furs in some way or have been total... useless in guarding them from their bit... foe."

"Another desideratum in storing furs ... strict cleanliness. We wash all the clo... every spring with water and common wa... ing soda, and the latter serves to destroy a... moth eggs that may have got into the pl... Thus our closets are never invaded by t... moths, but should we show carelessness ... a single week the result would be disastr... Muffs, collars, and other small articles w... keep in boxes, packing with them suffici... tar paper to keep out the moth, and th... shelves on which they stand are kept fr... from dust."

"Where are your kids?" a society ... asked, looking at the bare hands of a p... but deserving editor at Vanderbilt's par... "At home in bed," was the indignant re... ply. "Do you suppose I'd bring ... ildren to a party like this?"

...HE SEAT OF THE CHO...

...phic Description From Stricke... ...seilles and Toulon.

(Correspondence New York Time...

...have made a five days' visit to th... ...Toulon, and to Arles, in order to ...report for American readers some ...scenes in regard to the cholera. ...ited every room in every cholera h... ...ing in Marseilles and Toulon, and ...the wretched people dying in ho... ...in their own hovels, and buried a... ...ht in the cemeteries by the lig... ...ches and lanterns. I have discuss... ...phases of the epidemic exhaus... ...h the hospital doctors, with priest... ...h nurses, and my conclusion is tha... ...ch-dreaded cholera, probably the ...l and severe of all diseases to whic... ...n flesh is heir, is a thing of whic... ...elligent community of well-ordered ...l well-managed sewer pipes need ha... ...rming fear, even when brought into ...tact with it, to say nothing of ge... ...o a panic at a distance.

...I took the night train for Marseilles, ...e for breakfast at 6 o'clock in the ... at Valence, some fifty miles sou... ...ns, and watched the country care... ...signs of anxiety or commotion, but ...hing unusual until Arles was reac... ...re every window of the Spanish-loo... ...ses was closed, so far as I could obs... ...n, and in the streets of this town of ...people not a soul was to be seen. ...depot was congregated a melanc... ...wd of poor people, the most of whom ...dles of clothing and various dome... ...cles tried up by means of bedclot... ...y were waiting for the omnibus tra... ...n belonging to the third-class and ...aneous in its character—that sho... ...y them northward to Tarascon, wh... ...n the same department as Arles, and ...ucaire, on the opposite bank of ...e from Tarascon. During the day ...t there had been thirteen deaths, an... ...ful panic had prevailed in spite of ...hbishop's formal procession to the re... ...the saints in the Cathedral of St. T... ...nus.

AT MARSEILLES.

...n the first view that one gets of M... ...les no one would be apt to suspe... ...er from the appearance of the city its... ...f the people he could see, that a pest ...had seized the town. It was estimat... ...he time of my arrival that fully 100,0... ...ple had already left the city; but the... ...ence was scarcely noticeable from the a... ...rance of the streets. In one of the publ... ...res a band of Italian musicians we... ...ing to a throng of children and grow... ...ons. The omnibuses and street ca... ...e full of people as in ordinary time... ...e on the sidewalks, under the cafe aw... ...nearly all the chairs were occupie... ...the waiters were kept as busy as eve... ...he cheerful crowd of loungers. But a... ...sumptuous Hotel Noailles, on the Ru... ...Noailles, a continuation of the famou... ...nebiere, a different scene was observed ...ll its hundred rooms, myself and my ...ier were the only guests to be seen. ...he repast ended, we undertook a driv... ...ugh the city. In the chief streets w... ...d discern but slight changes. In the ...St. Ferreol, a broad and prominent ...t in the main part of the town, only ...shops were closed; in the Rue de la ...nebiere, in which are situated all the ...t shops and business places of other ...s, only nine were closed. But the ...er quarters—and God knows there are ...gh of them—revealed another side to ...picture as we drove into them. Passing ...g the narrow and squalid Rue Caisserie, ...one-half the shops were seen to be clos... ...at every crossing. From a tenement ...on on the hill above a stream of fœtid ...er flowed across the street and plunged ...n a precipitous descent on the other side ...ugh dark lanes crowded with towering ...aries swarming below with idle men and ...dren playing in the filthy gutters, the ...men meanwhile swashing the water about ...n their brooms under the evident im... ...sion that they were cleaning something. ...lly we got on a street known as Toulon ...—a wide thoroughfare without a shade. ...Along its gutters ran rivulets of drab ...red water which had overflown from ...canal when the canal was dammed now ...then by heaps of rotten vegetables or ...e substances, including dead cats and .... Four out of every five houses ...found closed. Those which remained ...were mainly estaminets, where, under ...awnings and on dirty sidewalks, men ...women sat drinking or were already re... ...d to stupor from previous drinking, ...junk shops in which filthy people were ...g rotten rags in an unspeakably vile at... ...phere. Festering filth was around them, ...a tropical sun beat fiercely down upon ...scene, blinding the eyes as its rays ...reflected from the white road across ...h, in the Quartier Capalette, courses ...eam about the size of a main sewer in ...York, winding its way uncovered ...g the houses on its journey to the sea. ...stream was laden with the sewage of ...vilest of the Marseilles quarters—Capa... ...and the adjoining one—which have ...shed much over one-half of the deaths ...have occurred in Marseilles, and it is ...teresting fact that the largest propor... ...of them were Italians. The wharves all ...g the water front we found to be crowd... ...with the quarantine shipping, mostly ...n and French, and picturesque sights ...these Mediterranean sailors, among ...n were many negroes lying in the shade.

THE PHARO HOSPITAL.

...fter this experience I decided to visit ...hospital. The authorities objected to ...ntrance at the Pharo, and there was ...h difficulty in getting over their objec... .... Fortunately I had a note from a ...physician to Dr. Queviel, the Presi... ...of the Medical Society, and a letter ...Dr. Queviel finally availed to secure ...admission. A young English physician ...d Paul Bossano was my amiable escort ...ugh the wards of the building, now ...d the Hopital Auxiliare de Pharo. ...is a magnificent structure externally. ...as erected by the Municipality for the ...Emperor Napoleon III, and was still ...shed when Sedan changed all the plans ...the work was then stopped. As a ...e the structure is a superb one, but as ...pital it is badly arranged. During a ...of the room I saw eighty-four patients ...stages of the disease, from the last ...ised breath to the period of cheerful ...alescence. Every face in these eighty-... ...male and female, was the face of a ...n from the lower walks of life, and this ...told has been the rule among patients

HOUSEHOLD RECEIPTS.

COLD DISHES.

It is a great help to the housekeeper i e hot weather to have a number of hes which can be used at noon and in th ening and to spare the necessity for m y cooking over the hot fire. There is eat choice too of such dishes, which ma prepared early in the morning twice e week and especially upon ironing da en one must have a fire. There is n beef boiled; boiled ham; boiled smok gues; potted chicken with calves feet, ves head, or ham; and a great many oth hes which it may be interesting to be as follows:—

OLD RICE.—Wash and drain some of th
t rice; put it down to boil and cook it as possible. Add a little salt to it wh king. Turn it out into an earthenwar lding mold or a nappy and set it away
. When served turn it out on to a di use sweet cream, ice cream, custard j preserves or any other desirable sauce.

OILED HAM.—For a ham, proceed ve as regards boiling. When boiled les cool in water, first however removin skin which can easily be torn off wh e ham is cooked enough. Stick clov he fat all over about 2 inches apart wi ham is dished. Before removing it fro water carefully take off the fat. H ld be cut in very thin slices wh ed.

OLD BEEF.—Take a piece of rump
d or brisket and put it in pickle e days; let the pickle cover it and put e on it to keep it down. After three days in the pickle, dip it in cool wate plunge it in boiling water in a roo put one onion, a few red peppers a en cloves in the pot, and after it h d up well for five minutes set it on o where it will simmer slowly; give tes for each pound. Then set away in the liquor. When cold put it in in a cool place.

TTED CHICKEN.—Stew or roast a f and while hot remove the flesh fr ones. Put it in a stew pan with a lit gravy to keep it hot. Then have ess a calves head boiled, a tongue
n. Slice these into convenient pie ack them down firmly into bowls
Then pour off sufficient of the liqu the calves head to cover the me and flavoring and a few sweet her d fine should be added to the me wanted for use, dip the fowl in h for a second or two and turn out t on a dish.

STARD.—A very nice cheap custard
e as follows: 1-2 piat of milk is put i uce pan with half the thin rind of and a stick of cinnamon broken u simmered for 20 minutes and strain it 3 oz. of sugar, a spoonful of arro corn starch, or rice flour, rubb n with a little milk, and beat he yolks of eggs at least 10 minut it by degrees with a little of the h l then gradually adding the whol y pouring back and forth seve nd then heat up until it thickens, b boil it or it will curdle. When thi out and keep stirring until it is co vanilla or other extract to tas n cups or glasses or for sauce to dding.

ROAST FOWL, prepared as follow fowl early in the morning before nd in the following manner: Ha the feet and take hold of the he left hand, push a small sharp bla through the throat close to the bo r the head, then cut quite throug all the vessels at one quick strok ave the bird to bleed. This is a p ainless death, as all the blood is c
the brain and the nerves are pa
As soon as it is dead, plunge it water and lift it up and down;
y the feet and pour the water from the kettle, holding it over n souse it two or three times in t p off the feathers quickly witho he skin, dress the bird and put s of bacon in it with no stuffing s or the first have the oven hot th o down a little and bake slowly.

toring Furs in Summer.

n we put furs into storage for t said a furrier recently, "our fir beat them thoroughly with rattan the dust out, and get rid of t s that may have been laid in the own into them from the air. Th are hung on wire frames that di n, and put into closets that a n tar paper. Moths cannot sta odor of tar, and never live lo influence. Every three or fo furs are taken out of the close n with rattans; and so, in t season, every article has to least a dozen times. In o phor was used," but it has be that it had a tendency to detra color, and make them mu hue. I suppose there is som e dyes used for sable and oth that camphor influences. O l use that drug, nowever; an see a sealskin sack or cloak t shows streaks of gray or how, you can be sure that it h in camphor through the ho
The whole secret of keeping fu ll the dust out of them and ke lose closet impregnated with th
r. Another old preventive w her Cayenne or common black s been abandoned; and som eepers used to keep their furs i ings I have seen moths flouri and, where I have seen inse
d, they have sometimes injure some way or have been totall uarding them from their bitte desideratum in storing furs iness. We wash all the closet with water and common wash d the latter serves to destroy an hat may have got into the place ocets are never invaded by t should we show carelessness fo k the result would be disastrou rs, and other small articles w s, packing with them sufficien keep out the moth, and th which they stand are kept fre

re your kids?" a society ma g at the bare hands of a poo editor at Vanderbilt's party bed," was the indignant re you suppose I'd bring m party like this?"

THE SEAT OF THE CHOLERA

Graphic Description From Stricken Marseilles and Toulon.

(Correspondence New York Times.)

I have made a five days' visit to this city, to Toulon, and to Arles, in order to learn and report for American readers some facts and scenes in regard to the cholera. I have visited every room in every cholera hospital existing in Marseilles and Toulon, and have seen the wretched people dying in hospitals and in their own hovels, and buried at midnight in the cemeteries by the light of torches and lanterns. I have discussed all the phases of the epidemic exhaustively with the hospital doctors, with priests, and with nurses, and my conclusion is that the much-dreaded cholera, probably the most fatal and severe of all diseases to which human flesh is heir, is a thing of which no intelligent community of well-ordered lives and well-managed sewer pipes need have an alarming fear, even when brought into close contact with it, to say nothing of getting into a panic at a distance.

I took the night train for Marseilles, and arose for breakfast at 6 o'clock in the morning at Valence, some fifty miles south of Lyons, and watched the country carefully for signs of anxiety or commotion, but saw nothing unusual until Arles was reached. Before every window of the Spanish-looking houses was closed, so far as I could observe then, and in the streets of this town of 25,000 people not a soul was to be seen. At the depot was congregated a melancholy crowd of poor people, the most of whom had bundles of clothing and various domestic articles tried up by means of bedclothes. They were waiting for the omnibus train—a train belonging to the third-class and miscellaneous in its character—that should carry them northward to Tarascon, which is in the same department as Arles, and to Roncaire, on the opposite bank of the Rhone from Tarascon. During the day and night there had been thirteen deaths, and a great panic had prevailed in spite of the archbishop's formal procession to the relics of the saints in the Cathedral of St. Trophimus.

AT MARSEILLES.

In the first view that one gets of Marseilles no one would be apt to suspect, either from the appearance of the city itself or of the people he could see, that a pestilence had seized the town. It was estimated that the time of my arrival that fully 100,000 people had already left the city; but their absence was scarcely noticeable from the appearance of the streets. In one of the public squares a band of Italian musicians were playing to a throng of children and grown persons. The omnibuses and street cars were full of people as in ordinary times, while on the sidewalks, under the cafe awnings, nearly all the chairs were occupied, and the waiters were kept as busy as ever by the cheerful crowd of loungers. But at the sumptuous Hotel Noailles, on the Rue de Noailles, a continuation of the famous Cannebiere, a different scene was observed. In all its hundred rooms, myself and my partner were the only guests to be seen.

The repast ended, we undertook a drive through the city. In the chief streets we could discern but slight changes. In the Rue St. Ferreol, a broad and prominent street in the main part of the town, only the shops were closed; in the Rue de la Cannebiere, in which are situated all the finer shops and business places of other cities, only nine were closed. But the poorer quarters—and God knows there are enough of them—revealed another side to the picture as we drove into them. Passing along the narrow and squalid Rue Caisserie, where one-half the shops were seen to be closed at every crossing. From a tenement house on the hill above a stream of foetid water flowed across the street and plunged down a precipitous descent on the other side through dark lanes crowded with towering tenements swarming below with idle men and children playing in the filthy gutters, the women meanwhile swashing the water about with their brooms under the evident impression that they were cleaning something. Finally we got on a street known as Toulon Rue—a wide thoroughfare without a shade tree. Along its gutters ran rivulets of drab colored water which had overflown from the canal when the canal was dammed now and then by heaps of rotten vegetables or other substances, including dead cats and dogs. Four out of every five houses were found closed. Those which remained open were mainly estaminets, where, under dirty awnings and on dirty sidewalks, men and women sat drinking or were already reduced to stupor from previous drinking, while filthy shops in which filthy people were selling rotten rags in an unspeakably vile atmosphere. Festering filth was around them, and a tropical sun beat fiercely down upon the scene, blinding the eyes as its rays were reflected from the white road across the way, in the Quartier Capalette, courses a stream about the size of a main sewer in New York, winding its way uncovered along the houses on its journey to the sea. This stream was laden with the sewage of the vilest of the Marseilles quarters—Capalette and the adjoining one—which have furnished much over one-half of the deaths which have occurred in Marseilles, and it is an interesting fact that the largest proportion of them were Italians. The wharves all along the water front we found to be crowded with the quarantine shipping, mostly Italian and French, and picturesque sights of these Mediterranean sailors, among whom were many negroes lying in the shade.

THE PHARO HOSPITAL.

After this experience I decided to visit the hospital. The authorities objected to my entrance at the Pharo, and there was much difficulty in getting over their objections. Fortunately I had a note from a physician to Dr. Queviel, the President of the Medical Society, and a letter from Dr. Queviel finally availed to secure admission. A young English physician named Paul Boseano was my amiable escort through the wards of the building, now called the Hopital Auxiliare de Pharo. It is a magnificent structure externally. It was erected by the Municipality for the Emperor Napoleon III, and was still unfinished when Sedan changed all the plans and the work was then stopped. As a whole the structure is a superb one, but as a hospital it is badly arranged. During a visit of the room. I saw eighty-four patients in all stages of the disease, from the last gasping breath to the period of cheerful convalescence. Every face in these eighty-four, male and female, was the face of a person from the lower walks of life, and this fact had been the rule among patients from the first. At the beginning nineteen-twentieths of the patients received at the Pharo failed to recover. For the last fortnight matters have so far improved that only two-thirds of those received have died. This excessive mortality at first was largely due to the fact that most cases when received had developed into a hopeless condition. The highest number that have been in the hospital at any one time is 110, and the largest number received in any one day is 37. There are two chief doctors and four subordinates, who serve in turns. There are besides two apothecaries, ten Augustinian Sisters, and a large force of laborers. All of these people, except the two chiefs, will be obliged to remain in the hospital constantly until November, having been forbidden to go out into the city. One Sister has already died here.

The treatment both here and at Toulon, in the first stages, is twenty drops of laudanum, with three grains of ether, and ice in the mouth to stop the vomiting. In the second stage the patients become very cold. From ten to fifteen grammes of acetate ammonia, the same quantity of alcohol, and two injections of morphia are given daily. If the patient cannot breath, artificial respiration of oxygen is produced, and the limbs are rubbed with turpentine. The third stage is the coffin.

MIDNIGHT AT THE CEMETERY.

Late at night I drove, with my courier, outside the city to the cemetery, St. Pierre, to see the burial of the three patients whom I had observed in the Pharo Hospital in the afternoon. The route led through the poor quarter, and at every corner bonfires were blazing to purify the air. The whole population was sitting out on the steps of tenements or on church porches, enjoying the fires and the currents of air created by them. After a brief burial service, intoned by a pale young priest, who looked badly scared, three boxes were hurriedly lowered into a trench eight feet deep by twenty feet long, and a goodly quantity of lime was shovelled on top. A concierge showed me a burial permit. Across the face of the document was written, "Cholera—urgent," and there was a requisition for some disinfectant. I went back to the central part of the city, and it was gay enough. Bands were playing and cafe lamps were gleaming. People in throngs were walking in the streets, laughing merrily, and many heads were poked out of the windows of the houses.

AT TOULON.

My visit to Toulon was necessary in order to show me more plainly what were the effects of the epidemic. The country people seemed to have lost their wits. The stations along the road have been deserted save by the railway officials. As at Arles and everywhere else where there was a stopping place, piles of baggage, bedding, and household furniture encumbered the platforms. At the Boulevard de Lesse, near the station at Toulon, I saw no human being save one cabman, who was sound asleep beneath the shadow of a huge umbrella. I awakened him and hired him. I started at once for an inspection of the town. Not until I had reached the Place d'Armes did I see a soul. The Place d'Armes is the usual resort and lounging place of many sailors, for Toulon is a huge marine barracks, where at times there are as many as 12,000 sailors. Now I only saw two or three men seated on the benches. The larger portion of the sailors, with the soldiers, have been sent away, and are now quartered on the high ground which surrounds the port. Still two-thirds of the men I came across were either soldiers or sailors. The surgeons in the service and the Sous-Prefet estimate the people in the town to be to-day about 25,000.

If, in a sanitary sense, the condition of Marseilles was frightful, that of Toulon struck me as simply murderous. Toulon has always been a breeding place of disease. Smallpox when it broke out in Toulon was always of a malignant type, and more difficult to stamp out than elsewhere. The natural death rate is invariably high, and likely to be increased at any time by abnormal diseases.

Toulon streets and shops displayed nothing of their former bustle and activity. There were some few signs of life only in the two streets of La Republique and La Fayette. Here the shops were open, but elsewhere they were closed. No business seemed to be the rule, and a vitit paid to the outlying sections of Toulon showed how the dreaded disease had made the streets a solitude. I visited a hospital in the suburbs constructed in that unfortunate way so much in vogue a century or more ago. It has been receiving cholera patients since the 14th of July. I saw there thirty-six cases of cholera. Here I saw Mme. Dorvan, a lady of wealth whose name has already been celebrated for her devotion to the cause of humanity. This brave woman has nursed cholera patients in Egypt, Greece, and Italy. I found her in this hospital busily occupied, moving from bed to bed, administering to the wants of the sick. In a conversation with her in regard to the contagious character of cholera, Mme. Dorvan agreed with the doctors that under proper precautions the elements of danger were singularly lessened. I noticed that the doctors smoked cigars and chewed considerable quantities of camphor.

I stopped over one train at Toulon during my investigation and then went again to Arles, but had no time to visit the hospital there. I found no one who could give me any intelligible account of affairs. An old priest with whom I talked expressed himself in no measured terms in regard to what he called "the cowardice of the people." He said Arles was deserted and so panic-stricken that the dead in some cases remained unburied.

As no English-speaking journalist has this season been before me in this portion of southern France, though the condition of affairs is bad enough, the reports of panic and turbulence sent to English and American newspapers, I think, have been grossly exaggerated.

Rev. John Wesley a Mason.

Rev. D. W. Bull, of Transfer, Mercer Co. has some interesting relics of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism. They consist of a Royal Arch Masonic apron, receipts of lodge dues paid by Wesley to the lodge of which he was a member, extending over a period of some fifteen years, and a number of books from Wesley's private library, containing his autograph. The Masonic apron is 153 years old. These relics were purchased by Rev. Mr. Bull's grandfather at the public auction of Wesley's personal effects after his death.—Philadelphia Chronicle Herald.

$15.000.00.

"Truth" Bible Competition.

NO. ELEVEN.

THE FINAL ONE.

Closing September 15th.

A NEW PLAN.

For Persons Residing Anywhere in the World Outside the City of Toronto.

The Largest List, and Most Valuable Ever Offered by Any Publisher.

Residents of Toronto Inadmissable.

A SMALL FARM FREE.

Special Club Offer.

Four Pianos, Three Organs, Silver Tea Sets, Sewing Machines, Gold Watches, Silver Watches, and Innumerable Other Valuable Rewards.

Don't Delay Sending in Your Answers.

At the solicitation of many friends TRUTH announces one more—the final—Bible competition. Owing to the fact of so many valuable rewards going to citizens of Toronto, this competition will be open only to persons living outside the city of Toronto. Any one residing in any other part of the habitable world will be eligible to compete for these magnificent rewards. The questions—which are supplied by an eminent Presbyterian minister—are very difficult, but the rewards are valuable. Everything offered in previous competitions has been promptly and cheerfully handed over to the successful ones the moment they are known. Full and complete lists of all those who gain rewards are given in TRUTH the week following the close of each competition. There will be no change, and no postponement in any way; everything will be carried out exactly as stated.

HERE ARE THE QUESTIONS.

1.—Where is GOLD first made mention of in the Bible?

2.—Where does it first state in the Bible that there was ONLY ONE LANGUAGE AND ONE SPEECH on the whole earth?

3.—Where is INN first referred to in the Bible? (By the word inn is meant a place of rest and refreshment commonly known now as an hotel.)

Every one competing must send one dollar with their answers, for six months' subscription to TRUTH. And aside from the rewards, themselves, they will find that they have made the best investment of one dollar they ever did. TRUTH is full and big value for the money. Bear in mind that you pay nothing extra for the privilege of competing for these costly rewards, and you will get TRUTH for six months in any case for your one dollar, which is the regular subscription price, and will also get one of these rewards, provided your answers are correct, and reach TRUTH office in time Don't delay.

Read the great list of

FIRST REWARDS.

1 and 2.—Two Elegant Grand Square Rosewood Pianos, by the celebrated makers. Stevenson & Co.	$1,100 00
3.—One celebrated "Bell" Organ, the finest organ makers in Canada	250 00
4.—One beautiful quadruple-plated Silver Tea Set	100 00
5.—One Gentleman's Genuine Elgin Stem winding and Stem-setting, latest style, Solid Gold, Hunting Case Watch	100 00
6.—One Lady's Solid Gold Hunting Case Genuine Elgin Watch, latest style	95 00
7 to 16.—Ten renowned Williams' Singer Sewing Machines	550 00
17 to 26.—Ten Gentlemen's beautiful Solid Coin Silver Hunting-case Watches	200 00
27 to 31.—Five Ladies' beautiful Solid Coin Silver Hunting-case Watches	105 00
32 to 51.—Twenty Waterbury Watches	100 00
52 to 103.—Fifty-two volumes Universal Cyclopedia. An excellent work	156 00
104 to 200.—Ninety-seven Ladies' Beautiful Solid Rolled Gold Brooches latest style patterns, splendid value	194 00
201 to 252.—Fifty-two Elegant Triple-plated Butter Knives	52 00

The above magnificent list of awards will be given to the first two hundred and fifty-two persons who send correct answers to each of the three Bible questions given above. Then follows the big list of

MIDDLE REWARDS.

1. FIVE ACRES OF BEAUTIFUL LOT SITUATED LAND, adjoining the corporation of Niagara Falls, free from all incumbrance, clear title, splendidly situated for fruit raising, sloping gently towards the south, overlooking the town, and within sound of the great cataract; not a stump or an uneven foot of ground in it; land on opposite side of road held at $1,000 per acre	$5,000 00
2.—One Beautiful Square Grand Rosewood Piano, by Stevenson & Co.	550 00
3.—One Elegant Cabinet Organ, by the celebrated firm of Bell & Co.	250 00
4.—One Beautiful Silver Tea Service best made, quadruple plate, six pieces	100 00
One Gentleman's Genuine Elgin Watch, Stem-winding and Stem-Setting, h. c	100 00

1.—Where is the first reference in the Bible to the day being divided into hours?

2.—What is the superficial area in cubits or square feet of the largest bedstead mentioned in the Bible?

3.—What evidence have we that in Bible times women were often employed in the manufacture of bread and sweetmeats?

6.—One Lady's Hunting-case Watch Stem-winding and Stem-Setting	95 00
7 to 12.—Six beautiful heavy black corded Silk Dress Patterns	300 00
13 to 18.—Five celebrated Williams' Singer Sewing Machines	325 00
19 to 26.—Eight Solid Coin Silver Hunting-case Watches	168 00
27 to 30.—Four quadruple-plated Silver plated Teapots, latest designs	50 00
31 to 41.—Eleven Solid Coin Silver Hunting-case Watches	231 00
42 to 59.—Eighteen Solid Nickle Silver Watches, American Movement	270 00
60 to 111.—Fifty-two volumes Chambers' Etymological Dictionary	156 00
112 to 300.—Two hundred and forty-seven Ladies' Solid Rolled Gold Brooches, new and elegant designs	494 00
300 to 505.—One hundred and forty-five Silver-plated Butter Knives	145 00

These five acres of land above described will be given to the person sending the middle correct answer of the whole competition, from first to last. The five hundred and four costly articles, beginning with the piano, that follow No. 1 of the middle rewards will be given to the five hundred and four persons who send the next correct answers following the middle or centre reward that takes the farm. The land mentioned above could be divided into building lots and sold to a great advantage, as there are no vacant houses in the town of Clifton or Niagara Falls, as it is now called. Then, that even the last may not feel that they are to be left out, TRUTH will give a series of

CONSOLATION REWARDS

1.—Beginning with another of those fine pianos, by Stevenson & Co., which have been received with so much satisfaction by prize winners in previous competitions	$550 00
2.—Then follows another Ball Organ	250 00
3.—Another Silver Tea Set, 6 pieces, best quadruple plate	100 00
4.—Gentleman's Solid Gold Genuine Elgin Watch	100 00
5.—Lady's Solid Gold Genuine Elgin Watch	95 00
6.—One celebrated "New Home" Sewing Machine	65 00
7 to 11.—Five beautiful heavy Black Silk Dresses	250 00
12 to 29.—Eighteen Solid Coin Silver Watches	450 00
30 to 41.—Twelve Ladies' Solid Coin Silver Hunting-case Watches	240 00
42 to 57.—Sixteen Solid Nickle Silver Watches	240 00
58 to 71.—Fourteen renowned Waterbury Watches	70 00
72 to 209.—One hundred and thirty-eight elegantly bound volumes of Universal Cyclopedia	414 00
210 to 311.—One hundred and two Ladies' Fine Rolled Gold Pins or Brooches	204 00
312 to 401.—Ninety Solid Triple Silver-plated Butter Knives	90 00

The further you live from Toronto the better you can compete for these last or consolation rewards. Bear in mind that it is the last correct answer received at the office of TRUTH that gets number one of these consolation rewards. The offer is open only till the 15th September, and as long as your letter bears the postmark, viz are mailed, of the date of 15th September, will take its place in the order received at UTH Office. Fifteen days after date of closin will be allowed for letters from distant point t reach Toronto, but don't forget that you r itter must not bear a later post mark than September 15th. All competing must send with their answers one dollar for six monts' subscription to TRUTH, which will be sent to any desired address Wherever you live, outside Toronto, you can compete at any time between now and the closing day for either the first or middle rewards, and as well as, of course, for the consolation rewards. Some one will get those five acres of land—why not you? Look up your Bible now and see if you can find the answers to these questions. It will do you good, apart from the opportunity you have of obtaining a valuable reward in addition to TRUTH, which alone is good value for the one dollar. It consists of 28 pages of choice and pure reading matter for the home circle—something to interest every member of the family. The publisher could not afford to give these valuable rewards unless he was certain of your patronage in years to come, and you are almost certain to become life subscribers to TRUTH if you take it for six months, it is such a splendid weekly (not monthly) magazine.

Special Club Offer to Yearly Subscribers.

If twenty-five persons join and send $50, each one of the twenty-five whose answers are correct will get their choice of a solid-rolled gold brooch, new and elegant design, worth at retail two dollars; a Chambers' Etymological Dictionary, worth about same amount; a World's Universal Cyclopedia, or a volume elegantly bound of Shakespeare's Complete Works. Of course, each of the club will have the same opportunity of gaining one of the rewards in the regular list (in addition to the certainty of one of the prizes aforesaid), as though they had sent in singly. This is simply an extra inducement to clubs.

The rewards in last competition were very widely scattered over Ontario and Quebec. In fact, every province was represented in the last, not exceptinr British Columbia. A great many also went to the States.

No information will be given any one beyond what has above been stated. So don't waste time by waiting, but send in your answers and money now. If you happen to be too late for the first, you may be fortunate enough to obtain a middle reward, and that is where the biggest ones are. TRUTH directs special attention to the fact that clergymen are not permitted to compete, neither are persons who in previous competitions won prizes exceeding one hundred dollars in value, and as no Torontonians are allowed to compete, the field is now open for a fair and square race for these rewards to any one, on the habitable globe, outside Toronto. No money will be received by telegraph, or in any way but through the postoffice or by express. One dollar only required. Try your skill. You are sure of good value for your money anyway. Address S Frank Wilson, TRUTH Office, 28 and 36 Adelaide street, Toronto, Canada.

Not another Pill shall go down my throat again, said a citizen, "when I can get such a prompt and pleasant cure for my Bilious Attacks, such as Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It renders the Blood Pure and Cool and makes a Splendid Spring Medicine. Large tiles 50 cents.

Most any scheme is feasible with a lawyer.

MEN WANTED.

Active pushing men wanted to wholesale my famous teas to consumers. Salary from $600 to $2000 per year. Send stamp for particulars. JAMES LAUT, Importer, Toronto.

Dominion Line of Steamships.

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from

QUEBEC TO LIVERPOOL

*Sarnia	Aug. 9	Toronto	Aug. 30
Brooklyn	Aug. 16	*Oregon	Sept. 6
*Vancouver	Aug. 24	Montreal	Sept. 13

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $80, $60, $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $35.75, Steerage, at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep are carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to

DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

Import Orders.

BAR IRON.
SHEET METALS.
FIRE CLAY GOODS.
CHEMICALS AND OILS.
Orders to import solicited.

Copland & McLaren,

Wellington Street, Montreal. Wellington Chambers, Glasgow. 24 Paternoster Row, London.

SMOKED SAUSAGES.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for price to W. CLARK, P. O. Box 343 Montreal.

W. & F. P. Currie & Co.

100 Grey Nun St., Montreal.
Importers of
Drain Pipes, Portland Cement,
Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings,
Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting,
Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay,
Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay
Manufacturers of Bessemer Steel Coils, Chair Bed & Springs

F. E DIXON & CO.

Manufacturers of Star Rivet
Leather Belting!

70 King Street, East, Toronto.

Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts

MACHINERY. For sale 1 Westinghouse Traction Farm Engine. 1 Able Triumph Do. 1 G. C. Morrison do. 18 h. p. Portable Engine and Boiler on Skids. 1 35 h. p. Horozontal by Northy. 1 do. by Waterous with cut off valve, and 20 engines and boilers of smaller sizes, all thoroughly refitted before leaving shop. 2 24-inch Planers and Matchers. 1 20-inch Pony Planer. 1 Iron Frame Tenoning machine. 1 Blind Slat Tenoner. 1 Buggy Plainer or jointer. 2 band saws. 10 Saw Tables. 1 Fire-Proof Safe. 1 Jeweler's Rouls Steel. 1 Book-Binder's Screw Press. 1 42-inch French Burr Portable Grist Mill. 1 62-inch inserted Tooth-Saw, &c., &c. Send for new list, No. 9, containing full description of machinery in stock. Address, H. W. PETBIE, Brantford, Ont.

WHAT SHALL I DRINK!

THE MONTSERRAT
Lime Fruit Juice.

Cordial, most wholesome, delicious and cooling beverage. Strictly pure and entirely free from Alcohol. Gold Medal Calcutta Exhibition. Sold by all druggists and grocers. Sole proprietors H. SUGDEN EVANS CO., Montreal. Agents, JAS. H. PEARCE & CO, Toronto.

Burton's All Healing
TAR AND GLYCERINE
SOAP!

The best in the world for all diseases of the Skin, on Man or Beast Sold by all druggists.

THE ALBERT TOILET SOAP CO.'S

TRANSPARENT
CARBOLIC ACID AND GLYCERINE
Is the best in the market.

GURNEYS & WARE,

STANDARD SCALES.

THE BEST,
THE STRONGEST,
THE MOST RELIABLE.

Unrivalled in material, construction and finish, perfect in accuracy and unequalled in durability. Guaranteed to give entire satisfaction.

THEY EXCEL ALL OTHERS.

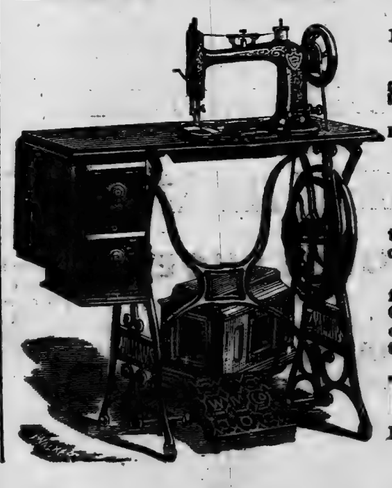
RAILROAD, WAREHOUSE AND MILL TRUCKS.
Mills' Alarm Money Drawers.

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST.

GURNEYS & WARE,

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.,

—:) MANUFACTURERS OF (:—
Finest Electro Gold and Silver Plate,



New York, Meriden (Ct.), Chicago, San Francisco, London, (Eng.).
BRANCH FACTORY—Cor. Cannon and Wellington Streets, Hamilton, Ont.

TRADE MERIDEN B.C COMPANY. MARK

Many purchasers having through a similarity of names purchased other wares under the impression that they were of our manufacture, we are compelled to ask special attention to the above TRADE MARKS. The fact that our name and Trade Marks are being so closely imitated should be a sufficient guarantee to the public that our wares are the BEST IN THE WORLD.

TRADE
1847 Rogers Bros. A1.
MARK.

THE NEW WILLIAMS

High Arm Machine is now recognised as the

Sewing Machine of the Period.

It is Light and Easy to run.

Silent and Rapid in movement.

Plain and Simple to learn.

It is strong, durable, and well built, of the very best material that money can buy or skill produce.

It was awarded five medals and three first prizes at the Dominion Exhibition last October. It is rapidly superseding all the old fashioned makes everywhere. See it, try it, buy it, and make sure that you get it.

THE WILLIAMS' MFG CO.

1733 Notre Dame St., Montreal, and 58 King St., West, Toronto.

BROWN'S!

Cor. Brown & Toronto St's

MARKDALE

Is the place to get BARGAINS in

Dry Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Crockery, Glassware &c &c.

NEW PRINTS from 5 cents up, New DRESS STUFF 10 cents and upwards in NEW DESIGNS and

LATEST FASHIONS.

Gloves, Hosiery, Ribbons, Laces, Embroidery, Small wares &c &c, at greatly reduced prices.

Our 25 cent T is unsurpass'd

Being determined to curtail credit trade, we offer special discounts and inducements to cash customers.

The Highest Price for Butter and Eggs.

A lot of seed oats (White Australian), free from all impurities; also Potatoes, large and small, of finest quality, for sale cheap.

GIVE US A CALL.

April, 1884. 190-tf WM. BROWN.

ROBT. S. RAE, Sydenham St., Markdale. TAILOR,

SAW MILL AND TIMBER LAND FOR SALE OR TO LET

In the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, 4 miles from Flesherton Station, on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The mill is situated at Little Falls, in a block of about 400 acres timber lnd, with other timber land surrounding. The building is substantially built on stone foundation. The machinery is all good and driven with great power by a 23 inch Leffell wheel, under 36 ft. head of water. There are one large circular saw for cutting logs, 2 small circulars for sawing lath and broom handles, 1 guage lathe for turning broom handles, etc., 1 shingle machine with jointer and packer complete. The water power is excellent, the stream being very regular. There are several other good mill sites on the proyerty. The land in valley is considered the best in the country. The place would make an excellent stock farm when the timber is taken off.

This offers a good opportunity for a practical, energetic man to go into this kind of business, as the place will be sold or let on liberal terms.

The bush is so convenient to the mill logs can be trucked in summer time. Immediate possession given.

Apply to the proprietor, WM. HOGG,
FLESHERTON STATION P. O., ONT.

—Good Work Guaranteed—

—AT—

Bulmers Photograph Gallery

FLESHERTON.

Call at once and see samples of work which we ared not ashamed to show.

All kinds of Framing done cheap at

JAS. BULMER'S, FLESHERTON.

HACYARDS PECTORAL BALSAM

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

☞ Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto

JOHN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING
SPECIALTY.
Also agent for the celebrated
CHATHAM WAGONS.

Worms often destroy children, but Freeman's Worm Powders destroy Worms, and expel them from the system.

He who blackens others does not whiten himself.

To remove dandruff, Cleanse the scalp with Prof. Low's Magic Sulphur Soap. A delightful medicated soap for the toilet.

We ought not to look back unless it is to derive useful lessons from past errors and for the purpose of profiting by dear-bought experience.

A trying evil, Children are often fretful and ill when Worms is the cause. Dr. Low's Worm Syrup safely expels all Worms.

Religion can be no more learnt out of books than seamanship, or soldiership, or engineering, or painting, or any practical trade whatsoever.

AN ANSWER WANTED.

Can any one bring us a case of kidney or liver complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure? We say they can not, as thousands of cases already permanently cured and who are daily recommending Electric Bitters, will prove, Bright's disease, diabetes, weak back, or any urinary complaint quickly cured. They purify the Blood regulate the bowels, and act directly on the diseased parts. Every bottle guaranteed. For sale at 50 cents a bottle by A. Turner & Co., Markdale. 1

Religion gives part of its reward in hand, the present comfort of having done our duty; and for the rest, it offers us the best security that heaven can give.

A LIFE SAVING PRESENT.

Mr. M. E Allison, Hutchinson, Kan.: Saved his life by a simple Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, for Consumption, which caused him to procure a large bottle, that completely cured him, when Doctors, change of climate and everything else had failed. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Severe Coughs, and all Throat and Lung diseases, it is guaranteed to cure. Trial bottles free at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store. Large size $1.00. 1

Whatever our place allotted to us by Providence, that for us is the post of duty. God estimates not by the position we are in, but by the way in which we fill it.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best Salve in the world for cuts, bruises sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by A. Turner & Co.

The Pall Mall Gazette says: "Woman are employed as telephonists chiefly from reasons of economy." We readily see the force of this. The dear creatures are so fond of talking, and will do so much of it for so little too.

McGregor's Speedy Cure.

Every purchaser of common sense business capacity, when requiring an article for a certain purpose, purchases only that which has been tried or is allowed first to test before buying. You are allowed a free trial bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure, the great remedy for Dyspepsia, Impure Blood and Liver Disorders at Hill Bro's. Sold at 50 cents and $1 per bottle. See testimonials from persons in your own town. A. & S. 6

GOOD THE YEAR ROUND.—National Pills are a good blood purifier, liver regulator, and mild purgative for all seasons.

FOR OLD OR YOUNG

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the remedy for Cholera, Colic, Diarrhœa and Dysentery. No person is safe without it.

The Signs of Worms are well known, but the remedy is not always so well determined Worm Powders will destroy them.

PREJUDICED PEOPLE.

Many people are prejudiced against patent medicines but all who try Burdock Blood Bitters are compelled to acknowledge it worthy a patent as a valuable discovery.

FOR THE COMPLEXION.—For Pimples, Blotches, Tan, and all itching tumors of the skin, use Prof. Low's Magic Sulphur Soap.

HOPEFUL WORDS.

Mrs. McArthur, of Hopeville, Ont., says she could not keep house without Hagyard's Pectorial Balsam to cure prevailing throat and lung troubles.

The Durham brass band have played their first tune.

Worms often cause serious illness. The cure is Dr. Low's Worm Syrup. It destroys and expels Worms effectually.

The wet weather in July has destroyed fifty per cent. of the hay crops in parts of Quebec.

RESCUED AT LAST.

W. H. Crooker, druggist of Waterdown, says, when all other remedies fail for Bowel Complaints, then Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry comes to the rescue.

FIRE IN DURHAM.—On Sunday evening last fire was discovered in Mr. Woodland's store but was soon got under control and subdued, loss on stock about $600, covered by insurance.

A SEARCH WARRANT.

If there is any lurking taint of scrofula in the system, Burdock Blood Bitters are warranted to search it out.

A REMARKABLE RECORD.

The most remarkable cure of Scrofula on record is that of the Rev. Wm. Stout, of Wiarton, whose case of Scrofulous Abscess baffled the skill of seventeen Surgeons for twenty three years. He was perfectly cured by Burdock Block Bitters.

FROM EDINBURGH.

N. C. Polson & Co., druggists, write that Dr. Fowler's Wild Strawberry has long been the best remedy for Summer Complaints in the market.

THE CONTRA ACCOUNT.—Pappa, you will have to buy me a new silk dress very soon. Why, it's not long ago that I bought you a new silk dress. What's the matter with that one, my dear? It's badly worn about the waist. It doesn't look fit to be seen. "H'm. Isn't this the second dress that young Mr. Featherly has worn out for you—about the waist?" "I—I—am afraid it is, papa," replied the blushing girl, "but we have one consolation, you and I. It must cost him a great deal for coat sleeves."

WOMAN'S WEAKNESS.

Much of the weary weakness peculiar to females is caused by irregularities that could be promptly remedied with that Excellent Regulating Tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mr. Wm. Telford of Arnott while mowing the other day came across a big snake in the grass. In a paroxism of terror he stamped his foot on it mechanically of course. On lifting his foot again, the snake had disappeared, and immediately after he felt it wriggling up inside his pant' leg. After sundry evolutions of a lively character on the part of Mr. Telford, the snake managed to crawl out under his waistband, and dropped into the grass beside him. He breathed easier then.—Chahsworth Cor. Advertiser.

CAN DEAFNESS BE CURED.

Mr. John Clark, of Milldridge, Ont., declares it can, and that Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the remedy that cured him. It is also a specfic for all inflamation and pain.

ANNAN.—Mr. James P. Telford has just completed the erection of 850 rods of barbed wire fence for Mr. John Ford adjoining Annan village. Over a ton of wire has been used up. Fifty rods are wholly of iron, and 300 rods with cedar posts driven about 3 feet into the ground with a piledriver set on a waggon, which is certainly the best and cheapest method of setting in posts. The iron posts undoubtedly have the most symmetrical appearance but for rural fences the cedar posts are to be preferred, as they make the most substantial fence and much the cheapest of the two. Mr. Ford is to be commended for the improvements he is making.—O. S. Advertiser.

A ST. ANN'S VICTORY.

Mr. John Morrison, well known in St. Ann's, N. S., had serious Kidney Complaint that bordered on dropsy. After hope had nearly fled, he was cured by Burdock Blood Bitters.

AN EXCITING SCENE.—Prompted no doubt by the thriling adventures of recent bear hunt, the employees of W. J. McFarland's mercantile establishment reconnoitered a few evenings since in the celler of the premises. The officers were Cap. Richards with a musket, Colonal Smythe with a breach-loader and lieutenant Bowes with a chineese lantern: their object extermination of a tribe of rats, after drawing up into line the lieutenant with fancy light drove the enemy from ambush when the captain opened fire and the enemy made a hasty retreat, neither dead or wounded could be found with the dim light but when daylight arrived one rat was found shot dead which had previously been poisoned.

A CURE FOR CHOLERA.

Procure from your druggist one bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and take as directed. It cures all Summer Complaints.

A Call for the Rev. Mr. Boyle.

At a recent meeting of the Paris Presbytery, a call was extended to Rev. W. H. W. Boyle, licentate of Queen's College, Kingston, at a salary of $1,400 a year. Mr. Boyle's parents live in Glenelg township, and he is only just for college, and has received two very lucrative calls. It is a question whether Brampton or Paris will secure him. This is about the highest salary ever offered a student of any college.

Dr. Carter is gone to Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

The following is from J. W. Ptolemy, of Winnipeg, formerly grain buyer for William Gillesby, of Hamilton and Grimsby: "I was for many years much afflicted with Costiveness, Biliousness, and ultimately Dyspepsia. I suffered very much and tried many different medicines, which gave me only temporary relief and then I was as bad as ever again. I was recommended by a friend, who had been restored to health by it, to try McGregor's Speedy Cure. I did so, and it was not long before I felt like a new man, and I have enjoyed excellent health ever since. I first commenced taking it February 7th, 1879. Sold by Hill Bro's. A. & S. 5

Rev. W. Casson and family left for Parry Sound this morning where he will spend a week.

Franco - Chinese War.

Notwithstanding the desolating war now raging in China it will not increase the price of Teas at the

Belfast House, Markdale

Having imported prior to the opening of hostilities, a sufficient quantity to supply 20,000 MEN for a period of 12 months. In other departments of the Grocery trade the BELFAST HOUSE has KILLED BY THOUSAND those who assume to transact business by purchasing of small dealers exorbitant rates of interest on long credit. Our imports of

PRESERVED MEATS, SALMON LOBSTERS, SARDINES, HAMS, BACON, ASSORTED PICKELS

and every articles in the grocery trade

LIQUORS

Of the best brands and quality. Wine for Sacramental purposes warranted pure. Brandies direct from the manufacturer and all other kinds of liquors.

Coffees, Teas and Tobaccoes cannot fail to give satisfaction. Oranges, Lemons, &c. Family Flour supplied at Lowest Rates.

THOS. McNEA.
BELFAST HOUSE, - MARKDALE
Feb. 6th, 1884.

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed Store.

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c,

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

193 J. PLEWES.

The best brand of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meals and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler. 114

TUCK & MELDON PROPRIETORS.

CHATSWORTH, ONT.
(LATE NORROW HOUSE.)

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

HENRY GILL,

HOUSE PAINTER,

GRAINER, GLAZIER AND PAPER HANGER, CALCIMINING AND WALL TINTING.

Residence opposite Planing Factory,

MARKDALE.

ORDERS SOLICITED. ESTIMATES GIVEN.
192-205

P. DUCOLON'S LIVERY,

IN HULL'S OLD STAND,

MILL - STREET.

Good Horses and comfortable Rigs at moderate charges.

195

MARKDALE Steam Woollen Mill.

The undersigned would respectfully return thanks to their many customers and friends for the very liberal support accorded to them during the past, and would solicit a continuance of the same, as we are now ready to attend to all work intrusted to our care in CUSTOM CARDING, FULLING and WEAVING in first-class style. As we have put on new cards, and made other improvements, we will endeavor to do as good work in the future, if not better, than we have ever done in the past.

Customers wishing to have their wool carded, spun and made into blankets or flannel, on cotton warp, can have their orders attended to by leaving their wool as early as possible.

Please remember the place, Mill Street west of the Railway Station.

199-208 F. J. RITCHIE & Co.

...L. 4.--No. 20

Markdale Standar...

...ed evesy Thursday, at the office, M... Street, Markdale.

...ms—$1 per year in advance; $1.25 ...id within three months.

...fessional and business cards one in ...and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 M
...column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15
...column.....	27 00	15 00	10
...r column	15 00	10 00	6
...ch space.....	7 00	4 00
...inch space	10 00	5 00

...ial advertisements 8 cents per line fi... ...ion, 3 cents per line each subseque... ...ion, nonpareil measure. ...torial notices, or notices in local c... ...10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cen... ...subsequents insertion. ...y animals &c., advertised 3 weeks ... ...e advertisement not to exceed twel...

...paper discontinued until all arrea... ...id except at the aption of the publishe...

JOB PRINTING.

...E STANDARD office has a splendid equi... ...of poster as well as fine job type. Sp... ...ttention to orders by mail. Orde... ...with dispatch.

W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

...ANDS & PERRY
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),
...ARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, N... ...taries, Conveyancers, &c. Money ... ...at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
...251 TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,
...ARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-A... ... Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conve... ...rs, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed ... ...kerton, Office open every Thursday, a... ...tofore.
...ND FROST. J. W. FROST, LL. B
County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,
...ARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG... ... in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyan... ...&c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
...FFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Bloc... ...lett St.; Branch office in Markdale, ove... ...Farland's Store, on Friday and Saturda... ...y week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
...ARRI...ORS, SOLICITORS, CONVEY... ...ances, &c. &c.
...FFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block ...r W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
...r W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursda... ...l Friday of each week.
☞ Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
...N CREASOR, Q. C. DUNCAN MORISO...
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.
...SSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire an... Life Insurance Agent. Commissione... B. R. &c. Conveyancer and License... ...ctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers ...rchants, and Land Sales, Punctually a... ...ded to and charges made very moderate ...Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,
...SSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &... Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches prompt... ...tended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate ... ...urity.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
...as. Bryan, Proprietor

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
...ohn McAleer, - Proprietor

This house is fitted up in good style, situ... ...ted on Mill street, where the travelling pu... ...lic may depend on the very best accomm... ...dation. Union bus to all trains. 19

MARKDALE HOUSE
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
MRS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED

co - Chinese War
withstanding the demand
w raging in China it will not the price of Teas at the
t House, Markdale
g imported prior to the open stilities, a sufficient quantity 20,000 MEN for a period of
ns. In other departments of ery trade the BELFAST has KILLED BY THOU
ose who assume to transact
by purchasing of small deal
tant rates of interest on long our imports of
VED MEATS, SALMON
ERS, SARDINES, HAMS,
N, ASSORTED PICKELS
articles in the grocery trade.
LIQUORS
brands and quality. Wine mental purposes warranted andies direct from the man nd all other kinds of liquors.
Teas and Tobaccoes cannot ve satisfaction. Oranges,
c. Family Flour supplied
Rates.
OS. McNEA,
HOUSE, - MARKDALE
Feb. 6th, 1884.
ROCERY STORE
ONNECTION WITH
Flour and Feed Store.
g just received a
Fresh and Select TOCK OF
gars,
Tobacco, &c,
be sold VERY CHEAP.
ully solicit the public's
J. PLEWES.
The best brand of liquo ways in stock. Good meals rooms guaranteed. Good s tentive hostler.
TUCK & NELSON Pr
CHATSWORTH
(LATE MORROW HO
CHATSWORTH
RY GILL, PAINTER,
LAZIER AND PAPER
CALCIMINING
ALL TINTING.
osite Planing Factory,
KDALE.
ESTIMATES GIVEN.
192-205
COLON'S
ERY,
'S OLD STAND,
STREET.
Horses
ortable Rigs at te charges.
KDALE Woollen Mill. would respectfully return ny customers and friends support accorded to them d would solicit a continu s we are now ready to at ntrusted to our care in NG, FULLING and
-class style. As we have nd made other improve avor to do as good work better, than we have st.
ng to have their wool de into blankets or flan can have their orders
g their wool as early as the place, Mill Stree Station.
ITCHIE & Co.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 4.--No. 205. MARKDALE, ONT., AUG 14, 1884. {COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.}

The Markdale Standard

Published every Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS:—$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
One column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
One inch space	7 00	4 00
Half inch space	10 00	5 00

Local advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents per line subsequents insertion.

Strayed animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for 50c. Each advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

SANDS & PERRY,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),
BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to lend at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
351 TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,
BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT-Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Allerton, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.
EDWARD FROST, J. W. FROST, LL. B.
County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,
BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG. in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Bartlett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.
OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.
Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
O. CREASOR, Q. C., DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown,
ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c. Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N.B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.
This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
MRS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

25 Doses, 25 Cents. TAKE
Flint's Mandrake Pills
If you have Sick Headache, Liver is Torpid, Are Bilious, Appetite is Poor, Bowels are Costive, Have a Bad Breath, Want your Stomach thoroughly Cleansed, they are the medicine to use. Work like a charm. Are purely Vegetable.
Mildest Pill ever taken. TRY THEM.
Sold by Medicine Dealers.
J. F. FLINT & CO., Pharmacists, Prop'rs, Rock Island, P. Q., and Derby Line, Vt.

Medical.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O.
Physician and Surgeon, Priceville,
Graduate of University. Vict. College.
" " New York, and
Hon. Graduate, of the same,
" " Ayleth Medical Institute.
" " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y.
Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at Rutledge's Hotel, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.
122-47.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT.—Residence on Mill Street, Markdale.
124ly

HAMILTON'S
PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY
MARKDALE.
OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.
Fine work executed in all the latest sizes and shapes, fully equal to city work. Special attention given to
FRAMING
A large stock of moulding to choose from.
Call and leave your measure for a picture.
Jas. Hamilton.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.
Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

Dr. Hixon,
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, AND ACCOUCHER,
PRICEVILLE.
All calls promptly attended to.

ISAAC STINSON,
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

SAMUEL WARDELL,
WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

ALEX KAY
BOOT & SHOE
MAKER,
Mill Street, - Markdale

Poetry.

On the Falls of Niagara, and Scenery around.

What piles of rock hang on thy brow
And curl thy waters into foam,
Where lofty trees their shadows throw,
And visitors so often roam.

The waters from thy raging main
That foaming came towards thy brink,
Will never scale thy rocks again,
Which headlong to thy depths did sink.

Some boats have made the dreadful leap,
Smitten and shivered when they fell,
But not one man did yet escape
Of broken rocks and limbs to tell.

The men that ventured on thy deep,
And trifled with thy dangerous flood,
Soon sank into a lasting sleep
And stained thy waters with their blood.

Far down thy rocky bank so steep
By tiresome steps we all did go,
And saw thy thundering waters leap
Among the mist and rocks below,

Some days and years have passed away
Since thy deep stream commenced to roll:
The broken rocks we saw this day,
I think the secret will unfold.

Rows above rows of cedars stand
To deck thy lofty banks so steep,
And ranks of different beauties grand,
Grow round thy blue and foaming deep.

The walnuts and the acorns fine
We saw on many a lofty tree,
And grapes on every fruitful vine
In gardens grand we there could see.

Ledge above ledge of broken rock,
Of bygone ages they will tell;
And saw and felt the battle's shock,
When Brock so bravely fought and fell.

A monument of rock will tell
Where that brave man at death was laid,
And how the men that round him fell
Were laid beneath the balsam's shade.

Till the last trump shall then surprise,
And monuments to fragments shiver,
Then they immortal all shall rise
To live, and die no more forever.

A Model Woman.

I know a woman wondrous fair—
A model woman she—
Who never runs her neighbors down
When she goes out to tea.

She never gossips after church
Of dresses or of hats;
She never meets the sewing school
And joins them in their spats.

She never beats a salesman down
For what she wants to buy,
Nor asks to see the thousand things
Which do his patience try.

These statements may seem very strange
At least they may to some,
But just remember this, my friends,
The woman's deaf and dumb.

Euphrasia Council.

The council met pursuant to adjournment on the 1st August, 1884. Members all present. Minutes of last session of council read and confirmed. The Reeve, Deputy-Reeve and Mr. Boyd, were appointed a committee to ascertain the assetts and liabilities of the township, with a view to the levying of the rates for the current year. The committee reported that 7 mills in the dollar will be sufficient to meet all the liabilities of the township for the current year, except S. Trustees rates. The report of committee was adopted, and by-law No. 389, to levy the rates for the current year, was carried through the different stages and passed.

Mr. Boyd and Mr. Black were appointed to examine side road 27 and 28, con. 8, with a view of improving it.

The Reeve was authorized to call upon Mr. Sing, D. & P.L.S., to locate a deviation of 12 to 18 side road, con. 2, and to get the road made passable at this place.

The petition of James Morwood and 16 others, in reference to crossswaying on 9 and 10 side road, con. 6, laid before council and accepted, and Mr. Boyd and Mr. Black appointed to take action therein.

Mr. Black and Mr. Hurd were appointed to get repairs made at lots 7 and 8, on 5th line.

The Treasurer was ordered to pay the Reeve $39.25, being amount of witness fees, in case of the appeal of Osprey, Proton and Bentinck, against the County Valuation.

The Reeve's orders were issued on the Treasurer to pay as follows, viz: To James McClung $47.87½, plank and work on bridge; William Grier $87.75, printing Voters' List and advertising; James Boyd, Esq., $150.62½ to pay men for work on roads; James McMahan $3, protecting Heathcote bridge; E. E. Hicks $20, to improve 7th line; Wm. Neely $2, removing stone on 9th line; J. M. Davis $9.25, building bridge and repairing culvert; John McArthur $30.81, work on 12 and 18 side line; Joseph Manary $60, salary as assessor for 1883; R. Dunlop, clerk, $25, making Voters' List; J. M. Davis $7, building culvert; W. Bielby $6, ditching on side line 3 and 4.

Thomas Jordan was appointed collector for the westerly 7 concessions at a salary of $60, on motion of Messrs. Boyd and Hurd.

A resolution was passed, offering a reward of $100, for the apprehension and conviction of incendiaries, and the clerk ordered to get notices to that effect printed, posted and circulated.

On motion being made and seconded the council adjourned until the first Friday in September next.

ROBERT DUNLOP,
Tp. Clerk.

Glenelg Council.

Town Hall, Glenelg, July 21, '84.

The council met this day pursuant to adjournment. All the members present. The Reeve in the chair. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

Cheques were issued for work performed in ward No. 4, under Mr. Dunsmore, as follows:

Wm. Glencross, work at lots 1 and 3, con. 9, $12; James McNally, work at lot 5, con. 9, $12.75; Richard Jack, work at lot 5, con. 8, $4; W. Hunt, work at lot 9, con. 9, $11.50; Thomas Jack, work at lot 5, con. 13, $13.75; Angus McQuarrie, work at lot 5 con. 13, $5; A. Leitch, work at lot 9, con. 12, $10.50; R. Bartly, work at lot 5, con. 10, $10; James Leitch, work at lot 14, con. 3, E. G. R., $11.75; John Vaughan, repairing bridge at Chaffy's Mills, $64.

Cheques were issued for work done in ward No. 3, under Mr. Neil, as follows:

R. McDonald, work at lot 20, con. 6, $13.50; John Saunders, work at lot 101, con. 2, W.T. & S.R., $15.75; Dennis Sweeny, work at lot 10, con. 8, $5; Wm. Webster, work at lot 15, con. 8, $6; John McPhee, work at lot 20, con. 10, $7·50; John Wilson, work at lot 15, con. 9, $7; Wm. Webster, work at lot 15, con. 9, $5.

Cheques issued for work performed in ward No. 1, under the Deputy-Reeve, as follows:

James Staples, work at lot 7, con. 4, N. D. R., $21; C. Williams, work at lot 41, con. 3, E. G. R., $4.75; Thomas Gray, work at lot 11, Durham Road, $12; John Cameron, work at lot 18, con. 3, N. D. R., $8; John Williams, work at lot 49, con. 2, E. G. R., $10; Samuel Lawrence, work at lot 63, con. 3, E. G. R., $8; David Allan, work at lot 56, con. 3, E.G.R., $6; George Moore, removing dritt timber at Saugeen bridge, $4; Hector McLean, work at town line G. & A., con. 3, S. D. R., $2.

Cheques were issued for work performed in ward No. 2, under Mr. McCuaig, as follows:

John Fallice, work at lot 10, con. 4, N. D. R., $24; John Fallice, replacing broken stringer, same place, $5; John Morrison, replacing broken stringer, lot 33, con. 2, $1.50; Martin Stonehouse, work at lot 30, Durham Road, $12; Martin Stonehouse, work at lot 40, con. 1, S. D. R., $8.50; Alexander McPhail, work at lot 40, con. 2, S. D. R., $3; Alexander McPhail, work at lot 40, con. 3, S. D. R., $5.58; Peter Ferguson, work at lot 50, con. 3, S. D. R., $6; Hector Lamont, work at lot 50, con. 3, S. D. R., $6.15; John McQuarrie, work at lot 87, con. 2, N. D. R., $4; Donald McLeod, work at lot 41, con. 2, N. D. R., $3; Donald McDonald, work at lot 40, con. 3, N. D. R., $1; Neil McCannell, work at lot 39, con. 2, S. D. R., $3.25; D. McArthur, half cost repairing town line bridge, $20.37; Allan McLean, work on town line G. & A., $4; Peter McGregor, work on town line Glenelg and Egremont, $16.75; John Staples was paid $1.25 for repairing sceaper, and $2 for removing obstruction off road; Irwin Anderson was paid $61 for building bridge at Purdy Mills; Donald McRae was paid $2 for building foot bridge at Purdy Mills. Cheques were issued to pay Jabez Banks and others for digging a ditch at lots 42 and 43, cons. 2 and 3. E. G. R., being an equivalent to $20 worth of work done by said parties, said amount having been granted last year; John Fallice was paid $3.65 for repair of waggon broken in defective bridge; $25 was paid to Glenelg Agricultural Society as grant for 1884; $52 was paid for fare of Samuel Cope and wife, indigents, said parties having gone to Dakota, C. W. Rutledge was paid $88.50 for printing voters lists and advertising, accounts were paid for supplies furnished to Samuel Cope and wife as follows, James Burnet $7.75, Thos. Whitmore, $6, Dr. Jamieson $12 for attendance and medicine, the Clerk was paid $2.66 for postage and stationery and $4:90 for registering births marriageg and deaths and $37.50 for quarter's salary. Ward Commissioner's were paid for letting and inspecting work as follows, N. G. Dunsmore $12.42, J. A. McMillan $7, A. McCuaig $7.50, the Reeve for letting a bridge $2, $30 was granted to cut down a hill on old Durham Road at lot 26, $50 was granted to repair base line at lot 1 con 12, $10 was granted to repair town line north of Irish Lake and $10 south of Irish Lake providing Artemesia grant an equivalent to be spent in like manner, $50 was granted to open a road between lots 10 and 15 con 12, $11 was granted to remove a jamb at bridge at lot 47 con 2 N. D. R. The Reeve and Mr. McCuaig were appointed to examine bridge at lot 40, con 2, N D R, and the Reeve and Neil to examine road at Barrhead mills, and have the latter repaired. Widow McComb was exempt from performing Statute Labor for 1884. The Reeve, Treasurer and Clerk were appointed to attend the Court of Appeal, going on at Owen Sound on July 22nd, on behalf of the Municipality.

The Council adjourned to meet at Town Hall on August 25th at 10 o'clock a. m.

J. D. BLACK, Clerk.

A Cure for Diphtheria.

We hope some of our physician readers will try the following treatment. The New York Sun states that Ruth Lockwood, a nine-year old child, became violently ill with diphtheria a few weeks ago. She was so weak that it was deemed dangerous to try tracheotomy, or cutting open the windpipe. On Thursday Dr. Nichols, who was attending her, received a copy of the Paris Figaro, which contained a report made to the French Academy of Medicine by Dr. Delthil. Dr. Delthil said that the vapors of liquid tar and turpentine would dissolve the fibrinous exudations which choke up the throat in croup and diphtheria. Dr. Delthil's process was described. He pours equal parts of turpentine and liquid tar into a tin pan or cup and sets fire to the mixture. A dense resinous smoke arises, which obscures the air of the room. "The patient," Dr. Delthil says "immediately seems to experience relief; the choking and rattle stop; the patient falls into a slumber and seems to inhale the smoke with pleasure. The fibrinous membrane soon becomes detached, and the patient coughs up microbicides. These, when caught in a glass, may be seen to dissolve in the smoke. In the course of three days the patient entirely recovers." Dr. Nichols tried this treatment with little Ruth Lockwood. She was lying gasping for breath when he visited her. First pouring about two tablespoonsful of liquefied tar on an iron pan, he poured as much turpentine over it and set it on fire. The rich, resinous smoke which rose to the ceiling was by no means unpleasant. As it filled the room the child's breathing became natural, and as the smoke grew dense she fell asleep.

A SEARCH WARRANT.
If there is any lurking taint of scrofula in the system, Ransom's Blood Bitters are warranted to search it out.

BETWEEN TWO STOOLS.

CHAPTER I.

"I have something to tell you, Mary."

Mary Ranley let her work fall into her lap, and looked up at the speaker. She was a tall, slim, dark-haired woman of seven or eight and twenty, with a plain, patient face and wistful eyes. She had not a single claim, in feature or coloring, to any of the acknowledged forms of prettiness, and yet something about her would have compelled a second glance from those who had obtained a first.

"Well, Tom, what is it?" Her face softened as her glance fell on Tom Danvers, handsome, blue-eyed, fair-haired Tom, whom people spoke of only to praise. They had been playfellows these two, who were alike only in years. They were lovers now, and they would be husband and wife one day; at least that hope had beautified existence for both of them during seven years. Seven years! It is a big slice out of the best part of the allotted threescore and ten, although it was only lately that one of this faithful pair had begun to think so. The other had never thought it yet.

"What is it you have to tell me?"

Tom crossed the room, and bent over her to stroke her hair. The movement was a caress, and then it enabled him to avoid her eyes.

"I have been offered an appointment at Rangoon."

"At Rangoon!" She echoed the words without any intonation of surprise. "That is—"

"In Burmah. As if you did not know that and everything else, my little scholar; and Rangoon is a big place with openings for lots of fellows. Stephens has written, saying he needs a partner, and so I think, if you don't mind, that I shall go out there in a month or two."

Mary Ranley did not answer. In the pause that ensued she heard the purring of the cat on the hearth, and smelled the faint odor of the mignonette growing in the window box. She knew quite well that the linnets outside were piping to the roses and that Tom Danvers was waiting for her answer; but she also knew that her pulses were growing fainter and fainter, and that the weight of a long dreaded blow had fallen.

"Are you not getting on here?" she asked after a pause. "I thought you told me that your work was increasing; I thought you expected that we might marry in the Spring."

"It was all a mistake, due to my confounded hopefulness. I got a new case or two when Smithson was away for his holidays, but he holds the patients, and will go on holding them. The fact is, Mary, there is not scope here for two medical men, and I knew that, though I settled in the place when you wished it. But I have not made a hundred pounds in the past twelve months and you know that means failure."

"But I make a good deal by my teaching and I thought that, working together, we might get on."

"That is quite out of the question," he said, fretfully, turning away from the pleading, patient eyes. "I am not going to have my wife drudging all day long that we may not starve. I'll support her myself, or do without her."

The pale hands lying on the piece of needlework pressed each other a little, then the sweet voice spoke softly and firmly.

"I have been thinking often lately, Tom, that you would be wiser to do without me. You see we have known each other for so long that we have really grown to be more friends than lovers, and I am far older than you in reality, though not perhaps in years, and so I cannot help believing at times that our engagement has been a mistake."

"Oh, you do, do you?" wrathfully.

"You see it has lasted seven years now, and in seven years, you know, your science teaches that we change completely, and so I think, Tom, dear, that it would be far better if you planned your future without letting any thought of me hamper you. I am safe enough, you know; the high school pays me a comfortable salary, and I have grown accustomed to the routine of life with Mrs. Gillet, and so, dear, I can quite honestly offer to set you free." She was smiling at him bravely, and her eyes were very clear and bright, but she had an idea that her heart was weeping.

"You are tired of me, I suppose? You imagine that I am likely to to be a failure, and you women care only for success," he answered bitterly.

"I suppose the working ones of us know that success comes some time to the steady and patient," she said, the first hard tone sounding in her voice.

"And have I not been either?"

"Dear Tom, don't imagine that I wish to find fault or criticise; I love you far too well for that; there is no one in all the world as dear to me as you are. But do you not think yourself that our engagement has been too protracted to seem hopeful now? You don't feel it as I do; it seems to take all my strength away to see our life together always slipping further and further off."

"If I make things worse for you, of course that alters matters." His face had lost its smiling softness, his brow was stern and angry.

"You are my youth and my happiness, the end of my dreams," she said passionately; "the want of you will leave my whole future barren."

"Then why need you give me up?"

"Because I think you will be freer without me; because you are learning to dread me, and so the love is growing imperfect?"

"It was for your sake I thought of Rangoon," he said sullenly.

"Yes,—dear, and it is for your sake, Heaven knows, that I propose to give you up. I am a drag on you, and what you feel for me is far more friendship than love."

"If you think so I have nothing more to say." He rose to go, stiffly, and then the tender heart in her failed.

"Oh, Tom, if it were not best for you, do you think I would have spoken?"

She wanted him to tell her that it was not best for him; she wanted him to prove to her that all her doubts were needless, but she had hurt him, and at her relenting he hardened himself.

"If it is best for you, that is enough," he said, and took his hat and left her without looking her again.

When the door had closed behind him Mary Ranley sat five minutes motionless. The airy bubble she had spent seven years blowing was shattered by her own touch. She scarcely realised what had happened yet, but there was a numb aching at her heart, far worse than any keen, comprehending pang. Tom was gone, and Tom was the lover of her whole life; but—and in this capacity she would miss him far more—he had always been her protégé and protegy. What would her motherly nature do now, without any one to plan for or protect?

Would he write to her, she wondered, or would she be left always without tidings? And when would he go? And would he be relieved that they had parted after the first edge of pain had worn off?

Six days passed without even an indirect word from him, and the morning's work was acquiring a maddening monotony, and the evening silence a despairing loneliness. Mary had few girl friends and no confidantes, and so her heart-ache missed the common alleviation of talking it over. If he never came or wrote, if she never heard of him again; there was no one in all the world to help or comfort her.

But he would not be cruel enough to treat her with silence forever; he would send her a message one day, and it would be one of peace and friendship. That faith grew in her day by day, battling with the growing despair: and then one day fact ranged itself on faith's side—a letter awaited her as she returned from the walk she had taken to escape from her thoughts.

But the letter was not from Tom; she saw that as she unfolded it. The writing was bigger, bolder, more legible. She read it all through before she reached the signature. When she had seen that she read the letter again. It was from John Hayward, the man she had always thought Mousie Graham's lover, and it contained an offer of marriage for herself.

"I have loved you always, Mary," he wrote, "and I have only refrained from telling you so because I had so little to offer till now. I did not dare ask you to share a worse home than you have been accustomed to, and so I held my peace. But at last I have attained to what I have honestly coveted so long; at last Armstrong & Co. have made me head of my department, and so I dare, after a devotion nearly as protracted as Jacob's, to ask you for my own."

It was a plain manly statement, and it went to Mary Ranley's sore heart. There was no gush, no agony of passion, in it; nothing but the simple tale of a man who had known her to be very patient and faithful. Yet his love for her startled her inexpressibly. She had never dreamed of it. There had never seemed anything but the merest good-comradeship in his attitude toward her—but of course his silence and self-restraint rendered his love all the more flattering, and John would make a good husband. Mary had an idea that the man who lived straightly and earnestly would love steadfastly, and she felt that the woman who became John Hayward's wife would have all chances of happiness in her favor. For an instant she wished this offer had come years before. Now, although Tom was not half so fine a character as John Hayward, she loved him, and that made all the difference.

When she came to think of it, it was odd that John made no mention of Tom. Surely he had known she was engaged to him; surely they had always made that patent to every one? Mary Ranley sat thinking over her offer in all its bearings, till the fire waned and her tea was ice cold.

John Hayward's offer was unexpected, but it was very fair and manly. She almost started to find she was considering it, that opposing counsel seemed to be arguing the pros and cons, with herself for judge and jury. On one side were love and ease and pleasure; on the other side was a barren life, holding only the memory of a disappointment. She was not a heroine, and teaching for her bread during a whole lifetime seemed sad and lonely enough.

But then, would not marriage with another than Tom seem almost sacrilege, after all they had planned together? Why their whole future had been mapped out with each other, and union with John Hayward would be but a dreary deception.

Her letter was written, hurriedly, at last, and when it was finished it was an acceptance. But she told John Hayward the truth. She had loved Tom Danvers honestly for years, but now that they had parted she did not think any memory of him would ever rise up between her and the husband she was prepared to accept and honor. She wrote this all quite calmly, but when it was finished she felt somehow as though she were twenty years older than she had been, and as if life had suddenly become quite humdrum and commonplace. Yet she had no thought of changing her mind. She rang the bell composedly for Bessie, the little maid-of-all-work, and gave her the letter with a hand that never faltered.

"This is your evening out, I think, Bessie. You may post this for me on your way through the village," she said, bethinking herself even of the little servant's affairs in that crisis of her life.

"Yes, Miss, surely," Bessie answered blushing, for she too had a lover, and these evenings out meant the joy of the whole week.

Somehow Miss Ranley felt that she wanted the letter out of her reach, and vacillation out of her power.

CHAPTER II.

"I have come to make things right. I can't do without you, Mary; you are my sheet-anchor; I have felt adrift since I lost you."

So Tom Danvers spoke, hurrying after her as she came home from afternoon school.

There was a drizzling rain falling, and the landscape was blurred, and the heavy clouds hung low, and the woman knew that the face she turned to her lover was pinched and white.

"I thought you had gone, Tom, it is so long since I heard of you."

"It is a week, and perhaps you did not ask about me. I never thought of going in any mad hurry like that. There is nothing decided even yet."

"Is there not? I thought—I had an idea there was," she answered, falteringly.

"Oh, no, Stephens only wrote to offer me the appointment, and I went to consult you about it when you took me up so shortly."

"I did not mean to hurt you," she protested, meekly.

"Well, perhaps some fellows don't mind being thrown over after seven years' waiting and just as there is a prospect of something definite at last."

"The prospect seemed very vague to me," smiling faintly.

"Oh, because you would not listen. Stephens offers me either three hundred as salary or a share in the proceeds, whichever I like, and he says the climate is good and living not very high, and I had almost persuaded myself, Mary, that we might go out together—married. But still, if you prefer me to grub on here, I shall do it, so as you continue to love me."

She had stopped, and they faced each other, and he saw now how pale she was.

"I would go with you to Rangoon if I could; it all seems so easy now, when it is too late," she answered with a break in her voice.

"And why is it too late?"

"Because I have promised to marry another man."

"You have! Well, certainly, you have not lost any time."

"I have not."

She could have laughed with the dreariest, most dismal mirth. She was so contemptible in her own eyes; all she had done looked so strange and uncalled for. Why, that very morning her senses had returned and she knew that a brave, strong-hearted, successful woman—for she was successful in her own way—has no right to throw herself on any man's charity just because he loves her and because her life-story has been mistold. If she had only waited to post her letter next day herself it would never have reached its destination. Now John Hayward had her promise.

There was no escaping from the position in which she had placed herself; there was no possibility of showing herself even excusable; she certainly had hastened with all speed from the old love to the new.

"I had thought you so different from that," Tom said with bewildered incredulity; "I thought you would have been faithful to me even if we had parted—for a while, at least."

"But I was weaker and meaner, you see. I wanted some one to keep me in idleness and buy me fine dresses and treat me well, and, when you could not do it, I closed with the offer of the first man who could." She seemed to take a certain bitter pleasure in her self-accusation now.

"Oh, Mary, I can't believe it. It's not possible! You who were always so high and far removed from the temptations that beset ordinary women!" he burst forth groaning.

"You overrated me; I overrated myself. You see now I am not worth taking to Rangoon, not worth loving or thinking about."

"But is it really true? Are you not torturing me with a cruel jest?"

"It is quite true; I have promised to be another man's wife, and I wrote him that no thought of you would ever stand between us," she answered, arraigning herself.

"Then you are a heartless woman, and I shall never forgive you!" he burst forth, pronouncing judgment on the spot, and then he rushed past her and out of her sight, while she continued her solitary way with laggard steps and a heart that lay in her bosom heavy as lead.

What can she do now? She has sown the wind, and the harvest of the whirlwind has been very swift and bitter. She has dallied with temptation, and her momentary unfaithfulness has cost her self-respect. But she will be true to herself at last; she will recall the promise that should never have been given. It will not matter as far as her happiness is concerned, but it will be the first step in the painful process of self-restoration.

When her recantation was written there was a load off her mind; but she was not in in any fevor of impatience to post this letter—it would keep till she was on her way to school. After the hurried emotions of the last twenty-four hours she was physically tired, and so she sat rocking herself backward and forward in her wicker chair with a faint sensation of relief in the motion.

Twilight was fading and timid little stars were trembling into the sky beyond the uncurtained windows, when there came a soft tap to the door, and Mousie Graham's rosy roguish face peeped in.

"Oh, you are not busy—thank goodness for that! I was half afraid I might find you deep in the Differential Calculus, and I did so want a good long chat."

"Come in dear, I am so glad to see you; it is an age since you were here before."

"Grannie has been worse lately; weaker and more fretful, and so I felt I could not leave her without a special errand."

"But she is better to day."

"Oh yes, ever to much better, and then Aunt Lizzie came to pay her a little visit, so I left Grannie with her, and ran over to see you."

"That was very good of you my dear."

"Oh no, it was not; I came on business." Mousie laughed and flushed a little, then she drew a letter from her pocket. "This came addressed to me yesterday, but it is evidently meant for you. It is from that booby, John Hayward; he is always in the clouds, or among the cog-wheels of his looms, and so the result is a blunder." She unfolded the sheet as she spoke, and handed it to Mary, and this is what stood before the latter's astonished eyes:

DEAR MISS RANLEY.—In the pleasant excursion we had together last Summer I remember your mentioning a book on ferns that you desired to have, but could not get as you had forgotten the author's name. I have just come across a volume by Teakerstone, the opening chapter of which is on the Osmunda regalis. If you think this is the work in question I shall be happy to forward it to you. Sincerely yours,

JOHN HAYWARD.

Mary Ranley was sure some complex machinerry in her head had got out of order, so loud and persistent was the whirring in her ears.

When she spoke at last her voice sounded faint and far away.

"Is your name Mary?"

"Of course it is, or rather Mary Ann, but everyone calls me Mousie except John Hayward. He thought Mousie no name for a girl, and so he always called me Mary—Miss Mary; it did sound so funny."

"Then, Miss Mary, I have an offer of marriage for you; it came to me, and, naturally enough, I took it to myself."

Mousie was so flurried that she did not notice her friend's perturbation.

"I fancied," she said, holding the letter in her hand, but not looking at it, "that he must have been writing to me and had mixed the covers. That is so like your very clever people! But how lucky the letter came to an engaged girl!"

"Well, I don't see the luck of it, for I wrote yesterday and accepted him."

"Oh, Mary! And Tom!"

"Tom and I had quarreled, and John's letter came at my worst moment, so I accepted him."

Poor Mousie's eyes grew dim.

"In that case, Mary, I suppose you had better keep the letter," she said, faltering, a little. "It was really sent to you, and, after all, I don't mind so very much."

"You are a generous little darling, but there is no necessity for your sacrifice even if Mr. Hayward would permit it. I wrote him my recantation this afternoon. There is the letter; you can send it to him with your own. He will be sure of its genuineness that way."

Then the two girls kissed and cried over each other, and after the exchange of divers confidences Mousie went away, carrying John's letter, still unread, in her hand.

After she had gone Mary took out her needlework, with an undefined feeling that chaos had come again, and that in the midst of it it was well to hold on to some commonplace, every-day employment.

By and by Bessie came in with the tea-tray, and as she flitted about the table Mary spoke with the feeling of desperation which makes us always want to lay a finger on our wound.

"You posted my letter last night, Bessie?"

Bessie paused, the picture of consternation.

"Oh, Miss, I'm afraid I forgot all about it."

"You forgot to take it out, I suppose?" speaking in a voice so high and eager that it scarcely sounded like her own.

"Oh, no Miss; I took it and put it in my water-proof pocket, but Peter met me before I reached the office and then I forgot, but I'll run out with it now in a minute."

"Bring it to me instead, please; I don't want it posted now."

Bessie never knew till this hour why Miss Ranley gave her five shillings instead of the scolding she expected, neither does John Hayward understand why letter number one never reached him.

Tom Danvers went to Rangoon, as he had said, in much disgust and despair. Mary's unfaithfulness had turned the sunlight into darkness for him, but through his pain a certain resolution to be and do something grew daily. He would forget her, he would never speak of her, and if men uttered her name he would turn aside, but he would do so well with his own life that one day she would know him the superior of the man she had married. So, in much wrath and scorn, he sailed away to succeed or fail as might be.

As for Mary, her life was all at the dead level of monotony now. There was always the morning's work, always the evening's enforced idleness, and periodically the long empty holidays in which her loneliness grew only more assertive.

She was growing old, she would soon be 30, and already there where white threads in the glossy smoothness of her hair.

But she was a good teacher, she was a success in the high school, and she clung to that poor triumph as her last source of happiness. It was she, the strong one, who would do a small work in a small groove all her life, and Tom who would grow to success and power. But she deserved that for her wrong estimate of both of them. And every one knew that he was doing well and that he had forgotten her. Why, it was only the other day that Mr. Wheelhouse had stopped her to tell her that he had just been asking Tom by letter why he was neglecting Mary Ranley.

"It was very good of you," she had said, going home with another shaft rankling in her sore heart.

It was dusk as she went wearily down the street. It was very still and empty, and she felt thankful for that and for the coming peace of her solitary parlor. But she stood for an instant on the doorstep to watch the trembling stars, before she rang the bell.

Bessie answered it with a beaming face. She was very fond of Miss Ranley, who had always been kind to her.

"There is a visitor for you in the parlor, miss."

"Oh, very well." Mary expected one of the pupil teachers who wanted a certificate; so she went up-stairs and put her out-door things away, and brushed her hair, and then came down to be the school-mistress at home. But it was not Jane Blakeney who rose at her entrance, but a tall, brown-bearded man, who looked into her face, and then held out his hands to her without a word.

"Tom! she said with a little fluttering sigh; "Tom!"

"Yes, it is I. I came back as soon as ever I knew you were free."

"I have not deserved it."

"Perhaps not, but then, you see, I could not do without you. I need some one to scold and keep me right."

"Oh, no, Tom, never again: old things and old habits are all ended."

"And you threw the other follow over?"

"No, not that exactly; it was all a mistake—all my pride and his stupidity; but I have been well punished for everything. I never thought you would come back."

"I did not mean to come back, till I found there was no getting on without you."

And then Mary burst into tears, and stood sobbing against his shoulder:

"Oh, Tom, I have missed you so!" she said.

"Well, I am here now to take care of you; won't that be reversing the old order of things?" smiling at her fondly.

And so it came about that Mary Ranley, despite her dangerous hesitation between two stools, found a comfortable seat on one of them, after all.

A Ride for Life.

A man named McCormick, who arrived from Montana this week, tells this story which, however we cannot vouch for:—On the way to Macleod he passed through the South Peigan Agency, where the Indians are at present in a very disturbed state, owing to the giving out of their rations. From the reserve he was followed by five Indians, who fired upon him. He had a good horse, and put the spurs to him, gradually pulling ahead of them. When he thought he had distanced his pursuers, he stopped and took off his saddle, to rest his horse and get something to eat. He had scarcely settled himself when, on looking up, he saw two Indians taking a bird's eye view of him from a butte. As soon as they saw that they were seen, they began pumping the contents of their rifles in his direction. He says he suddenly came to the conclusion that he was not hungry, and that he had urgent business farther north. He then saddled up and struck out for Macleod, which he reached without further accident.

It is stated in the Cosmos les Mondes that in the city of Utrecht, which is supplied with an exceedingly pure water, it has been found necessary to make use of tin service pipes coated internally with lead.

Uncrowned Heroes.

It is rather a strange thing that most of the heroes of history are made famous by deeds of bravery in war, in which they have sacrificed many lives, and in some instances their own, in support of principles and faiths that were almost sure to have direct effect upon temporary affairs.

There is another class of heroes which also includes many brave ones of the gentler sex, who do not flinch to go where duty calls them, no matter what the danger may be. They face invisible foes, and their victories are renowned for lives saved instead of lost. It requires a brave heart to enter into a conflict in which hundreds will fall, to oppose armed force with force; but how much more courage and constancy are needed to go into the house where deadly pestilence prevails and fight it day after day, week after week, to comfort the dying with the consolations of religion, give hope to the sick in body and at heart, to be patient and watchful through all, and yet have the fact every moment brought to mind that the nurse is just as vulnerable to the attacks of the mysterious foe as were its victims who are now writhing in its clutches.

There is said to be something inspiring in battle, something that makes the naturally brave man lose sight entirely of self and heed only the conflict. The roar of guns, the clash of arms and the sight of multitudes rushing to the charge draw the soldier onward, as the sound of bugle and the tramp of many hoofs influence the cavalry horse, that has lost the rider, but nevertheless keeps his place in the ranks. No battle cry cheers these other heroes. All is quiet except when broken by the rumble of a hearse or doctor's buggy over the stones, and the sobs and sighs of the bereaved and suffering—the well have fled; the sick and their faithful attendants alone remain.

To the fact that many such noble characters have existed in all ages, the world itself owes its life. Without them disease would soon ruin life, cities perish and the gardens of the earth become either wildernesses or deserts. During fearful cholera visitations, and whenever and wherever the yellow fever, small pox or plague have broken out with terrible effect, human nature has not proved wanting in pity. Heroes and heroines have sprang up on all sides, ready for the labor of love, whose only earthly rewards may be quiet graves, or in extreme cases in a quick-limed trench beside some of those whom they have been trying to save. The true nobility of character that takes such risks for others can never be described, but their example should be kept in mind and with it the thought that there is something braver than imperilling one's life in sanguinary conflict, and that is putting it at stake that those of others may be saved.—Presbyterian Banner.

Lord Randolph Churchill.

Scarcely above the middle height, of slight build, and apparently delicate constitution, Lord Randolph Churchill has smooth dark brown hair, parted down the middle and thin at the crown. The head is small, the eyes large, the nose short, and the cheek bones somewhat high. His lordship's moustache is, however the most conspicuous object of his personal appearance. It is the large blonde moustache of a Zouave of politics. Once, by mistake, Mr. Jacob Bright alluded to the noble lord as "the member for Woodcock," and the House laughed consumedly. And once a newspaper scribe hit upon a happier title, "The Bantam of Debate." From four o'clock in the afternoon, all through dreary question time, he sits impatiently in his place, gently agitating his left knee, nursing above his right, and affectionately caressing the moustache. Dexter and sinister hands go up alternately to the silky darling of his lips. Fresh with rest, or haggard and pale with late hours, Lord Randolph never ceases to fondle the moustache. It lends an added joy to the unfrequent hour of victory, or while Lord Hartington, sixteen years his senior, attempts, but fails, to wither him with an assumption of patriarchal superiority. Undoubtedly this old-young man prefers politics to what is called pleasure, yet does not ignore the claims of society in the world of words. He is of the very few members of Parliament who dress for dinner. So the flowers and songsters of the virgin forest, unseen, unheard of man, are made pleasant to look on; and what nature does for bud and blossom, the barber and the tailor do for the lively leader of the Fourth Party. Lord Randolph's clothes are, however, but the husk of him, the outside part first seen. The kernel within seems sound, and, if carefully preserved, may hereafter become illustrious. His industry is marvellous, his readiness of resource worthy of all praise; and though he speaks frequently, he is on the whole worth listening to. He is not eloquent with the eloquence of Mr. Gladstone or Mr. Bright. He has, indeed, a slight lisp, an imperfection of vocal delivery which spoils his pronunciation of some of the consonants, particularly of the letter S. If, however, he never rises to lofty heights of declamation, he seldom sinks below the safe level of commonplace. His occasional observations are neatly turned, and his set speeches cleverly constructed. He is scarcely ever at a loss for an idea, never for a word. Reverence—what is called veneration—cannot, however, be described as his strong point. Supposed to be subordinate to Sir Stafford Northcote, when it suits him to do so, he defies his chief; and the approved leaders of the Liberal Party fret under his stinging and unsparing invective. Though not always brilliant, his sallies are often cutting. His daring knows no bounds. Mr. Gladstone once called across the floor that he had utterly smashed, pulverized, and demolished him. That was a mistake. The Prime Minister might as well have attempted to annihilate a Jack-in-the-Box by shutting down the lid.

A Kiss Explained.

A kiss is a paroxysmal contact between the labial appendages attached to the superior and inferior maxillaries respectively of a man and woman or two women. The younger the parties are the more paroxysmal will be the paroxysm, and in case it be observed by the fond father of the paroxyzed young lady, there is also likely to be perigree between the paroxyzer's podalic junction and the phalanged extremities of the metatarsus, and other bric-a-brac depending from the lower end of the old gentleman's right leg. The kiss itself is not the paroxysm. It is merely the vibrations of the superincumbent atmosphere resultant from the expulsion of sweetness from each of the pairs of lips engaged in creating it.—Bloomington Pub.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Situation in France—Skobeloff
Eastern Question—The Span
Navy—Bottling Tears—Th
Cholera Germ—&c., &c.

Since the organization of Mr. Sp
Stockwell orphanage 924 fatherless c have been sheltered and cared for number of boys in residence last ye 237, and of girls 166. The distinctiv ure of this orphanage is a system of homes, each home containing its own under the direction of its matron.

A portion of the tunnel being ex in Glasgow for an underground railw cently fell in. The eighteen men w been working were on the surface at t having just taken their evening meal foreman who was to give orders for t turn was late that day, else they have been in the tunnel at the time accident.

From a bedroom in Windsor castle recently stolen a valuable gold watch silver chain and medal. Suspicion fe two privates of the Coldstream guard had been mounted upon the terrace n room. Nothing was found upon the but near the tower where they were s ed the watch was discovered concealed ivy.

At Wrexham, in Wales, a few week
one of the attendants at a menagerie, cleaning out the cage of the lions, plac right arm inside the bars, when one o animals suddenly tore it off at the e
During the panic which ensured a num persons were more or less seriously inj a report having been started that the had escaped from its cage.

A revolution in the match-making i try may be expected. The Russian de ment of commerce and manufacturers recently awarded a patent to the inv of a means for so impregnating wood w liquid that, when dried, it lights slight friction and can be used several t over, thus securing, according to the in tor, an economy of at least 75 per cent.

In the early months of the present se of parliament sixty-five measures were i duced by the government. Thirtee them have since been withdrawn, and sixteen have as yet received royal ass
Five others have passed the house, inclu the franchise bill. Of the remaining thi one, twelve are in the committee stage thirteen still await a second reading.

During the recent heavy rainfall in and and Galicia whole districts were c pletely flooded, hundreds of families lo their homes. At one small trading town value of the hay washed away was $60,0 at another it was $30,000, and in a th $10,000. No fewer than a hundred villa have been ruined. Old inhabitants say no ing equal to the devastation has occured si 1813.

Gibraltar having been included by Sp in the recent order to enforce quarantine all English arrivals, the authorities at G raltar, by way of reprisals, have expel from within the lines all Spaniards who not possess annual licenses. The num thus expelled is variously estimated at fr
4,000 to 6,000. They are principally lab ers, and nearly all of them are in a destitu condition.

Politics in Roumania are in a state of co siderable confusion. The conservatives ha secured the support of students, and a pa of their programme comprises a scheme dethroning King Charles and placing in t vacant office the Duke of Edinburgh.
correspondent who disbelieved this sto at first has had its truth confirmed to h satisfaction by overtures made by the co spirators to intimate friends of his.

Mr. John Sullivan, editor of the Jers Observer, has received authority from h majesty to translate into the Norman la guage and to publish her work "More leav from the Journal of Our Life in the Hig lands." In his letter signifying the roy pleasure to this effect, the queen's prive se retary says: "I think it will be a source gratification to her majesty to find an inte est shown in the Channel islands in regard t her little work."

The Societe Hippique in Paris, which un dertakes to look to the well-being of horses has adopted among its reforms one to the ef fect that no carter shall be allowed to wate his horse at the cab-stands, and as a substi tute it has placed a number of buckets an sponges at the public houses in all the chie thoroughfares. The innkeepers conside this a wise measure, for they find that the can profitably entertain the teamsters whil
the horses are quenching their thirst.

The porte is preparing to take a bold step
It was announced that on the 4th of Augus it would place sentinels at the foreign post offices in the capital to prevent letters from being posted. It has also sent a circular to its representatives at the European courts an nouncing its intention to get rid of the would capitulations which only give the right to the European embassies to receive and send letters by special couriers, and to discard every other kind kind of foreign interference.

Commercial enterprise has taken a new direction in Italy. The Milan Society for the Commercial exploration of Africa has organised a circumnavigation of Africa, with a view to affording the pupils of the high school of commerce an opportunity of becoming acquainted with likely markets for Italian products. The steamer will leave Genoa Sept. 1, to be absent four months, and the tourists are to be accompanied by a professor to lecture on the commercial geography of Africa.

In Brunswick the supreme court of the duchy is at present engaged with a case which commenced in 1604 before the then Imperial court of Weltzar. It was carried on for half a century, and was then left in abeyance till a comparatively recent period. It involves a claim set up by the counts of Wolberg against the administrators of the Guelphic private domain for the restriction of the whole of the estates, forests, and mines in the county of Blankenberg (Hartz mountains), which are valued at nearly £1,000,000.
The Duke of Brunswick is the real defendant.

The Secolo, newspaper of Milan, says that the cholera germ described by Dr. Koch was discovered by an Italian, Dr. Filippo Pacini as far back as thirty years ago. In a treatise by Pacini published in 1854 in the Italian Medical Gazette, and translated into French in the "Archives of Military Medicine of Turin" in 1855, and into English in the "Report on the Cholera Epidemic of 1856,

Uncrowned Heroes.

ather a strange thing that most of the of history are made famous by deeds ry in war, in which they have meray lives, and in some instances wn, in support of principles and
They fought tangible foes for ret were almost sure to have direct on temporary affairs.
is another class of heroes which also many brave ones of the gentler sex, not flinch to go where duty calls matter what the danger may be, e invisible foes, and their victories
wned for lives saved instead of lost.
es a brave heart to enter into a n which hundreds will fall, to op-ed force with force; but how much rage and constancy are needed to e house where deadly pestilence and fight it day after day, week k, to comfort the dying with the ns of religion, give hope to the dy and at heart, to be patient and through all, and yet have the fact ment brought to mind that the ust as vulnerable to the attacks of rious foe as were its victims who rithing in its clutches.
said to be something inspiring in nething that makes the naturally lose sight entirely of self and the conflict. The roar of guns, of arms and the sight of multi-ing to the charge draw the soldier the sound of bugle and the tramp oofs influence the cavalry horse, lost the rider, but nevertheless place in the ranks. No battle cry e other heroes. All is quiet ex-broken by the rumble of a hearse buggy over the stones, and the ghs of the bereaved and suffering have fled; the sick and their endants alone remain.
et that many such noble charexisted in all ages, the world itts life. Without them disease ruin life, cities perish and the the earth become either wilderdeserts. During fearful cholera and whenever and wherever the r, small pox or plague have with terrible effect, human not proved wanting in pity.
heroines have sprang up on all for the labor of love, whose only ards may be quiet graves, or in s in a quick-limed trench beside se whom they have been trying e true nobility of character that risks for others can never be ut their example should be kept with it the thought that there braver than imperilling one's nary conflict, and that is putting that those of others may be byterian Banner.

Randolph Churchill.

bove the middle height, of and apparently delicate consti-Randolph Churchill has smooth air, parted down the middle he crown. The head is small,
, the nose short, and the cheek hat high. His lordship's mouowever the most conspicuous ersonal appearance. It is the moustache of a Zouave of nce, by mistake, Mr. Jacob d to the noble lord as "the Woodcock," and the House medly. And once a newspaper n a happier title, "The Ban-." From four o'clock in the through dreary question time, ntly in his place, gently agi-knee, nursing above his right, ely caressing the moustache, ister hands go up alternately rling of his lips. Fresh with d and pale with late hours, never ceases to fondle the lends an added joy to the r of victory, or while Lord xteen years his senior, at-ls, to wither him with an as-atriarchal superiority. Uns old-young man prefers t is called pleasure, yet does laims of society in the world is of the very few members who dress for dinner. So the sters of the virgin forest, d of man, are made pleasant
what nature does for bud
e barber and the tailor do ader of the Fourth Party.
s clothes are, however, but , the outside part first seen.
n seems sound, and, if care-
, may hereafter become industry is marvellous, his ource worthy of all praise;
peaks frequently, he is on h listening to. He is not e eloquence of Mr. Gladright. He has, indeed, a perfection of vocal delivery pronunciation of some of the cularly of the letter S. If, r rises to lofty heights of eldom sinks below the safe place. His occasional ob-eatly turned, and his set constructed. He is scarce-for an idea, never for a e—what is called venerawever, be described as his pposed to be subordinate rthcote, when it suits him his chief; and the approv-Liberal Party frst under d unsparing invective.
s brilliant, his sallies are daring knows no bounds.
e called across the floor
rly smashed, pulverized,
m. That was a mistake.
r might as well have at-late a Jack-in-the-Box by lid.

s Explained.

oxyamal contact between es attached to the superior llaries respectively of a two women. The younger more paroxysmal will be in case it be observed by he paroxyzed young lady.
y to be perigree between odalic junction and the ties of the metatarsus,
-brac depending from he old gentleman's right
f is not the paroxysm. It tions of the superincumsultant from the expulom each of the pairs of reating it.—Bloomington

FOREIGN NEWS.

Education in France—Skobeloff on the Eastern Question—The Spanish Navy—Bottling Tears—The Cholera Germ—&c., &c.

Since the organization of Mr. Spurgeon's Stockwell orphanage 924 fatherless children have been sheltered and cared for. The number of boys in residence last year was 257, and of girls 166. The distinctive feature of this orphanage is a system of cottage homes, each home containing its own family under the direction of its matron.

A portion of the tunnel being excavated in Glasgow for an underground railway recently fell in. The eighteen men who had been working were on the surface at the time having just taken their evening meal. The foreman who was to give orders for their return was late that day, else they would have been in the tunnel at the time of the accident.

From a bedroom in Windsor castle were recently stolen a valuable gold watch and a silver chain and medal. Suspicion fell upon two privates of the Coldstream guards, who had been mounted upon the terrace near the room. Nothing was found upon the men, but near the tower where they were stationed the watch was discovered concealed in the ivy.

At Wrenham, in Wales, a few weeks ago, one of the attendants at a menagerie, while cleaning out the cage of the lions, placed his right arm inside the bars, when one of the animals suddenly tore it off at the elbow. During the panic which ensured a number of persons were more or less seriously injured, a report having been started that the lion had escaped from its cage.

A revolution in the match-making industry may be expected. The Russian department of commerce and manufacturers has recently awarded a patent to the inventor of a means for so impregnating wood with a liquid that, when dried, it lights with slight friction and can be used several times over, thus securing, according to the inventor, an economy of at least 75 per cent.

In the early months of the present session of parliament sixty-five measures were introduced by the government. Thirteen of them have since been withdrawn, and only sixteen have as yet received royal assent. Five others have passed the house, including the franchise bill. Of the remaining thirty-one, twelve are in the committee stage and thirteen still await a second reading.

During the recent heavy rainfall in Poland and Galicia whole districts were completely flooded, hundreds of families losing their homes. At one small trading town the value of the hay washed away was $60,000; at another it was $30,000, and in a third $10,000. No fewer than a hundred villages have been ruined. Old inhabitants say nothing equal to the devastation has occured since 1813.

Gibraltar having been included by Spain in the recent order to enforce quarantine on all English arrivals, the authorities at Gibraltar, by way of reprisals, have expelled from within the lines all Spaniards who did not possess annual licenses. The number thus expelled is variously estimated at from 4,000 to 6,000. They are principally laborers, and nearly all of them are in a destitute condition.

Politics in Roumania are in a state of considerable confusion. The conservatives have secured the support of students, and a part of their programme comprises a scheme for dethroning King Charles and placing in the vacant office the Duke of Edinburgh. A correspondent who disbelieved this story at first has had its truth confirmed to his satisfaction by overtures made by the conspirators to intimate friends of his.

Mr. John Sullivan, editor of the Jersey Observer, has received authority from her majesty to translate into the Norman language and to publish her work "More leaves from the Journal of Our Life in the Highlands." In his letter signifying the royal pleasure to this effect, the queen's prive secretary says: "I think it will be a source of gratification to her maejsty to find an interest shown in the Channel islands in regard to her little work."

The Societe Hippique in Paris, which undertakes to look to the well-being of horses, has adopted among its reforms one to the effect that no carter shall be allowed to water his horse at the cab-stands, and as a substitute it has placed a number of buckets and sponges at the public houses in all the chief thoroughfares. The innkeepers consider this a wise measure, for they find that they can profitably entertain the teamsters while their horses are quenching their thirst.

The porte is preparing to take a bold step. It was announced that on the 4th of August it would place sentinels at the foreign postoffices in the capital to prevent letters from being posted. It has also sent a circular to its representatives at the European courts announcing its intention to get rid of the would capitulations which only give the right to the European embassies to receive and send letters by special couriers, and to discard every other kind kind of foreign interference.

Commercial enterprise has taken a new direction in Italy. The Milan Society for the Commercial exploration of Africa has organized a circumnavigation of Africa, with a view to affording the pupils of the high school of commerce an opportunity of becoming acquainted with likely markets for Italian products. The steamer will leave Genoa Sept. 1, to be absent four months, and the tourists are to be accompanied by a professor to lecture on the commercial geography of Africa.

In Brunswick the supreme court of the duchy is at present engaged with a case which commenced in 1604 before the then imperial court of Weltzar. It was carried on for half a century, and was then left in abeyance till a comparatively recent period. It involves a claim set up by the counts of Wolberg against the administrators of the personal private domain for the restriction of the whole of the estates, forests, and mines in the county of Blankenberg (Harts mountains), which are valued at nearly £1,000,000. The Duke of Brunswick is the real defendant.

The Secolo, newspaper of Milan, says that the cholera germ described by Dr. Koch was discovered by an Italian, Dr. Filippo Pacini far back as thirty years ago. In a treatise by Pacini published in 1854 in the Italian Medical Gazette, and translated into French in the "Archives of Military Medicine of Brussels" in 1855, and into English in the Report on the Cholera Epidemic of 1856, he described the cholera as being due to the action of "a very simple organism which I shall call a choleraic microbe." Dr. Pacini's treatise was published in 1865, 1866, 1871, and 1879.

The old custom of bottling tears is still continued in Persia. It must be very old, as it is alluded to in the Psalms of David. As the mourners are sitting around and weeping the master of ceremonies presents each one with a piece of cotton wool, with which he wipes off his tears. This cotton is afterwards squeezed into a bottles, and the tears preserved as a powerful and efficacious remedy for reviving a dying man after every means have failed. It is also employed as a charm against evil influences. The practice was once universal, as is evidenced by the tear-bottles which are found in almost every ancient tomb.

The Spanish navy consisted in 1883 of five iron-clads, an iron-clad monitor, a floating battery, and 117 other vessels. The navy possesses 35 gun-boats for the defense of the islands of Cuba and Port Rico. According to the new proposals, the reorgination of the fleet ought to be completed in ten years, at the end of which time Spain would possess 12 iron-clads, 2 iron-clad cruisers, 7 first-class cruisers, 9 second-class cruisers, 11 third-class cruisers, 32 torpedo boats, and 6 transports. A sum of 230 000,000 pesetas (about $46,000,000), to be spent in ten years, is demanded from the government.

On the recent anniversary of the death of Gen. Skobeloff, a mass was performed in the Kazan cathedral, at St. Petersburg, at which however, very few persons attended. The Novoe Vremya, lamenting his forgetfulness of the illustrious dead, publishes a very remarkable letter of Skobeloff, written in 1881 to a Moscow journalist. In this letter Skobeloff says that it is necessary for Russia to approach the eastern question—namely, the annexation of the Bosphorus—by the help of the central Asian question. Russia's safety and greatness the general believed to be dependent on the development of her commercial centres. Under the pressure of the Polish question a regular developement would be impossible, and only on the annexation of the Bosphorus would Russia be able repeat Kosciusko's "Finis Poloniæ." To resist the Austrain advance to Salonica Skobeloff advocated the alliance with England, who, as the price of her alliance, should be rewarded with the whole of central Asia, which for Russia, whose end and aim is the possession of the Bosphorus, could only be of temporary importance.

M. Levasseur recently read to the Academie des Sciences an interesting report upon the progress made in primary education throughout France during the last five years. The annual ordinary expenditure has increased during that period by 37 per cent, from £2,988 696 in 1877 to £4,690 402 in 1882, while the extraordinary expenditure provided for by the law in 1880 for equipping and endowing primary schools has been between eight and nine millions during the same period. The number of primary schools has increased during the five years from 71,547, to 75 535, the increase being chiefly in public and lay schools. The number of pupils in the public and free schools has risen from 4 716,935 in 1876 1877 to 5,341.211 in 1881-1882, and of this latter total 4 350 256 were students in the public schools. The progress in public education has been entirely confined to the lay schools, which have gained 584,968 students since 1878, while the public religious schools have lost 208 514. But in the free schools the reverse has happened, the religious ones having increased by 140,337 student, while the lay free schools have lost 44,667. The number of pupils in the infant schools has increased during the same period from 532,077 to 644,334.

In Summer, Remember

1. That infectious diseases generally are due to filth in some form—most of them directly to divers kinds of microscopic plants (bacteria) which gain entrance into the system through the lungs or the stomach. Invading the wonderful laboratories of life,—the infinitesimal cells,—they disorganize these just as the yeast-plants, multiplying to countless millions, disorganize every particle of the dough—or would do so, if not themselves killed by the heat of the oven.

2. Remember that the best preservative against them is high health, which either digests them in the stomach, or repels them from gaining a foothold, and eliminates them from the system.

3. Remember that the next best preservative against infectious diseases is a free and strong circulations of pure air through the house from cellar to attic. The danger is when large numbers of bacteria gain admittance. There is slight probability that a foothold will be gained by these invaders when their number is comparatively few.

4. Remember that in our cities and large towns the sewers, constantly receiving the excreta of the sick, are never free from infectious bacteria; that these readily pass up into dwellings through every open connecting pipe; that these pipes should be kept closed when not in use; and that they should in no case, enter a sleeping room, but only into a well-ventilated water-closet.

5 Remember that, in the country, wells are dangerous when they are within one hundred feet of a privy or cesspool.

6. Remember that while boiling may purify infected water, mere filtering never renders it safe.

7. That all water closets, cesspools, etc., should be frequently disinfected, copperas, (sulphate of iron) being a good and cheap disinfectant for the purpose.

8 That a deodorizer is not necessarily a disinfectant. We may kill a bad smell, and not kill the bacteria.

What She Was Sorry For.

It is related that a confessor once had much difficulty in getting an old Irishwoman, a regular penitent of his, to recollect any sin. She could not remember that she had done anything wrong at all. At last after a severe examination, he asked her if she could remember any sin of her past life. No. Anything she was sorry for? "Sure, father," she answered. "I'm sorry I ever came to this country!"

The man who walks round and round without an object is not less, but more fatigued than the one who walks with firm step the same distance to reach a given point. Thought is always busy, and when it moves only in a useless circle it is more wearisome, because more uninteresting, than when it marches with steady and elastic tread to the goal of knowledge.

A THIEF IN A COFFIN.

Novel Plot to Rob a Cathedral.

The city of Mexico, the scene of many peculiar crimes, is just now agog over the performance of a thief, which is generally admitted to surpass anything on record. A few days ago several men went to the priest in charge of the Santa Cruz church in that city and asked permission to hold funeral services over the remains of a deceased friend at 4 o'clock the next morning. There was nothing unusual in the request, for many people in that country bury their dead early in the morning before mass, and the priest gave his permission, agreeing to be present. The men then said they would like to leave the corpse over night, and to this the clergyman also consented. Some time after dark the men appeared bearing a coffin, which they carried up the main aisle and deposited in front of the altar. They then withdrew, promising to be there early the next morning.

About midnight the sacristan was awakened by the barking of his dogs, and feeling that something was wrong he dressed hastily and stepped from his room into the chancel. A dim light was

BURNING NEAR THE ALTAR.

by means of which he could see a figure moving slowly on the other side of the chancel. Making up his mind that robbers were in the church he ran quickly to his room for a pistol, and then made a search of the church. No one was to be seen. On the altar he found everything safe, but when he came to examine the images of the saints he soon saw that the costly jewels with which they had been ornamented were gone. He then redoubled his efforts to find the thief, but after half an hour passed in searching every nook of the great edifice he was more mystified than ever, for he not only could not find the offender, but he could discover no place where he could have come in or gone out. Just before he determined to give the alarm he thought of the corpse lying down below the chancel rail in the shadow, and the idea came to him that perhaps there might be something wrong about it. Lighting a candle he stepped softly to the bier and peered into the face of

THE SUPPOSED DEAD MAN.

As he looked he noticed that the eyelids of the "corpse" twitched nervously under the light, and at the same time his own eyes fell on some of the glittering jewels which lay beside the man in the coffin.

Overjoyed at finding the thief, the sacristan thrust his revolver into the face of the "corpse" and ordered him to get out. The cold steel on the man's forehead convinced him that the order must be obeyed, and a most extraordinary resurrection took place then and there. When the man had gained his feet, the sacristan, still covering him with his pistol, gathered up the jewels and then marched the culprit to the priest's house where he was turned over to the police. Several soldiers were then stationed in the church, and when the thief's confederates arrived in the morning they were taken into custody. At first they denied all knowledge of the conspiracy, but after a little one of them confessed and told the whole story. He said they intended to go through the form of a funeral ceremony and then carry their friend out to the cemetery, and after letting him out of the coffin, bury it and leave the country as speedily as possible. They will be severely punished.

The Art of Tattooing.

Englishmen only tattoo flags, leaves or flowers. The French don't do much. A flag, laid on flat, or a liberty-cap, is about their best. It is in the Sandwich Islands that the best artists are found. The Kanakas use indigo and cinnibar, all vegetable matter. A shark's tooth or a fish-bone is used. They accomplish excellent results. The bone is set in a stick, and then the tension is put on the flesh with their feet, as they beat the picture in bit by bit. Snakes, fish, and alligators are their strong points. The Japanese and Chinese are experts after a fashion. They draw only Chinese or Japanese pictures, and generally put the name of the object under what they portray. Turks and Russians know absolutely nothing about it, though I've seen sailors of both nationalities who were tattooed.

The sailors are the nomads of the profession. They go from port to port, and some of them are so well known that they have customers awaiting their arrival in nearly every harbor they enter, Spanish or Italian cities for instance. There is always a floating population in those seaports, and "Jack" gathers in a good many pesetas and silver scudi. In the East Indian ports, especially Bombay, he is in great demand among the Lascars and light-colored Hindoos. The latter are very partial to vermillion—which is red oxide of mercury, and therefore makes the flesh very sore. Often the "subject" gets quite ill from its effects on the system. There are only two colors that can be worked into flesh—black and red. The black Indian ink turns blue? There is no blue ink. It is a mystery which science has never solved. The change in color is due to some action of the blood doubtless.

An Ingenous Convict.

An ingenious contrivance, to be used in effecting the escape of a convict named Theodore Scheff from Sing Sing prison, was captured by Principal Keeper Connaughton, recently. This convict was a skilled machinist, and worked in the machine shop. The contrivance was made of tin, and designed to be strapped securely over the nose and mouth, in front of both of which were openings leading to a tube about an inch in diameter and three inches long, to which was to be attached a longer tube. The design of the man was to jump off the dock when unobserved, having previously strapped this contrivance to his face, and walk off on the bottom of the river with the air tube extending above the water. In this manner he could have walked or floated around the prison walls before going ashore. The keeper found the apparatus among Scheff's tools at his bench in the workshop. The man was all ready to go, and when searched it was found that he had a picture of his wife attached to some strings down his back. He said that he did this so that if he should get drowned or shot in his attempt to escape this picture would lead to his wife's identification. He has been taken from the machine shop, where he has proved himself too handy, and placed in the shoe shop, where his facilities for constructing such machines will not be be so ample. He is a German, 26 years old, and was sentenced by Judge Gildersleeve Jan. 15 for four years for grand larceny.

DANCING DERVISHES.

A Singular Sect in the Moorish Quarters of Algiers.

One evening during our stay in Algiers, we were informed that the dancing dervishes, or almeehs, as they are called, were to give a performance. Accordingly that evening, having procured a guide, we proceeded to the place where the performance was to be given, driving through the narrow streets connecting the French with the Moorish quarter of the town, until they became so narrow and winding that it was impossible to go farther. Here we left the carriages in a small square, where four flat stones imbedded in the ground marked the spot where prisoners were formerly beheaded, and walked on through the narrow, dimly-lighted street, and on arriving at our destination were ushered into a large old Moorish house with its central open court, galleries, and communicating rooms. On two sides of this court, which was lighted by flickering candles, are benches for spectators, while before them about fifty Arabs in their picturesque costumes were sitting cross legged, smoking and drinking coffee. In the centre of the court was a large square carpet, upon which was a brazier of burning charcoal, and behind it was a lighted candle about three feet in height. Behind these candles six musicians were seated, in the centre of whom was the master of ceremonies or high priest of the order, an intelligent appearing Arab of perhaps 40 years of age. In the gallery immediately above us, partially concealed by screens of rags or shawls were many Moorish women, and when the exercises became exciting one could occasionally catch a glimpse of a pretty face. At a given signal the music commenced. The instruments were immense tambourines, perhaps two and a half feet in diameter, which they tuned to the right musical pitch by occasionally heating them over the charcoal fire. The noise produced by these instruments was deafening and monotonous. They continued pounding steadily for perhaps twenty minutes with no result, when all at once a young man rushed into the centre of the circle with a scream and commenced to

DANCE AND GESTICULATE WILDLY.

He was immediately seized by the attendants, who divested him of his outer garments and ornaments. He then, with a vacant, staring expression, began to dance wildly before the tall candle. It could hardly be called a dance, as his feet were stationary.

He simply threw his head and body backward and forward, all his muscles being completely relaxed, his head almost touching the flame of the candle as it swung forward. His face soon became red and he began to froth at the mouth. He was soon joined by two others. An attendant kept them in line, not allowing them to get too near the candle, and occasionally joining their hands. Soon a wild looking, emaciated old man sprang into the centre of the circle with a scream. After he had been divested of his outer garments he did not dance, but commenced pointing with wild screams, at different persons in the room. He then placed his heel in the centre of the burning charcoal until the smoke and odor of burning flesh filled the room. The performance was rendered more effective by his continual screams and by the unearthly noise of the tambourines. He then withdrew his foot, and a redhot shovel having been handed to him, he rapidly struck it with his open hand and then drew his finger slowly across it, producing, probably, a slight blister. A heavy sharp pointed instrument was then handed to him, which the old man placed against his abdomen and proceeded to pound against the other end with a heavy brick, which he broke into several fragments. He then, with apparently great effort, pretended to withdraw it, but as its withdrawal was not followed by blood, and as he immediately covered up the spot with his clothing, we concluded that the instrument did not penetrate the flesh at all. He then kissed the priest and ran into an adjoining apartment, where he placed his foot in water and afterward resumed his seat with the others.

Meanwhile the three dancers, who had continued bobbling wildly up and down, had fallen to the floor in an exhausted condition and had been assisted out of the room by the attendants. The performers, though some were wild and emaciated in appearance, did not show scars, and though those whose heads were not shaved showed irregular losses of hair, as though it might have been pulled out, still they all appeared to be in fair physical condition. At this time there was a temporary lull in the proceedings. The tambourines continued to beat monotonously, and the habitues of the place were evidently awaiting some new development.

An Arab who sat near me spoke to me in French, saying: "Watch that old man; he is the best performer of the party." The man in question was a fine looking old Arab richly dressed, wearing spectacles, who was and smiling serenely. Near him was another old man, watching the proceedings. The chief evidently did every thing in his power to excite him. At stated intervals the musicians would beat the tambourines fast and furiously. At such times the old man would sway backward and forward, and look wildly about, muttering to himself. He even, at one time, unbuttoned his outer garments, evidently preparing for his approaching fit. He would then subside again, and finally buttoned up his coat, and did not perform during the evening.

STROKING HIS LONG GRAY BEARD

Soon, however, the other old man, without warning suddenly fell forward into the circle. He was raised by the attendants, who, as in the previous cases, took off his watch and outer garments.

He then commenced to repeat in a loud voice certain Arabic sentences. A tambourine was then passed about the audience, containing perhaps ten stones, varying in size from one-fourth to three-fourths of an inch in diameter, and a rusty nail. One of these stones was then passed to the old man, who, holding it between his thumb and fore finger, placed it in his mouth and swallowed it. He then swallowed all the stones, finishing with the rusty nail. There was no opportunity for deception, as his arms were bare, and he invariably opened his mouth to show that it was empty. It is said that a member of the order has recently died from the effect of swallowing nails. After he had finished his performance he resumed his seat, adjusting his garments, receiving many congratulations from his friends. The music then became more furious and deafening, the uproar was increased by shrill screams of encouragement from the women above, and shortly three new men rushed into the circle—dancing and screaming. Three red-hot shovels were handed them, which they struck as the first performer had done, while one of the number took the red hot shovel between his teeth, and held it there until there was

A STRONG ODOR OF BURNING FLESH.

They then took the red coals from the brazier, chewed and swallowed them, while the black froth ran from their mouths. Two large portions of prickly cactus, covered with long, sharp needles, were then handed to them. These they seized furiously struggling for the largest portions, which they chewed and swallowed—meanwhile frothing and foaming from the mouth. Eight scorpions were then placed in a tambourine and passed about for the inspection of the audience, ugly crawling reptiles resembling small crabs. These were then given to the performers, who held them in their hands, not allowing them to fasten upon their fingers, however. Then at a given signal they ate the struggling reptiles, the disgusting crunching sound being very distinct—fighting as before for the largest, flavoring the morsel with charcoal and prickly cactus, meantime screaming and dancing. Our curiosity having been satisfied, we left, although the performance was supposed to continue throughout the night. We paid our fee to the Arab who had conducted us to the place, though our regular guide a pious old Arab, whose religious scruples would not allow him to visit such a place, to drink wine, to have but one wife, and who felt himself obliged to pray at least five times daily, sometimes to our inconvenience, said that the performers would get but a very small portion of the money which we had paid him.

The conclusion we arrived at concerning the performance: That the performers took care that they did not seriously injure themselves; that they were willing to dance, to swallow stones and disgusting objects, and endure a certain amount of pain, for the money which they received and the distinction which they enjoyed; that they really became very much excited by the furious music, and that some among them were doubtless insane, while others were simply actors.

This sect was founded about 200 years ago in Morrocco by a Sidi Mohammed Ben Aissa, who is said to have proved himself a saint by casting himself down from a high tower without injury. He and his followers, after having been banished from Morocco, went into the desert and there found themselves able to nourish themselves upon sticks, stones, scorpions, etc., a talent which has been handed down to their descendants. The headquarters of the sect are in Morocco. Taera, during the religous festival of last winter, the disciples of this creed rushed wildly through the streets, seizing living sheep, tearing them limb from limb and eating the raw flesh. At that time Europeans were cautioned not to approach them. Their performances are said to be discountenanced by the more intelligent Arabs.—Boston Transcript.

Bob Burdette's Ideal Old Man.

Man never attains his ideal. He comes nearest it the day he leaves school; all that year he hovers around it in pleasant proximity. Sometimes I think he quite attains it on commencement day. But a year away from school, he and his ideal part company. He sees it drifting farther away from his eager hands. I have, in my own brilliant and aggressive career, pursued several fleeting and more or less perfect ideals. From where I now stand, at the distance pole, I can see the majority of them scooting under the wire, and I feel that I am shut out. One, I can see, is yet in nearer sight, and I am very loth to see it get entirely away from me.

I have my ideal of physical perfection in the aged. This is the manner of old man I want to be. I am not a tall man now. I do not really have to stand up to look over the back of a car seat. I stand merely because I see farther. But as I grow old I want to fat up. I want to develop a capacious bay window, so that when my summer vest is hanging on the line it will look like a schooner coming down "wing and wing." Then I can wear my watch in my fob, with a great big seal dangling from it like a bell clapper. I want to be short in the breath and wheeze when I climb up stairs, and puff and pant when I walk up hill, and have to take two steps to cross the gutter. And I would wear a clawhammer coat, with wide lapels, all the time, and carry my handkerchief in my hat. I would like my hair to turn snow white or else fall off, I am not very particular which. I would like my moustache to bleach out until it looked like a streak of flour across my lip. I believe this is all. I think that is a photograph of the kind of an old man I would like to be. This my ideal old man. Cane and wheezy laugh, of course.

And I am just as confident as I am that I will die rich that, as I grow old, I will shrivel up and dry out until I look like a shoestring with clothes on.

"Good Morning."

It is astonishing, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, how old this salutation is, and how it differs, says a contemporary, among various races. The Greeks wished a man to be of "a good cheer." The Romans trusted that their friends might that day find themselves in a state of health and safety. The reason explains itself. The Greek was "a gay dog" and happiness at any cost his ideal. Hence be of "good cheer"—make the most of the moment. The Roman, however, surrounded by the cares of a vast empire threatened now by one foe and again by another, used a more solemn greeting. "Health" was his first wish, because his idolized Rome was surrounded by fogs. "Safety" was his second wish for at any moment the fateful end of all things might come. In China "good morning" almost grows comic. It means there, "have you eaten your rice, and is your stomach working well?" Fancy putting these phrases to an Englishman! Yet, after all, there is a good deal of wisdom in his salutation. A good appetite for breakfast, be it a bread-and butter meal or be it a repast on rice, means, as a rule, a good day, and, following a good day, a good night, and with a good night, pleasant sleep and renewed strength, for the morning again. A man whose stomach, too, is working well is a man whose temple is equable, and who will therefore, generally speaking, be happy and sunny minded. Upon these considerations therefore, it would almost seem that pig-tailed John's "good morning" is the wisest of those named.

The Standard.

MARKDALE AUG. 14, 1884.

Markdale Cattle Fair.

This institution has dragged along a feeble existance for two years, but is now developing into a genuine cattle fair; last Saturday over one hundred head of fine cattle were on the fair ground, more than half of which found a market at fair prices, Mr. F. Burton sold a cow for $48, Mr. Thibodo disposed of 72 head the day previous. Mr. Scott of Owen Sound was the purchaser. We can see no reason why Markdale should not have one of the best Monthly fairs in the county, being located in the midst of a prosperous agricultural district, and having an excellent fair ground of five acres, secured by an eight foot fence, so that cattle can be left with perfect safety from breaking out, there is nothing wanted on the part of buyers but to know that a large number of cattle will be offered, while all is wanted on the part of farmers is to know that good buyers will be on hand. It is Mr. Scott's intention to attend Markdale fair in future, and others have determined to attend so that we may reasonably expect the fair to grow rapidly from month to month. Let our business men give it their encouragement as they should.

Better Than The Best.

GRAND OFFER GOOD FOR AUGUST ONLY.

We will send to any adress the STANDARD and Toronto Weekly News the balance of 1884 for 40 cents, or the STANDARD and Montreal Star, six months for 65 cents, or the three papers mentioned the balance of the year for 70 cents. This is the best oportunity yet presented to secure the news at a small cost. Do not delay, but send in your subscrsption early in the month and thereby secure the greater bargain. The cash must accompany the order in all cases. Mail all orders tc STANDARD office, Markdale.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsib'e for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

It Serves Them Right.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

DEAR SIR,—I understand that five of the hopefulls of your village, summonedto appear before the magistrate, Brown, on Saturday last, to answer a charge of "Disorderly Conduct" and breaking the doors and windows of one Mrs Duff, who keeps a house of questionable notority, and were fined each in the sum of about $8. I am also informed by some of the neighbors that this is not the first time their midnight slumbers have been disturbed by the rowdyish conduct of some of the same parties, and if repeated will have to answer before a higher tribunal. I am surprised that self-respect, if not shame, would not keep young men (who ought to occupy a respectable position in society) from such conduct.

The blame is laid on whiskey, which was taken in quantities by some of the parties. Your village has got an unenviable notority. A gentleman on the cars, who had remained over night in your village, and had witnessed the conduct of some of the youths, remarked that there were boys in your village preparing themselves for the penitentiary and the hangman's rope. Your hotel-keepers are also guilty of selling liquor on Sunday, contrary to law. Your licensed groceries sell liquor by the glass, contrary to law; and even do not regard the sacredness of the Sabbath, but have been seen going in and out of their places of business with their customers on the Lord's day. There is also liquor sold in your midst without license. What in the name of common sense are the Inspectors paid for? Are they doing their duty? Let every respectable merchant, let every respectab e man who has an interest in the prosperity of your village arise in his might and crush out this crying evil from your midst; let the law be enforced in every instance, and heavy fines laid upon the transgressors, then peace and prosperity will be yours.

Yours truly,
MORALITY.

A Trip To Manitoulin

To the Editor of the Standard.

DEAR SIR.—If you will allow me a small space in your valuable paper I will endeavor to give a sketch of what I saw on Manitoulin Island. On Tuesday the 15th July I left Markdale, took my departure same evening from Owen Sound per S. S. Magnet arriving at Manitowaning the following day. I was surprised, on nearing that port, with the beautiful view, and still more impressed with the lively business aspect of the village; why, it proved even more lively and interesting the one night we stopped here than our go-ahead Markdale. I left Manitowaning the following day (Thursday) by stage for Providence Bay district and the farther I travelled the more discouraged I grew, there being nothing but rocks on either side; I determined however to further test the matter more fully and to that end left the stage at Michael's Bay and walked across the country by stage road but found a continuation of rocks with an occasional farm house by the way, but how they existed was a mistery to me, however on further investigation I found that the ledge of rock only extended a short distance back from the main road when a beautiful stretch of country opened to view extending for miles and making beautiful settlements, and I further learned from the residents that in digging wells they often dig 30 to 40 feet before coming to rock. In reference to Providence Bay district, to which I reached, it is a fine agricultural country one of the prosperous farmers being your old neighbor Samuel Wilson. There are also beautiful lakes in this district; Lake Mindemoya is over eight miles long and an averaged of about three miles wide, and has a most remarkable shore. This is a remarkable body of water in more than one respect, 1st you can drive a horse and buggy into it any place for ten or fifteen rods before coming to swimming depth and in the second place you can drive all around it with one wheel in the water and the other on dry land and still your buggie be quite level. In reference to the clearing of bush land it is quite different here from what it was in Grey Co., in as much as the stumps pull out as easy the same year the clearing is done as they would in your vicinity after ten years rotting. There has been three steam tireshers shipped to the Island this season, and several mowing machines are already in this part. There are schools and churches in convenient distances. Those who visit the Island should not content themselves with a drive along the highway, and then leave the place disgusted but take a walk back through the country and a different story will be heard from such persons on their return. Thanking you Mr. Editor for valuable space.

Yours Truly,
WES. WHITBY.

Osprey.

From our own correspondent.

Crops are looking better since the rain.

The Salvation Army have attacked Feversham.

Temperance meetings are being held throughout the township, in consideration of the Scott Act.

Hall Bros. are repairing the floom and the mills are closed at present.

Messrs. Crane, Lush and Brown returned lately from Europe, all having enjoyed their trip exceedingly well.

Dundalk.

From our own correspondent.

The English Church Sabbath Schools of Dundalk and Shelburne had an excursion to the Forks of the Credit on Monday last. It was well patrouized.

Rev. Mr Keefer, of Halton, preached in the Methodist Church here on Sabbath last. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered at the close of the preaching service. In the evening Mr. Keefer addressed a large audience in Victoria Hall on the Scott Act and its working in Halton. Mr. K. is an able speaker, and his address was productive of much good in the cause of temperance, and furnished a vast fund of information on the Scott Act work

A Council of Royal Templars of Temperance is being organized here.

Miss Annie Middleton has been very ill for the past ten days.

Our Base-ball club have received a challenge from the "Atlantic" club of Toronto to play them in Dundalk on Monday, the 18th inst. Our boys have accepted the challenge.

It is said that some young ladies and gentlemen have been holding protracted meetings of their own in the Methodist church during the summer evenings; but the trustees spoiled the fun by locking the church door. The lovers now "sit and woe" in other more suitable, if not equally sacred places.

Cattle fair on Tuesday last was well attended, but prices appear to be still lower than farmers desire them to be.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

The monthly cattle fair on Monday last was well attended. A large number of cattle and a number of horses were on the grounds for sale. Buyers were not plentiful.

The Base-ball club of Dundalk played a match with the Flesherton team on the grounds of the latter, resulting in a victory for the Dundalk team. Our boys have not had practice to cope with professionals; but practice leads to perfection.

Mr. R. Stewart, of the west back line, happened with a sad accident some days ago, while in the woods felling a lodged tree, the tree gave way sooner than expected and fell upon Mr. Stewart. He could scarcely have escaped death but for a brush heap over which the tree fell, thus destroying the force of the fall.

Mr. James Wallace and wife, a few days ago, while driving down a steep hill the horse becoming unmanageable, threw them both out of the buggy. Both received some injuries.

Rev. J. J. Hare, Principal of Whitby Ladies College, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church Sunday evening last.

Priceville.

From our correspondent.

Watson's new brick block is fast approaching completion. It is one of the finest in the village and will contain Blacksmith shop, Carrage shop and Harness shop, besides a public hall.

Rev. Mr. Barkwell and lady are at present visiting friends in the village.

Dr. Hixon who has been absent for a week's vacation has returned in good trim for attending to his rapidly increasing practice The Dr. informs us that it is his intention to remain in this part of the country indefinately notwithstanding the report by interested parties to the contrary.

The storekeepers in this village report a very brisk trade. Customers come here ten or fifteen miles, claiming that they can get better value for their cash and produce here than elsewhere.

Our good natured "limb of the law" familiarly known as "Big Dan" excited the ire of a couplo of rowdies a few days ago by doing his duty in his capacity as constable. It seems they waited until they had become well "liquored up" when, finding their unsuspected victim on the bridge, attacking him in a most brutal manner. One of the villians was fined heavily but the other escaped to Uncle Sam's domain before Justice overtook him.

Miss Garrison of Michigan is in the village visiting at Mrs. Grier's.

Rev. Mr. Barkwell preached in the Methodist church on Sunday evening, Aug. 3rd.

The Scott Act petition is being canvassed in this villiage and we understand over twenty signatures have already been obtained.

Mr. E. J. J. Ferguson, Teacher, at Manitowaning, son of our worthy School Inspector, is visiting friends in this part of the country.

S. S. No. 14, Euphrasia.

REPORT FOR JUNE.

4th Class—(total 325)—John A. Blackwood 302, Frank McDonald 300.

3rd Class—(total 315)—John Wells 309, James McDonald 269. Essie Johnston 263.

2nd Class—(total 240)—Isaac Silverthorn 226, Robbie Fothergill 224, Robbie Blackwood 188.

Part II.—(total 150)—Mabel E. Gamble 140, Mattie Johnston 129.

ISA L. BRUNDAGE,
Teacher.

Facts.

What is true liberty? The free action of the mind of those operated upon.

What is Law: that which confers upon all classes of the community, equal rights, according to their respective merits.

EQUAL RIGHTS:—No such Law exists under the universe of Heaven. Equality has only one meaning.

What is perjury: That which criminates another by false testimony, Perjury may be characterized in two forms—Vindictive, and sympathetic. Punishment for either offence is discretionary with the presiding Judge upon the case being heard.

Seduction:—In former days this class of offences assumed a higher morality than they do at the present day. Falsehood is a crime, and its degree of infamy is characterized by the ruling morality of the community amongst whom it is perpetrated.

Royal Templars of Temperance.

Under the auspices of the above order, a very successful meeting was held in the C. O. O. F. and A. O. U. W. hall on Friday evening last, to organize a select Council in Markdale. The proceedings were conducted by Bro. P. M. Pattison, of Waterford, Ont., and the following were elected for the first term:

Bro. C. W. Rutledge—Select Councillor.
" Thos. Hill—Vice Councillor.
" R. W. Ennis—Past "
" Rev. T. Grandy—Chaplain.
" R. McNicoll—Rec. Secretary.
" W. T. Jackman—Fin. Secretary.
" E. Rutledge—Treasurer.
" S. M. Smythe—Herald.
" J. W. Richards—Guard.
" J. McKenna—Sentinel.
" W. Mason—Deputy-Herald.
" Dr. Sproule—Medical Examiner.
" C. W. Rutledge, " R. Dunlop, " W. M. Clark } Trustees.

The membership is strictly confined to total abstainers, and any person wishing to join the order is requested to sign the total abstinence pledge before being initiated. The object of the order is to improve the moral, mental and social condition of the members; to induce men to live sober, industrious and christian lives; to prevent by just means the growth of intemperance; to aid in saving from its evil effects those already addicted to intemperate habits and to aid and assist the members and their families in case of want sickness or death. One of the benefits of the order is life insurance, the order carrying risks of members from $500 to $2000 payable at death, or in case of a member being totally disabled one half is paid down, the balance at death. There is also a sick benefit fund in connection with this order from which any member, in case of sickness, can draw $5 for the first 12 weeks and $3 for the following 12 weeks.

The officers will be pleased to furnish further particulars of the working and benefits of the order to any who may desire to be informed.—COM.

Entrance Examination.

THE following is the list of successful candidates at the recent High School Entrance Examination here, with the marks taken by each:—

Hessie C. Andrew 364, Anna Amelia Ashope 300, Elizabeth M. Baird 370. Mary E. Beaton 306, Jeannette Bell 319, Mary E. Branscombe 345, Annie G. Chalmers 398, Minnie Clarke 385, Mary E. Cousby 351, Catherine C. Danard 332, Jenet Ferguson 351, Ida Fox 311, Isabel Gibson 322, Annie S. Gordon 354, Mertie E. Ham 357, Luella Hammond 286, Lizzie Johnson 458, Henrietta Jameson 436, Lillian Kingsbury 399, Nellie O. Landles 308, Maggie Lemon 307, Helena W. Marquis 362, Elizabeth Jane Matthews 364, Elizabeth Matthews 329, Lizzie Middleborough 359, Amelia A. Muir 350, Isabella McIyor, 334, Mary McMillan 338, Ellie Norris 378, Isabella Parker 365. Elizabeth F. S. Richardson 340, Rhoda E. M. Richardson 334, Maggie Rowan 341, Bessie H. B. Sadler 360, Martha E. Speers 353, Maggie J. Speers 316, Jessie Spence 315, Minnie Spencer 370, Sarah Tipping 410, Alice Tucker 389, Maggie Turner 308, Mary J. Turner 285, Julia Waites 377, Delia Warrilow 339, Ada White 346, Edith Willis 337, Louie Willis, 340, Annie M. Wilson 400, Emma Wright 324.

George Anderson 293, Jas. Anthony 335, Charles A. Beaton 399, James Bridget 301, James H. Byers 340, James L. Clarke 329, Jeremiah Cousby 284, James L. Creighton 348, Arthur L. Danard 346, Robert Dezell 295, Arthur Dowsley, 291, Arthur W. Farewell 343, Lincoln Fleming 319, Robt. T. Fletcher 331, Baxter Follis 280, Herbert Foster 335, Wm. Thos. Frizzell 334, I. A. Ghent 388, Jas. Gibson 424, Wm. A. Graham 351, Wm. H. Henry 300, Richard Horn 334, Albert J. Howell 340, Robt. R. Howell 338, David Jas. Hunter 309, Chas. H. Hutchins 382. Fred Hutchinson 382, Thos. C. Irwin 343. Geo. Jolley 282. Harry Kerr 317, David Murray 299, Robert D. McClure 307, James A. McKenzie 314, Edward W. McKim 311, Frank N. Pond 405, George Reid 325, William James Ringo 320 William Ross 360, William Scott 362, James Smith 337, Norman Squire 307, Benjamin G. Stewart 354, Wm. J. Strain 337, Robert J. Torrie 352, Wm. A. Trelford 333, William E. Tucker 339, Charles White 355, Frederick C. Wilson 364, Robt. Wright 319, William C. Wright 349. —C. S. Times.

We will send the STANDARD the balance of the year to any address for 35 cents.

MARKDALE POST OFF

Mails at Markdale are cl... follows, commencing Monday, ... 11th, closed bag for Toronto ... General Mail South 5:40 ... General Mail North 1:30 p. m. ... bag for Owen Sound 7, p. m.

We give below the names of ... who have erected new build... this district the present ... Benjamin Coleman, shed 20 x ... Jas. Mercer, bank barn 42 x 60. ... Boyd, 9th line Euphrasia barn ... Robt. Mathers, 9th line Eup... barn 52 x 60, Samuel Miller, ... Robt. Torry, Glenelg, brick ... J. C. Buchanan, Artemesia, ... house, Wm. Buchanan brick ... Jas. Struthers, Euphrasia, ... this year, brick house. B. ... Stables 30 x 57. Mrs. To... Artemesia, brick house, Thos. ... Glenelg, barn 36 x 56. Chas. ... barn 42 x 42, Geo. Twamly, ... x 60. Moses Melosh barn 40 ... Wm. Williamson bank barn 40 ... F. Boyle barn 40 x 42 M. ... Holland, barn 35 x 40. ... Sawerby, barn 30 x 35. T... doubtless many others which ... not come under our notice ... above will show that this ... is in a prosperous condition.

ESTRAY HORS...

Came to the pre... subscriber lot 10 ... land, about the 11th ... a horse, dark bay, ... hind fet lock white, star in face. ... is requested to prove property ... and take him away.

JOHN BURNSIDE. 12...

STEER ASTR...

LOT 90, Con. 2, West of T... Sydenham Road, Glenelg ... white spotted steer, with horns ... year old. Any person giving ... formation will be suitably rewarded.

MARSHALL BE...
205-207 Mark...

DR. FOWLE'S
EXTRACT OF WILD
STRAWBER...
CURES
CHOLE...
CHOLERA INFA...
DIARRHŒ...
AND
ALL SUMMER COMP...
SOLD BY ALL DEAL...

New Butcher S...

The best meats the country ... kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PA...
THE TOWN WHERE OR...

A share of public patronage ... solicited.

Remember the stand in McVe...

RUTLEDGE & TRE...
181

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath...

Having made extensive impro... my Grist Mill I feel confident ... good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ...

Chopping Done Eve...

Custom Sawing and Bills P... shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ...
ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, ... Basswood, Pine and Hemlock ...

69ly. M. AKITT, P...

AN ACROSTIC.

Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a ...
It's true, Lardine's the ...
Nothing its equal, can ...
External its use, on ...

Use Lardine Machine Oil ... machinery, sold manufacturers, ... Toronto.

WALTHAM...
ELGIN...
WATCHES.

LARGE STOCK OF G...
Quadruple Plated V...
Wedding Rings,
RINGS,
CHAINS,
SE...
Lazzarus & Morris a...
Specks, good Violin ...
Musical Instruments.
Careful and accurate ...
ing personally attended ...
fully warranted.
Square Dealing. — Fai...
W. A. BROWN...
MARKD...

Local and Other I...

NOTICES in these columns intend... any individual or Society will be ... cents a line for the first insertio... cents a line each subsequent inser...

PRICES to suit the public at ... & Son.

Dye Stuffs at the Medica... Turner & Co.

MR. JAMES T. GAMEY, Orrw... will accept thanks for $1, fo... ARD.

THRESHERS—you will a... the best machine oils at Hasl...

National Pills the favorite pur... anti-bilious medicine, they are ... thorough.

MARSHALL BEARD adver... another colum a stray steer, ... Burnside a stray horse.

I WILL give bargains in Watch... etc., for cash, during the balan... month. Call and invest. W. ... jeweller.

THERE were 71 births, 20 ... and 28 deaths registered for A... by J. W. Bellamy, Clerk, ... months ending 15th July.

GREAT clearing sale at pri... can not be competed with, ... & Son.

RUTLEDGE & TRELFGRD ha... a canvas awning in front of t... this is an improvement and w... see others do likewise.

BUSINESS MEN.—Order your... in good time, a large stock of ... material just opened at th...

JOHN ROSS brought a load o... to the station one day la... containing 2,648 feet and ... over 70,000 lbs.

ANOTAER consignment of t... ous Japan tea arived this we... R. Trimble's.

THE balance of our stock o... rigs will be sold at reduce... Call and examine, all fully ... D. J. Shanahan.

PAIN from indigestion or s... ache is instantly relieved by ... of Rejuvinator Bitters, ma... roots and herbs. Sold by S... barber.

ALL parties indebted to ... please call and settle at ... save costs. Reynolds and S...

THE best tea ever offere... public at 35 cents or 30 ... pound by Box is to be had ... Trimble's ADVICES from Manches... Glasgow just received a la... ment of goods for W. J. Mc... fall and winter trade.

AS WE intend retiring from ... in Markdale, we offer the b... our stock below cost. Reyn... Son.

AN earthquake on Sun... extending over a large po... Yankedom caused great ex... in New York.

The magical power over pain tha... Yellow Oil possesses, outrivals t... of ancient times. It acts in a natu... to subdue inflammation; cures Rh... Croup, Deafness, Sore Throat, a... injuries.

GREAT Sale of remnents ... Goods, Shirtings, Ducks ... Tweeds, and Table-linen ... Parland's.

MARKDALE POST OFFIC[E]

Mails at Markdale ... follows, commencing Monday ... 11th, closed bag for Toronto 8, ... General Mail South 5:40 ... General Mail North 1:30 p. m. ... bag for Owen Sound 7 p. m.

We give below the names of ... who have erected new buildin[gs in] this district the present su[mmer:] Benjamin Coleman, shed 20 x ... Jas. Mercer, bank barn 42 x 60 ... Boyd, 9th line Euphrasia barn 4... Robt. Mathers, 9th line Euph... barn 52 x 60, Samuel Miller, ... Robt. Torry, Glenelg, brick ... J. C. Buchanan, Artemesia, ... house, Wm. Buchanan brick ... Jas. Struthers, Euphrasia, ... this year, brick house. B. W... Stables 30 x 57. Mrs. To... Artemesia, brick house, Thos. ... Glenelg, barn 36 x 56. Chas. ... barn 42 x 42, Geo. Twamly, ... x 60. Moses Melosh barn 40 ... Wm. Williamson bank barn 40 ... F. Boyle barn 40 x 42 M. ... Holland, barn 35 x 40. ... Sawerby, barn 30 x 35. The ... doubtless many others which ... not come under our notice b... above will show that this ... is in a prosperous condition.

ESTRAY HORS[E]

Came to the premi[ses of the] subscriber lot 10 con... land, about the 11th ... a horse, dark bay, ... hind fet lock white, star in face. T... is requested to prove property, pay ... and take him away.

JOHN BURNSIDE. 105

STEER ASTR[AY]

LOT 90, Con. 2, West of Tor... Sydenham Road, Glenelg ... white spotted steer, with horns tu... year old. Any person giving satisf... formation will be suitably rewarded.

MARSHALL BA[IRD]

205-207 Markdal[e]

DR. FOWLE[R'S] EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBER[RY] CURES CHOLE[RA] CHOLERA INFAN[TUM] DIARRHŒ[A] AND ALL SUMMER COMPL[AINTS] SOLD BY ALL DEALE[RS]

New Butcher S[hop]

The best meats the country ... kept on hand and DELIVERED TO ALL PA[RTS OF] THE TOWN WHERE ORD[ERED]

A share of public patronage ... solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea...

RUTLEDGE & TRE[LFORD]

181

EUGENIA [G]rist, Saw and Lat[h Mills]

Having made extensive impro[vements in my] Grist Mill I feel confident ... satisfaction.

[GO]OD FLOUR ALWAYS O[N HAND]

Chopping Done Ever[y ...]

Custom Sawing and Bills F... shortest notice.

[LU]MBER AND LATH ... ON HAND.

...rry, Butternut, White Ash, ...wood, Pine and Hemlock L...

M. AKITT, E...

AN ACROSTIC.

Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel like a m...
It's true, Jardine's the ...
Nothing its equal, can't ...
External is ... over...

...e Lardine Machine Oil ... ...inery, sold manufactur... ...nto.

WALTHAM,

ELGIN,  SWISS

WATCHES.

LARGE STOCK OF CLOCKS, Quadruple Plated Ware, Wedding Rings, 18 k., RINGS, CHAINS, SEALS, Lazzarus & Morris and Boss Specks, good Violin Strings, Musical Instruments.

Careful and accurate repairing personally attended to and fully warranted.

Square Dealing. - Fair Prices.

W. A. BROWN.

MARKDALE.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

Prices to suit the public at Reynolds & Son.

Dye Stuffs at the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

Mr. James T. Gamey, Orrwold, man, will accept thanks for $1, for Standard.

Threshers—you will always find the best machine oils at Haskett Bro's.

National Pills the favorite purgative and anti-bilious medicine, they are mild and thorough.

Marshall Beard advertises in another colum a stray steer, and John Burnside a stray horse.

I will give bargains in Watches, Clocks, etc., for cash, during the balance of this month. Call and invest. W. A. Brown, jeweller.

There were 71 births, 20 marriages and 28 deaths registered for Artemesia by J. W. Bellamy, Clerk, for six months ending 15th July.

Great clearing sale at prices which can not be competed with, Reynolds & Son.

Rutledge & Trelford has erected a canvas awning in front of their shop, this is an improvement and we hope to see others do likewise.

Business Men.—Order your billheads in good time, a large stock of excellent material just opened at this office.

John Ross brought a load of baswood to the station one day last week containing 2,648 feet and weighing over 70,000 lbs.

Anotaer consignment of that famous Japan tea arived this week at J. R. Trimble's.

The balance of our stock of wheel'd rigs will be sold at reduced prices. Call and examine, all fully warranted D. J. Shanahan.

Pain from indigestion or sick head ache is instantly relieved by one dose of Rejuvinator Bitters, made from roots and herbs. Sold by Smith, the barber.

All parties indebted to us will please call and settle at once and save costs. Reynolds and Son.

The best tea ever offered to the public at 35 cents or 30 cents per pound by Box is to be had at J. R. Trimble's Advices from Manchester and Glasgow just received a large shipment of goods for W. J. McFarlands fall and winter trade.

As we intend retiring from business in Markdale, we offer the balance of our stock below cost. Reynolds and Son.

An earthquake on Sunday last extending over a large portion of Yankedom caused great excitement in New York.

The magical power over pain that Hagyard's Yellow Oil possesses, outrivals the marvels of ancient times. It acts in a natural manner to subdue inflammation; cures Rheumatism, Croup, Deafness, Sore Throat, and painful injuries.

Great Sale of remnants of Dress Goods, Shirtings, Ducks, Suits, Tweeds, and Table-linen at McFarland's.

Mr. Plewes is weekly replenishing his stock so that his customers may depend on fresh groceries every time. He also keeps an excellent brand of Oatmeal, Indian Corn Meal, Graham flour and cracked wheat &c.

Orders from Owen Sound, Durham and Meaford have been received by McFarland for more Empress Velveteens. They are selling fast.

If you should be so unfortunate as to Burn Scald or Wound yourself in any way the proper thing to keep clean and heal it is McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Insist on having, and be sure you get, McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Price 25 cents. Hill Bro's. has the genuine. J. & J. 2

Disabled Engine.—On Wednesday morning, about a mile north of Berkeley the drive connections of the engine on a special going north broke, causing searious damage to the engine and seriously injuring the fireman. The engine was taken back to Toronto for repairs.

A complete stock of Harvest Tools, Cradles, Forks, Rakes and Binding Mitts, etc. selling very cheap at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

W. G. Richards is doing the framing and carpenter work on Plewes' new mill, and he is pushing it with his accustomed speed. Mr. Richards is an excellent mechanic especially for a difficult job, being both speedy and correct in laying out his work. Mr. Plewes is highly pleased with his work. They expect to raise the mill next week.

A full stock of those celebrated Self Sealing Gem Jars and all other kinds of Preserving Jars selling very cheap. Call and examine at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

False Rumours.—An industriously circulated rumour respecting our friend, Dan. Shea, that he had fell into the hands of the Philistines of Owen Sound, &c., The truth is: Dan lost a dog; he had reason to behave the animal had been taken to Owen Sound; he went there, and found his dog. In securing possession of his property Dan had to hit the thief a few back-knucle cuffs, which caused a lawsuit. Dan came off victorious.

The best yet.—By special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Montreal Star together with the Standard six months for 65 cents. The Star is allowed to be the best family paper published while the Standard is hard to beat as a local paper, and the two are offered for about the price of one. Send in your subscription at once to this office for one or the both, you can have the Star for 30 cents or the Standard for 35 cents to any address, balance of year, cash in advance.

A Public Nuisance.

We have hitherto refrained from publishing a number of communications respecting the "Slaughter House" at Armstrong's Creek beyond the R. R. Station. It has been a favorite place for the farmers to water their horses; but latterly horses refuse to drink the water on account of the noxious stench that pervades the atmosphere, and, perhaps, the water. A gentleman who was coming into town a few evenings ago, informs us that the stench was intolerable. We trust our friends of the establishment will see to the removal of the premises to a locality where it will not inconvenience public comfort.

Personals.

Mrs. Alex Mercer is visiting friends in Erin township.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Wright and Mrs. C. W. Rutledge are visiting friends in Allenford this week.

Hugh Mercer is spending his holidays at his old home in Erin.

Mr. Thos. Mathews returned from Perth on Tuesday having come over the first regular passenger train over the Ontario & Quebec Railway, from Perth to Toronto.

Mrs. Boyd returned from Muskoka last week.

Willie Armstrong returned last week from a visit to Boston.

Miss Blain of Bay City Michigan is the guest of Mrs. J. R. Trimble.

Mr. and Mrs. McPherson of Ringwood, Markham are visiting their daughter Mrs. A. McFarland.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

Canadian Pacific Railway

(ONTARIO DIVISION.)

Change of Time.

COMMENCING MONDAY AUG. 11, '84

Toronto, Grey and Bruce Division.

TORONTO—Depart 9:40 a. m., 5:00 p. m.
" Arrive 1:00 p. m., 10:30 "
Note—Mixed train leaves Parkdale 8:15 a.m.

Credit Valley Division.

Toronto, depart 7:10 a.m., 1:05 p.m., 4:50 p.m
" arrive 9:50 " 6:45 " 7:30 "
Note—Mixed train leaves Parkdale 1 a. m.

D. McNICOL, Gen. Pass. Agt. W. WHYTE, General Manager.

MARKDALE STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE AS FOLLOWS:

GOING SOUTH.—Express 9:10 a. m.
" " Mixed 10:05 "
" " Mail 6:07 p. m.

GOING NORTH.—Mail 2:00 p. m.
" " Mixed 4:26 "
" " Express 9:19 "

J. CÆSAR, Agent.

MARKDALE HARNESS EMPORIUM

ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

Thos. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

SEEDS SEEDS

—IMPORTED—

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S, Drugstore, - DURHAM.

ROBT. ASKIN, MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt, COFFINS, CASKETS, SHROUDS, and all

FUNERAL F URN ISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

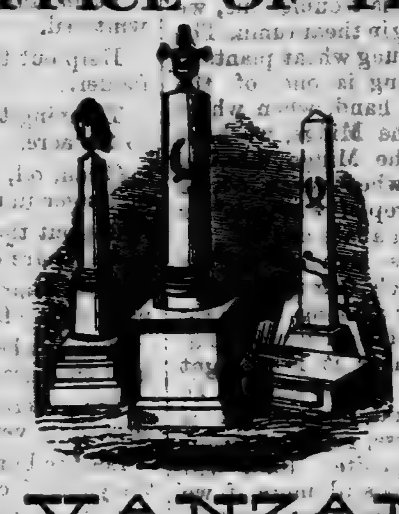
FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

INVALUABLE TO EVERY LADY!

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.



It conceals the evidences of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun burn, Tan, Ringworm, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes, from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness; imparting a perfectly healthy, natural and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price, $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Address all letters to the MAY DEW AGENCY, 167 Church Street, Toronto, Ont. Parlor and Reception Room for Ladies.

Trade Mark.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble  And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

The Canadian Mutual Aid Association.

INCORPORATED AUGUST 20TH, 1880.

HEAD OFFICE, - - TORONTO.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

Wm. Rennie, Esq., Toronto, President;
E. H. Hilborn, Esq., Uxbridge, Treasurer;
G. H. Watson, L.L.B., Toronto, Solicitor;
C. H. Mackintosh, M.P., Ottawa;
Thos. Menzies, Peterboro;
Peter Graham, M.P.P., Warwick;
A. Gifford, Esq., Meaford, Vice-President;
W. Pemberton Page, Esq., Toronto, Sec'y;
R. H. Robertson, M.D., Toronto, Med. D'tr;
Lewis Wigle, M.P.P., Leamington;
J. P. Bull, Downsview;
S. W. Hill, Esq., Ridgeville, Memb. Supt.

The Directors have filed with the Hon. S. C. Wood, (Ex-Provincial Treasurer of Ontario) Trustee for the Association, Bonds to the amount of $60,000.00, as a guarantee for the honest carrying out of the terms of Certificates issued to members.

Reliable Aid to Families of Deceased Members at Small Cost.

The Association will do business on the following plan:

Applications.

All Applications for Membership shall be made upon printed forms furnished by the Association, (and applicants must pass a satisfactory medical examination). If accepted, a certificate will be issued within thirty days from date of such acceptance.

Membership.

The payment of TWELVE DOLLARS admits any of sound body and mind between the age of 18 and 60 years, to all the benefits of the Association. If the application is not accepted the money is promptly returned to the applicant.

Plan of Business.

The following table shows the amount for which Certificates of Membership will be issued by the Association, according to age:

AGE.	Amount at Death	AGE.	Amount at Death
From 18 to 30	$3 000	From 45 to 46	$2 200
30 to 31	2 950	46 to 47	2 150
1 to 32	2 900	47 to 48	2 100
32 to 33	2 850	48 to 49	2 050
33 to 34	2 800	49 to 50	2 000
34 to 35	2 750	50 to 51	1 900
35 to 36	2 700	51 to 52	1 800
36 to 37	2 650	52 to 53	1 700
37 to 38	2 600	53 to 54	1 600
38 to 39	2 550	54 to 55	1 500
39 to 40	2 500	55 to 56	1 400
40 to 41	2 450	56 to 57	1 300
41 to 42	2 400	57 to 58	1 200
42 to 43	2 350	58 to 59	1 100
43 to 44	2 300	59 to 60	1 000
44 to 45	2 250

HALF RATE PLAN.

Certificates will be issued for half the above amounts should the applicant so desire.

Assessments.

An Assessment of One Dollar upon each member will be made in case of death or total disability of a member, except when there is money enough in surplus funds to pay said claim.

Special Features.

1—Great inducements to provide for families in case of death, at small cost.
2—Equal benefits to both sexes.
3—Uniform assessments of one dollar only.
4—Careful medical examination required.
5—No annual dues or extra charges.
6—No large salaries or expenses.
7—Two hundred dollars advanced for funeral expenses when necessary.
8—Benefits secured at actual cost.
9—Members becoming totally disabled, may draw half their claim, the balance being payable at death.
10—Ladies accepted in this Association as well as men.

For particulars apply to S. W. HILL, Membership Superintendent, Ridgeville, or to W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Secretary, 87 King Street West, Toronto.

AGENT FOR MARKDALE, THOS. [illegible]

Also Agent for Dominion Grange Mutual Fire Insurance Association.

AGRICULTURAL.

Getting Ready to Sow Winter Wheat

If winter wheat is to be sown after early oats, peas, beans, early potatoes, or corn-fodder, the moment the crop is off the ground, stick in the plow, or gang, or cultivator. Do not wait for rain. The weeds and stubble will pump up more water from the soil than any ordinary rainfall at this season will be likely to furnish. If you plow, or in anywise work the land, it will not only destroy the weeds and check the rapid evaporation of water, but should we have a shower, the rain will penetrate deeper into the worked soil, and render it soft and mellow. We have everything to gain and nothing to lose by promptness in plowing immediately after the previous crop has been harvested.

In four years out of five, the principal difficulty in sowing winter wheat in proper season is to get the soil moist enough to cause the wheat to germinate vigorously and evenly. We must recollect that the soil, even during a severe drouth, contains in the first two or three a great many thousand gallons of water per acre, and still more at a greater depth. This water is constantly rising towards the surface. Any growing plant pumps it up out of the soil, and evaporates it into the atmosphere. The amount of water thus evaporated is enormous. The bare soil evaporates water from the surface as long as there is any to evaporate, but the loss of water from a bare soil is nothing in comparison with the loss on land upon which plants are growing.

In the winter wheat section of Western New York we sow our wheat from the 1st to the 20th of September. It is ready to cut from the first week in July to the first of August, varying greatly in this respect according to the season. As we go South wheat is sown latter in the autumn, and is ready to harvest earlier in the summer.

Where the Hessian fly is troublesome, we have to avoid early sowing in the autumn. The fly lays its eggs in the young wheat plants in autumn, and late sowing is one of the remedies. On the other hand, when wheat is liable to injury from the Midge, we have to avoid late sowing. The Midge flies lay their eggs in the ears of wheat when it is in blossom, and an early crop of wheat is far more liable to injure than a late crop.

Fortunately neither the Hessian fly nor the Midge has done much damage of late years, and the tendency among our best wheat-growers is towards earlier sowing. After the first of September it is thought desirable to sow as soon as the soil can be got sufficiently moist and mellow. It is just here where promptness, good judgment and science are all requisite. Rain will help us, but it will help us still more if we go to work as though no rain were expected. As we said before, there is water enough in the soil, but it is not near enough to the surface to cause the seed to germinate. What we have to do is to bury all the weeds, stubble, and growing plants, and keep the surface soil fine by the frequent use of the cultivator, harrow, and the roller. We know this is easier said than done—but on our strong wheat land it is the general experience that much of our success will depend on our ability to get the wheat well started in the early autumn.

Methods of Preserving Eggs.

At a recent poultry show in Birmingham England, prizes were awarded for the best dozen of preserved eggs. They were sent in two months before the date of the show, a short time to test any preserving process thoroughly. The eggs were tested by being boiled both soft and hard (that is, for a minute and a half, and for ten minutes,) and then tasted by the judges. Those that gained the first prize had been simply packed in common salt. They had not lost sensibly by evaporation, had good consistent albumen, and were of the best flavor when boiled. Those that received the second prize were but slightly inferior to the best; and the process of preserving is thus described: Melt one part of white wax to two parts of spermaceti, boil and mix thoroughly; or two parts clarified suet to one of wax, and two of spermaceti. Take new laid eggs, rub with antiseptic salt or fine rice starch. Wrap each egg in fine tissue paper, putting the broad end downward; screw the paper tightly at the top, leaving an inch to hold it by. Dip each egg rapidly into the fat heated to 100 degrees. Withdraw, and leave to cool. Pack, broad end downward, in dry, white sand or sawdust. The London Agricultural Gazette adds: The eggs so preserved were admirable, and probably, had the contest been for a longer time, would have stood first. But it is exceedingly useful to know that eggs may be preserved admirably for two months with no more trouble than putting them in common salt. The other plan was superior in one respect; on stripping off the waxed paper, the shell was as pure and clean as when first laid; in fact the eggs might have sold as being fresh, if not as new-laid.

About Good Eating.

When I say "good eating," I don't mean all these fancy dishes, with flub-dubs and French names, and grease and oil and richness and heaviness, but nice, wholesome, toothsome food, which goes straight to the right place and makes glad the pathway leading thereto. There are a great many people who never know what good eating is. They may have plenty of money with which to buy the raw material, but the women of the household don't know a good thing when they see it, and the result is a great deal of style and fine silver and table ware, and a mixture of stuff that would incite a rebellion in the stomach and palate of a wooden Indian. I have dined at the table of the rich and of the poor, (comfortable poor, I mean,) and I have learned that money cannot furnish taste. There must be exquisite delicacy in the preparation of even the coarsest food, for a little old grease, or a little too close contiguity to the cooking vessel, will ruin a dish of cabbage quite as readily as it will a diamond-back terrapin and the housewife who doesn't know these fine points does incalculable damage. She destroys the gastronomical sensibility of her immediate family, destroys the pleasure of her guest, and, worse than all, bequeaths her ignorance to her children to inflict generations yet unborn. There is a wonderful degree of comfort in good eating, and there is economy in it, too, for it doesn't cost any more to prepare a dollar's worth of meat and vegetables properly than it does improperly, and when the food is good "they lick the platter clean," and the bete noir of "warmed over victuals" is driven from the house. The woman is the boss of the good eating department of a house, and many a man who would laugh at a fight, has become a heretic, because the boss didn't know how to make his heart and his gizzard harmonize.

Farm and Garden Work for August.

Act.
Think.
Consult.
Experiment.
Make repairs.
Carry a note book.
Watch the markets.
Favor the seed-corn hills.
Manure the back fields!
Keep up the flow of milk.
Make repairs in spare hours.
Superior work pays us the best.
Above all things avoid foul seed.
Gas lime should not be used fresh.
Idle land is the weeds' opportunity.
Fowls profit by a run in the stubble.
Wheat after oats is a faulty practice.
Whitewash will cleanse and sweeten.
August pigs make holiday small pork.
Do not let your insurance policy expire.
The damages by rats exceed those by fire.
Sow white turnip seed for fine white fodder.
Wash the horses feet and legs every night.
Success is largely a matter of small details.
Roll the ground before and not after seeding.
Good seed and good soil are a good beginning.
Farm animals well summered are half wintered.
Help out the dried up pastures with green fodder.
Thinning the root crops means more tons to the acre.
Clean, oil, and store all the implements no longer in use.
Get out the year's supply of muck while the beds are dry.
Build temporary pasture shelter in airy parts of the fields.
Weeds when they go to seed curse the land that grew them.
The general purpose animal is superior only in its versatility.
Let the bumble bee live and thus increase the yield of clover seed.
A drain to be a profitable investment must be a permanent improvement.
Fall fallowing cleans the land and brings it into fine condition for spring crops.
Neglected fence rows are like a leaden weight upon the neck of clean field culture.
A farmer's bank account may grow at the expense of his manure heap and grain crops.
A clean, cool, ventilated stable free from flies, is a suitable lodging for the tired work horse.
The possibilities of a farm are measured by the quantity and quality of brains which run it.
Amid all the toil of midsummer, do not forget to do a little careful work for the coming county fair.
Superior pork made from freshly fallen wormy apples is very cleansing to an insect infested orchard.
A root crop is very humble, but as a foundation for a judicious rotation it will support the symmetrical superstructure of profitable mixed farming.—American Agriculturist.

Big Doses.

The Southern negro does not take kindly to the pellets of the homeopathist. He believes in the largest doses of the old-school practice, and will toss off a tumblerful of castor oil with a smack of the lips. Even a glass of salts and senna will be swallowed with gusto, while a bolus is taken without a moment's hesitation. An Englishman, who hunted in the Soudan says that nothing gives an African savage greater pleasure than a good dose of medicine. He found his medicine-chest more useful in making the negroes friendly than his revolver and breech-loading rifle.

But the medicine must be strong and rapid in its effects. For the savage is too impatient to wait several hours for the medicine to operate, and too much influenced by his sight and taste to be satisfied with a small dose. He is never so happy as when he has taken a good dose of croton-oil and colocynth, or four or five grains of tartar emetic.

Holloway's pills were as popular in the Soudan as in London; and the sportsman found that the more liberal he was with these powerful cathartics, the more willing were the negroes to serve him. Whenever he opened his medicine chest, the natives respected him as a great "medicine man," the more he physicked them, the better they liked it. But willingly as they were to be doctored internally, not one of them would submit to an operation with the knife.

Kissing Good-Bye at a Railway Station

The familiar and kiss emphasized "Good-bye; now write as soon as you get there!" rang out on the morning air at a small station, when a gentlemen remarked, "Do you know, I never see any one kissing good-bye at a railway station, but I think of how I first met my wife!" "Now, don't tell that silly thing again," interrupted his life companion, as she blushed a little and suddenly became interested in the scenery. But the unheeding husband continued:—"It was at Indianapolis. In the Union depot there, one night, she was bidding her brother good-bye just as he was starting on a long trip to the West. He stood on the car steps and she on the depot platform for their last kiss; but just as he turned and went into the car, I stepped down to the platform. Immediately I felt a pair of arms around my neck, and a pair of soft lips rained kisses on my face and mouth before I had time to protest. You see, she had mistaken me for her brother, but the result was that I fell in love with her kisses, and——" "I think," interrupted the lady, "that you and your friend had better go into the smoking car if you want to talk such nonsence." And so another little romance of the rail ended in smoke.

A SHOTGUN MESSENGER.

The Thrilling Adventures of a Wells, Fargo and Co. Messenger.

Eugene Blair, the "shotgun messenger" in the service of Wells, Fargo & Co., has just died of consumption in San Francisco. He was not yet 40 years of age, but he was one of the most experienced and daring messengers ever in the employ of the company. Blair's life was full of adventure and excitement, and it is probable that the strain upon him hastened the disease which terminated in his death. His duties called him rapidly from one point to another, all the way from California to Nebraska. "A shotgun messenger" is a trusted employe of the express company, who is sent to accompany a stage bearing big treasure boxes or heavy remittances of currency. In the Territories it is all but impossible for the stage officials to prevent public information as to the approximate value of treasure and mail shipments. A large sum of money, or a well-filled treasure box, is reasonably certain to tempt somebody. The average driver is tempted when held up to make peace at any price. Blair never surrendered, and the result was that robbers who happened to run across him soon left the earth for good, or went limping away to a hospital or prison. He was a hair-trigger sort of a fellow. The word 'Halt!' or a volley from an ambush had no terrors for him. His gun was discharged instantly. He invariably rode outside with the driver, and carried a short double barrelled shotgun, loaded heavily with buckshot. Besides this weapon, which experience proved was very formidable, he wore in his belt two large revolvers. He depended upon his shotgun, however, in almost every emergency. If the robbers were numerous and he could locate them he would give them both barrels at once, which was usually about all they wanted.

A few years ago Wells, Fargo & Co. received notification that a large sum of money at Eureka, Nev., awaited transportation to Tybo, where it was wanted to pay off miners with. The stage road was lonely, and it had long been infested with robbers. Appreciating the risk of the undertaking, the company ordered Blair to Eureka, and sent another messenger, named James Brown, to accompany him. At the time the trip was to have been made there were in Eureka half a dozen ex-convicts who had just served out long sentences in the penitentiary for stage robbery, and they were particularly bitter against Blair for the part he had taken in securing their conviction. They learned of the intended shipment, and all but one of them proceeded down the road to the Willows station, intending to await the arrival of the stage at that point. The one who was left behind was to learn how many messengers accompanied the stage and let his companions know. The vehicle started from Eureka late in the afternoon, and arrived at the Willows station at about 9 p. m. The robber who had remained behind found that Blair had a companion, and, in accordance with this agreement, he rode rapidly to a mountain about ten miles out and built two good-sized fires to warn his associates of the coming of the two shotguns. When the robbers down the road saw the fires they immediately seized the station, binding and gagging the two men employed there, and then drew themselves up in a line and awaited the arrival of the coach. In about an hour it halted in front of the barn door, when a voice from the side of the road sang out:

"Edgene Blair, surrender!"

It was pitch dark, and, as no one was in sight, Blair jumped from the stage with his gun in his hand. Just then two shots were fired, and he answered one of them with one barrel of his gun, shooting where he had seen the flash. A moment later three men were upon him. He found it was impossible to use his gun, and, dropping it, he whirled one of the robbers around in front of the stage, where one of the side lights shone upon his back. The mark was a good one, and at that instant Jimmy Brown, from his seat on the stage, discharged one barrel, hitting the rober between the hips. This man being out of the way, Brown and Blair assisted by the driver, soon had the others in custody, though not until most of them had been hit by one or more buckshot.

Another time, when Blair was guarding a treasure box in the western part of the State, he had some fun with the agents. It was evident that they were not expecting him, or else they were green hands at the business. They had made the most elaborate preparations, however, and apparently had no idea of failing in their enterprise. "They had selected a mighty mean place," said Blair, "and if they had had the nerve they might have made us trouble. They had formed a sort of barricade on the edge of the road, which at that point ran along the side of the mountain. Back of them there was a slope of half a mile, rough with rocks and fallen timber. We were jogging along at a comfortable gait when I spied a movement back of the shrubbery on the side of the road, and seized my gun. 'Halt! Throw up your hands, there!' yelled two or three in chorus. I answered instantly with a volley from both barrels. We heard nothing more. The crash of the gun was terrific. When the smoke cleared away a little we saw those fellows going end down the mountain side. I never knew what became of them or how badly they were hurt. We found their guns, and took them away with us. Toss was about the quickest work I ever did."—New York Sun.

Balance in Character.

Few persons are possessed of a perfectly balanced nature. Amiability is apt to be allied with weakness; a vigorous, pushing character is often impulsive, harsh and unjust. A reflective mind is slow to act; a prompt mind is often wrong. So through all the elements of character. All the qualities that go to make up a perfect moral nature rarely appear in one person. The physical and intellectual do not precisely conform; the mental and moral are not evenly balanced. There are those possessed of stronger moral than mental natures. They constitute the spasmodic, impulsive element in society. There are others whose intellects so absolutely control their moral natures, that nothing is admitted that cannot be reasoned out satisfactorily. There are persons whose strong animal natures dominate all else, and both mind and spirit are subservient.

To regulate all these parts so as to attain a fair degree of equality is the right step toward securing what may be called balance in character.

Spearing Sword Fish.

One of the chief attractions at Block Island, R. I., is the fishing, which is simply fair for mackerel and bluefish, but almost or quite the best for sword fish. One steamer carried away sixty of these huge creatures Monday, and forty more the next morning. They weighed from 100 to 400 pounds each. Unless one can witness the capture of a whale, no fishing is more exciting than the pursuit of this formidable monster, and there is withal a spice of danger in the game which gives an added zest and throws into stronger relief the skill of the fisherman who battles with such uniform success against an adversary who is conquered by strategem rather than by strength. The method of capture is, in brief, as follows: On the end of the bowsprit of the vessel stands a strong, heavy iron rod, supporting another strong piece of iron in the form of a semi circle, with the end of the bow or curve drawn toward the boat. From these ends, by a strong rope is suspended a common swing-board, on which sits the man with the harpoon, his feet resting on a small platform or "pulpit" nailed to the bowsprit. If he chooses to stand on this platform, he leans forward, and is rendered secure from falling by resting against the semi-circular iron, which curves backward just under his arms. A lookout stands at the masthead above, and when a fish is seen, the boat is sailed directly toward him until within reach of the harpooner, who throw his iron with all his strength. The throw, as a rule, is successful if made by a trained fisherman. The barb, when driven into the fish, in automatically detached from the handle of the harpoon, but is still held by a long rope. The wounded fish darts forward, and the line is "paid out" as fast as he requires it by one man, while the captain hastens to get his vessel away in another direction as rapidly as possible, for this is a case in which distance lends enchantment to the view especially those who know the strength of the sword with which the maddened fish is armed. When he has been given rope enough, the end of the line is attached to a small empty cask, which is thrown overboard to amuse the fish which is now becoming frantic with the pain, but slightly felt at first; while the fishermen increase their distance from him as rapidly as possible. Now the fish begins to struggle in earnest, in the hope of getting free from the barb and rope. He skims along the surface and a line of foam marks the course of the cask, which does not stop him but does soon greatly increase his pain, for he is harnessed to it by a sharp point of steel which is all the while tearing his flesh. He changes his direction again and again, but all in vain. Next he seeks the depths of the ocean, and all goes well until the end of the rope is reached and the remorseless cask is drawn under water. The buoyancy of the air now gives great resistance to the cask, and if, for a moment, the fish yields, he is drawn to the surface. The struggle continues, and he swallows water, and inhales, too; and in time, paradoxical as it may seem, he is drowned, really drowned, by the element to which he has been accustomed since his birth but in which he can live only by breathing air alone. When his struggles are over the cask becomes motionless, when he is hoisted on board. Woe to the boat that crosses his path during the death agony. He will sometimes dart against it with terrible force, driving his sword through heavy planks.

DEATH SOLVES A MYSTERY.

A Romantic Story.

In 1870 there came to Taunton, Mass., a man who described himself as Frank Charteris Brown, and who has since lived here. He had great intellectual ability, but ill-fortune seemed to follow him, and when he died recently the people were not surprised. The mystery which always seemed to surround him has been penetrated, through the papers which were left intrusted to Deputy Sheriff Thomas O. Falvey, from which the following particulars were gathered:

Brown was the youngest child of the late George Robertson, Esq. of Edinburgh, keeper of the records of Scotland, and nephew of the late Gen. Sir George Brown, G. C. B., K. H. He was educated at Rugby. Though intended for the ministry, he entered the army as a commissioned officer in the Thirteenth Light Dragoons in 1848. After serving two and one-half years he was transferred to the Life Guards, where he remained until 1855. In 1854 he was married privately to an English actress, for which his allowance was taken from him, but it was afterwards returned to him on condition of his selling out and coming to America. Since that time, September, 1855 he never saw any of his family. In 1864 his wife and daughter died in Paris, after having travelled nearly all over the world. Then he drifted back to England. He was sent by the Liberal party to Taunton, Eng., to run a small newspaper during the general election, and he says: "I was the direct means of Henry James, Q. C. (now the famous Sir Henry James, Gladstone's Attorney General), getting into Parliament, a service which he has more than once substantially acknowledged." He came again to this country in August, 1869, worked a while for J. C. Ayer, of Lowell, afterward accompanied Jay Cooke's party at the opening of the Lake Superior and Mississippi Railroad as the representative of the New York Times, and finally drifted to Boston destitute. He walked from there to this city, because it bore the same name as the place in England where he did so well, and here he married again. The story of his wanderings closes thus:

"If it was a disgrace that I married a good and virtuous lady when I might have done otherwise, then I am guilty. If poverty is a disgrace then I am doubly disgraced; and if loving and cherishing my second wife—poor, innocent, kind-hearted, loving girl as she is—is another disgrace, once more I plead guilty."

Mr. Falvey has explicit instructions to open negotiations with the trustees of the property in England, that justice may be done the widow, it being well known to Falvey that there is property forthcoming. Indeed through his endeavors Brown or Robertson has been allowed £5 a week for some time past.

A Dakota clergyman, after a long period of intense inebriety, preached a sermon of corresponding deep contrition. Several passages of the remarkable discourse were devoted to vivid descriptions of delirium tremens.

TRYING ANIMALS FOR MURDER.

Some of the Oddities of Mediæval Justice.

On the 10 of January, 1457, a sow was convicted of murder, committed on the person of an infant named Jehan Martin, of Savigny, and sentenced to be hanged. Six sucklings were also included in the indictment as accomplices; but "in default of any positive proof that they had assisted in mangling the deceased, they were restored to their owner, on condition that he should give bail for their appearance should further evidence be forthcoming to prove their complicity in their mother's crime." Also, a month later, "on the Friday after the Feast of the Purification of the Virgin," the surviving sucklings were again brought before the court, and as their owner, Jehan Bailly, declined to be answerable for their good conduct, they were declared forfeited to the noble damsel, Katherine de Barnault, Lady of Savigny. Sometimes a fine was imposed upon the owner of the offending beast, as was the case with Jehan Delalande and his wife, condemned on the 18th of April, 1499, by the Abbey of Josaphat, near Chartres, to pay eighteen francs "on account of the murder of a child named Gillon, aged five years and a half, or thereabouts, committed by a porker, aged three months or thereabouts." The porker was "hanged and executed by justice."

But although pigs appear to have been the principal culprits, other quadrupeds were frequently called to answer for their crimes. The judiciary of the Cistercian abbey of Beaupre, in 1499, sent a bull to the gallows for having "killed with furiosity a lad of 14 or 15 years of age," and in 1389 the Carthusians of Dijon caused a horse to be condemned to death, for homicide. The magistrate of Bale in 1479 sentenced a cock to be burned at the stake for the heinous and unnatural crime of laying an egg. The cockatrici was supposed to be the product of a very old cock and to furnish the most active and effective ingredient of witch ointment. When hatched by a serpent or by the sun, it brought forth a cockatrice, which would hide in the roof of a house, and, with its baneful breath and "death-darting eye," destroy all the inmates. Naturalists believed in this fable as late as the eighteenth century; and in 1710 the French savant Lapeyronie read a paper before the Academie of Sciences to prove that the eggs attributed to cocks owe their peculiar form to a disease of the hen.

Animals, also, bore their full part of persecution during the witchcraft delusion. Pigs suffered most in this respect, and were assumed to be peculiarly attractive to devils, and therefore particularly liable to diabolical possession, as is evident from the legion that went out of the tomb-haunting man and were permitted, at their own request, to enter into the Gadarene herd of swine. Indeed the greatest theological authority of the middle ages, Thomas Aquinas, maintained that beasts are but embodiments of evil spirits. Chassenee quotes this opinion, and adds that in excommunicating animals the anathema "is aimed inferentially at the devil, who uses irrational creatures to our detriment." Still more recently, a French Jesuit, Pere Bongeant, set forth the same view in a philosophical treatise.

ANNIVERSARIES OF AGONY.

Victims of Snake Poisoning Tortured by Its Recurring Symptoms.

The strange case of the daughter of the Hon. A. C. Ramage of Bellaire, O., who having been bitten on Aug. 19, 1875, by a copper headed snake, and, her life having been saved, has had a return of the symptoms of the poisoning on the nineteenth of August of every year since, has attracted wide attention in the medical profession, the statement being made that the case is unprecedental in toxicological phenomena. The case of Miss Ramage, however, recalls a similar one which occurred in this county, and which finally resulted as it is feared the Ohio lady's will. A young girl, who afterward became the wife of Col. George Smith, the first representative of Livingston county in the Assembly, was bitten in the ankle by a rattlesnake in 1803. Her life was saved, but on the recurrence, year after year, of the day on which she was bitten, her ankle and leg would become swollen as they had when the poison was first injected, and she would suffer all the tortures that followed the passing of the virus into her blood. This would last several hours and then gradually pass away, to return with unvarying regularity the next year. The violence of the paroxysms attending these recurring symptoms of the snake poisoning increased annually, but Mrs. Smith bore up under them for thirty-two years. On the next return, however, she was unable to bear through the period of the paroxysms, and died in great agony. The case of Miss Ramage is exactly the same, and it is feared that she will not be able to survive the dreaded ordeal now approaching.

Calling a Spade a Spade.

Calling things by their right names! I don't believe in it. A lie may be a lie; undoubtedly it is a lie, but if we go about telling everybody so we would not only get our heads knocked in, but would be thoroughly disliked. Good people would be as strongly opposed to such business as bad people, for their interests would be affected, though it might not touch them directly and in theory they would like the plan. You see, about all morality is based on personal interest, or personal feeling anyway, and when the devil can get a man through that door he is pretty sure of getting solid with him for all time. The old serpent was well aware of this when he took Christ to the top of the mountain and made him a square offer of all the personal and real property in sight for his support. A merchant may sell sand in his sugar, and call it sugar, and though there is stealing and lying in it, he would, no doubt, resent it vigorously if he were told so, and on Sunday his minister is kind enough to deplore such evils, but he doesn't give them the names the Bible designates. Nor would it be wise to do so, since usage, and usage is law, does not sanction it. Moralists may find weakness and increase of immorality in it, but all the same, if the people of to-day recognize it as lawful and proper, and political and moral economy teaches that the thing to do is what the most want done. That is to say, its precepts are so translated. Again, it is a duty we owe to our fellowman to be charitable, and charity covereth a multitude of sins. It covers them with a name as well as with something of a more substantial texture, and I believe that charity is right, although at times it would appear just before it is generous.

AMONG THE DRUSES.

The Country of Many Sacred and Historical Associations.

While only two days' experiences at the Holy Shrine were in the highest degree novel and picturesque, and enabled me to gain an unusual insight into the manners and customs and religious observances of the Druse nation, my stay at this shrine of the pilgrimage was by no means destitute of historical interest. The village [illegible] is in the immediate neighborhood of the tomb of the prophet, forms the centre of many sacred and historical associations, while it is in itself a place of unusual beauty of situation.

In the overhanging rocks on the other side of the gorge, immediately opposite me, were several sepulchral chambers, traditional burying-places of people more or less historical. Some of these I examined. The largest was one entered by a doorway which had recently been inhabited, for the masonwork at a wooden door to it still remained. It was supposed to be the burial place of one of Jethro's daughters. We are told by Josephus that his family followed the Israelites, out of Midian. It's last of apparent was an Indian hermit, who had lived there in solitude for three years, when tiring of his seclusion, he had gone to Tiberias about a year ago, married there, and immediately disappeared with his wife no one knew whither.

About a hundred yards from the Nebk are issues from the mouth of the gorge a copious spring, which in fact forms the source of a brook that ultimately finds its way into the Sea of Galilee. It commences its deficient course, however, by fertilizing a large area immediately surrounding the village, where flourishing gardens of oranges, lemons, figs, apricots, pomegranates, and other fruit trees impart an air of luxuriant fertility to the landscape not common in these parts. Among these gardens is one which was purchased a few years ago by Sir Moses Montefiore and presented by him to the Jews of Tiberias. Here I went at the invitation of the overseer, and, seated on its mats under the spreading arms of a fig tree, breakfasted, while I sipped my coffee, to his delight; and then I went in search of ruins.

I found some immediately adjoining the garden. What had evidently once formed part of an old Byzantine church was here converted into a mosque; and upon one of the stones was a curious Cufic inscription. In one of the other gardens were traces of foundations, indicating that in old times Hattin must have been the site of a considerable town.

It is about two miles from the ruins of Irbid (which is no doubt the Arbela of Josephus) and is probably the Caphar Hattis of the Talmud, but I find no mention of the Hattin ruins in the memoirs of the Palestine exploration fund, nor of the Cufic inscription which I found. The way to Irbid across the plain, on which, a collection of seven basalt stones in a ring are called the "Hajaret en Nusara," or "stones of the Christians," because tradition has it that it was here that Christ performed the miracle of the seven loaves and two fishes.

The plain was now waiving with grain, and would it be possible to imagine a more fertile or luxuriant upland. On its margin, where it breaks off abruptly into the marvelous gorge of El Hamam, with its precipitous sides rising 1,200 feet sheer up from a little stream which which trickles at their base, are the ruins of Irbid, interesting as containing the remains of the oldest Jewish synagogue probably to be found in Palestina.

The steep hillside which slopes down to the edge of the cliff is very rocky, and numerous sarcophagi are carved on the surfaces of the natural slabs. The largest measures from six feet to six feet five inches long and one foot two inches deep, being round at the head and square at the foot, which is slightly deeper. There was a ledge around to receive the stone cover, and a channel made to keep the surface water from running in. They were of all sizes, even, evidently, for small children and babies. But the most remarkable tomb was one which opened out of which appeared to have been in connection with a wine press. The ante-chamber formed a sunk court, about twenty-feet by ten, and contained a sarcophagus. It opened into a tomb containing six loculi. My guide was the Jew who had entertained me in the Druse village, and who was well versed in local traditions.

A DEEP ROCK-CUT CHAMBER,

He informed me that here were supposed to be buried four of the sons of Jacob, he could not know which, and Jochabed and Miriam. He also pointed out to me the tomb of the Rabbi Nitai, who was supposed to have built the synagogue I had been examining, and who was a native of the place, and lived about 200 years B.C.; also a mound of stone covering apparently a rock tomb, which he declared was the burial place of Adam, the son of Adam; but, although from such habit I am accustomed to swallow a certain amount of traditional information, I am unable to push my credulity thus far.

Irbid is described, however, by the Abbe Mariano, A. D. 1561, as being in a cave with a spring to which a flight of steps led down. The tombs of Zerah and Zephaniah were also pointed out. Indeed there are many places in Palestine where in the same limited area such a number of distinguished personages of sacred history are buried as in the neighborhood of Arbela or Irbid. I do not now include the tumbs of the numerous rabbis whom the Jews hold sacred. If such a character for sanctity, it must at once have had a reputation for strength. Its position it must always have been a military stronghold. Josephus tells us, in his Life, that when he was governor of Galilee he fortified it, and laid up stores of corn there; and it is without doubt the Castellum of the Teutonic knights (1250 A. D.), the D. being an error for B, as it is mentioned in connection with Tiberias and Safet, both places not very distant.

The only biblical reference to this place is that made by Hosea, when he says: "Therefore shall a tumult arise among thy people, and all thy fortresses shall be spoiled as Shalman spoiled Beth-Arbel in the day of battle." As we stand here we can almost see the caverns with which the face of the opposite cliff is perforated, while the very edge of which we stand is

LITERALLY HONEYCOMBED

with these subterranean abodes. They are of immense extent, and are placed over each other in different stories; some are walled in, leaving doors and windows. Some idea of the extent of this singular natural fastness may be formed from the fact that it is said to be containing six thousand men. The caverns communicate with each other by

ING ANIMALS FOR MURDER.

the Oddities of Mediæval J... e 10 of January, 1457, ...

d of murder, committed on the ...
an infant named Jehan Martin, ...
, and sentenced to be hanged. ...
klings were also included in the ...
t as accomplices; but "in default ... tive proof that they had assisted ...
g the deceased, they were restored ...
owner, on condition that he should ...
for their appearance should fur...
dence be forthcoming to prove the... ty in their mother's crime." Al...
later, "on the Friday after the fea...
rification of the Virgin," the such...
s againbrought before the court ...
eir owner, Jehan Bailly, declin... swerable for their good conduct ...
re declared forfeited to the noble ...
Katherine de Barnault. Lady ...
Sometimes a fine was imposed up...
ner of the offending beast, as w...
with Jehan Delalande and his wife ...
d on the 18th of April, 1499, b... y of Josaphat, near Chartres, ...
een francs "on account of the mur...
hild named Gillon, aged five year...
, or thereabouts, committed by a ...
ed three months or thereabouts ...
r was "hanged and executed b...

ough pigs appear to have been the ...
culprits, other quadrupeds were ... called to answer for their crimes ...
ary of the Cisterician abbey of ...
n1499, sent a bull to the gallows ...
"killed with furiosity a lad of 1... s of age," and in 1389 the Carth...
Dijon caused a horse to be con...
death, for homicide. The magis...
le in 1479 sentenced a cock to b...
he stake for the heinous and un...
me of laying an egg. The cock ... as supposed to be the product of ...
cock and to furnish the most ac...
fective ingredient of witch oint...
Then hatched by a serpent or by ...
brought forth a cockatrice, which ...
in the roof of a house, and, with ...
breath and "death-darting eye," ...
the inmates. Naturalists believ...
ble as late as the eighteenth cen...
1710 the French savant Lapey...
a paper before the Academie des ... prove that the eggs attributed to ...
heir peculiar form to a disease of ...

also, bore their full part of per...
ring the witchcraft delusion, ...
most in this respect, and were ...
e peculiarly attractive to devils ...
e particularly liable to diabolic...
, as is evident from the legion ...
t of the tomb-haunting man and ...
ed, at their own request, to en...
Gadarene herd of swine. Indeed ... theological authority of the ...
Thomas Aquinas, maintained ... are but embodiments of evil ...
ssnee quotes this opinion, and ... excommunicating animals the ... s aimed inferentially at the ...
es irrational creatures to our ...
Still more recently, a French ...
Bongeant, set forth the same ...
osophical treatise.

...ERSARIES OF AGONY.

...nake Poisoning Tortured by ...ecurring Symptoms.

case of the daughter of the ...
Ramage of Bellaire, O., who ... itten on Aug. 19, 1875, by a ... l snake, and, her life having ...
s had a return of the symp...
isoning on the nineteenth of ...
ry year since, has attracted ...
in the medical profession, the ...
g made that the case is un...
toxicological phenomena. ...
ss Ramage, however, recalls ...
hich occurred in this county, ...
ally resulted as it is feared ...
's will. A young girl, who ... me the wife of Col. George ... representative of Livingston ...
Assembly, was bitten in the ... esnake in 1803. Her life ...
on the recurrence, year after ...
on which she was bitten, her ...
ould become swollen as they ...
poison was first injected, and ...
all the tortures that follow...
of the virus into her blood. ...
several hours and then grad...
to return with unvarying ...
ext year. The violence of ... attending these recurring ...
e snake poisoning increased ...
Mrs. Smith bore up under ... wo years. On the next re...
she was unable to bear ...
iod of the paroxysms, and ...
ny. The case of Miss Ram...
e same, and it is feared that ...
ble to survive the dreaded ...
aching.

...a Spade a Spade.

by their right names! I ...
it. A lie may be a lie; ...
a lie, but if we go about ...
so we would not only get ...
d in, but would be thor...
Good people would be as ...
to such business as bad ...
nterests would be affected, ...
ot touch them directly and ... ould like the plan. You ...
rality is based on personal ...
al feeling anyway, and ...
n get a man through that ...
sure of getting solid with ...
The old serpent was well ...
n he took Christ to the ... n and made him a square ...
rsonal and real property ...
pport. A merchant may ...
ar, and call it sugar, and ...
ealing and lying in it, he ...
resent it vigorously if he ...
on Sunday his minister is ...
plore such evils, but he ...
the names the Bible de...
uld it be wise to do so, ...
age is law, does not sanc...
may find weakness and ...
lity in it, but all the ...
e of to-day recognize it as ...
and political and moral ...
hat the thing to do is ... t done. That is to say, ...
translated. Again, it is ...
ur fellowman to be char...
covereth a multitude of ...
em with a name as well ...
of a more substantial ...
ve that charity is right, ... t would appear just, be...

AMONG THE DRUSES.

The Centre of Many Sacred and Historical Association.

While my two days' experiences at the Neby Shaib were in the highest degree novel and picturesque, and enabled me to obtain an unusual insight into the manners and customs and religious observances of the Druse nation, my stay at this shrine of their pilgrimage was by no means destitute of archæological interest. The village of Hattin, which is in the immediate neighborhood of the tomb of the prophet, forms the centre of many sacred and historical associations, while it is in itself a place of unusual beauty of situation.

In the overhanging rocks on the other side of the gorge, immediately opposite my tent, were several sepulchral chambers, all traditional burying-places of people more or less historical. Some of these I examined. The largest was one entered by a doorway, which had recently been inhabited, for the framework of a wooden door to it still remained, it was supposed to be the burial-place of one of Jethro's daughters. We are told by Josephus that his family followed the Israelities, out of Midian. It's last occupant was an Indian hermit, who had lived here in solitude for three years, when, getting tired of his seclusion, he had gone to Tiberias about a year ago, married there, and immediately disappeared with his wife no one knew whither.

About a hundred yards from the Neby Shaib issues from the mouth of the gorge a copious spring, which in fact forms the source of a brook that ultimately finds its way into the Sea of Galilee. It commences its beneficent course, however, by fertilizing a large area immediately surrounding the village, where flourishing gardens of oranges, lemons, figs, apricots, pomegranates, and other fruit trees impart an air of luxuriant fertility to the landscape not common in these parts. Among these gardens is one which was purchased a few years age by Sir Moses Montefiore and presented by him to the Jews of Tiberias. Here I went at the invitation of the overseer, and, seated on mats under the spreading arms of a fig tree, listened, while I sipped my coffee, to his ...; and then I went in search of ruins.

I found some immediately adjoining the garden. What had evidently once formed part of an old Byzantine church was here turned into a mosque; and upon one of the stones was a curious Cufic inscription. In one of the other gardens were traces of foundations, indicating that in old times Hattin must have been the site of a considerable town. It is about two miles from the ruins of Irbid (which is no doubt the Arbela of Josephus) and is probably the Caphar Hittia of the Talmud, but I find no mention of the Hattin ruins in the memoirs of the Palestine exploration fund. nor of the Cufic inscription which I found. The way to Irbid lies across the plain, on which, a collection of seven basalt stones in a ring are called the "Hajaret en Nusara," or "stones of the Christians," because tradition has it that it was here that Christ performed the miracle of the seven loaves and two fishes.

The plain was now waiving with grain, nor would it be possible to imagine a more fertile or luxuriant upland. On its margin, where it breaks off abruptly into the marvelous gorge of El Hamam, with its precipitous sides rising 1,200 feet sheer up from the little stream which which trickles at their base, are the ruins of Irbid, interesting as containing the remains of the oldest Jewish synagogue probably to be found in Palestine.

The steep hillside which slopes down to the edge of the cliff is very rocky, and numerous sarcophagi are carved on the surfaces of the natural slabs. The largest measures from six feet to six feet five inches long and one foot two inches deep, being round at the head and square at the foot, which is slightly deeper. There was a ledge all round to receive the stone cover, and a channel made to keep the surface water from running in. They were of all sizes, some, evidently, for small children and babies. But the most remarkable tomb was one which opened out of which appeared to have been in connection with a wine press. The ante-chamber formed a sunk court, about twenty-feet by ..., and contained a sarcophagus. It opened into a tomb containing six loculi. My guide was the Jew who had entertained me in the garden, and who was well versed in local traditions.

A DEEP ROCK-CUT CHAMBER,

He informed me that here were supposed to be buried four of the sons of Jacob, he did not know which, and Jochabed and Dinah. He also pointed out to me the tomb of the Rabbi Nitai, who was supposed to have built the synagogue I had been examining, and who was a native of the place, and lived about 200 years B.C.; also a mound of stones covering apparently a rock tomb, which he declared was the burial place of Seth, the son of Adam; but, although from much habit I am accustomed to swallow a fair amount of traditional information, I am unable to push my credulity thus far. It is described, however, by the Abbe Brocardus. A. D. 1561, as being in a cave with a spring to which a flight of steps led down. The tombs of Zerah and Zephaniah were also pointed out. Indeed there are few places in Palestine where in the same limited area such a number of distinguished personages of sacred history are buried as in the neighborhood of Arbela or Irbid. I do not now include the tombs of the numerous rabbis whom the Jews hold sacred. If it has a character for sanctity, it must at one time have had a reputation for strength. From it's position it must always have been a military stronghold. Josephus tells us, in his Life, that when he was governor of Galilee he fortified it, and laid up stores of grain here; and it is without doubt the Casale Ardelle of the Teutonic knights (1250 A.D.), the D. being an error for B, as it is mentioned in connection with Tiberias and Beisan, both places not very distant.

The only biblical reference to this place is that made by Hosea, when he says: "Therefore shall a tumult arise among thy people; all thy fortresses shall be spoiled as Shalman spoiled Beth-Arbel in the day of battle." As we stand here we can almost look into the caverns with which the face of the opposite cliff is perforated, while the one on the edge of which we stand is with these subterranean abodes. They are of immense extent, and are placed over each other in different stories; some are walled in, leaving doors and windows. Some idea of the extent of this singular natural fastness may be formed from the fact that it is capable of containing six thousand men. The caves communicate wih each other by subterranen galleries. These are the fortified caverns mentioned by Josephus in connection with Arbela. Bachides, the general of Demetrius, the third king of Syria, when he invaded Palestine, encamped at Arbeal and subdued those who had taken refuge in the caves. This event is narrated in Maccabees, where the caves are called "stories." It was here, also, that Herod the Great had his famous fight with the robbers who had made their dens in the caves, letting down his soldiers in baskets, and fighting them in midair.

LITERALLY HONEYCOMBED

I was determined to push my explorations to the summits of the rocky crests which frowned above, and are called the Horns of Hattin. Scrambling up the steep, rocky hillsides, we found ourselves at last obliged to leave our horses and make our way on foot over the huge blocks of basalt which are thickly strewn around these singular peaks. On reaching the top we found that they had been artificially superimposed one on the top of another, so as to form a rocky rampart of immense solidity. Both crests had, at some period of remote antiquity, been thus fortified. Beneath one of them were the foundation and ruins of an ancient town which the inhabitants call "Medinet el Inweileb," or "the ruins of the long tower." At the southeast of the hill is an oblong cavern cut in the rock and cased with cement, which may formerly have been a cistern; and not far from it are the foundations of a building which the natives say was a Christian church before the conquest of the country by the Mohammedans, who subsequently converted it into a mosque. Nothing could be more striking than the view from the summit of the highest horn. Immediately beneath us, some six or seven hundred feet below, I looked down into the gloomy gorge, with the white walls of the Neby Shaib contrasting with the black basalt rocks, its terraces covered with groups of brightly costumed Druses—their songs as they danced in circles reaching us on the still air of evening, and beyond the modern village of Hattin, surrounded by orange groves and fruit gardens of the most brilliant green. Stretching away on all other sides were uplands of waiving grain, till they either sunk away into valleys or terminated at the base of hills which rose abruptly above them. To the northeast the precipitous sides of the Wady Hamam, honeycombed with caves, formed a vista through which appeared in the distance a green strip of the plain of Gennesareth; beyond it the waters of the sea of Galilee, seventeen hundred feet below us, gleamed in the setting sun. From its eastern margin rose the steep cliffs above which is the vast plateau of Jaulan, once the grazing lands of the flocks and herds of Job, while a line of conical volcanic peaks, backed by snow-clad Hermon, closed the prospect.—Cor. New York Sun.

A ROCKY MOUNTAIN STORM.

A Peculiar Experience.

Blissfully unconscious of impending adventure, a gay party of Chicago pleasure-seekers started out from Manitou Springs recently. It consisted of five equestrians—viz., Mr. and Mrs. Ernst Hall, Miss Sadie Bates, Miss Grace and Master Hall, accompanied by Mrs. F. T. Sherman, Mrs. H. L. Thayer and little Goodwin Thayer in a buggy, Mrs. Thayer holding the lines. The destination chosen was a tableland beyond "Glen Eyrie" called "the Mesa," a Spanish word for plateau. A glorious canter was enjoyed through the "Garden of the Gods," and the beautiful valley beyond, reaching as far as "Glen Eyrie," the charming property of Gen. Palmer. A murky, threatening sky excited some remarks, but as similar cloud effects had clustered around the distant hilltops for several days without bringing the much-needed rain no particular apprehension was felt. At "Glen Eyrie" the road turned abruptly, making an ascent up the side of what to our Chicago residents was quite a steep hill, the road being cut shelving out of the hillside. Away to the south, where the mysterious beauty of the gateway to the "Garden of the Gods" loomed up in its silent majesty, a cloud of whirling dust was observed and commented on, but no suspicion of what it portended entered the minds of our uninitiated novices. With many an exclamation of delight at the extreme loveliness of the valley view, backed by the gardens of the "Rockies," and with many a jest and a laugh, the party rode gayly up the ascent, when just on the summit of the hill, on the brow of the precipice, a terrific wind struck them. With the natural instinct of facing a foe, the equestrians turned and headed their horses to the hurricane; but the ladies in the buggy being in the rear and the buggy-top affording the greatest resistance to the wind, they realized at once their danger and sprang at once from the vehicle just in time to bid adieu to hats, handkerchiefs, dusters, wraps, etc., which soon sought a more sheltered locality in the valley below. Mr. Hall, bareheaded and almost blinded by the fury of the gale, sprang from his horse, and just succeeded in catching the frightened animal in time to prevent his precipitating himself and the buggy after the other portable property. Grasping him with one hand and his own—an excitable, nervous horse—with the other, he succeeded in forcing them away from the brow of the hill.

Little Goodwin Thayer, aged 7 years, a slight child, was held down to the ground by his mother, or the wind would certainly have carried him over, while Mrs. Sherman clung with great presence of mind to the slender bushes. The little mountain pony Gracie Hall rode seemed to take it all as a matter of course, and halted stubbornly in the most dangerous spot of all, browsing contentedly, while the child was apparently in the greatest danger. The violence of the storm increased steadily for about ten minutes, during which the little party pushed forward to a safe spot, all having dismounted. Fortunately the horses behaved well, standing firmly, though evidently frightened, or we might have had something, more serious to chronicle than a severe fright. Soon a brisk shower of hail added to their discomfort, as by this time all heads were bare, the remaining hats having gayly cavorted over into the valley. The rain and hail fall brought a slight abatement of the wind, and Mr. Hall led the procession, by this time a very draggled and woe-begone looking company, down the hill to "Glen Eyrie," where a kind welcome and refreshments were received.

Not another Pill shall go down my throat again, said a citizen, "when I can get such a prompt and pleasant cure for my Billous attacks, such as Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It renders the Blood Pure and Cool and makes a splendid Spring Medicine. Large bottles 50 cents

The Courtship of Napoleon III.

There are some curious anecdotes about Napoleon III. in the "Souvenirs of Compiegne" recently published by "Sylvanecte," who appears to have been one of the Legitimist neighbours of the Emperor in that vicinity of Compiegne forest. One says that Napoleon's fascination for Mademoiselle de Montijo, who afterwards became the Empress Eugenie, dated from the time when that sprightly beauty gave him a sharp horse-whipping. The Emperor had invited Mademoiselle de Montijo and her mother to Compiegne, and showed them much attention at hunting parties. One evening, when the hunt came home late, Napoleon so enraged the beauty that she caught up her riding-whip and gave it to him over the head and ears. This soon brought about an explanation, and in course of time came the famous letter in which Napoleon expressed his desire to have Mademoiselle Eugenie to wife—a letter which the mother lost no time in making public, and which is now religiously preserved in the archives of the family at Madrid. According to "Sylvanecte," the future Empress was much persecuted by Napoleon before he made her his proposal of marriage, and it is related that on one occasion he was so enraged because she would not grant him a rendezvous—asked for while they were out riding—that he put spurs to his horse and galloped away, leaving her to find her way home through the forest as best she could. The poor girl lost her way, and did not reach the palace until nine o'clock in the evening, when all the guests and the domestics were thoroughly alarmed for her safety.

What Makes a Home?

It is an excellent thing to have a well-kept house, finely appointed table; but after all, the best cheer of every home must come from the heart and manner of the home mother. If that be cold, and this ungracious, all the wealth of India cannot make the home pleasant and inviting. Intelligence, too, must lend its charm it we would have home an Eden. The severe style of house-order neatness seldom leaves much margin for intellectual culture; a simpler style of living and house-furnishing would set many a bonded slave at liberty, and add vastly to the comforts of all the household. There are cabin homes that have been and are remembered with pleasure, because of the beautiful, loving presence there; and stately homes without it are but dull and cheerless habitations.

Fighting Peccaries.

A peccary is in all respects a hog. He looks, smells, tastes like a hog, and is a hog, but for a thing of indomitable courage of the lower type, for a hater of quenchless fury, and for a fighter to the last throb of his heart he has no parallel in the animal kingdom. They never begin a war, but when one is assailed the entire drove rush to the attack as men rush when martial vigor urges them. Each bead-like eye is a fire spark; tusks are protruding, the echinated spine straightened, and woe to the wretch who falls into their path. Gored, bitten, torn, tramped upon, and eaten up, to the very last shread of his clothing—such is the fate of the man caught by a drove of angry peccaries. With the same fury they assault a wolf or attack a bull, and neither the wolf nor the bull can stand up against a charge of half a dozen peccaries. Both know this and flee in terror from the field.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star

Cremation is making great strides in France where the Prefect of the Seine means to establish Siemens furnaces in several of the cemeteries in Paris, and proposes to cremate all persons whose remains are not claimed by their friends. If this experiment proves successful, the Government will probably introduce a general bill on cremation in the Chamber, and the Council of Health is now considering the different ways of detecting traces of poison.

Oh! how tired and weak I feel, I don't believe I will ever get through this Spring house-cleaning! Oh yes you will if you take a bottle or two of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters to purify your blood and tone up the system. In large bottles 50 cents.

A child in Leominster, Mass., placed in the garden a small piece of looking glass in an upright position, and for a week a sparrow has spent three hours each day capering in front of it. It will stand and peck away at its reflected self until it gets thoroughly excited, then run back and forth along the fence, then return to its attack, and continue it until it falls exhausted and apparently dead. On recovering it flies away, only to return at the same hour the next day and renew the contest.

Childhood's Memories

Come back laden with the joys and pleasures of that dream time of life when sweet anticipation garnished with brightest hues the future as it stretched out before us. Only the pleasures hoped for us entered the heart then. But as we grow older, to one and other comes the awakening. If you should be troubled, not in heart, but in feet, with corns, and they make life miserable, go to the nearest drug store and buy a bottle of Putnam's Corn Extractor, the "sure, safe, and painless corn cure," and you will be quickly relieved, and happiness will ever after brighten your path. N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, prop's.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

The Mighty Dollar

Is lone distanced by a 10 cent bottle of Polson's NERVILINE, the newest and best pain remedy. It cures colds, cramps, colic, pain in the head, sciatica pain in the chest; in fact it is equally efficacious as an external or internal remedy. Try a 10 cent sample bottle of the great pain remedy. New lines. Sold by druggists. Large bottles 25 cents. Try a sample bottle of Nerviline, only 10 cents. Take no substitute.

Chemistry begins to play havoc with the mother tongue. The latest compound announced from the laboratories is monochlorodibromoparadinitrobenzol. The discoverer's name is not given.

Young Men!—Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Difference between the House of Lords and the House of Commons—all the difference between ability and nobility.

There are lots of people going around grumbling, and half sick at the Stomach all the time; who might be well and happy, if they only used Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters occasionally. It is a splendid Blood Purifier. At Druggists 50 cents

A.P. 190.

PHRENOLOGY. EXAMINATIONS GIVEN BY WALLACE MASON, 12 Queen St. W., Toronto.

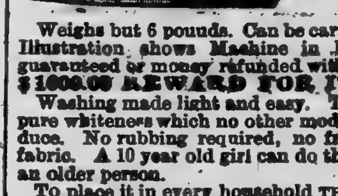
WHEAT Valley $4, Scott $1.35, Deihl 1.35, Amber 1.35, (bus) Rye.85c. Jas. Rennie, Toronto.

THOS. GALLOWAY & Co., Cotton, Woollen, Silk Carpet, and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas, Ont

FOR SALE.

Roughcast Blacksmith Shop, Woodshop, and Dwelling House, 1½ land, good garden, stable and woodshed. Failing health the cause for selling. Apply Box 79, Hepworth, Ont.

MEN WANTED.



Active, pushing men wanted to wholesale my famous teas to consumers. Salaries from $600 to $2,000 per year. Send stamp for particulars. JAMES LAUT, Importer, Toronto.

PARTY WANTED TO PURCHASE CARRIAGE shops 24 x 118 feet; double stoop, with office 24 x 60 lacksmith's shop, 20 x 42; lumber, barn, and shed, horse barn, two acres of land with dwelling house suitable for two small families; two cisterns, cellar, and well; situated at Ross' Corners, four miles from Belleville, on main gravelled road; good locality, where a business from $8,000 to $10,000 per annum is done. The premises are now in full blast, and will be sold to good live man at a bargain. HARFORD ASHLEY Belleville.

Steam Flour Mill.

Capacity 300 barrels daily. New roller process; cooperage with large supply of dry staves; also 500 cords of wood on property; Saw mill adjoining flour mill; G. T. R. switch within ten feet of mill; situated in fine wheat country. Address Lock Box 11, Listowel.

SEND And get a sample copy of TRUTH, free, the best 28-page Weekly Magazine published. See the big list of rewards for answering Bible Problems. S. FRANK WILSON, 33 & 35 Adelaide Street, West, Toronto, Canada.

THE MODEL Washer AND BLEACHER

Weighs but 6 pounds. Can be carried in a small valise. Illustration shows Machine in boiler. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded within 30 days.

$1000.00 REWARD FOR ITS SUPERIOR.

Washing made light and easy. The clothes have that pure whiteness which no other mode of washing can produce. No rubbing required, no friction to injure the fabric. A 10 year old girl can do the washing as well as an older person.

To place it in every household THE PRICE HAS BEEN REDUCED to $2.50, and if not found satisfactory, money refunded. See what the "Canada Presbyterian," says about it—The Model Washer and Bleacher which Mr. C. W. Dennis offers to the public has many and valuable advantages. It is a time and labor saving machine, substantial and enduring, and is very cheap. From trial in the household we can testify to its excellence. Delivered to any express office in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Charges paid $3.00. Send for circulars.

AGENTS WANTED.

C. W. DENNIS,

TORONTO BARGAIN HOUSE,

213 YONGE STREET, TORONTO, ONT.

CONBOY'S

CARRIAGE TOPS

ARE THE

Latest, Neatest, Lightest, Strongest, Cheapest and most Stylish Top in the market.

☞ Buy no other until you see them. ☜

For sale by all the leading Carriage Builders.

Manufactured in great variety at 407, 409 and 411 King St., W., Toronto.

SMOKED SAUSAGES.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for price to W. CLARK, P. O. Box 342 Montreal.

W. & F. P. Currie & Co.

100 Grey Nun Street, Montreal.

Importers of

Drain Pipes, Portland Cement, Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings, Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting, Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay, Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay.

Manufacturers of

Bessemer Steel Sofa, Chair & Bed Springs

DEATH TO POTATO BUGS.

ASK YOUR LOCAL DEALER FOR

RAMSAY'S PURE PARIS GREEN.

Nothing has been found more effective for destroying Potato Bugs. The purest is the cheapest.

A. Ramsay & Son,

Paint and Color Manufacturers, Montreal.

WHAT SHALL I DRINK!

THE MONTSERRAT

Lime Fruit Juice.

Cordial, most wholesome, delicious and refreshing beverage. Strictly pure and entirely free from Alcohol. Gold Medal Calcutta Exhibition. Sold by all druggists and grocers. Sole proprietors H. SUGDEN EVANS & CO., Montreal. Agents, JAS. H. PEARCE & CO., Toronto.

MACHINERY. 1 Portable T. Westinghouse Farm Engine 1 Able Triumph do. 1 G. C. Morrison do. 1 8 h p Portable Engine and Boiler one Skids. 1 35 h. p. Horozontal by Northy. 1 do. by Waterous with cut off valve, and 20 engines and boilers of smaller sizes, all thoroughly refitted before leaving shop. 2 24-inch Planers and Matchers. 1 20-inch Pony Planer. 1 Iron frame Tenoning machine. 1 Blind Slat Tenoner, 1 Buggy Plainer or jointer. 2 band saws. 10 Saw Tables. 1 Fire-Proof Safe. 1 Jeweler's Rools Steel. 1 Book-Binder's Screw Press. 1 42-inch French Burr Portable Grist Mill. 1 62-inch inserted Tooth-Saw, &c., &c. Send for new list, No. 9, containing full description of machinery in stock. Address,

H W. PETRIE, Brantford, Ont.

MUTUAL MARRIAGE ENDOWMENT ASS'N, Incorporated, Head Office, London, Ont. Issues Certificates from $125 to $3,000, payable on marriage, at following rates. For $500, or half certificate, $4; quarterly dues in advance, $0.75. For $1,000 Certificate, $6; quarterly dues in advance, $1.00. For $2,000 Certificate, $10; quarterly dues in advance, $2.00. For $3,000 Certificate, $15; quarterly dues in advance, $3.00. The only cash payments. Assessments on marriages $1.60 on each $1000. First years quarterly assessments are promptly paid, on present membership at end of year. Endowment reserve account will amount to $10,000 providing for a large number of endowments, which places this Association in a sound financial position. No connection with any similar Institution. A good savings society for young people. Send for By-Laws, &c. W. J. IMLACH, Secretary, London, Ont.

Dominion Line of Steamships.

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from

QUEBEC TO LIVERPOOL.

Brooklyn,	Aug. 18	*Oregon	Sept. 6
*Vancouver,	Aug. 23	Montreal,	Sept. 13
Toronto,	Aug. 30	*Sarnia	Sept. 20

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $50, $60, $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $36.75. Steerage, at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to

DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter between Portland and Glasgow, and Boston and Glasgow alternately; and during summer between Quebec and Glasgow and Boston and Glasgow every week.

For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co, St. John's N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B. Allan & Co., Chicago; Leve & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

GURNEYS & WARE,

STANDARD SCALES.

THE BEST,
THE STRONGEST,
THE MOST RELIABLE.

Unrivalled in material, construction and finish, perfect in accuracy and unequalled in durability. Guaranteed to give entire satisfaction.

THEY EXCEL ALL OTHERS.

RAILROAD, WAREHOUSE AND MILL TRUCKS

Mills' Alarm Money Drawers.

☞ SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST.

GURNEYS & WARE,
HAMILTON. ONT

The New Williams

High Arm Machine is now recognized as the

Sewing Machine of the Period.

Is Light and Easy to run!

Silent and Rapid movement,

Plain and Simple to learn

It is strong, durable, and well built, of the very best material that money can buy or skill produce.

It was awarded five medals and three first prizes at the Dominion Exhibition last October. It is rapidly superseding all the old fashioned makes everywhere. See it, try it, buy it, and make sure that you get it.

THE WILLIAMS' MFG CO.

1733 Notre Dame St., Montreal, and 58 King St., West, Toronto.

BROWN'S!

Cor. Brown & Toronto St's

MARKDALE

Is the place to get BARGAINS in

Dry Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Crockery, Glassware &c &c.

NEW PRINTS from 5 cents up, New DRESS STUFF 10 cents and upwards in NEW DESIGNS and

LATEST FASHIONS.

Gloves, Hosiery, Ribbons, Laces, Embroidery, Small wares &c &c, at greatly reduced prices.

Our 25 cent T is unsurpass'd

Being determined to curtail credit trade, we offer special discounts and inducements to cash customers.

The Highest Price for Butter and Eggs.

A lot of seed oats (White Australian), free from all impurities ; also Potatoes, large and small, of finest quality, for sale cheap.

GIVE US A CALL.

April, 1884. 190-tf WM. BROWN.

ROBT. S. RAE, Sydenham St., Markdale. TAILOR,

SAW MILL AND TIMBER LAND FOR SALE OR TO LET

In the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, 4 miles from Flesherton Station, on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The mill is situated at Little Falls, in a block of about 400 acres timber lnd, with other timber land surrounding. The building is substantially built on stone foundation. The machinery is all good and driven with great power by a 23 inch Leffell wheel, under 36 ft. head of water. There are one large circular saw for cutting logs, 2 small circulars for sawing lath and broom handles, 1 guage lathe for turning broom handles, etc., 1 shingle machine with jointer and packer complete. The water power is excellent, the stream being very regular. There are several other good mill sites on the proyerty. The land in the valley is considered the best in the country. The place would make an excellent stock farm when the timber is taken off.

This offers a good opportunity for a practical, energetic man to go into this kind of business, as the place will be sold or let on liberal terms.

The bush is so convenient to the mill logs can be trucked in summer time. Immediate possession given.

Apply to the proprietor, WM. HOCG,
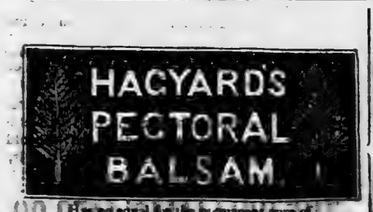
FLESHERTON STATION P. O., ONT.

—Good Work Guaranteed—

—AT—



Bulmers Photograph Gallery

FLESHERTON.

Call at once and see samples of work which we area not ashamed to show.

All kinds of Framing done cheap at

JAS. BULMER'S, FLESHERTON.

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

JOHN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING
SPECIALTY.
Also agent for the celebrated
CHATHAM WAGONS.

Worms often destroy children, but Freeman's Worm Powders destroy Worms, and expel them from the system.

To remove dandruff, Cleanse the scalp with Prof. Low's Magic Sulphur Soap. A delightful medicated soap for the toilet.

Sydenham fall show will be held on the 7th October.

A crying evil, Children are often fretful and ill when Worms is the cause. Dr. Low's Worm Syrup safely expels all Worms.

GOOD THE YEAR ROUND.—National Pills are a good blood purifier, liver regulator, and mild purgative for all seasons.

FOR OLD OR YOUNG
Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the remedy for Cholera, Colic, Diarrhœa and Dysentery. No person is safe without it.

The Thornbury Venture is a year old and will venture on.

FOR THE COMPLEXION.—For Pimples, Blotches, Tan, and all itching tumors of the skin, use Prof. Low's Magic Sulphur Soap.

Worms often cause serious illness. The cure is Dr. Low's Worm Syrup. It destroys and expels Worms effectually.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Sir Leonard Tilley and Lady were presented to Her Majesty the Queen, at Osborne Castle to-day by the Princess Louise.

The Signs of Worms are well known, but the remedy is not always so well determined Worm Powders will destroy them.

PREJUDICED PEOPLE.

Many people are prejudiced against patent medicines but all who try Burdock Blood Bitters are compelled to acknowledge it worthy a patent as a valuable discovery.

Melancthon Council is afraid those in neighbcring townships would drive the bears into that township and shoot them, in order to get their bounty should they offer one, so they wo'nt offer any. Every municipality should offer at least $5, for bear scalp and double that amount for that of dogs, then sheep raising might be entered into with very little risk.

A BLESSING TO ALL MANKIND.

In these times when our Newspapers are flooded with patent medicine advertisements, it is gratifying to know what to procure that will certainly cure you. If you are billious, Blood out of order, Liver inactive.or generally debilitated, there is nothing in the world that will cure you so quickly as Electric Bitters. They are a blessing to all mankind, and can be had for only fifty cents a bottle at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store. 2

COUNTY VALUATION.—We were unable last week to give our readers the result of the appeal against the County valualion taken by the townships of Osprey, Proton and Bentinck owing to the Judge having received his judgment. The following changes have been made:—Normanby, increased $237,226; Bentinck, decreased $75,731; Euphrasia, decreased $2,100; Keppel, decreased $48,561; Osprey, decreased $105,884; Sarawak, decreased $10,000.—O. S. Advertiser.

All over the land are going into ecstasy over Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. There unlocked for recovery by the timely use of this great life Saving remedy, causes them to go nearly wild in its praise. It is guaranteed to positively cure Severe Caught, Colds, Asthma, Hay Fever, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Loss of Voice, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs. Trial bottles free at A. Turner, & Co's Drug Store. Large size $1.00 2

GRAY MEDICINE COMPANY.—Will some of our exchanges who have had dealings with this company inform us as to their reliability. We have tendered our account till we are tired of doing so and if many of our brethren are similarly situated, the only course open to us will be to denounce them as deadbeats.—Bruce Herald. We had dealings with above Company in 1882, they paid half their account the other half we have been unable to collect.—Ed. STANDARD.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best Salve in the world for cuts, bruises sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by A. Turner & Co.

The potato and buckwheat crops in parts of Northern Michigan have been ruined by a heavy frost which occurred on Friday night.

McGregor's Speedy Cure.

Every purchaser of common sense business capacity, when requiring an article for a certain purpose, purchases only that which has been tried or is allowed first to test before buying. You are allowed a free trial bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure, the great remedy for Dyspepsia, Impure Blood and Liver Disorders at Hill Bro's. Sold at 50 cents and $1 per bottle. See testimonials from persons in your own town. A. & S. 6

The writ for the election of a member of the Ontario Legislature Lennox, in place of the late A. H. Roe, has been issued. The nomination will take place at Napanee on the 21st inst., and the election on the 28th.

A REMARKABLE RECORD.

The most remarkable case of Scrofula on record is that of the Rev. Wm. Stout, of Wiarton, whose case of Scrofulous Abscess baffled the skill of seventeen Surgeons for twenty three years. He was perfectly cured by Burdock Blood Bitters.

FROM KINGSTON.

N. C. Polson & Co., druggists, write that Dr. Fowler's Wild Strawberry has long been the best remedy for Summer Complaints in the market.

Osprey Council will meet on the 19th.

WOMAN'S WEAKNESS.

Much of the weary weakness peculiar to females is caused by irregularities that could be promptly remedied with that Excellent Regulating Tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters.

A lodge of Royal Templars of Temperance has been instituted at Meaford.

CAN DEAFNESS BE CURED.

Mr. John Clark, of Milldridge, Ont., declares it can, and that Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the remedy that cured him. It is also a specific for all inflamation and pain.

Arran Council has decided to assist farmers to erect wire fences where the snow drifts badly.

A ST. ANN'S VICTORY.

Mr. John Morrison, well known in St. Ann's, N. S., had serious Kidney Complaint that bordered on dropsy. After hope had nearly fled, he was cured by Burdock Blood Bitters.

THE Orangeville Gazette has suspended publication owing to financial difficulties.

A CURE FOR CHOLERA.

Procure from your druggist one bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and take as directed. It cures all Summer Complaints.

FALL wheat of year's growth, purchased from a Tuckersmith farmer, weighed 62½ pounds to the bushel, and yielded forty bushels to the acre. This is said to be a fair average of the crop in that neighborhood.

The following is from J. W. Ptolemy, of Winnipeg, formerly grain buyer for William Gillesby, of Hamilton and Grimsby: "I was for many years much afflicted with Costiveness, Biliousness, and ultimately Dyspepsia. I suffered very much and tried many different medicines, which gave me only temporary relief and then I was as bad as ever again. I was recommended by a friend, who had been restored to health by it, to try McGregor's Speedy Cure. I did so, and it was not long before I felt like a new man, and I have enjoyed excellent health ever since. I first commenced taking it February 7th, 1879. Sold by Hill Bro's. A. & S. 5

THE condition of the crops throughout the whole Canadian North-West is most gratifying. The yield of wheat will be the largest yet known in that portion of the Dominion, the amount available for export being estimated at five million bushels. The Canada Pacific experimental farms have proved abundantly successful, and have placed the suitability of the region for cultivation and settlement dispute.

Prominent among the greatest medical discoveries, by the many cures it has effected, McGregor's Speedy Cure leads the van. Subjected to the minutest chemical analysis, it has been found to contain none of those injurious ingredients characterizing the worthless specifics daily offered to the public. Every ingredient possesses a peculiar adaptability to the various complaints for which it has been compounded, and its efficacy is being established by testimonials hourly received. We are therefore confident that we have a preparation which we can offer to the public with the assurance that it will be found not only a relief but an absolute cure for Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Constipation and Impure Blood. Free trial bottles at Hill Bro's. A. & S. 4

What is an Editor?

Josh Billings says: An editor is a male being whose business is to navigate newspapers. He writes editorials, grinds out poetry, inserts deaths and weddings, sorts manuscripts, keeps a waste basket, blows up the "devil," steals matter, fights other people's battles, takes white beans and apples for pay when he can get them, raises a large family, works nineteen hours out of twenty-four, knows no Sunday, lives poor, dies middle-aged, and often broken-hearted, leaves no money, is often rewarded for a life of toil with a short but free obituary puff in the newspaper.

HOPEFUL WORDS.

Mrs. McArthur, of Hopeville, Ont., says she could not keep house without Hagyard's Pectorial Balsam to cure prevailing throat and lung troubles.

The Western Fair.

We have received a handsome prize list of the Western Fair at London to be held in September from the 22nd to the 26th, inclusive. Prizes to the amount of $17,000 will be given and in addition to usual attractions seem at exhibitions of this kind, there will be balloon ascensions, fireworks, games, races &c., for the entertainment of visitors.

RESCUED AT LAST.

W. H. Crooker, druggist of Waterdown, says, when all other remedies fail for Bowel Complaints, then Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry comes to the rescue.

Go to John Noble's, Markdale, for a Chatham wagon.

Franco - Chinese War.

Notwithstanding the desolating war now raging in China it will not increase the price of Teas at the

Belfast House, Markdale

Having imported prior to the opening of hostilities, a sufficient quantity to supply 20,000 MEN for a period of 12 months. In other departments of the Grocery trade the BELFAST HOUSE has KILLED BY THOUSAND those who assume to transact business by purchasing of small dealers exorbitant rates of interest on long credit. Our imports of

PRESERVED MEATS, SALMON LOBSTERS, SARDINES, HAMS, BACON, ASSORTED PICKELS

and every articles in the grocery trade

LIQUORS

Of the best brands and quality. Wine for Sacramental purposes warranted pure. Brandies direct from the manufacturer and all other kinds of liquors.

Coffees, Teas and Tobaccos cannot fail to give satisfaction. Oranges, Lemons, &c. Family Flour supplied at Lowest Rates.

THOS. McNEA.
BELFAST HOUSE, - MARKDALE

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed Store.

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF

Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c,

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

193 J. PLEWES.

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

TUCK & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.

The best brand of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meals and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler. 114

HENRY GILL,

HOUSE PAINTER,

GRAINER, GLAZIER AND PAPER HANGER, CALCIMINING AND WALL TINTING.

Residence opposite Planing Factory,

MARKDALE.

ORDERS SOLICITED. ESTIMATES GIVEN. 192-195

P. DUCOLON'S LIVERY,

IN HULL'S OLD STAND,

MILL - STREET.

Good Horses and comfortable Rigs at moderate charges.

195

ROOKE'S BAKERY.

BREAD, the staff of life and PASTRY that will please your wife, always on hand, to supply the demand.

So when your stock is low
Step in and let us know,
And we'll your wants supply;
Or you'll know the reason why.

E. ROOKE,
Markdale.

J. G. IRVING

MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all Kinds of

PUMPS.

Drop Valve, Cylinder, Force, and Chain Pumps.

All kinds of

IRON - PUMPS SUPPLIED.

The Markdale Stand

Is issued every Thursday, at the office Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $ not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards on space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50
Half column.....	27 00	15 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00
Two inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks $1, the advertisement not to exceed ten lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

—JOB PRINTING.—

THE STANDARD office has a splendid assortment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS & PERRY

(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East,

199-251 TORONTO

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-at-Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Flesherton, Office open every Thursday as heretofore.

ALFRED FROST, J. W. FROST, LL.B.
County Crown Attorney.

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REGISTRAR in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-1y

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORRISON.
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-1y

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate. Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c. Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE

MARKDALE,

Jas. Bryan, Proprietor

CITY HOTEL

MARKDALE,

John McAleer, - Proprietor

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 19

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

MRS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

A. HILL,

Fashionable Tailor,

OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.

A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

...co - Chinese War.
...withstanding the desolating
...w raging in China it will not
...e the price of Teas at the
...st House, Markdale
...g imported prior to the open-
...ostilities, a sufficient quantity
...y 20,000 MEN for a period of
...ths. In other departments of
...cery trade the BELFAST
... has KILLED BY THOU-
...hose who assume to transact
... by purchasing of small deal-
...bitant rates of interest on long
... Our imports of
...RVED MEATS, SALMON
...TERS, SARDINES, HAMS,
...N, ASSORTED PICKELS
...y articles in the grocery trade
LIQUORS
...est brands and quality. Wine
...amental purposes warranted
...randies direct from the man-
... and all other kinds of liquors.
..., Teas and Tobaccoes cannot
...give satisfaction. Oranges,
...&c. Family Flour supplied
...t Rates.
...IOS. McNEA.
...T HOUSE, - MARKDALE
GROCERY STORE
CONNECTION WITH
Flour and Feed Store.
...ng just received a
..., Fresh and Select
...TOCK OF
...ugars,
Tobacco, &c,
...ll be sold VERY CHEAP.
...ctfully solicit the public's
J. PLEWES.
...SWORTH HOUSE
...LATE MORROW HOUSE,)
...ATSWORTH, Ont.
... & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.
... brand of liquors and cigars al-
...k. Good meals and comfortable
...nteed. Good stabling and at...er. 114
...NRY GILL,
...E PAINTER,
..., GLAZIER AND PAPER
...ER, CALCIMINING
... WALL TINTING.
...opposite Planing Factory,
...RKDALE.
...ITED. ESTIMATES GIVEN.
192-205
...UCOLON'S
...VERY,
...ULL'S OLD STAND,
... - STREET.
...d Horses
...mfortable Rigs at
...erate charges.
...E'S BAKERY.
...AD. the staff of life and
...RY that will please
...always on hand, to supply
... the demand.
...your stock is low
... and let us know,
... your wants supply,
...'ll know the reason
...E. ROOKE,
Markdale.
...IRVING.
...ARKDALE,
...facturer of all Kinds of
...MPS.
... Cylinder, Forcs, and Cistern
All kinds of
...N - PUMPS
SUPPLIED.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 4.--No. 206. MARKDALE, ONT., AUG 21, 1884. { COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued evesy Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1, the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the aption of the publisher.

—JOB PRINTING.—

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS & PERRY,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),
BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
199-251 TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,
BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Flesherton, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.
ALFRED FROST, J. W. FROST, LL. B.
County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,
BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCES, &c. &c.
OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.
Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown,
ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N.B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.
CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.
This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
MRS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

Medical.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, Graduate of University. Vict. College. " " New York, and Hon. Graduate, of the same, " " Ayleth Medical Institute. " " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y. Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeors, O. 104

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at Rutledge's Hotel, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.
122-47.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT.—Residence on Mill Street, Markdale.
124ly

HAMILTON'S
PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY
MARKDALE.
OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.
Fine work executed in all the latest sizes and shapes, fully equal to city work. Special attention given to
FRAMING
A large stock of moulding to choose from.
Call and leave your measure for a picture.
Jas. Hamilton.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.
Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

Dr. Hixon,
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, AND ACCOUCHER,
PRICEVILLE.
All calls promptly attended to.

ISAAC STINSON,
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

SAMUEL WARDELL,
WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-85

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

ALEX KAY
BOOT & SHOE
MAKER,
Mill Street, - Markdale

Fall Show Fairs.

East Grey, at Flesherton, the 23rd and 24th September.

South Grey, at Durham, the 30th September and 1st October.

Glenelg, at Markdale, on the 2nd and 3rd October.

Collingwood township, at Clarksburg, on the 25th and 26th September.

Osprey, at McIntyre October 9th.

Dominion Exhibition at Montreal September 5th to 13th.

Provincial at Ottawa Sept. 22nd to 27th.

Toronto Industrial, Toronto, Sept. 10th to 20th.

Western Fair, London, Sept. 22nd to 26th.

Canadian Pacific Railway.

(ONTARIO DIVISION.)

MILEAGE TICKETS.

On and after Monday, Aug. 11th, 1884, this company will have on sale mileage tickets, as follows:

500 Miles for - - $12.50,
1000 " for - - 22.50.

These tickets are issued in book form, containing the same number of coupons as miles represented. They are valid for one year from date of issue, good for one person only, and are positively not transferable.

The books are not good for passage on the trains, but if presented at any ticket office, either on the Ontario or eastern divisions of this company's railway, first-class passage tickets will be issued by the agent to any point on the divisions named, in exchange for the number of coupons representing miles to be travelled, which he will detach.

The book must be presented to conductors with the passage ticket, for examination.

Mileage tickets on sale at all principal ticket offices.

D. McNICOLL,
General Passenger Agent.

ROBBERY,

AND THREATENED MURDER IN OSPREY.

On Thursday night, the 14th, about 12 o'clock, Mr. John McEachren was on the 4th line, on his way home from a meeting of the Salvation Army at Feversham, being on foot and alone. He was suddenly clenched by the throat by a stout man, who also presented a cocked revolver to his head, and fiercely demanded his money. Mc is a strong man, not much afraid of ghosts; but he saw, although it was pretty dark, that his antagonist would likely be a match for him even under more favorable circumstances, and considered it his best policy to obey orders and deliver up his little all, being only 50 cents. The robber swore he had more, and threatened to blow his brains out when John solemnly declared he had no more. The desperado, however, still held the revolver to Mc's head with one hand and searched his pockets with the other, but finding no valuables let him go. McEachren could see that the tramp was a heavy man, had his pant legs in his boots, had dark brown whiskers, and was unshaven. Nothing more has been heard of him.—COM.

That Home of Ours.

In these days of low prices, when a pretty print or muslin dress can be bought for five or eight cents a yard, cambric and satteens in choice colors for fifteen cents, or cotton and wool fabrics for suits at twenty-five cents, there is little reason why a lady should not be prettily dressed when about her work at home. If the warm, damp weather takes the curls all out of her frizzes, a few moments should be employed after the family are scattered to put them up again. A little more trouble and expence will more than pay, if the little children are overheard to say, "Doesn't mother look sweet?" Boys, especially, are very early influenced by the surroundings of home. Happily the old custom of having a "best room" shut up, except for weddings, funerals, or occasional company, is fast being abandoned. Now the home rooms are all thrown open. Sunbeams are welcomed, for it has been found, that it is a choice between them and malaria, or disease in some form. All the best things are not crowded into one room, and the other left bear and shabby. Doors are removed, and curtains or portieres, hung on brass or stained rods, divide halls and rooms. The curtains are made of a variety of materials. There are heavy striped and figured goods, which come for this purpose, but plain goods with broad bands of contrasting color are richer. Double-faced canton flannel is the best cheap material. Dark blue or garnet is handsome, and bands of strips used for saddle-girths, or some kinds of coach trimmings, are very effective upon them. Often one wishes a curtain between a large and small chamber or dressing-room. Cretonne is best for this. Screens used for the purpose are very useful and ornamental, and may be very expensively or cheaply made. A clothes "horse" makes a good frame when stained or ebonized. If it has three panels, each should be different. —ETHEL STONE in American Agriculturist for September.

A Father Rebuked.

Col. McLeod, although not a bad man at heart, used very rough language in his intercourse with his family. On returning to his home from his place of business, a few days ago, he found his wife very much excited over the outrageous conduct of a tramp, who, being dissatisfied with the food given him by Mrs. McLeod, had abused her in a most outrageous manner.

"Jonney," said Col. McLeod, to his ten-year-old son; "when you heard that cowardly scoundrel abusing your mother, why didn't you run to the store quick, and let me know? Didn't you hear?"

"Yes, pa, I was out in the stable and heard what he said about the victuals ma give him, and how he abused her, but——"

"But what?"

"I thought it was you scolding ma. He used the same cuss words as you do when the dinner don't suit you, so I thought it couldn't be anybody else but you. I didn't think anybody else would dare talk to ma that way."

Johnny unconsciously administered a severe rebuke to his irascible pa, who never again spoke to his wife as if he were a tramp.

The Agents' Herald.

This is a sixteen page monthly paper, published in Philadelphia at 50 cents per year. It is devoted to exposing frauds. The country is pested with advertising frauds, who are continually endeavoring to gull the public. Some of them receive your money and you hear nothing more of it, and others return something almost worthless, while many of them never pay the publisher for their advertising contracts. Then there are numerous newspaper publishers who are continually making gross misrepresentations in regard to the circulation of their publications, in many instances claiming double and treble their actual circulation, thereby defrauding advertisers. The Agents' Herald has a sworn circulation of over 50,000 per month, and has become a terror to evil-doers in the above respect, and a welcome guest on every honest publisher's table.

Euphrasia Cheese Factory.

A meeting of the association was held at the factory on the 7th inst. to receive the report of scales of cheese made and of the division of profits. It was shown that there was received at the factory from May 20th to July 12th 189,890 lbs. of milk, from which was manufactured about 800 boxes of cheese, averaging about 60 lbs to the box. Of this number 290 had been disposed of, and the patrons had divided 28 among themselves. After paying all expences, including manufacturing and insuring, their was a balance of over $1800 to be devide among the patrons, paying them at the rate of 7¼ mills per pound for milk. This is considered very low. The grater part of the cheese was sold as low as 9 and 9½c. per lb., and the expenses were heavier than they will likely be at a future time. There were in the factory manufactured, but not ready for sale, 110 boxes more. The patrons expressed themselves as quiet satisfied with the working of the factory by a unanimous vote to that effect. At the close of the season a full account of the quantity of milk delivered, with the amount of cheese manufactured and prices obtained, will be published for the information of all. J. L. WILSON, Sec.
—Meaford Mirror.

General News.

The first threshing machine built in Tara was turned out of the foundry there two weeks ago.

Mr. A. Proctor, of Aurora, has established a horse training stable in Meaford.

Voting on the Scott Act will, in all probability, take place in some twenty-eight counties in this Province, on or about the 15th of October next.

The two Presbyterian congregations of Mt. Forest are to be united.

Farmers near Teeswater who have threshed their fall wheat, say they have an average of forty-five bushels to the acre.

According to the report of the Ontario Bureau of Industries for August, a good harvest of grain crops throughout the province is assured.

An English authority has decided that it is illegal for a school teacher to detain a pupil after hours for having failed to have his lessons thoroughly; indeed the authority gave it as his opinion that such detention was an assault.

Francis F. Walsh, the oldest registrar in the province, died on Thursday at the age of 95, after serving over seventy-four years as registrar.

THE FIRST WHEAT.—It is a notable fact, says the Winnipeg Times, that the first wheat cut this season in this country was in the district between Moose Jaw and Calgary, which was said to be nothing but a sterile desert. The fine crop of heavy wheat on the C. P. R. experimental farm, 650 miles west of Winnipeg and 10 miles east of Medicine Hat, has passed into the hands of the reapers. Harvesting of the wheat on the other experimental farms will be begun at once.

Canadian apples are reported to be in great demand in England, owing to the failure of the crop there and on the Continent.

Thirty thousand head of cattle were shipped from Montreal to England in the four months ending the 2nd inst., an increase over last year of nearly two thousand.

The heart of a Greenland whale is a yard in diameter.

The musician who notes the Misses is almost sure to miss the notes.

Over 21,000,000 widows in India, and all forbidden to re-marry. Think of that!

Jay Gould's income is $4 a minute A very little time is a good deal of money to him.

The Chicago News objects to the free importation of earthquakes of foreign manufacture.

Greek is abolished in all Chicago public schools by a vote of the Board of Education.

THE Orangeville Advertiser says "About nine thousand excursionists went to Owen Sound" on the recent A. O. U. W. moonlight excursion. Draw it mild brother.

THE official return in the Muskoka election gives Mr. Dill 127 of a majority.

THE Duke of Wellington dropped dead last Wednesday at Brighton, while entering a train

A GREENROOM ROMANCE.

IN THREE SCENES.—SCENE I.

Mr. Percy Montmorency was seated in front of a looking-glass in his dressing-room at the Pantheon Theatre habited in the costume of Charles Surface, with the perruquier in attendance. The name of "Montmorency" was merely a nom de theatre assumed by Harry Stanley when he adopted the somewhat singular resolution of "fretting and strutting his hour" on the boards of a metropolitan theatre; for Mr. Stanley was the only child of his father Colonel Stanley; and consequently heir to that gallant officer's estates in Yorkshire and elsewhere. For the rest, he was three-and-twenty, undeniably good-looking, and endowed with considerable abilities. Having completed the arrangement of the powdered wig, the perruquier withdrew a pace and contemplated the effect with well-simulated admiration. "Mr. Charles Mathews never looked the part better, sir."

The actor seemed to coincide in the opinion of his flattering attendant, for he rose, and surveyed himself in the glass with admiration, which he made no attempt to conceal.

"A good house, Jackson?"

"Capital, sir. But a little cold. They'll warm up when you go on, sir."

"Tell the call-boy I want him, Jackson."

Jackson withdrew; and Montmorency surrendered himself to a mental soliloquy, which assumed somewhat of this form: "I wonder what my father wishes to see me about? The same old story, I suppose—the folly and wickedness of the step I have taken. Well, of one thing, I am certain; I am much better off in my present position than wedded to that Barbadoes girl, Miss Anstruther, in spite of her money-bags, and whom I have never seen."

These reflections were put an end to by the entrance of the call-boy.

"If a gentleman giving the name of Colonel Stanley should call, show him in here."

"He is outside, sir," replied the boy.

"Show him in at once," whereupon there entered a small, wizen faced old gentleman, with snow-white hair, and supporting himself on a stick. Montmorency advanced, shook hands with a great show of cordiality, and placed a chair, on which Colonel Stanley slowly seated himself, gazing around the small apartment with an unfeigned expression of curiosity. "So this is a theatrical dressing-room. You are pretty snug."

The room certainly deserved the encomium of the old colonel. Painting in oils and water colors nearly covered the walls; fancy pipes and cigar-boxes and scent-bottles littered the tables; a case of champagne reposed in one corner, while in the other was a small pile of seltzer water.

The Colonel, after indulging in a sigh, proceeded: "I have called, Harry, before I return to Yorkshire, to make one more appeal to you to give up your present mode of life, settle down as a landed proprietor in your native county, and marry Miss Anstruther."

It was now the turn of the young man to sigh as he replied; "Impossible, my dear sir. I am already wedded—to the stage."

"That may be: but unions can easily be dissolved by a divorce, especially in these days."

"Not where the contracting parties are so attached to each other as I am to my profession. No, sir. If a man could take a wife on a lease, for seven, fourteen, or twenty ore years, the case would be different. But the feeling that my lot in life was fixed—cut and dried so to speak—the matter won't bear a thought." The young man felt strongly inclined to indulge in a stage-walk, but the limited area of the apartment forbade such a physical relief. If the reader should consider the remarks of the actor somewhat flippant, it must be borne in mind that no one whose character did not fall under that definition would have acted as Harry Stanley had done.

The old man scowled as he resumed: "I wonder you can respect yourself, dizened out and painted like a mummer at a pantimime."

"I am of the same calling as the glory of England, Shakspere the actor"—

"And poet—you forgot that, sir—poet, sir," sharply retorted the colonel.

"I can assure you, sir, we have men of good family playing very small parts to-night. Trip took honours at Oxford, and Backbite is a Cambridge man."

"Pray, sir," replied the colonel, "if that be the case, why do you all sail under false colors? Why resign the honoured name of Stanley for the Frenchified one of Montmorency?"

The young man bowed as he responded: "Out of deference to the shallow scruples of the narrow-minded portion of society."

"Of which I constitute a member, eh?"

It was in a more conciliatory tone that his son took up the argument. "Pray, sir, let me ask you a question. Do poets and novelists never adopt a nom de plume? Did not Miss Evans style herself "George Eliot;" the late Governor-general of India, "Owen Meredith;" Mademoiselle de la Ramee, "Ouida;" Dickens, "Boz?"

"That'll do," interrupted the colonel. "Then one fine day you will be falling in love, as you call it, with one of these artful and painted sirens, and I shall find myself grandfather to a clown or a pantaloon! For, of course, you will bring up your offspring to the profession, as you call it, as if there were no other profession in the world."

His son and heir drew himself proudly up as he replied: "No, sir, I trust I shall never forget that I own the honoured name of Stanley."

The colonel remained silent for several moments ere he observed; "I shall never understand why you declined to even see Miss Anstruther."

"Because the very fact that the lady was labelled my future wife," replied the son, "would have caused me to detest her at first sight."

The old colonel rose from his seat. "I can see very plainly that I am wasting both your time and my own—I suppose you will have to do a little 'tumbling' presently?"

"I do not make my entrance till the third act. If you will go in front, you can have my box." Montmorency rang the bell as he spoke, and when the call-boy appeared, directed him to show his visitor into box A.

The actor was indulging in a sigh of relief, when a head appeared at the half-closed door, and a voice exclaimed: "May I come in?"

Montmorency bounded from his chair as he seized hold of the extended hand and drew the owner into the room. The new-comer was a young man of about the same age as the actor, and was habited in modern evening dress. Montmorency wrung the hand of his friend Vallance, and forced him into a seat. "Delighted to see you, Jack! Have a weed and a seltzer?"

In a few seconds the two young men were similarly occupied, and immersed in the consumption of a couple of choice Partagas.

The actor opened the ball. "You must have met an elderly party in the passage. That was the governor. He is very irate because I won't fall in love at the word of command, and marry Miss Anstruther, whom I have never seen.—By-the-bye, you have seen her. What is she like?"

"A lovely girl," replied Vallance. "I met her at a ball at Scarborough, soon after her arrival from the West Indies, Faith, Harry, you might do worse."

"And might do better; eh, Jack? But your ideas of beauty are so opposite to mine as I remember of old. Now, if you wish to see a perfect vision of loveliness, go in front and see Fonblanque, the Lady Teazle of to-night."

"You mean Miss Fonblanque, I persume?"

"Exactly. The prefix "Miss" is frequently omitted in theatrical parlance. She is bewitching."

Vallance shakes his head. "Have a care, Harry. It would be a pity if you allied yourself with some unknown adventuress, after refusing the rich Miss Anstruther."

"Well, to be candid, Jack, I am afraid of myself. If I did not constantly call to my mind the fact that I am a Stanley, I should speedily succumb to the charms of the divine Fonblanque, so there is some benefit arising from birth after all."

"And how long do you mean to pursue this mad freak of yours?" inquired Vallance,

"Till I hear on goad authority that the troublesome Miss Anstruther is engaged, or married."

"And then?"

"Why, then I quit the mimic stage as suddenly as I entered upon it."

"Meanwhile?" ejaculated Vallance with an incredulous smile.

"Meanwhile," replied Montmorency, loftily, "I contribute to the 'gaiety of nations," as Johnson said of Garrick; and therefore consider myself a far better member of society than a successful general who has killed so many hundreds of his fellow-mortals; or a lawyer, who has set whole families by the ears in order to fill his pockets; or a doctor, who, as Tobin says, spends the greater part of his time in writing death-warrants in Latin."

Vallance examined his finger nails for a few seconds, and after an embarrasing pause, said: "Harry, I am about to make a confession."

"I cannot promise you absolution, Jack."

Vallance proceeded: "On the memorable night when I first beheld Miss Anstruther at the ball at Scarborough, I fell over head and ears in love with her."

"You fell in love with her, did you," repeated Montmorency, in a tone of some annoyance. "You mean with her banking account. Remember, you are in the confession box."

"On my honour, no!" replied Vallance. "As you are aware, I could not afford to marry a penniless girl; but if I were as rich as Rothschild, and Miss Anstruther a pauper, I would marry her to-morrow, if she would have me—You do not seem to like the idea?"

"Humanity is a strange compound, Jack. It grates upon my senses of propriety that any else should step into my shoes and wed the woman intended for my wife, yet whom I have vowed never to marry."

"Why, what a dog in the manger, you are!"

"I would not mind so much if a stranger were to win the heiress; but to know her as your wife, Jack, for the remainder of my existence, to repent probably for my obstinacy—You are not in earnest, Jack?"

"Ah, but I am!" replied Vallance, inwardly murmuring: "May I be forgiven the lie."

After a brief mental struggle, Montmorency continued: Well, success attend you. You are a lucky fellow to walk off with such a prize; while I shall remain a humble stage player."

"Remember the peerless Fonblanque, Harry."

"Ah! you right. There is beauty, talent, wit, elegance, refinement, all enshrined in the admirable Lady Teazle of to-night. I shall no longer hold back. To-night I shall know my fate. You have applied the touchstone."

The shrill voice of the call-boy now uttered the words "Charles Surface."

"There is my call So adieu for the present. Go in front, and call for me at the end of the show; and we will have a steak at the Albion together, and drink to the speedy nuptials of my bete noir, Miss Anstruther."

"With whom?"

"Any one! I care not—no offence, Jack—so I am free."

Vallance proceeded straight to box A, and having tapped at the door, found himself face to face with Colonel Stanley, who eagerly exclaimed: "Well, Vallance has my plan suceeded?"

"I fear not, sir."

"Give him a second dose the first opportunity. I never knew it to fail. If you want to make a man fall in love with a particular woman, tell him she is half engaged, and she will instantly go up twenty per cent. in his estimation. That is how I came to marry his mother. Directly my father told me that Fred Spencer was mad after her, and that she was half inclined to marry him, I rushed to the attack, stormed the fortress, and carried off the prize! I wasn't going to let that puppy march off with her. A fellow with not a tithe of my personal recommendations." Here the colonel paused, as he beheld the countenance of his auditor completely engrossed with the scene; for in the lovely Lady Teazle of the play Jack Vallance recognized the West Indian heiress, Emily Anstruther!

SCENE II.

Along one of the tortuous passages leading to the dressing room, a gentleman is conducting a lady, preceded by the dresser. They have evidently come from the audience part of the theatre, as they are both in modern evening dress. Presently the dresser pauses at a door, and after tapping, enters; and returns to invite the lady to invade the sacred pricints of the dressing-room of Miss Fonblanque, the representative of Lady Teazle. After a few whispered words to her escort, the lady accepts the invitation, and in another moment is clasped in the embrace of the actress. "My dear Julia!"

"My da ling Emily!"

Certainly, Lady Teazle fully deserved the rapturous praises of Montmorency. Her lovely dark eyes shone all the brighter from the contrast to the powdered wig; while her splendid figure was desplayed to the utmost advantage by means of her handsome brocaded dress.

"And so you recognised me under these disguises, Julia?"

"Your voice is unmistakable. I should have known it anywhere, Emily. When do you intend to return to your own sphere?"

"First tell me, Julia, how you managed to penetrate these sacred precincts?"

"Oh! my husband, who knows everybody, said he could at once accomplish it, directly I told him you were my old school-fellow at Barbadoes.—Now answer me my question, there's a dear!"

"I have found my proper sphere; I am free, popular, and admired. Instead of one admirer, I have hundreds, and the number is increasing nightly. What can woman wish for more?"

"I'll tell you, Emily; a nice husband, and domesticbliss."

The actress indulged in a scarcely audible sigh. "That might have been my lot. I mean the domestic bliss part of the affair, if I had not had it dinned into my ears from morning till night that there was only one road to happiness—a union with Mr. Stanley, whom I have never seen."

"You might have liked him very much."

"Impossible, my dear Julia. The very fact of a man being ticketed like a prize animal at a show, and then his being introduced to you as your certain and future husband, would be quite sufficient to make me detest him.—No, Julia; when I marry, I will myself make the selection, and he must be one who is ignorant that his intended is a rich heiress."

"That will not be a very easy matter to accomplish, Emily."

"Listen, Julia, and I'll tell you a secret. There is a young man acting in this company—a Mr. Percy Montmorency. He is all I could wish—handsome, clever, accomplished, and vastly agreeable."

"Then you have made your selection?"

"Not so, Julia. His profession renders our union impossible. He may be heir to a peerage; he may be a lawyer's clerk. There is the most delightful mystery as to our antecedents, we play actors! For instance, who would suppose that I was the rich West Indian heiress, who utilized her amateur theatrical talents, and adopted her present profession? And all in order to escape being pestered into an unwelcome and distasteful marriage. Heigh-ho! I wish I had never seen this captivating fellow.'

Mrs. Sydney sighed as she rejoined: "Ah, Emily, there is the danger of your present mode of life. Before you know where you are, finding yourself over head and ears in love with some handsome fellow, even of whose very name you are ignorant. As to the position in society of his progenitors, that is a point which would require the research of the Society of Antiquaries."

The actress looked solemnly in the face of her friend, and taking both her hands within her own, replied: "Julia, there is a fascination in the life of a successful actress, of which you can form no conception. There is the delight of selecting the costume you are to wear on the eventful evening. No trifle to a woman, as you will admit. Then there is the actual pleasure of wearing it, not for the sake of some half-dozen friends, whose envy in consequence is a poor reward, but the object of admiration to hundreds of spectators nightly! Then, instead of monotonous domesticity, executing crewel-work to the accompaniment of the snoring in an armchair of a bored husband, we have the nightly welcome from a thousand pair of hands, and the final call before the curtain amidst an avalanche of flowers! Your name on every tongue, your photo, in every print-shop in London, and your acts and deeds the subject of conversation at every dinner-table in the metropolis!"

Mrs. Sydney shook her head with a melancholy smile as the actress finished her oration. "I am still unconverted, Emily.'

"Quite right, Julia. If we were all actresses there would be no audiences!"

The inexorable call-boy here put a compulsory finish to the interview between the two friends, with the words "Lady Teazle."

SCENE III.

Montmorency was seated in the green-room at the conclusion of the play, engaged in that absent train of thought known as a brown study. The more he saw of the fascinating Fonblanque, the more he was captivated. Every hour spent in her society but served to rivet more closely the chain which bound him to her. Should he condescend and make her an offer of his hand, she would naturally be influenced by a profound sense of gratitude, when she discovered that she had married a man of fortune and a Stanley! Whereas, if he had married the rich Miss Anstruther, he would have had money bags perpetually thrown in his face. A silver-toned utterance fell on his ears. Looking up, he beheld the subject of his cogitations.

"Allow me to congratulate you, Mr. Montmorency, on your Charles Surface this evening. A double call before the curtain, and well deserved."

"You are pleased to flatter me. The plaudits of the house to-night render any praise on my part of your Lady Teazle unnecessary. I regret that I am fated to lose so charming a compatriot."

Was it fancy that Montmorency imagined he detected a paler tint on the cheek of the actress, as she replied: "You are not going to leave us?"

"I fear so."

"Wherefore?"

"You are the last person to whom I can confide the cause of my sudden departure,"

Lady Teazle cast down her lovely eyes for a brief space, and then, in a voice in which the smallest possible tremolo was perceptable, whispered: "Are you not happy here?"

"I fear, too much so," sighed Montmorency. "I have been living in a fool's paradise lately."

"How? In what way, Mr Montmorency?"

"I am in love.—You start. You do not believe in an actor, who is always simulating affection, ever falling under the influence of a real and veritable passion?"

"You wrong me; indeed, you do. The artistic nature is, and must be, more acutely sensitive than that possessed by ordinary mortals. Do I know the lady?"

"You see her every day—when you contemplate those charming features in the glass. Yes; it is you, Miss Fonblanque whom I love, whom I adore!"

How can we describe the flood of sensations which agitated the bosom of the heiress, as she listened to the avowal of affection from the lips of the only man she ever loved! In low and trembling tones, she managed to reply: "Mr. Montmorency, you are not rehearsing a scene in some new comedy?"

"I never was more serious in my life."

By this time the pride of the Anstruthers had come to the assistance of the heiress. "I grieve very much that I cannot accept your offer. It is impossible."

"Impossible! Why?"

"That I cannot explain."

"We are both members of the same profession, and so far equal."

'Pardon me," said Lady Teazle "You know nothing of my antecedents, and"—

"And you know nothing of mine, you would say. Charming equality! Say, Miss Fonblanque, may I hope?"

It was now the turn of the actress to sigh. "It would be cruel to raise hopes which can never be realized."

Montmorency let fall the hand which in his ardour he had seized, and drew himself proudly up. "That is your fixed answer?"

"It is."

Montmorency once more took possession of her taper fingers, and raising them to his lips, uttered the word "Farewell!" and hastily left the green-room.

The dark melting eyes of the heiress gazed after his retreating figure, and large drops of moisture gathered in them. "I have half a mind to call him back," she mentally whispered.—"No! I must remember I am an Anstruther."

Sinking on a couch, Lady Teazle felt her brain going around: then presently raising her eyes, she beheld—Mr. Vallance.

"Have I not the honour of speaking to Miss Anstruther?"

"Since you recognise me, it would be affectation to deny my identity. Mr. Vallance, may I ask you to preserve my secret?"

"From all save one individual—Mr. Montmorency. Surely you knew that in the Charles Surface of this evening you beheld your rejected lover, Mr. Stanley?"

A film came slowly over the eyes of Miss Anstruther. "You are not joking, Mr. Vallance?"

"The matter is too serious for jesting. But I will break a confidence. He loves you. He told me so half an hour ago."

The heiress could scarcely forbear a smile, as she reflected that her ears had drank in the soft confession only five minutes ago. "Mr. Vallance will you do me a favor? Will you ask Mr. Stanley to step here for a few minutes? But remember, you must on no account reveal my identity."

"You may rely on me, Miss Anstruther. I do not know what steps you mean to adopt; but there is no time to lose, for old Colonel Stanley is in front, and will, if he has recognised you, at once inform his son."

"That is my fear; so haste."

Almost before the heiress could mature her plans the rejected one appeared before her. He was very grave, and bowed with an air of deep humility, as the actress thus addressed him: "Mr. Vallance and I are old acquaintances, so I commissioned him to ask you to return for a short time. I feel very anxious about our scenes in the Hunchback to-morrow. Would you mind running through the Modus and Helen scene. I mean the second one."

Montmorency bowed. "With pleasure."

It would have been a lesson for half the actresses on the stage, could they have beheld the manner in which the saucy coquette of the play coaxed her lover, lured him on, facsinated him, and enveloped him in such a spell of witcheries, that no Modus that ever breathed could have been proof against her seductive wiles. The scene came to an unexpected termintion, for Montmorency suddenly caught her in his arms, and as he held her clasped tight to his breast, exclaimed in rapid and excited tones: "This is not acting! If it be, you are the greatest actress that ever trod the boards. You love me! I see it in your sparkling eye; I read it in your blushing cheek! Say, am I not right?"

Emily Anstruther remained perfectly passive in the arms of Harry Stanley, as she murmured "Yes."

The enraptured couple were so completely absorbed in reading love in each other's eyes that they had not observed the entrance of two gentlemen, Colonel Stanley and Mr. Vallance.

The old colonel was the first to speak. "Speak, sir! Is this a scene from a play?"

By this time the heiress had left the sweet anchorage of her lover's arms, and advancing to the old man, said: "Do you not recognise your godchild, Emily Anstruther?"

But surprise had taken away the power of speech from the colonel.

His son interposed. "I trust Miss Anstruther will acquit me of any guilty knowledge of this fact—will believe that I believed she was merely Miss Fonblanque the actress."

Emily Anstruther here cast down her eyes, while a deep blush mantled over her face and neck. "I am afraid I am not equally innocent; for Mr. Vallance informed me that I had refused my hated lover. But I have enough confidence in his love for me, to hope for his belief in my unselfish love for him."

"So you see, dad," exclaimed the younger Stanley, "Love not only rules the court, the camp, the grove, as the poet says, but does not disdain to flutter his wings in the green-room."

Love of Home.

The most appreciable quality of the British people is their love for home. I place the love of home as the very base of national life. Surely there is no bond more consoant with true happiness than that which binds together the members of a family. There is nothing so congenial, so pleasing and satisfying as home, for it is the abode of love, free and unconstrained; it clusters around itself sweet associations with loving and loved faces during a long series of years of sweet companionship; it is the museum par excellence where a thousand things, each with a history and pedigree of its own, are arranged with equisite taste by loving hands—altogether a perpetual solace to heart and mind. And it is at home, in the midst of peace and quietness, that the best work is conceived and executed. Let no sentimental hobby or crude political theories destroy the united action of every member of the household. Married women may now exercise a right over their separate property. They will wield the right at a great cost if at the expense of mutual distrust and lessened co-operation between husband and wife.

Some Historical Jokes.

"A mule is a mule but a woman is a mulier." This joke is supposed to have been brought up from India by the earlier Pelasgian settlers of Italy. Tetrarchus Periconinus, in his annals relates that Cæsar while pausing at the brink of the Rubicon, in an effort to budge a baggage mule, embraced its foreleg against a Doric temple, was approached by one of his officers, Tedius Sempronius, who remarked that his wife was even more difficult to move than the aforesaid obstinate animal. Cæsar, after curtly rejoined, "Omnis Gallia divisa in partes tres," bade Tedius declare himself, whereupon the latter said that while a mule was a mule, yet his wife was mulier. Cæsar, upon hearing this remark, mounted his horse and made a dash for the other bank. So passed away the liberties of Rome. Tedius Sempronius was subsequently put to death on the first proscription, after having got off the joke on Marc Antony. The specific charge against him was an attempt to revive the humour of the Tarquins.

William Rufus was tarrying one day at Winchester, during the summer of 1088, when he was approached by his Lord Chancellor, who suggested that inasmuch as the King was a young bachelor the ladies of the court naturally expected more attention than they had received during the preceding reign. "By St. Simon the Cellarer," exclaimed the King, "they shall never say I value them not. Largess is thine, me lud, if thou devise a scheme for their entertainment, for I am busy with the cares of State." "Ice-cream," suggested the Chancellor. "Too high," rejoined the economical King, pointing to a neighboring confectioner's sign, "$1.50 per gal." The Chancellor resigned in disgust.

When Alexander paused before the walls of Tyre, Delessepsius, his engineer reported that the city was impregnable. All attempts to break down the walls would be but a waste of time, and an assault would cause terrible effusion of blood. Alexander smilingly replied that while a battering-ram might fail, a goat would probably answer. "Bring up a goat or the butter we had last night; either is a strong butter," he musingly answered. The people of Tyre, who were on the walls of their city, immediately got down and left on the other side.

Gladstone and his Wife.

We are always curious to know something of the domestic life of great men, and wish to know if the wife has had any part in the husband's success. It is always said that Mrs. Gladstone has been a helpmeet indeed, and one would be led to this opinion from the sweet, wifely, motherly expression of her countenance. Mrs. Gladstone does not look older than an American lady does at 50. Her hair is almost black and her face is almost free from lines and wrinkles. English woman of the last generation dresses hideously, and the majority of the present generation do. And Mrs. Gladstone, in respect of dress, belongs to both past and the present. She always looks dowdy. One can not get over the feeling when seeing her that she is of bourgeois origin. If one did not know her, one would assume that she belonged to what is called the "shop keeping class." When she came into the chapel on Sunday she was really a curiosity. Her face is uncommonly sweet and spiritual. Her smile tells the story of a true and gentle heart. But—— Why should any lady dress so barbarously? The puffed-out hair, and big, ill-shaped bonnet, with the old-fashioned spotted veil; a long, rather rusty velvet cloak, with wide fur-trimmings and ungloved hands did not seem suitable to the face. During the services, when Mrs. Gladstone removed the cloak, she put on a light, coarsely-knitted worsted shawl, and then to me, the picture of odds and ends seemed compleate.

But to Mr. Gladstone, I was pained to see him. He shuffled into the chapel and into his pew with a quick, nervous, ill-regulated step that indicated strength of will trying to overcome weekness of limb. He looked two inches shorter than he did four years ago. His face is full of crows' feet. Lines and wrinkles run in every direction upon it, and if he were 100 years old his face could not be more wizen and worn. The withered, pinched face, with its great, penetrating, restless eyes, was almost weird. I sat immediately facing the prime minister, and within ten feet of him, and I must say—I am bound to say—that his presence pained me all the while I was in the chapel. He is a man with a great trouble on his mind, or else no face in this world ever told the story of trouble. When he closed his eyes in prayer—and I peeped several times to see—there was almost an agony on his countenance. He was so uneasy and restless when standing up, so fidgety with the books and his fan that it was deeply painful to see him.

Recklessness of the British.

There is considerable recklessness in the character of the British people, and its effects are seen in early marriages, in trade and finance, at sea and land, in the mine and the factory. What are the oft-recurring commercial crisis but the rebounds of a reckless neglect of rules of prudence and wisdom! Whence the many accidents on the railways and the heavy losses at sea but the result of wanton negligence of danger! It is not only the owner of the mine that neglects opening proper shafts, but the miner himself, that will light his candle or pipe in the midst of fire-damp. It is not the ship-owner only that will send unworthy, overladen, and under-manned ships to sea, but the captain and seamen, who will encounter any peril in order to shorten the passage by so many hours or days. If boldness be a virtue, recklessness is a vice; if bravely be commendable, rashness is a crime. In 1882, 15,350 deaths arose from violent causes in mines, from vehicles, from machinery, from weapons, from falls, from burns, from explosions, from weather agencies, from drowning and suffocation, and from poison and other causes, many of them the simple result of recklessness. No other country exhibits such a catlogue of violent deaths. True, they have not the same quantity of mines, nor the same milage of railways, nor the same tonnage of shipping; yet the proportion of losses is greater here than anywhere. Now, the acquisition of wealth by gambling and recklessness is vicious and criminal. Wealth, says Weyland, is not acquired, as many persons supposed, by fortunate speculations and splendid enterprises, but by the daily practice of industry, fragality, and economy. He who relies upon these means will rarely be found destitute, and he who relies upon any other will generally become bankrapt.

AGRICULTURAL.

Fall Fallowing.

It is singular a farming process be so little understood and practis[ed] is so thoroughly efficient in ridd[ing] all pernicious weeds, and which so [...] fits it for the production of a p[...] farm crop, and especially is this [...] the fall-fallowing succeeds the cu[...] the grass on meadow land.

By fall-fallowing, I mean plowing [...] or August, and from that time for[th] the surface so well cultivated as to [...] weeds that vegetate, and to keep [...] fresh seeds within vegetation dist[...] the surface. This, with the warm [...] and the "latter rains," causes ne[...] weed seeds within four or five inche[s of the] surface to grow, and destroys the p[...]

Few weeds ripen their seeds bef[ore] proper haying time, and after they [are cut] off and removed in the hay, very fe[w] make sufficient growth to blossom a[nd mat]ure seeds before the middle or [...] August; at or before which time the [...] should be plowed, care being taken [...] that every green thing is turned und[er and] covered with soil. Even though a [...] sufficiently matured, so that if the pl[ant be] cut and left to dry on the surface, it [would] germinate by being covered together [...] the mass of succulent growth and the [...] the fermentation that takes place wi[ll des]troy its vitality and cause it to deca[y with] the rest.

In case of the summer-fallow, we h[ave to] plow early and plow several times, b[esides] the very many harrowings and cultiva[tions], taking the whole Summer and involv[ing the] loss of one crop and great labor; bu[t with] the fall-fallow, we first get our hay cro[p and] then plow only once, and have no [...] labor with harrow and cultivator th[an for] the same length of time with the sum[mer] fallow. No process can be so perfect[ly de]structive to perennial weeds; by cu[tting] the hay early, the weeds are cut b[efore] maturity, and most growth of top [...] that time only serves to exhaust the vi[tality] of the roots; if then taken off, but [...] growth is afterwards made, and the s[ubse]quent plowing and continuous cultiv[ation] are sure destruction to all. Fall fallo[wing] not only cleans the land, but it enriche[s it] by allowing the clover to attain full [...] the largest root growth is secured, and [...] short time after haying, if not pastured [(as] it should not be), in favorable seaso[ns a] large second growth is secured to be tu[rned] under and this is in the best possible [con]dition for decaying and enriching the [soil,] and when plowed up in the Spring, it f[orms] the best of all preparations for a pa[...] crop of barley, oats or early potatoes.

It is surprising how prone men a[re to] persist in the old-fogey, expensive, soil-[ex]hausting system of summer-fallowing w[hen] a way so much quicker and better exist[s for] cleaning the land.

Ants as Insect Destroyers.

Farmers or gardeners, in their contest w[ith] insects, have not as yet called to their [aid,] as they should, other insects and birds, [the] natural enemies of insect hordes, says [...] Sun. Too generally all insects are loo[ked] upon as enemies, although it is well kno[wn] that many kinds of insects are very ben[efi]cial in protecting fruits and grains from [the] ravages of other insects. The ants, [al]though generally regarded as an unmitig[at]ed nuisance, have been found, by care[ful] observation, to be useful in several wa[ys.] The canker-worms, which are a most [de]structive pest to orchards in some sectio[ns,] are sometimes destroyed in large numb[ers] by them. The editor of the Boston Jour[nal] of Chemistry says that ants are great [de]stroyers of canker-worms, and probab[ly of] other worms or insects of the smaller va[ri]eties. He watched with great interest t[he] work of a large colony of black ants whi[ch] attacked the canker-worms on an elm t[ree] in his grounds a few weeks ago, and w[as] delighted with the nature and results [of] their labors. Two processions of the an[ts] were moving on the trunk of the tree, o[ne] going up empty, the other coming dow[n,] each bringing with him a canker-wor[m] which he held fast in his mandibles, gras[p]ing the worm firmly in the centre of t[he] body. Although the prey was nearly t[wice the] size of the destroyer, the plucky little a[nt] ran down the tree in a lively way, deposit[ed] its booty in its nest in the ground, and i[n]stantly returned for another slaughte[r.] There were at one time as many as 40 con[...]ing down the tree, each bringing along h[is] victim, and doing the work with apparen[t] ease. Extending his observations, he noti[c]ed that the ants ran up the trunk and o[ut] on the limbs, thence onto the leaves of th[e] tree where the filthy worm was at work and seizing him with a strong grip at about the centre of the body, turned about with the squirming worm and retraced his steps. The worm was dead by the time the ant reached the ground. If this move of the ants is common they must prove valuable friends to farmers and fruit raisers, and should be protected in every way possible. We do not believe that the birds that prey upon worms will do the work in our orchards, which these ants were doing in an hour.

Sowing Orchard Grass.

Those farmers who desire to seed to Orchard Grass should prepare the land for the reception of the seed, which should be sown early in August. The land should be thoroughly well prepared, because this crop not only requires it, but well deserves it, remaining in the ground, as it does, for 20 or 30 years, or even more, when well treated by occasional top-dressings. The soil should be made fine by repeated harrowings. The seed is then sown and cross-sown, half each way, to get an even sowing, and the ground is then lightly brush-harrowed, and then rolled. The rolling is especially needed if the weather is dry. From two to three bushels of seed—about 33 pounds—are sown per acre. As the seed is rather costly, it is well to sow an acre or two first, cut this the next year when it is ripe, and save the seed. One acre will produce enough to sow 10 acres.

Timely Hints.

Plow for winter wheat at once.

Yes, it is bad policy this season to let the garden go to——grass!

We must not let cucumbers ripen if we would not ruin the crop from the vines which feed them.

It pays to pinch off the tips of Lima bean vines when they reach nearly to the tops of the poles. Pinch off the ends of melon mule is a mule but a woman is a mul. This joke is supposed to have been ght up from India by the earlier settlers of Italy. Tetrarchus Periond in his annals relates that Cæsar ng at the brink of the Rubicon to budge ... mule ... d its fore ... against ... temple was approached by one of his s, Tedius Sempronius, who remarked is wife was even more difficult ... than the aforesaid obstinate animal, after curtly rejoined, "Omnia Gallia visa in partes tres," bade Tedius de imself, whereupon the latter said that a mule was a mule, yet his wife was . Cæsar, upon hearing this remark, ed his horse and made a dash for the bank. So passed away the liberties me. Tedius Sempronius was subse y put to death on the first proscrip fter having got off the joke on Mac An The specific charge against him was mpt to revive the humour of the Tar.

Some Historical Jokes.

iam Rufus was tarrying one day at ester, during the summer of 1088, e was approached by his Lord Chan who suggested that inasmuch as the as a young bachelor the ladies of the aturally expected more attention than d received during the preceding reign Simon the Cellarer," exclaimed the "they shall never say I value them argess is thine, me lud, if thou de cheme for their entertainment, for I y with the cares of State." "Ice suggested the Chancellor. "Too rejoined the economical King, point a neighboring confectioner's sign, per gal." The Chancellor resigned st.

Alexander paused before the walls Delessepsius, his engineer reported city was impregnable. All attempts k down the walls would be aste of time, and an assault would rrible effusion of blood. Alexander y replied that while a battering-ram il, a goat would probably answer. up a goat or the butter we had last either is a strong butter," he musing ered. The peopleof Tyre, who were alls of their city, immediately got d left on the other side.

Gladstone and his Wife.

e always curious to know something mestic life of great men, and wish if the wife has had any part in the s success. It is always said that dstone has been a helpmeet indeed, would be led to this opinion from , wifely, motherly expression of tenance. Mrs. Gladstone does not r than an American lady does at 50. is almost black and her face is all from lines and wrinkles. English f the last generation dresses hide d the majority of the present gen o. And Mrs. Gladstone, in respect elongs to both past and the present, s looks dowdy. One can not get eeling when seeing her that she is of origin, If one did not know her, d assume that she belonged to called the "shop keeping class." came into the chapel on Sunday ally a curiosity. Her face is un sweet and spiritual. Her smile tory of a true and gentle heart. Why should any lady dress so y? The puffed-out hair, and big bonnet, with the old-fashioned eil; a long, rather rusty velvet h wide fur-trimmings and un ds did not seem suitable to the ing the services, when Mrs. Glad ved the cloak, she put on a light, nitted worsted shawl, and then to cture of odds and ends seemed

Ir. Gladstone, I was pained to He shuffled into the chapel and w with a quick, nervous, ill-re p that indicated strength of will vercome weakness of limb. He inches shorter than he did four His face is full of crows' feet, wrinkles run in every direction d if he were 100 years old his face be more wizen and worn. The pinched face, with its great, pen stless eyes, was almost weird. diately facing the prime minister, ten feet of him, and I must say— to say—that his presence pained while I was in the chapel. He is a great trouble on his mind, or in this world ever told the story When he closed his eyes in pray eped several times to see—there an agony on his countenance. neasy and restless when stand igety with the books and his vas deeply painful to see him.

lessness of the British.

nsiderable recklessness in the the British people, and its n in early marriages, in trade at sea and land, in the mine and What are the oft-recurring risis but the rebounds of a reck of rules of prudence and wis ce the many accidents on the the heavy losses [at sea but the ton negligence of danger? It he owner of the mine that ne g proper shafts, but the miner will light his candle or pipe in fire-damp. It is not the ship hat will send unworthy, over der-manned ships to sea, but d seamen, who will encounter rder to shorten the passage by s or days. If boldness be a sness is a vice; if bravely be , rashness is a crime. In 1882, arose from violent causes in ehicles, from machinery, from falls, from burns, from ex weather agencies, from drown ocation, and from poison and many of them the simple re ness. No other country ex tlogue of violent deaths. True, the same quantity of mines, milage of railways, nor the of shipping; yet the propor greater here than anywhere uisition of wealth by gambling ess is vicious and criminal. Weyland, is not acquired, as supposed, by fortunate spec lendid enterprises, but by the of industry, fragality, and who relies upon these means found destitute, and he who other will generally become

AGRICULTURAL.

Fall Fallowing.

It is singular a farming process should be so little understood and practised, that is so thoroughly efficient in ridding land of all pernicious weeds, and which so perfectly fits it for the production of a profitable spring crop, and especially is this true if the fall-fallowing succeeds the cutting of the grass on meadow land.

By fall-fallowing, I mean plowing in July or August, and from that time forth keeping the surface so well cultivated as to kill all weeds that vegetate, and to keep bringing fresh seeds within vegetation distance of the surface. This, with the warm weather and the "latter rains," causes nearly all weed seeds within four or five inches of the surface to grow, and destroys the product.

Few weeds ripen their seeds before the proper haying time, and after they are cut off and removed in the hay, very few will make sufficient growth to blossom and manure seeds before the middle or last of August; at or before which time the ground should be plowed, care being taken to see that every green thing is turned under and covered with soil. Even though a seed be sufficiently matured so that if the plant be cut and left to dry on the surface, it would germinate by being covered together with the mass of succulent growth and the roots, the fermentation that takes place will destroy its vitality and cause it to decay with the rest.

In case of the summer-fallow, we have to plow early and plow several times, besides the very many harrowings and cultivatings, taking the whole Summer and involving a loss of one crop and great labor; but with the fall-fallow, we first get our hay crop and then plow only once, and have no more labor with harrow and cultivator than in the same length of time with the summer-fallow. No process can be so perfectly destructive to perennial weeds; by cutting the hay early, the weeds are cut before maturity, and most growth of top up to that time only serves to exhaust the vitality of the roots; if then taken off, but feeble growth is afterwards made, and the subsequent plowing and continuous cultivation are sure destruction to all. Fall fallowing not only cleans the land, but it enriches it; by allowing the clover to attain full size, the largest root growth is secured, and in a short time after haying, if not pastured (and it should not be), in favorable seasons a large second growth is secured to be turned under and this is in the best possible condition for decaying and enriching the soil, and when plowed up in the Spring, it forms the best of all preparations for a paying crop of barley, oats or early potatoes.

It is surprising how prone men are to persist in the old-fogey, expensive, soil-exhausting system of summer-fallowing when a way so much quicker and better exists for cleaning the land.

Ants as Insect Destroyers.

Farmers or gardeners, in their contest with insects, have not as yet called to their aid, as they should, other insects and birds, the natural enemies of insect hordes, says the Sun. Too generally all insects are looked upon as enemies, although it is well known that many kinds of insects are very beneficial in protecting fruits and grains from the ravages of other insects. The ants, although generally regarded as an unmitigated nuisance, have been found, by careful observation, to be useful in several ways. The canker-worms, which are a most destructive pest to orchards in some sections, are sometimes destroyed in large numbers by them. The editor of the Boston Journal of Chemistry says that ants are great destroyers of canker-worms, and probably other worms or insects of the smaller varieties. He watched with great interest the work of a large colony of black ants which attacked the canker-worms on an elm tree in his grounds a few weeks ago, and was delighted with the nature and results of their labors. Two processions of the ants were moving on the trunk of the tree, one going up empty, the other coming down, each bringing with him a canker-worm, which he held fast in his mandibles, grasping the worm firmly in the centre of the body. Although the prey was nearly the size of the destroyer, the plucky little ant ran down the tree in a lively way, deposited its booty in its nest in the ground, and instantly returned for another slaughter. There were at one time as many as 40 coming down the tree, each bringing along his victim, and doing the work with apparent ease. Extending his observations, he noticed that the ants ran up the trunk and out on the limbs, thence onto the leaves of the tree where the filthy worm was at work and, seizing him with a strong grip at about the centre of the body, turned about with the squirming worm and retraced his steps. The worm was dead by the time the ant reached the ground. If this move of the ants is common they must prove valuable friends to farmers and fruit raisers, and should be protected in every way possible. We do not believe that the birds that prey upon worms will do the work in our orchards, which these ants were doing in an hour.

Sowing Orchard Grass.

Those farmers who desire to seed to Orchard Grass should prepare the land for the reception of the seed, which should be sown early in August. The land should be thoroughly well prepared, because this crop not only requires it, but well deserves it, remaining in the ground, as it does, for 20 or 30 years, or even more, when well treated by occasional top-dressings. The soil should be made fine by repeated harrowings. The seed is then sown and cross-sown, half each way, to get an even sowing, and the ground is then lightly brush-harrowed, and then rolled. The rolling is especially needed if the weather is dry. From two to three bushels of seed—about 33 pounds—are sown per acre. As the seed is rather costly, it is well to sow an acre or two first, cut this the next year when it is ripe, and save the seed. One acre will produce enough to sow 10 acres.

Timely Hints.

Plow for winter wheat at once.

Yes, it is bad policy this season to let the garden go to——grass!

We must not let cucumbers ripen if we would not ruin the crop from the vines which feed them.

It pays to pinch off the tips of Lima bean vines when they reach nearly to the tops of the poles. Pinch off the ends of melon vines. Move the vines of sweet potatoes so they will not take root.

There is room for a live young man in every neighborhood, who knows how to deal with the insect pests of the farm.

The Arb compels his horse to feed from the ground in order to maintain the curve of the backbone. This is the natural way of feeding, and is an argument for low mangers.

Sow Rutabagas——It does not pay to stake tomatoes——Prepare new strawberry beds and set the plants as soon as you choose. Raw bone flour is a good fertilizer; but the soil should be mellowed with old farm manure.

Cultivate between the raspberries. Now is the time to rid the land of weeds and suckers. Tie up the new canes to stakes securely set. Pinch off the main canes and laterals so as to induce a stocky growth. Do the same for blackberries.

Uncle Waldo is of the opinion that wire is a cheap material for fence, as it enables the farmer to use crooked posts, and also to set them at a larger distance apart than can be done when boards are used. But he is afraid to use or recommend barb wire to much extent, as there is great danger to stock, especially horses, from its use. Within the past three months two of the 12 members of the farmer's club to which he belongs have had horses injured on it.

Larger fields and cheaper fences, says Uncle Waldo, in the N. Y. Tribune. He affirms that at least one-half of the best plow and on every farm could be profitably thrown in one field and never pastured——There are thousands of farmers, he thinks, who have planted largely of hedge, who would be willing to lose the whole of it if they could burn it up; but the digging out of an old hedge involves nearly as much expense as making a new fence. He has had 32 years' experience with Osage Orange hedge, and finds it so troublesome to care for, that he would not allow a man to plant another on his farm if he would do it for nothing and care for it till it would turn stock.

One Explanation of the Horse-Shoe Superstition.

The principal gateway at Allahabad is thickly studded with horseshoes of every size and make. There are hundreds of them nailed all over the great gates, doubtless the offerings of many a wayfarer who has long since finished his earthly pilgrimage. We could not find out what was the exact idea connected with this custom—probably much the same notion of luck as we attach to finding a horseshoe, especially one with the old nails still in their places. It has been suggested, and apparently with some reason, that in ancient pagan times it may have been a recognized symbol in serpent worship, and hence may have arisen its common use against all manner of evil. The resemblance is obvious, more especially to that species of harmless snake which is rounded at both ends, so that head and tail are apparently just alike. The creature moves backward or forward at pleasure, hence the old belief that it actually had two heads, and was indestructible, as even when cut into two parts it was supposed that the divided heads would seek one another and reunite. It stands to reason that in a snake-worshiping community such a creature would be held in high reverence. Even in Scotland various snake like bracelets and ornaments have been found, which seems to favor this theory, and at a very early period both snakes and horseshoes seem to have been engraved as symbols on sacred stones. We hear of the latter having been sculptured, not only on the threshold of old London houses, but even on that of ancient churches in various parts of Great Britain. And in the present day we all know the idea of luck connected with finding one, and how constantly they are nailed up on houses, stables and ships as a charm against witchcraft—in Scotland, England and Wales, and especially in Cornwall where (not only on vans and ominibuses, but sometimes even on the grim gates of the old jails) we may find this curious trace of ancient superstitions.

A Squirrel Punished by Sparrows.

Parties coming up Main street at an early hour of a recent morning were somewhat surprised to see a large and apparently tame gray squirrel hasten across the street and enter the doorway to the store of Rice & Rich. It was also noticed that his squirrelship was closely followed by a flock of sparrows, the majority of whom took a position opposite the door, so as to cut off his retreat. Half a dozen birds remained on the wing, fluttering, some three feet from the sidewalk, and near to the entrance. The squirrel made frantic efforts to force an entrance, and as he did so the birds, who during the fight kept up an incessant chattering, charged upon him and brought him to bay. They eventually drove him from his position to the store of J. B. Spencer, and from there to the Boston store. Finding himself hard pressed, he beat a retreat, but the sparrows forced him from the sidewalk, and he sought an entrance to the store of J. B. Shaw. Here, also, he was foiled, and he broke for the other side of the street, closely followed by the entire flock of sparrows, who lost no opportunity to give him a clip and hasten his speed. He finally entered the Pierce block, and thus escaped further punishment.—Norwich (Conn.) Bulletin.

The Tomb of Rachel.

A correspondent of the Salt Lake Tribune from Palestine says of Rachel's tomb: Singularly enough this is one of the places in Palestine where the traditions of Jews, Moslems and Christians agree, and where the veneration of all is bestowed. Undoubtedly it is the spot where Rachel was overtaken by her last illness when she and Jacob was journeying southward from Bethel, and where Benjamin first opened his eyes to look upon this great world. The building is a modern, white, square structure, with a domed roof of coarse plaster, and the pillar which Jacob sorrowfully set up to mark the site has long since passed away; but the spot is faithfully cherished in the hearts of all.

The tomb lies at the point where the Bethlehem and Hebron roads unite. Bethlehem is in sight to the left, and only one mile distant. How near Rachel was to a good halting place when her life went out, and that of Israel's favorite son, after Joseph, was kindled!

A coachman is the saddest of all men, for his life is full of "whoa."

A CHINESE PHYSICIAN.

The Remarkable Methods and Theories of a Mongolian "Devil Destroyer."

Wong Choo Fan, a Chinese doctor, arrived in Philadelphia with the intention of making that city his home, and ministering after his own peculiar fashion to the ailments of his countrymen. He was disappointed to find the Chinese population so small and its health so good and will go to New York.

Wong Choo Fan is rather a diminutive specimen of the Mongolian race, being but five feet in height and rather delicately proportioned. The doctor or "devil destroyer," as he is known in the Flowery Kingdom, speaks very excellent English, and consented, when questioned, to explain a few of his many odd methods for conquering disease. "Every sickness," he said, "is caused by a Nong T'sao—a 'disease devil'—and it is the work of the doctor to find out where the devil is and drive him out. What you call fever—hot skin, dry lips, high pulse—is the work of a little imp with eight mouths, each mouth having a hot, scorching breath. The imp gets into the patient's stomach by flying down his throat and is usually in the air on a damp day like this. The little devil is as large as a grain of sand, but when he gets into the human body he grows to be about as large as a bean. He blows his hot breath into every vein of the victim and causes him great distress and thirst by drinking all the water in his stomach. The way to cure the patient is to poison the imp with a powder scraped from the inside of a tree which grows in the Province of Foo Chow."

The doctor exhibited some of the powder, which proved to be either quinine or cinchonidia.

"Spasms or fits," continued the Mongolia disciple of Æsculapius, "come from the 'earth devil,' a creature that lives under the ground and sends a shock into the victim through his feet. You will find that nearly all persons when first taken with fits fall while walking, but after awhile, when the devil gets the victim weakened, the shock can be communicated from the earth, through the house and into the bed. It is very hard to cured them. I cured a man in Canton who had been subject to fits for fifteen years by rubbing the soles of his feet with fat stewed out of a frog's heart. Opium is a very valuable help in such cases when taken internally, because it makes the patient's feet itch and prevents the devils from gaining an entrance. A very small proportion of Chinamen die of consumption, because three hundred years ago it was discovered by T'sang Loo, a learned doctor, that people became afflicted with the disease by breathing through the mouth instead of the nose. There are millions and millions of imps flying in the air all the time—more in cold weather than in warm—and to your eyes they appear like specks of dust. They cannot get through the nose because the hairs catch them and they die, but they go into the mouth where there are no hairs, and find a resting place in the lungs. In a short time the lungs are dug out and coughed up. The only cure is to lay the patient on his back and beat him on the chest with a switch until the imps are frightened and fly out into the air again. Then the patient is starved for thirty-six hours and has his mouth sealed up. Very often he dies, but that is because all the imps were not driven out."

Food Fishes of Lake Erie.

In a paper read before the Buffalo Naturalists' Field Club it is stated that Lake Erie and the Niagara River furnish thirty-seven marketable varieties of fish. But their numbers are becoming rapidly reduced in those waters, owing in great measure to so many fish being taken when they are so full of ro. Some fish spawn late in the fall; the eastern salmon, salmon-trout, whitefish, brook-trout and lake-herring belong to this class, but the majority spawn in April, May or early June. Black bass choose a place for their spawn-beds where the water is shallow and the bottom is a sandy gravel. They leave their winter quarters in deep water a month or six weeks previous to spawning. The eggs hatch in from one to two weeks, according to the temperature. Bass are very prolific, yielding fully one-fourth their weight of spawn. The bass and the maskalonge are the recognized game-fish of the lakes. Whitefish do not take the bait readily, but are caught in gill nets, and can be taken in great numbers just at the time they are ready to spawn. They aver age three and a half pounds in weight, though some are taken weighing ten to eighteen pounds. Sturgeon average fifty pounds, but occasionally one is caught that weighs a hundred pounds or over. Fish differ greatly in rapidity of growth. Some grow in one, two or three years to a definite size, and then growth seems to be arrested. Such fish are short-lived. Other kinds, which slowly and steadily increase in size, attain a great age. Pike have been known to be over a hundred years old.

Baby is King.

It was just a young couple who were moving. They had been boarding with mother but were going to housekeeping for themselves now. In front of the house stood a great load of furniture red and blue and other bright colors. It consisted of a baby's rocking chair with the rockers off, a baby's crib and a perambulator, one small high chair and one large high chair, one hobby horse, one express wagon with the forward wheels gone, one doll's buggy. There might have been a cooking stove and a dining-table there, but if so, it was lost to sight to memory dear under the more numerous belongings of the baby housekeepers. And when the young father and mother came out they had the little emigrants with them and all the indescribable dolls, humming-tops and other paraphernalia that there wasn't room for on the load. Two happy babies going to housekeeping with their child-parents! And it's love, love that makes the world go round.

A Brute.

A married couple were out promenading in the suburbs of Austin one day. Presently the wife said: "Think, Albert, if the brigands should come now and take me from you!"

"Impossible, my dear."

"But, suppose they did come and carry me away what would you say?"

"I should say," replied the husband, "that the brigands were new at the business."

LOCKED UP IN HER TRUNK.

The Strange Adventure of an Actress.

The Grau Opera Company performed "The Mascotte" at the Park Theatre, Newark, recently, and at the end of the play Miss Jennie Pierce heard smothered cries coming from one of the ladies' dressing-rooms. She called assistance, and, upon investigation, the sounds were found to proceed from a large trunk which stood upon the floor securely locked. It was pried open, and in it was found in an almost unconscious condition Miss Minnie Figman, who said she had fallen into it while she was preparing to put away her costume.

Miss Figman did not take a leading part in "The Mascotte" at the Park Theatre next evening, owing to nervousness, but she went on at times and sang in the chorus. At the end of the performance she received a reporter in the theatre office, and afterward accompanied him and others to the wardrobe-room. She is of medium height, with large blue eyes, a round and pretty face, and a plump form. Her dress of thin white stuff fitted her to perfection. Diamonds glittered in her ears, and her Gainsborough hat was as white as snow.

The wardrobe trunk which she had looked was, she said, being repaired in a trunk maker's shop, as the lock was ruined and the front was perforated with auger holes.

The trunk is 3 feet 6 inches in height and nearly 5 feet long. It is watertight, in order to protect the delicate dresses it contains when the singer is on the road. It was fastened by a new Excelsior spring lock and the lock was so strong that P. H. Coyte, the gas engineer of the theatre, was ten minutes prying the lid off with a strong iron bar.

Miss Figman was unconscious when she was lifted out of the trunk. She was so nearly smothered that it was feared for a few minutes that she would not recover. Manager J. L. Gray hastily called a physician, who administered restoratives.

"I was putting some articles of my wardrobe into a corner of the trunk," Miss Figman explained, "and I suddenly tipped over and fell in head foremost. I was terribly frightened by the bump my head got on the bottom, but I squirmed around and raised my head. Just then I saw the heavy lid falling, and I gave a loud scream that was fortunately heard by Miss Pierce. The next instant the lid struck me on the head. I fell back unconscious, and the spring lock closed with a snap, so Miss Pierce said.

"They could not find the key of the trunk, and knowing that I must have air, Mr. Coyle bored auger holes in the trunk. I know nothing of what was done of my own knowledge, for I did not recover consciousness until they had carried me into the green room. Oh! how my fingers did tingle with pain when I came to. I felt as if thousands of needles were shooting through every pore. I must have been nearly asphyxiated, and I am sure that if Miss Pierce had not come to the room by good fortune just as I screamed, I would have been taken out of the trunk dead.

"I have been weak and nervous all day, startled at the least sound, but I feel better now, and I will go on the stage and sing tomorrow evening."

St. Winifred's Well at Holywell.

That many of our countrymen look on prayers offered at special shrines as specially efficacious is evident from the number of devout Welsh Roman Catholics of the upper class, who, on the 27th of July, 1882, went on a pilgrimage to St. Winifred's well at Holywell to offer prayers for the restoration to health of the infant son of the Duke of Norfolk. The pilgrimage was conducted by Very Rev. Canon Monaghan, and prayers were said at the chapel at Holywell, and also at St. Winifred's well itself. Of the many wells held in reverence by our ancestors, none probably has more fully sustained its old reputation than this, which has given its name to the town of Holywell. According to the legend its waters gushed up within the Church of St. Bueno, at the spot where the head of the holy St. Winifred rested, when, having been cut off by Prince Caradoc, it rolled on until it entered the consecrated building. This miraculous fountain, of course, became a noted place of pilgrimage. William the Conquerer, Henry II., Edward I., and James II, were among the sovereigns who came here to seek parden for divers sins, and doughty warriors were ofttimes to be seen standing for hours in the well, with only their heads above water, absorbed in fervant prayer and craving the intercession of St. Winifred. Of one brave knight it is recorded that in the earnestness of his devotion he forgot all prudence and stayed in the chilling water till he was paralyled. His last audible words were "Sancta Winifreda ora pro me," after which he never more. Cold as the water is, it never freezes, and the flow is always the same. It is said to be the most copious spring in Britain, yielding twenty-one tons of water per minute. This well is the property of the Duke of Westminster, who, in 1876, granted to the corporation of Holywell a lease of the well for one thousand years at a rental of one sovereign per annum. A recent visitor to the well took note of some of the votive offerings which had been deposited by grateful patients, and which included thirty-nine crutches, six hand sticks, a pair of boots, and a hand-hearse.

Early Fish Culture.

It shall be good for all Gentlemen and others hauing the gouernment of any riuers, brookes, or standing pooles, to replenish them with all such kinds of fish as may they be preserued or bred, as well of straying as others. There is a kinde of fish in Holland, in the fennes beside Peterborrow, which they call a poult, they be like in making and greatnesse to the Whiting, but of the callour of the Loch; they come foorth of the fenne brookes into the riuers nigh there about, as in Wansworth riuer there are many of them. They stirre not all the sommer, but in the winter when it is most coldest weather. There they are taken at Milles in Welles, and at wayers likewise. They are a pleasant meats, and some do thinke they would be as well in other riuers and running waters, as Huntingdon, Ware, and such like, if those waters were replenished with them, as they may with small charge.—A Booke of Fishing with Hooke and Line. L. M. 1590.

The last letter but one in the alphabet must be the least used, since "a word to the Y's is sufficient."

WIT AND WISDOM.

Those who walk most are generally the healthiest; the road of perfect health is too narrow for wheels.

Adam is said to be the only man who never tantalized his wife about "the way his mother used to cook."

Parson—"Rather drowsy weather, this, Farmer Jones." "Ay, parson, so it be; minds one of sermon time, doesn't it?"

Strive to be rich in knowledge. A man gets more than the value of whatever he gives in exchange for learning.

There are truths which some men despise because they have not examined, and which they will not examine because they despise.

If an untruth is only a day old, it is called a lie; if it is a year old, it is called a falsehood; but if is a century old, it is called a legend.

The preacher was rather cynical than charitable who took for the text of a wedding sermon, "Let there be abundance of peace—while the moon endureth."

He who has reined in and curbed his pleasures by temperance has procured for himself much greater honor and a greater victory than when he conquers an enemy.

"I like hot weather the best," said a Philadelphia girl, "because it makes pa and ma so sleepy that they don't come bothering around the parlor the nights I have company."

Get but the truth once uttered, and 'tis like a star new born, that drops into its place, and which, once circling in its placid round, not all the tumult of the earth can shake.

One of the Two Million. Parish Parson (to Dobbs)—"They are going to give you the franchise." Dobbs—"What cheese?" Parish Parson—"The franchise." Dobbs—"I hope they'll gie us some bread wi' it. What's the good o' cheese without bread?"

Smith met Jones on the deck of an ocean steamer one calm morning, after several days of very rough weather. "Why, I declare, Jones," said Smith, "you look years older than when I last saw you!" "No wonder," answered Jones, "I've had several berth-days lately."

A gentleman bought a newspaper, and tendered in payment a piece of forty sous. The newspaper woman: "I haven't the change; you can pay me as you pass along to-morrow." The gentleman: "But suppose I should be killed to-day?" The newspaper woman: "Oh, it won't be a very great loss."

Irish Republicanism.—Irish Landlord—"How dare you speak in that manner! Do you know who I am?" Pat—"And who may your honor be?" Landlord—"I am Knight, Baron Knight, and Knight of the Garter." Pat—"Then I'll have you to know that I am Pat Murphy, to night, to-morrow night, and the night after."

A village doctor, on going to see one of his patients in the country, took his gun along in the hope of having a little sport. A wag meeting him on the way, asked him where he was going. "To see one of my patients," answered the doctor. "Are you not afraid you will miss him if you use that?" exclaimed the wag, pointing to the gun.

Depositor—"Where is the cashier?" Bank Boy—"Gone to Canada." "And the President?" "Gone to South America." "Mercy save us! But the directors, where—" "Nobody knows." "Is any one left?" "Yes, me and the watchman." "Well, why didn't you go also, and make a clean sweep of it?" "There wasn't nothing left when our turn came."

Not long ago a practical jokist conceived the idea of frightening passers through a country churchyard by dressing himself up as a ghost. One night about half-past eleven, a burly old farmer was coming along, when out jumped the apparition. "Well, who are you?" asked the agriculturist. The ghost wailed forth some some sentence ending with "ghost." "Now, look here," said the farmer as he began to drop across him with a stick, "you clear off; its time all you confounded ghosts were in bed." The ghost went.

The Bet Still Undecided.

Two well-meaning men, one from St. Louis and the other from St Paul, had an argument in the Sherman House on the pronunciation of the word depot.

"I say its 'dee-po!'" said the St. Paul man.

"And I say its 'day-po!'" answered the St. Louisian.

In the course of time they put up $5 apiece and agreed to leave it to a tall, fine-looking man on the other side of the rotunda,

Going up to him, the St. Paul disputant said: "My friend and I have a small bet on the pronounciation of the word 'dee-po.' I say it is 'dee-po,' and he says it is 'day-po.' Now, who is right?"

"Pardon me," said the stranger, "but I never heard the word before. How do you spell it, and what does it mean?"

The betting men looked at each other dubiously, and one said: "D-e-p-o-t, a railway station"

"Oh, yes, yes; excuse me. You mean 'deppo,' of course. Yes, yes, depp. It is pronounced 'deppo.'"

"Look here!" yelled the St. Paul man, "where do you come from?"

"Boston, sir."

"Well, there can't no Boston man settle a bet for me on the English language. Come on, let's interview Carter Harrison."

The Eye.

It is said that very quiet eyes, which impress and embarrass one with their quiet repose, signify not only self-command, but also much complacency and some conceit. Restless eyes that cannot look one steadily in the face denote a deceitful designing mind. Eyes in which the white has a yellowish tinge and is streaked with reddish veins, prove much of strong passion and hasty temper. Very blue eyes bespeak a mind inclined to coquetry. Gray eyes signify dignity, intelligence, and excellent reasoning faculties. Greenish eyes falsehood and a fondness for scandal. A malicious mind is often indicated by greenish eyes. Black eyes show a passionate, lively temperament, and oftentimes a most deceitful disposition. Brown eyes are generally tender and true, indicating a kind and happy disposition.

Walter's Falls -

The Standard.

MARKDALE AUG. 21, 1884.

Better Than The Best.

GRAND OFFER GOOD FOR AUGUST ONLY.

We will send to any adress the STANDARD and Toronto Weekly News the balance of 1884 for 40 cents, or the STANDARD and Montreal Star, six months for 65 cents, or the three papers mentioned the balance of the year for 70 cents. This is the best oportunity yet presented to secure the news at a small cost. Do not delay, but send in your subscrsption early in the month and thereby secure the greater bargain. The cash must accompany the order in all cases. Mail all orders tc STANDARD office, Markdale.

Champion of the World No Longer.

For the first time in his life Edward Hanlan, in a match race with another sculler, was beaten on Saturday. For seven years Hanlan's history has been the history of the aquatic championship of Canada; for six years his history has been the history of the championship of America; for five years his history has been the history of the championship of the world. From the spring of 1877 until Saturday the Canadian sculler's record showed sixteen successive victories over the best scullers in the world. No other oarsman that ever lived, no other athlete that ever lived, had such a record.

To just what his defeat has been due is not yet clear, and Canadians, who have watched Hanlan's extraordinary career with pride, at the least, in the uniform straightforwardness of his performances--straightforwardness so different from what the most formidable of his rivals in this country have shown—Canadians will be loth to believe that Hanlan's star has paled an the Antipodes, never to regain its former lustre. They will hope to hear that his defeat has been such as will be avenged when his turn comes again, himself having meanwhile had the advantage of knowing exactly the nature of the task ahead of him. The most careful men are sometimes caught napping, and the most reasonable supposition in Hanlan's case is that he partly under estimated his opponent, and partly suffered in his training in a strange clime.

Walter's Falls.

This truly rural village is situated in Holland, and within one mile of the boundry of four townships, viz., Holland, Euphrasia, St. Vincent and Sydenham, and is distant from Markdale 12 miles, from Meaford 14, from Holland Centre 6, from Chatsworth 10, from Owen Sound 18, and from Woodford 8 miles. Big Head River runs through the village, and has a fall of 50 feet within a stone throw of the center of the town. This river furnishes good water power, which is appropriated by a fine roller flour mill, woollen factory, saw mill and shingle and planing factory. The village has a very picturesque surrounding, and the immediate vicinity is somewhat rough, but has an excellent agricultural country on all sides a short distance out. There is a tri-weekly mail to this place, and it can boast of nearly 100 inhabitants. The following are the principal business men:—Bonnell Bros., a large and well stocked general store; James Campbell, Sr., Postmaster; James Campbell, Jr., Hotel-keeper; Clark & Olmstead, flour-mill, saw-mill, shingle and planing factory; D. Brown, woollen factory; Thos. Barker, boot and shoe maker; Wm. Bush, blacksmith; John Delereo, blacksmith; James Delereo general agent and commissioner; John Colridge, implement agent; John Findly, wagon-maker; Alex. McLelland, M. D.; Dr. McLelland, grocery and drug store; Miss King, dressmaker; Mr. Holmes, tailor; S. Caswell, carpenter; Thos. Campbell, sawyer; Henry Smith, carpenter; Wm. McQuacker, sawyer; Miss Batty, school teacher; Rev. Mr. Pepper, Methodist minister; also English and Methodist churches. We want a live correspondent there, and we have no doubt this inland town will be better known in future than it has been in the past.

Insure Your Life.

Those who purpose joining the Markdale Council of Royal Templars, will do well to do so before the 6th September, in order to secure the reduced rates for charter members.

It is very important and desirable for every mechanic, laborer and farmer, as well as others, to have Insurance on their lives in some manner, as it not only secures those depending upon them of substantial aid in time of need, but is a good investment. The above order pays half the policy in case a member is totally disabled, at any time, to perform the duties of life, and the balance is paid at death. It is also conducted on strictly Temperance principles, which is in itself strongly in its favor. Any person wishing information in regard to the laws and working of the order can see the constitution by calling at this office.

Osprey.

We had a dusty drive through Osprey on Tuesday last, calling at Maxwell, Feversham and McIntyre. The spring grain harvest has commenced and an astonishing improvement has taken place in the crops generally since our last drive that way the last week of June. There is now a certainty of a full average crop. Peas, barley and spring wheat are an excellent crop and oats though somewhat thin are generally a fair crop. The hay crop was light, and roots in this township are suffering for want of rain. In the neighborhood of McIntyre, (which is situated one concession South of the Collingwood, or gravel road) the crops are looking exceedingly fine, in fact this is a beautiful destrict and will compare with the best parts of the province when a little older. The merchants of McIntyre report a fair summer's trade and now fast improving.

We found Osprey parliament in session at Feversham, and were endeavoring to economise in the township expenses, the great valuation expense being an important item, and not yet decided whether the county or individual townships will have the costs of the recent appeal to pay. The valuation has proved a most unsatisfactory, unnecessary and expensive undertaking.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

Sartor Resartus.

Markdale, Aug. 19, 1884.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

DEAR SIR,—In a late issue of your paper appeared a lucubration headed, "Too good to miss," and signed "Railroader." I won't attempt to answer his letter. Indeed it is unanswerable. However lest that "unanswerable" should be misunderstood, I beg leave to point out that a letter may be unanswerable for two reasons: first, it may be perfect; secondly, there may be nothing in it.

Let me tell you a story, Mr. Editor. In the Old Country lived a man who worked for father occasionally, and whom we will call John. He was a good fellow in many ways, honest, hard-working, and good natured; but with one sad fault, he would get drunk. One day John had been at the tavern, and was on "His devious course uncertain seeking home," when he happened to stumble against the heels of a notorious donkey that was grazing by the roadside. This donkey was viciously inclined, and he resented John's familiarity by promptly knocking him down with his heels. John must have been pretty drunk for he mistook Neddy for a man, and, being an Irishman, of course he couldn't stand such treatment, and so prepared to fight. A few more knocks, however, opened John's eyes to the fact that he was quarreling with an ass, and the poor fellow's maudlin dismay on making the discovery, was extremely ludicrous It seemed as if he could never get over the disgrace. He actually wept for shame.

So, I too, sir, in my rather devious wandering, came into the vicinity of an animal who kicked at the intrusion; but warned by the fate of my countryman, I give him the whole road now and forever more, lest I also, should be found fighting with ———.

With thanks for your courtesy, Mr. Editor.

Yours truly,

M. NORRIS.

To remove dandruff, Cleanse the scalp with Prof. Low's Magic Sulphur Soap. A delightful medicated soap for the toilet.

To the Editorof the Standard.

DEAR SIR,—Although many months have passed since I left your country, I am still interested there, the demand for early chicks is immense and in N. Y., St. Louis, N. O., Denver, and other large cities, they find a ready market at from 50 to 60 cts. per lb.; but to get these high prices they must be hatched in February, March and April. As hens are not inclined to set that early you must use incubators. They hatch a larger number of chicks than hens and are healthier, being free from lice. I have two incubators that I made myself; they cost $5, and hold 480 chicks. Any one can get directions for making an incubator like mine by writing to J. Bane, New Concord, O., inclosing stamps for postage. My incubators are a complete success, and being so cheap are within the reach of all, and any lady can run it. I have 212 hens, and from them, and in two incubators, to have sold $1427 worth of chicks and fowl since March. Now is the time to make your incubators, and prepare for the winter and spring trade. Give your incubators one trial this fall, then you can go to work intelligently. I run my incubators all the year round, and think there is no business requiring less capital, yielding such large profits. I will soon write you an article on "Which are the most profitable varieties of poultry to raise," and on other poultry topics, if you wish.

WILL GRIFFITH,
Poultryman.
Sago, Ohio,

Dundalk.

From our own correspondent.

Miss Annie Middleton, whose illness was reported last week, died on Wednesday evening, and buried on Friday last. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. T. J. Snowdon on Sabbath evening.

Mrs. A. McConnell, whose illness was considered dangerous, is now recovering.

Our teachers resumed their duties on Monday last with less than the average number of scholars.

You will doubtless have heard that your baseball club were defeated in the match with the Dundalk club on Thursday last. The score was, Markdale 18, Dundalk 52.

The baseball match between the "Atlantics," of Toronto, and Dundalk was not played, owing to a failure of the Toronto club to put in an appearance.

Dr. McWilliam is erecting a very handsome residence.

Proton Fall Exhibition will be held here on October 7th and 8th.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

On the evening of Wednesday last a garden party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Van Dusen on their own law which proved to be the greatest event of the season. The evening and night was all that could be desired, being so calm and pleasant that common lamps could be used upon the tables in the lawn. The grounds were beautifully decorated and lighted with Chinese lanterns. All manner of harmless games were indulged in; and last but not least the music provided for the occasion was just charming, the band being composed of the Parks Bros., E. Varzant, F. McDowell, N. Campbell, and Mr. Robins, who presided at the organ. After having spent a most enjoyable evening the company separated about 12 p.m.

Mr. M. Richardson and two daughters are at present spending a few holidays on the picturesque and beautiful grounds at Chautauqua Lake, N. Y.

Another society added to the list in Flesherton. A Council of Royal Templars was organized by Mr. Hill on Tuesday evening, commencing with 22 members.

The circus has come and gone, and a goodly number are left 25 cts. less in cash. The show was pretty well patronized here, and almost all seemed to think it quite as good as expected.

Meaford Road.

From our own correspondent.

The hot dry weather is bringing the harvest in fast. The prospects at present are good. Those who had fall wheat can rejoice in a good crop both in quality and quantity.

Mr. J. McAllum is building a new brick house. Mr. J. Whitten of Flesherton has the contract.

Mr. J. Sperling, of the Eclipse saw mills, furnished the square timber for Mr. Plewis' new grist mill at Markdale. Mr. Richards, the contractor, finds this way cheaper, than the old way of using the broad axe.

Miss H. Brodie has returned home from Brampton where she had been visiting her friends for some time past.

Friend Buchanan still seems annoyed at your correspondent for daring to report anything in connection with the Sabbath School. He seems to be in the dark as to what a news paper correspondent should and should not report. A great deal of a correspondent's information comes to him second handed as it is impossible for him to be always present at the different happenings; if he was he would have a big time. He tries to make capital out of the word discussion although that word appeared in the paper it was a typographical error. It was decision that should have appeared.

About the fitness of my being a teacher or superintendent has nothing to do with the matter. It is not always the fittest that is elected to office. Before this I was not aware of the secretary keeping trace of how often your correspondent attended the school. As far as my friendship goes there is more ways than one of showing friendship; but enough of this for the present.

Osprey.

From our own correspondent.

Rev. J. Chisholm, who is on a visit to Britain, met with an accident while in Scotland, by getting his right wrist put out of joint which accounts for his not writing to the STANDARD, as well as other friends; the accident disabling his hand so that he could not write.

On Wednesday last there was a Union Sabbath School pic-nic held in the bush at Feversham. Notwithstanding the busy time there were a great number there; and the children seemed to enjoy themselves at the swings and other amusements, also at the refreshments in the evening.

The captain of the "Lord's Army" from Thornbury held a meeting in the log church, which was crowded; but one would judge, from the order, that more came for amusement than anything else.

Personals.

Mr. E. Elliott and daughter, of Perth, called on his brother-in-law, Thos. Mathews, this week. They returned on Monday, accompanied by Hattie Mathews.

Messrs. G. Haskett and Wm. Lucas returned this week from a pleasant drive to Blythe.

Miss Minnie Rorke is spending her holidays at Chateauquay.

Master John and Miss Elizabeth Young of Toronto are the guests of Rev. A. Wilson.

Dr. F. F. and Mrs. Brown of Woodstock are staying with their son W. A. Brown Jeweller.

Mr. A. Turner, druggist, spent the week about Owen Sound, Chatsworth and other watering places North.

Mrs. Rae is visiting friends at Owen Sound, Tara and vicinity.

Mrs. John Moore and daughter of Holland are visiting friends in West Chester, Pensylvenia.

The American Agriculturist for September, 1884.

The American Agriculturist for September embraces over two hundred different editorials, prize papers, and plain, practical, common sense articles, and topics pertaining to the Farm, Garden, and Household. written expressly for this journal by over 40 different writers. The New Elm Tree Pest; The New Swine Poisoner; The New Early Cherry; The New Narcissus; The New Destroyer of the Cabbage Worm; The New Method of Blanching Celery; A Little Known Grass; together with all other fresh subjects are fully treated and illustrated. Joseph Harris gives a world of information in his "Walks and Talks," and discusses the Apple Barrel War. Dr. George Thurber writes on horticultural topics. Col. Mason C. Weld narrates at length the results of his experiments in testing famous butter cows. Andrew S. Fuller discourses upon the Influence and Effects of Pollen. Prof. Thompson, of Nebraska, tells how to most advantageously raise cattle in the West. Elias A. Long presents full instructions for making handsome lawns. Henry A. Haigh gives valuable suggestions in making farm contracts. Professor Slade, of Harvard University, tells how to successfully treat Animal Ailments. Col. F. D. Curtis writes of Weaning and Feeding Young Pigs. R. G. Newton, Dak., turns the Farmer's Grindstone. Alfred Trumbull analyzes the Harvest of the Sea. Timothy Bunker descants upon the "yaller dorg" in his usual facetious vein. Dr. Byron D. Halsted points out the value of buckwheat as a farm crop. David W. Judd, describes the Far-west. The illustrations and engravings, by leading artists, number over a hundred. Of the full page illustrations, the one representing "A Gathering Storm" is most vivid and life like. Price $1.50 a year. Single numbers 15 cents; 751 Broadway.

MARKDALE POST OFFICE.

Mails at Markdale are closed as follows, commencing Monday August 11th, closed bag for Toronto 8. a. m. General Mail South 5:40 p. m. General Mail North 1:30 p. m. closed bag for Owen Sound 7. p. m.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture,

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

ESTRAY HORSE.

Came to the premises of the subscriber lot 10 con 12 Holland, about the 11th August a horse, dark bay, with right hind fet lock white, star in face. The owner is requested to prove property pay charges and take him away.

JOHN BURNSIDE. 105—107.

STEER ASTRAY.

LOT 90, Con. 2, West of Toronto and Sydenham Road, Glenelg, red and white spotted steer, with horns turned up, 1 year old. Any person giving satisfactory information will be suitably rewarded. Address MARSHALL BAIRD, 205-207 Markdale P. O.

VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE.

A splendid farm for sale two miles from the rising town of Markdale, an important station on the Toronto, Grey & Bruce division of the C. P. R. Being lots No. 108 2nd and 108 & 109 in 3rd range, West of T. & S. Road, Glenelg, Co. Grey, containing 1?? acres. The farm is admirably adapted for grain or stock and especially for the latter is watered by a beautifull never failing stream of spring water. There is 110 acres cleared and is in a good state of cultivation well fenced with cedar rails, balance hardwood with sufficient cedar for fencing the place, also a comfortable house, with splendid well adjoining, good out buildings, young orchard bearing. This is a most desirable farm for stock raising. Title indisputable. For further particulars and terms apply to EDWARD RUTLEDGE, on the premises, Markdale P. O., or to STANDARD Office, Markdale. 200-4

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED.

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

RUTLEDGE & TRELFORD.

181

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

AN ACROSTIC.

Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a man
It's true, Lardine's the best Oil
Nothing its equal, cast's aside foil
External its use, on every soil.

Use Lardine Machine Oil unexcelled for machinery, sold manufacturer, McColl Bros. Toronto.

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

WALTHAM,

ELGIN SWISS

WATCHES.

GE STOCK OF CLOCKS,
Quadruple Plated Ware,
edding Rings, 18 k., INGS,
CHAINS,
SEALS,
zarus & Morris and Boss
cks, good Violin Strings,
sical Instruments.
areful and accurate repair-personally attended to and warranted.
are Dealing. - Fair Prices.

W. A. BROWN.

MARKDALE.

cal and Other Items.

TICES in these columns intended to benefit individual or Society will be charged ten a line for the first insertion and five a line each subsequent insertion.

RKDALE school opened on Monday

e Stuffs at the Medical Hall, A. er & Co.

HN McKENNA'S new shop is up closed in.

COMMUNICATION from Vandeleur e too late for this week.

ional Pills the favorite purgative and ilious medicine, they are mild and ugh.

MONSTER excursion from Brampton ed through to Owen Sound on day.

ingle copies of the STANDARD five cents each.

H. Foster, merchant of Williamsshipped 2000 bushels of wheat to recently.

HERE will be an excursion to Owen d next Monday 25th, we did not earn the fare.

LARGE variety of assorted candies e best description just arrived ontgomery Bakery.

n. THOS. JORDAN and Mr. Joseph arey have been appointed tax ctors in Euphrasia.

LARGE tank is being built at kdale Station, the water to be ed by steam power.

HE balance of our stock of wheel'd will be sold at reduced prices. and examine, all fully warranted . Shanahan.

OOD YIELD.—Thos. Hartop, lot con. 3, Euphrasia, threshed 11 s of fall wheat last week and has ld therefrom of 500 bushels of did wheat.

AN from indigestion or sick head is instantly relieved by one dose equivinator Bitters, made from and herbs. Sold by Smith, the er.

VER & LITTLEJOHNS have their hing machine in good trim, and commenced operations for the on, having threshed for Jake ey on Saturday last.

e magical power over pain that Hagyard's w Oil possesses, outrivals the marvels cient times. It acts in a natural manner duce inflammation; cures Rheumatism. e, Deafness, Sore Throat, and painful ses.

ANY person wanting a first class f house painting done will find it eir interest to employ the services . O. Whitby, Markdale. Orders at the STANDARD office will receive pt attention.

WOMAN KILLED.—On Monday at Owen Sound a woman was d in her own house while her and was absent, It is reported ve been a drunken broil. We ot learn further particulars.

We will send the STANDARD balanse of the year to any ress for 35 cents.

. J. MCFARLAND is this week ped out in the vicinity of Bell's and is enjoying himself hunting hing. We have to thank him two speckled beauties sent us, h weighed over a pound each.

RKDALE POST OFFICE.

ls at Markdale are closed on , commencing Monday August closed bag for Toronto 9:40 a. m. al Mail South 6:40 " m.
l Mail North 1:30 p. m. " m.
Owen Sound 7. p. m.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

dersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of hool Furniture.

ng of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, ERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest nd most approved pattern. Highly nded by School Trustees and Teach-heapness, comfort and compactness tried. An assortment of Farm and ells kept always on hand. Send for to Chatsworth P. O.

ANDREW McGILL.

STRAY HORSE.

Came to the premises of the subscriber lot 10 con 12 Holland, about the 11th August a horse, dark bay, with nigh ock white, star in face. The owner ed to prove property pay charges him away.

OHN BURNSIDE. 105—107.

TEER ASTRAY.

), Con. 2, West of Toronto and enham Road, Glenelg, red and ted steer, with horns turned up, l Any person giving satisfactory in- will be suitably rewarded. Address

MARSHALL BAIRD,
Markdale P. O.

VALUABLE M FOR SALE.

d farm for sale two miles from own of Markdale, an important he Toronto, Grey & Bruce divi- C. P. R. Being lots No. 108 2nd 09 in 3rd range. West of T., & S. nelg, Co. Grey, containing 150 farm is admirably adapted for ck and especially for the latter, by a beautifull never failing pring water. There is 110 acres is in a good state of cultivation, with cedar rails, balance hard- sufficient cedar for fencing the comfortable house, with splen- bining, good out buildings, young ring. This is a most desirable ck raising. Title indisputable. particulars and terms apply to RUTLEDGE, on the premises, O., or to STANDARD Office, Mark- 2004

Butcher Shop.

meats the country can produce and

ED TO ALL PARTS OF WN WHERE ORDERED.

f public patronage respectfully the stand in McNea's block.

LEDGE & TRELFORD.

EUCENIA aw and Lath Mills

e extensive improvements in I feel confident I can give on.

UR ALWAYS ON HAND g Done Every Day.

ing and Bills Filled on the

ND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

nut, White Ash, Black Ash and Hemlock Logs wanted

M. AKITT, Eugenia.

N ACROSTIC.

a good old age wise as a sage ll you can s dispel, like a man
e, Lardine's the best Oil
g its equal, cast's aside toil al its use, on every soil.

Machine Oil unexcelled for manufacturer, McColl Bros.

digestion, Biliousness, e Liver and Kidneys, ult Rheum, Scrofula, from Impure Blood, ion of the Bowels.

WALTHAM,

WATCHES.

RGE STOCK OF CLOCKS,
Quadruple Plated Ware,
edding Rings, 18 k., INGS,
CHAINS,
SEALS,
rarus & Morris and Boss
ks, good Violin Strings,
sical Instruments.
Careful and accurate repair-personally attended to and warranted.
are Dealing. - Fair Prices.

W. A. BROWN.
MARKDALE.

ocal and Other Items.

tices in these columns intended to benefit individual or Society will be charged ten s a line for the first insertion and five s a line each subsequent insertion.

KDALE school opened on Monday

e Stuffs at the Medical Hall, A. er & Co.

EN McKENNA'S new shop is up closed in.

COMMUNICATION from Vandeleur too late for this week.

ional Pills the favorite purgative and illious medicine, they are mild and ach.

MONSTER excursion from Brampton ed through to Owen Sound on sday.

ingle copies of the STAN- D five cents each.

H. Foster, merchant of Williams- shipped 2000 bushels of wheat to recently.

ERE will be an excursion to Owen nd next Monday 25th, we did not earn the fare.

LARGE variety of assorted candies he best description just arrived Montgomery Bakery.

R. THOS. JORDAN and Mr. Joseph arey have been appointed tax tors in Euphrasia.

A LARGE tank is being built at kdale Station, the water to be ed by steam power.

HE balance of our stock of wheel'd will be sold at reduced prices. and examine, all fully warranted Shanahan.

OOD YIELD.—Thos. Hartop, lot on. 3, Euphrasia, threshed 11 s of fall wheat last week and has d therefrom of 500 bushels of lid wheat.

ES from indigestion or sick head is instantly relieved by one dose equivmator Bitters, made from and herbs. Sold by Smith, the ER.

EER & LITTLEJOHNS have their ing machine in good trim, and commenced operations for the n, having threshed for Jake ey on Saturday last.

magical power over pain that Hagyard's w Oil possesses, outrivals the marvels ent times. It acts in a natural manner. oothe inflammation; cures Rheumatism, e, Deafness, Sore Throat, and painful es.

ANY person wanting a first-class f house painting done will find it eir interest to employ the services O. Whitby, Markdale. Orders at the STANDARD office will receive pt attention.

WOMAN KILLED.—On Monday at Owen Sound a woman was d in her own house while her and was absent, It is reported ave been a drunken broil. We ot learn further particulars.

We will send the STANDARD balanse of the year to any ress for 35 cents.

. J. McFARLAND is this week ed out in the vicinity of Bell's and is enjoying himself hunting fishing. We have to thank him two speckled beauties sent us, weighed over a pound each.

SPECIAL bargains for the next 30 days at R. J. Sproule's Flesherton, annual clearing sale.

WE understand a senior base-ball club has been organized in Markdale to play the professionals of Dundalk. From what we hear of the Dundalk club, the seniors of this place will have to practice considerably to prepare themselves for the coming match.

If you should be so unfortunate as to Burn Scald or Wound yourself in any way the proper thing to keep clean and heal it is McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Insist on having, and be sure you get, McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Price 25 cents. Hill Bro's. has the genuine. J. & J. 2

WE have the pleasure of entering the names of forty two new subscribers to the STANDARD on our list to be called for at Markdale P. O. They will please remember to call at the Post Office for their paper, not at the Printing Office.

ANOTHER lot of that famous Japan tea, 50 cents per lb., worth 70, at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

NEARLY every person we meet says it's very warm, and what everybody says must be true. The thermometer also substantiates the universal opinion and lingers about 90 in the shade, we had a beautiful shower on Tuesday night but the excessive heat continues.

SPLENDID factory cotton 5c. per yard and all other goods accordingly at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

OWING to additional connections, together with heavier trains, the railway has not made as good time since the last change of time came in force as was previously made. We hope to see an improvement on the past week's time. It reminds us of the narrow gauge of years gone by.

HIGHEST price paid in cash for Butter, 1,000 tubs of good butter wanted by R. J. Sproule Flesherton

ENCOURAGING.—It is both gratifying and encouraging to know that the public fully appreciate our efforts to supply a live newsy local paper. We have been favored, since the 1st July, with 147 new subscribers, and expect by the 1st September to make it 200. This is just the manner in which we desire to have the public show their appreciation of our efforts.

THE BEST YET.—By special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Montreal Star together with the STANDARD six months for 65 cents. The Star is allowed to be the best family paper published while the STANDARD is hard to beat as a local paper, and the two are offered for about the price of one. Send in your subscription at once to this office for one or the both, you can have the Star for 30 cents or the STANDARD for 85 cents to any address, balance of year, cash in advance.

RECOVERING.—William J., son of Mr. James McNicoll, of Artemesia, aged about 20, received a kick of a plow in the side over two months ago, which disabled him at the time, and he continued to grow worse, when a few weeks later he was confined to his bed, a lump gathered in the side and mortified, and at one time his life was despaired of. Dr. Christoe was in attendance, and we are pleased to learn that he is now up and around; and though several months will yet elapse before he is as rugged as before, he is in a fair way for recovery.

NEILSON BROS., of Proton Station, have erected a fine, substantial frame for a saw-mill on the ground of the one burned over a year since. They are now putting in the machinery, which is being fitted up by Moffatt Bros., of Markdale foundry. They removed a cast wheel from this foundry on Monday last which weighed 2000 lbs. Messrs. Neilson has sold the mill to one Mr. Burton, of Toronto, who expects to have it in operation about the 1st October. This will be good news for the people of Proton Station and vicinity.

RENOVATED.—Haskett Bros. (the proprietors) have overhauled the Revere Hotel throughout, having pulled down partitions, enlarged rooms, built an addition to the rear, and plastered and re-painted the house in the new. The work of overhauling is now nearing completion, and when finished will cost over $600, and will give the house a greatly improved appearance. They have secured a good man for the house in the person of Mr. John Colwell, who will take possession the 1st September. Mr. Colwell has had considerable experience in the hotel business and is highly spoken of. He will doubtless keep a well regulated house.

MR. HAY of Berkeley will preach in the Presbyterian Church here at 11 o'clock to-morrow (Friday) in connection with the Sacramental Services, there will be service at 11 o'clock on Sabbath after which the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be dispensed, service also on Sabbath evening.

Canadian Pacific Railway

(ONTARIO DIVISION.)

Change of Time.

COM'CING MONDAY AUG. 11, '84

Toronto, Grey and Bruce Division.

TORONTO—Depart 9:40 a. m., 5:00 p. m.
" Arrive 1:00 p. m., 10:30 "
Note—Mixed train leaves Parkdale 8:15 a.m.

Credit Valley Division.

Toronto, depart 7:10 a.m, 1:05 p.m, 4:50 p.m
" arrive 9:30 " 3:45 " 7:00 "
Note—Mixed train leaves Parkdale 1 a. m.

D. McNICOL, Gen. Pass. Agt. W. WHYTE. General Manager.

MARKDALE STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE AS FOLLOWS:

GOING SOUTH.—Express 9:10 a. m.
" " Mixed 10:05 "
" " Mail 6:07 p. m.

GOING NORTH.—Mail 2:00 p. m.
" " Mixed 4:26 "
" " Express 9:19 "

J. CÆSAR, Agent.

MARKDALE HARNESS EMPORIUM

ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

SEEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,
Drugstore, - DURHAM.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt,

COFFINS,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

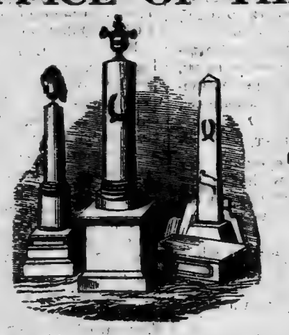
FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

INVALUABLE TO EVERY LADY!

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.



It removes the evidences of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun burn, Tan, Ringworm, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness; imparting a perfectly healthy, natural and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price, $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Address all letters to the MAY DEW AGENCY, 167 Church Street, Toronto, Ont. Parlor and Reception Room for Ladies.

Trade Mark.

OFFICE OF THE Flesherton Marble And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

The Canadian Mutual Aid Association.

INCORPORATED AUGUST 20TH, 1880.

HEAD OFFICE, - - TORONTO.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

Wm. Rennie, Esq., Toronto, President; A. Gifford, Esq., Meaford, Vice-President;
E. H. Hilborn, Esq., Uxbridge, Treasurer; W. Pemberton Page, Esq., Toronto, Sec'y;
G. H. Watson, L.L.B., Toronto, Solicitor; R. H. Robertson, M.D., Toronto, Med. D'tr;
C. H. Mackintosh, M.P., Ottawa; Lewis Wigle, M.P.P., Leamington;
Thos. Menzies, Peterboro; J. P. Bull, Downsview;
Peter Graham, M.P.P., Warwick; S. W. Hill, Esq., Ridgeville, Memb. Supt.

The Directors have filed with the Hon. S. C. Wood, (Ex-Provincial Treasurer of Ontario) Trustee for the Association. Bonds to the amount of $60,000.00, as a guarantee for the honest carrying out of the terms of Certificates issued to members.

Reliable Aid to Families of Deceased Members at Small Cost.

The Association will do business on the following plan:

Applications.

All Applications for Membership shall be made upon printed forms furnished by the Association, (and applicants must pass a satisfactory medical examination). If accepted, a certificate will be issued within thirty days from date of such acceptance.

Membership.

The payment of TWELVE DOLLARS admits any of sound body and mind between the age of 18 and 60 years, to all the benefits of the Association. If the application is not accepted the money is promptly returned to the applicant.

Plan of Business.

The following table shows the amount for which Certificates of Membership will be issued by the Association, according to age:

AGE.	Amount at Death	AGE.	Amount at Death
From 18 to 30	$3 000	From 45 to 46	$2 200
30 to 31	2 950	46 to 47	2 150
1 to 32	2 900	47 to 48	2 100
32 to 33	2 850	48 to 49	2 050
33 to 34	2 800	49 to 50	2 000
34 to 35	2 750	50 to 51	1 900
35 to 36	2 700	51 to 52	1 800
36 to 37	2 650	52 to 53	1 700
37 to 38	2 600	53 to 54	1 600
38 to 39	2 550	54 to 55	1 500
39 to 40	2 500	55 to 56	1 400
40 to 41	2 450	56 to 57	1 300
41 to 42	2 400	57 to 58	1 200
42 to 43	2 350	58 to 59	1 100
43 to 44	2 300	59 to 60	1 000
44 to 45	2 250

HALF RATE PLAN.

Certificates will be issued for half the above amounts should the applicant so desire.

Assessments.

An Assessment of One Dollar upon each member will be made in case of death or total disability of a member, except when there is money enough in surplus funds to pay said claim.

Special Features.

1—Great inducements to provide for families in case of death, at small cost.
2—Equal benefits to both sexes.
3—Uniform assessments of one dollar only.
4—Careful medical examination required.
5—No annual dues or extra charges.
6—No large salaries or expenses.
7—Two hundred dollars advanced for funeral expenses when necessary.
8—Benefits secured at actual cost.
9—Members becoming totally disabled, may draw half of their claims, the balance being payable at death.
10—Ladies accepted in this Association as well as men.

For particulars apply to S. W. HILL, Membership Superintendent, Ridgeville, or to W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Secretary, 37 King Street West, Toronto.

AGENT FOR MARKDALE, THOS. MANN.

Also Agent for Dominion Grange Mutual Fire Insurance Association.

IN ARCTIC SEAS.

A Talk With an Old Whaler.

"Yes, I have read some of the news about the finding of the Greely party," said an old salt, who had been in the Arctic regions in his earlier days.

He had all the marks of "a life on the ocean wave and a home on the rolling deep." A weather-beaten and browned skin, India ink tattoos, and several scars, the result of blows from capstan bars, boat oars and harpoon hooks.

"No, I never went on an exploring expedition, but came very near doing it once. I am told that Dr. Hall makes mention in one of his books of his meeting with Capt. Parker, of the old "Truelove," in Coddling Bay, in the fall of '61. I was one of the two men he mentioned as volunteering to join his party and winter with him in Davis Strai s. Hall had lost two of his crew and one of his small boats, and he wanted to make up his deficiency from the whaling fleet when they were ready to leave for home. I was a young fellow then, and me and my chum were ready to face any climate and any hardship, but Capt. Parker said he felt himself responsible for our safe return to our friends in England, and he wouldn't let us go with Hall. But we let him have one of the "Truelove's" small boats. That was the nearest I ever come to being an Arctic explorer."

"But you have seen a good deal of life in the Arctic regions, nevertheless?" said the reporter, by way of drawing him out on a subject which the finding of the Greely party has been made interesting. "Where is Coddling Bay?"

"I don't suppose you'll find it on the maps. We whalers had names of our own for Arctic ports and didn't bother our heads much about what the explorers called 'em. We could talk among ourselves about the east and west shore all the way up to parallel 71 just as familiar as we could about the English Channel and the Mersey, but after you got above Lancaster Sound we were off. We left that for the scientific chaps to navigate and give all our attention to whale oil. The was more money in it and

LESS SHIPS AND MEN LOST.

Of course we kept a weather eye open for any relics of the Franklin crew that might be drifting about in hope of the reward offered, but we didn't go out of our way to hunt for 'em."

"Can you give me a general idea of what the surface of the country is like up there?" as the reporter. "The general idea, I think, we have is of a surface entirely and always covered with ice."

"Well, that is pretty near it. About the only bare spots are the perpendicular faces of the rocky shores, with here and there a bit of stunted vegetation during the Arctic summer. The west shore of Davis Straits is very mountainous, only broken here and there by a 'fewer' (fiord) as we call Arctic rivers. I don't know as anybody has ever been on those mountain tops to see what they bear, but I don't think they're up to much. Wouldn't care to own a farm there, anyway."

"Do you know how icebergs are formed?" he asked, by way of turning the subject to something he had more definite knowledge about. "You know an iceberg is made of fresh water while the water they float in is salt. Some people think that the saltiness is taken out by the freezing. That's a mistake. It is the spring water falling down the mountain sides that make icebergs. It runs from the springs in the mountains and freezes as it falls until its accumulated weight breaks it off and it goes drifting down the channel, if it falls into plenty of water. I have seen icebergs grounded in 400 feet.

"Talk about your Niagara Falls! I have seen nothing prettier than some of them mountain cataracts in the Arctics. There's variety about 'em, too. They are always breaking away and forming in new shapes, so

THEY NEVER LOOK TWICE THE SAME.

Fine place for a landscape painter that, but I suppose they prefer to draw on their imagination. Them pictures of the finding of the Greely survivors in the illustrated papers show all they know about it.

"No, we never had a vessel ground up in the ice in our voyages; always had the good luck to get out of the way. The way we did it was to make artificial harbors in the shore ice. When we saw a big ice-floe coming, and the wind was crowding it to our side of the channel, it was 'hurrah boys!' I tell ye. We carried long ice saws with pulley attachments and trestles to support them overhead. When put in position for sawing a part of the crew manned the pulley ropes while others held the teeth of the saw against the ice. The rope and pulley made the raising of the saw easy, and its own weight carried it down. We would start three saws at the outer edge of the ice and cut three seams, starting a hundred feet apart and verging toward each other. When the two shorter seems met, and a small triangular piece of ice had been shoved out into the current it was easy to losen the larger piece and send it adrift. Then we unshipped our rudder and hauled our vessel into the harbor we had made just in time, sometimes, to see a cake of ice ten to twenty miles in area go grinding past our little harbor of refuge. The ice we sawed through would be ten feet thick, and the sawing took us five hours sometimes.

"But we got the most excitement out of our fishing. Talk about your fresh water regattas. If you could take a crowd up there to witness a whaler's crew get away after a fish it would be something worth seeing," said the old sailor, as his storm-dimmed optics seemed trying to flash youthful fire again in the mental contemplation of a spirited picture he had once been a figure in.

"A big thing on ice," suggested the reporter, just to show he was listening.

"I have seen a crew all asleep in their berths when the cry of 'a fish' was given and in one minute and a half the boats were pulling away from the ship. Their clothes hang in a bag beside their berths, and they grab it and

DRESS AS THEY GO.

The boat that get the first harpoon in gets an English pound for their harpoon thrower, and when several ships sight the same fish and each ship sends off several boats you can believe there is some good pulling done. The harpooner in the first boat generally encourages his crew with the promise of a pound of tobacco out of his prize money if they get him to the fish first.

"But the best long pulling is done when the first boat get a harpoon in and the fish has to tow it while the crew rest on their oars and wait for another boat to come up to catch up and get a line on. Then they bend to their oars, and keep it up ten or fifteen miles. This generally happened when we struck a fish that had her young with her. At other times they dive immediately they are struck. But a young fish must blow oftener than the mother, and a fish with young skims along the surface, carrying the young one on her back if too youthful to keep up with her. We once had a pull of twenty miles of that sort, and it was the prettiest regatta you ever seen. Don't know how much further we would have gone if the young devil hadn't slipped off its mother's flipper, and she turned around to find it. Then the man in the second boat struck her again, square between the eyes. If the harpoon thrower had missed his aim there would have been trouble on that boat. Nobody cares to get in front of a maddened fish, I can tell you, but that one turning back came on 'em unexpected like.

"Did I enjoy that kind of life? Well, I did. If I had my time to come over again that's just where I'd go—on an Arctic expedition. Healthiest climate in the world. Never heard of any of us being sick. They either freeze or starve to death up there. Only those two ways of going to Davy Jones' locker in the Arctics. No yellow fever and cholera as we get in the tropics. Don't wonder at the Greely survivors being ready to go again. Would do the same thing myself if I hadn't got my anchor down in fresh water in the shape of a wife and seven children to look after. There's no money in Arctic expeditions, but it's the independentest kind of a life."

The Newspapers of the World.

London, as might be expected, with its population of 4,000,000, takes precedence of all other great cities in its list of publications, which very nearly approaches 2,000. These have an annual circulation of about 1,017,000,000 copies.

But while London shows a longer catalogue than any other city, Paris, with a population of less than 2,000,000, issues 1553 periodicals, and these have an annual circulation of about 1,000,000,000 copies; so that, in point of fact, the citizens of Paris are far more liberally supplied with daily or weekly literary provender than their British neighbors. In fact it is estimated that the journalistic products of Paris amount annually to almost one-tenth of the issue of the entire press of the globe.

New York and Brooklyn (which bear to one another somewhat the same relation as Birkenhead to Liverpool) have a combined population nearly equal to that of Paris. They produce 587 publications, with an annual circulation of about 516,000,000; Berlin produces 536; Vienna, 483; Madrid, 253; Rome, 211, showing a gradual diminution till we reach St. Petersburgh, with a population of 601,969 and only 57 periodicals. The latter, however, are exceedingly varied, and offer something for all tastes—literary classes, medical students, horse-breeders, stock-rearers, musical societies, law, mathematics, horticulture, agriculture, the drama, commerce, satire, history, ecclesiastical questions, science, and a very limited allowance of politics.

I must not omit to notice one point of interest, suggested by the languages which chiefly predominate in this vast newspaper literature. Though there are comparatively few tongues which are not in some measure represented, we find that an enormous majority are published in four languages. As a matter of course English heads the list, inasmuch as English speaking races have peopled North America and Australasia. The German races rank second, the French third, and Spanish fourth; but, inasmuch as the latter tongue is the lingua franca of Mexico and South America, it is probable that it will find a more extensive circulation in print as these nations advance. Meanwhile, the proportion is as follows:—English, 16 500 publications; German, 7,350; French, 3,850; Spanish, 1 600.

Taking the nationality of the 34,000 papers of the world we find that close upon 32,000 are published in Europe and North America, leaving little over 2,000 for all the rest of the world! South America only issues a sufficient number to allow each of its inhabitants three newspapers a year—exhibiting the curious contrast in this, as in all else, between the great Northern and Southern Continents.

The combined annual product of Asia and Africa amounts to 227,000,000, which, in proportion to the population, would allow one copy in ten years for each person. Of course the newspaper circulation of Africa is confined to the extreme north and south, with a very feeble commencement on the west coast. In like manner Asia has neither supply nor demand except in parts of Turkey, Persia, China and Japan. Not a newspaper of any sorts is to be found in Arabia, Afghanistan, Beloochistan, or Turkestan.

Strange, to say, China, that nation which of all others holds literature (that is to say, its own dry-as-dust classics concerning a remote past) in highest honor, has so small a thirst for news of the present day, that it produces fewer papers than any other nation with the smallest claim to civilization. The proportion of newspapers to population is in the ratio of about one publication to 2,000,000 inhabitants. The Chinese Empire produces only 22 periodicals, of which 12 are in Chinese, 9 in English, and 1 in French. Even of this small number, the circulation is extraordinary small, and, as a rule, a newspaper may be said to be a thing unknown to the 400,000,000 inhabitants of the Celestial Empire.

A Curious Custom.

About 100 yards from Kilmainham Prison, Dublin, Ireland, is the ancient well of St. John, with which an old tradition is attached that water taken therefrom on the eve of the 24th of June possesses curative properties. This is firmly believed by many people, and quite 5,000 persons assembled at the well on that day recently, having made a pilgrimage there for that special purpose. It is regarded as essential that the water should be drawn before daylight on St. John's eve, and the pilgrims came provided with every class of vessel to bring away the precious fluid. The well is in a recess under a wall, and candles had to be used to light the people down the steps, the scene thus presented being of a weird character. The people dispersed about three in the morning.

A good editor must always be in his write mind.—[Merchant Traveller. And have a pen-chant for work.—[South and West. And be ink-quisitive about affairs that concern the public.—[Gorham Mountaineer.

THE SEA SERPENT.

In Canadian Waters—Passed off the Gaspe Coast on the Way to Montreal.

The much vexed sea serpent question is at last brought home to Canadians by the appearance of one of these monsters off the Gaspe coast. The creature was seen from the steamship "Silkworth," of Sunderland, which arrived at Montreal recently from Pictou, N. S., with a cargo of coal consigned to Wm. Muir & Sons. A reported visited the vessel at her berth in the new canal basin, and the chief officer, a gentleman of wide experience, very readily gave the particulars of the appearance of the monster. He stated that the point where the creature had been sighted was about midway between West Point, in Prince Edward Island, and Cape Gaspe, in the Province of Quebec. It was seen on Saturday morning between three and four o'clock. He was in charge of the deck for the middle watch and was pacing up and down the bridge when the lookout on the forecastle called out "There's a

QUEER LOOKING THING

on the starboard beam." He immediately looked in the direction indicated, and saw something about a quarter of a mile off. It was a remarkably clear moonlight night, and the sea was calm, and he could easily see what, in the momentary glance he took, looked like a sail. Without giving any particular attention to it, he thought it must be a vessel, but jokingly replied to the hail of the lookout that it was probably the sea serpent. He assured the reporter that previous to this, he looked upon sea serpent yarns as the sheerest nonsense. A second glance at the object, however, showed him that there was something remarkable about it, and this prompted him to take up the night glasses, and he brought them to bear upon it. The result was a perfect surprise to him, for there undeniably was the much doubted sea serpent. It rose from the water at the least. It appeared to rise perpendicularly from the sea by a movement which resembled more the opening of a telescope than anything else he could name. As it appeared above the water its body seemed to expand as if inflated with the air, and the body tapered off from the surface of the water towards the head. At the water, as near as he could judge, the diameter of the body must have been between three and four feet. The whole appearance of the creature was that of a huge conger eel, the head, which was an enormous size, resembling that of this species of fish in every particular, The head was the most prominent part of the creature and principally attracted his attention. The body of the beast appeared to be with black and light colored bars running round the body mingling in black at the back and a silver gray at the belly. After looking at the creature through the glass sufficiently long to comprehend what it was, he ran aft to notify the captain and a couple of passengers they had aboard. By the time they had hurried into their clothes and got on deck, however, the serpent had disappeared. It appeared suddenly to sight the ship and sank beneath the water with the same steady telescopic movement with which it had elevated itself, although quicker. The part of the brute which appears particularly to have impressed itself upon his memory was the mouth, which much resembled that of a shark. About two teet below the head

BETWEEN TWENTY AND THIRTY FEET

STRIPED LIKE A MACKEREL

TWO TREMENDOUS FINS.

stuck out from the body, extending for several feet on either side. Fortunately the creature rose to the surface again and was seen by Captain Read and the passengers, or the serpent might have been set down as the fruit of the imaginations of himself, the lookout and the wheelman. As a matter of fact he remarked that even with so many reliable witnesses as to the genuiness of the serpent he would not have believed in it, had he not seen it with his own eyes. He had, he said, given the matter serious consideration since seeing the serpent, and he is now unable to account for his previous scepticism on the subject of sea serpents, as it is easy to suppose that sea eels are capable of attaining a gigantic size. The serpent on the second occasion of rising was about half a mile distant from the ship and well within the range of the night glass. It rose in the same quiet manner as before and was exposed to view altogether about three minutes. Before sinking below the surface it opened its mouth to its fullest extent, as if gulping in a supply of air, and closing its jaws gave vent to resembling both a dog's bark and the lowing of a cow. The noise was one of the most horrifying things imaginable, and involuntarily all on the deck of the "Silkworth" trembled when they heard it.

A LOUD BELLOW

The lookout and the other members of the steamship's crew who saw the creature corroborate the chief officer's statement in every particular, and the affair is regularly entered in the log. The lookout states that he first saw it when its head had risen above the surface, and his attention was directed to it as the only object in sight.

SANCTUM-ONIOUS LEVITY.

The key to wealth—luc-key.

Many are comfortable only when others are not.

The argument of ignorance is often based on the force of bigotry.

Clothes don't always make the man—unless he sells them at a good profit.

No tombstones mark the graves in the cemetery where lost hopes are interred.

The world is a great barber shop and every man waits his turn to be shaved.

Men and horses differ. The latter is worthless unless he is broke, and the former is worthless if he is ditto.

The bee that is loudly proclaiming that the world owes it a living goes honeyless to bed.

More money can be made by one day's strict attention to one's own business than by ten day's minding the affairs of one's neighbor.

Lover of the Antique—"What's the price of that antique Louis XIV. cabinet?" Bric-a-Brac dealer—"Five hundred dollars." "Mercy! Why, a friend of mine got one just like that for $150." "Where?" "At Milburgville, Conn." "O, of course: you can't expect us to compete with Milburgville." "And why not?" "That's where they make 'em."

THE TURKS AND EGYPT.

Envious of England's Supremacy—Baron Hirsch and the New Railway.

The Turks have now very little to say about the conference. They were hoping for much wider issues than merely financial agreement in respect to Egypt's indebtedness; but seeing that neither France nor Germany would support the demand for the withdrawal of the British troops they care little as to what may be said or done, provided there be no further encroachments upon the sultan's rights. The hint thrown out as to the future neutralization of Egypt is not at all relished at Constantinople. The advisers of the sultan do not understand that if an arrangement of that nature could be really effected it would be the surest possible guarantee for the preservation of such rights as the sultan has been left by the course of British action in Egypt. To them it wears the aspect only of an independent Mussulman state, created at the expense of the Ottoman empire, which might eventually seek to become its rival. Turkey was quite prepared to send troops, if called upon to do so by the conference, both for the maintenance of order in Egypt proper and the subjugation of the Soudan. Mouktar Pasha was to have been intrusted with the command of ten thousand men, with a certain Hadji Achmet Pasha, who speaks Arabic well and has had much experience in dealing with Arabs, as his second in command.

The Turco-Servian railway junction may be looked upon as a settled thing, although it will doubtless be some time yet before a final iradeh on the subject is issued. What all Baron Calice's insistence at the porte and Prince Rudolph's recent visit to Constantinople failed to effect has been brought about, apparently, by a timely present of horseflesh to the sultan. His imperial majesty has a real passion for horses. He understands their management well, and is both a good hand at the reins and a bold rider. The delicate flattery conveyed in such a tribute to his favorite pursuit as the six superb horses sent by the Emperor Franz Josef could not be withstood by one whose generosity is likely to pass into a proverb, and as the most pleasing acknowledgement of the same in his power to make, the sultan decided to allow serious negotiations to commence with Baron Hirsch for the construction of the required length of railway. The Turkish railway king is expected here shortly to conduct the affair in person. He is sure to succeed, as no one knows so well how, when, and where to use the arguments that alone carry weight in Turkey as the wily baron, who has managed to have a huge railway system constructed in the name of the porte with other people's money, apparently for his sole benefit.

Not satisfied with what he has already made out of the affair, to the prejudice of the Ottoman treasury, the lessee of the Roumelian lines now comes forward with an offer which is no compliment to the acuteness of the Turks. The baron is ready to undertake the construction of the line at his own expense, and to work it, giving the Ottoman government, as his draft contract declares, a large share of the gross receipts. This sounds well, but a very cursory examination will show that the proposed bargain is all in favor of Baron Hirsch. The new line is to form a link in the general system, and as such is leased with the other sections to the constructor until such time as the share of the receipts carried to the credit of the porte shall have reached the amount expended upon it by Baron Hirsch. The Ottoman government is to receive 47½ per cent of the gross receipts upon the whole lines—so runs the proposed arrangement. It would seem, however, that before any division at all is made 7,000 francs per kilometer have to be handed over to the working company as cost of administration and working, etc. It may be safely predicted that for many years to come the books of the company will show little in the way of earnings beyond the 7,000 francs above referred to, and thus the new contract with Hirsch, if concluded, will tend to secure the possession of these railways to him for an indefinite period.

There is joy among the Armenian saraffs. His imperial majesty has ordered the grand vizier to make some arrangement for the payment of the havallehs. For the benefit of the uninitiated, it may be explained that a havalleh is a bill upon a provincial treasury. These bills are given when the treasure-chests of the department are dry, either in payment for goods purchased or as salaries to the army and navy. Usually they were discounted for cash at rates varying from 40 to 50 per cent. discount. Eventually they were paid in full, so that the traffic in havallehs was very profitable. Recently the grand vizier obtained a iradeh, putting a stop to all further encashment of these bills, and so they became a drug in the market. The holders, however, have been vigorously attacking the generosity of the sultan by petitions, and at last made a formidable demonstration at the palace, which in the time of Mahmoud would have sent their heads rolling in the dust. A deputation of some sixty persons drove in carriages to Yildiz, asking permission to lay a petition at the feet of their sovereign. After some parleying, three of their number were admitted to the presence of the chief chamberlain, and they placed in his hand a statement of their grievances for transmission to his majesty. The reader should understand that it is not the intention of the government to repudiate these papers, but merely to put a stop to the traffic which has benefited a few officials while enriching a lot of usurers at the expense of the army and navy. The idea is to obtain a proper account of this portion of the floating debt by compelling registration before settlement.
—Constantinople Cor. New York Herald.

Pleasant People.

We are sometimes surprised to find how many pleasant people there are sojourning upon this planet, and how ready they are to do and say pleasant things, and fill the world with "sweetness and light" for others. Sometimes when we least expect it, when it has seemed to us as if almost everybody was made upon the bias, so to speak, we suddenly happen upon one of these pleasant people, and the cobwebs are all swept out of our heaven and the whole complexion of things is changed. They make a dull day cheerful; they have something of the same effect in a room as an open fire or bouquet of flowers; or they are like the trill of a brook hidden in a still wood, or the unexpected whistle of a bird in early spring.

A rolling stone gathers no moss. Neither does a paving stone for the matter of that.

THE BASTINADO.

A Terrible Punishment Inflicted on Robbers—Graphic Description by An Eye-Witness.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 15.—The surrounding Constantinople are infested by robbers who have for some time carried on their trade almost with impunity. The police have recently made an effort and a dozen of the thieves were captured. They were given a summary trial and the bastinado was inflicted upon two of them, the others were acquitted for want of evidence.

THE BASTINADO.

Mr. Hilaire Gay, a Genevan gentleman, has published a brochure in which he relates his experiences of torture in Egypt. "The second time that I presented myself at the Prefecture," he writes, "I was compelled to witness, much against my will, the punishment of the bastinado inflicted on two unfortunate Arabs, and on several subsequent occasions I had to undergo a similar ordeal. I hesitate to describe these scenes, which to us Europeans recall the darkest days of mediæval times; but it is nevertheless my duty as a faithful chronicler to set forth the most striking facts that come under my observation I must ask my readers to overcome their repugnance and accompany me to the place of torture. His Excellency Osman Bey is seated on the divan of a room of cold and sinister aspect, the floor covered with large slabs and lighted by two windows looking on the street. He wears the *stramboulin*e, or official costume, a frock-coat with a straight collar, waistcoat, black trousers and fez. His face, of a light olive tint, is adorned with a scanty black beard and whiskers, the nose is strong, the lips are thick, the eyes dark and deep. Though rather short, he is well formed and above middle height. When Osman Bey smiles his countenance becomes pleasing and amiable, but when the smile is absent his regard is cold and stern. Near him, before a little table covered with green baize, sits his secretary.

THE PREFECT.

"As I walk up the room a clock strikes the hour of two. The Prefect offers me his hand, and at his invitation I take a seat by his side. Then a negro, clad in a long robe and wearing on his head an enormous yellow turban, brings me a little cup of coffee and a bundle of cigarettes. As I give back my cup to this imposing servitor, two Arabs, escorted by two guards, are brought before the Prefect. These unfortunates seem to belong to the poorest of the people; their feet are bare, their clothing is wretchedly ragged, their hands tremble convulsively, their eyes are haggard, and their lips twitch in apprehension as they listen in mournful silence to the words addressed to them by the Prefect. But they answer his questions with feverish vivacity, and after the exchange of a few words two of the prisoners are led from the room. Then five men enter. These are the torturers, and nothing more fell or hang-dog than their looks can be imagined. Four of them seize the Arab who is still standing before the Prefect, and the poor wretch, as he falls on the ground, throws at him a glance eloquent with agony and fear, but the great man's countenance remains fixed and passive, and he makes no sign of grace.

THE VICTIM.

"The victim was then placed on one of the slabs with his chest resting on the floor, in which position he was held by two of the executioners. Two others next raised his legs until his feet were in a horizontal position, a position in which they were retained by means of a cord fastened to either end of a stick. Each man held the stick with one hand while with the other he kept firm hold of one of the Arab's legs. In the grip of these four powerful and expert men it was impossible for him to move and almost impossible for him to writhe. On this the fifth torturer, who had taken no part in the preliminary proceedings, came forward, holding in his hand a sort of lash composed of five strands of twisted gut or hide. The face of this man was singularly hideous and repulsive—the yellow and tawny skin, the low forehead, the round eyes, dull and fixed, the thick black eyebrows, the unkempt chin retreating from coarse, thick lips, the creased and furrowed cheeks, imparted to the countenance of the chief executioner an air of ferocious and bestial stupidity.

THE TORMENTOR.

"The tormentor raised his arm and struck with the regularity of a pendulum the upturned feet of his helpless victim. At the fourth stroke the Arab uttered a cry of pain, and at every fresh stroke the cry was repeated. But soon the cry became a scream, the flagellated flesh visibly shuddered, and the soles were seamed with red and livid streaks. Sitting silently on my couch, chewing mechanically the tobacco of my extinguished cigarette, I could not help shivering with horror at the sight of so much suffering. I felt as if I were under the influence of some terrible nightmare. Osman Bey, his secretary, the five executioners, with their stern and sinister features, looking unmoved at so cruel a sight, seemed for a moment rather the creations of a diseased imagination than beings of flesh and blood; but the heavy thud of the stick and the screams of the victim recalled me to the sad reality which I was so reluctantly witnessing. Then the punishment ceased and the Arab, with ghastly face, and body shaken with a feverish trembling, had to incline himself respectfully before the man by whose order he had been so cruelly tormented. Helped by a guard, for his maimed and bleeding feet refused to support him, he was then led, still moaning with agony, from the torture chamber. The two other Arabs were afterwards punished in like manner. It was now past three o'clock, and his Excellency, putting on his most pleasant smile, gave me his orders concerning the service of the police. I then saluted him and hurried away from the place where I had seen the practical application of barbarous jurisprudence."

In Vino "Vulgaritas."—The earl of B—, to a ... romonger, stiffly: "Yes, Mr. Ballicrop, that is a good glass of wine, as you say. It is, in fact, sir, some of my '39 port—a rare wine, as it is called." Mr. Ballicrop, member of parliament: "Lor, bless me, my lord! You don't say so? That's '39 port? Why that's only three and three a bottle! Wherever d'ye you get it, my lord, eh? I 'aven't a drop in my cellar that stands me in less than five an' six, and that's the truth."

A German scientist says that one cubic foot of air contains fifteen million insects, and a traveling man says that the country hotel beds he has been sleeping in must be built entirely of air.

UP A POLE.

A Line Repairer's Story.

...e of my companions had a queer ...
...ing stock of the whole party fo...
... We ... stringing a line of w...
... Elmira ... on one of ...
...ipal streets. Jim, as we called ...
..., shinned up a high pole and began fa...
...g a wire to an insulator. The cross-b...
...ust in front of a fourth story windo...
... Jim was not more than forty-eig...
... from the building. A boy on t...
... yelled "The pole is fallin,' and J...
...ed through the open window. Wh...
...ghted inside he found he was in a nic...
... little bedroom with little boxes ...
..., and numerous bottles of perfume...
... about on the stands and shelves. Ji...
...'t the slightest idea what to do. H...
... not attempt to climb back on the pol...
... he could hear voices in the next roo...
...aited below for him, thinking he w...
...g down the inside stairway while ...
...rembling inside for fear the regul...
...ant of the room might enter. Finall...
...d a paper to a thread and let it dow...
...ad; What the d—l shall I do? I'...
...d up here in some infernal old maid...
...oom." We let him stay up there ha...
...our longer, and then went up and mad...
...are right with the tenants."

Persian Imitations of Antiques.

...e art of manufacturing "Brumagem ... appears to be rapidly extending a... the globe. Japan and China, not t... of France and America, have lon... taken up the trade, but among th... recent to enter the field are the sub... of the King of Kings, as he like... styled, the Shah of Persia. An Ameri... Consul in that country gives an inter... account of how the modern Persian... by the present craze or mania for an... among the British and American... ays:—

...at has been lost by Persia in the pear... she seems likely to make up in par... new industry of manufacturing imi... of ancient Persian armor and coins... the extensive demands of European... rs. But the museums of Europe long... absorbed most of the best specimens... most interesting of the industrial arts... East. Specimens still exist but are... ily obtained and only at a high price, ... those able to ferret out the old fam... If there are no armies now to be clad... ved and inlaid helmets, breast plates, ... buckles, there is an army of collectors, ..., and virtuosi, studios or banqueting ... and the artists of Persia have taken up ...iness of manufacturing old arms which ... be purchased for reasonable prices. ...mes these pseudo-antiques are sold ... little attempt to conceal the fact that ... are new, while in many cases much cun... has been exercised in giving them the ...rance of antiquity. Only an expert ... detect the difference between some of ... imitations and the genuine antique. ...Jews of Hamadan also carry on an ex...e manufacture of spurious antique ... That city, the ancient Ecbatana, ...ds above any other city in Persia, pro..., in antiquities, and the soil seems to ...l of gold and silver ornaments, coins, ... the like. Although pretty well dug ... of late years, yet the supply does not ... to be exhausted. Fine examples of ...oins of Alexander the Great and the ...idæ are common, but the greed with ... they have been snatched up by trav... has led the Jews of that city to con... it easier to counterfeit them than to ... them. A steady supply of spurious ... is therefore constantly furnished the ...et from this source. Even gold an... are thus imitated, having a coating of ...old, and cleverly simulating all the ...rance of age."

Living on Human Flesh.

Winnipeg special to the Chicago Tri... says: W.B. McBride, of Chicago, who ...rived here from a trip to the Rocky ...tains, brings word that a man named ...m Owens, a California miner, was ... by some railway navvies near Kick... Course river a few days ago in a fam... and partially demented condition. ... said he started June 13, with Joseph ...mson, from Kamloops on a prospect...rip, expecting to strike the Columbus ..., but their supply of provisions gave ...efore reaching there. They travelled ...ix days and a half without food, ... Williamson laid down and died, ... then cut strips of flesh from his dead ...nion's legs, which he ate sparingly, ...ceeded on his tramp. He had been ... six days on human flesh when found ...ill had a quantity of the dried flesh in ... handkerchief. He was very weak and ...ated, and told his story with difficulty. ...peated the horrible details on several ...ons and all who heard him are con... that the story is true. He had a ...roll of bills with him. The police have ... the matter in hand and will investi...

The Cherubs.

...friend sends the following: "Last ...mas eve Mrs. J—— went up stairs to ... the children had hung up their stock... for Santa Claus, and found that little ... had pinned up his in a prominent ..., with a slip of paper attached, con... this suggestive sentence, 'The Lord ... a cheerful giver.'"

..., why do you not need torchlight pro... during the campaign when we have ... corps?" asked the 8 year old. "Give ... my son." Because the drums are tor... enough." Whack! Whack! Whack! ... slipper.

... eminent astronomer says "it would ... ten years to photograph the heavens. Pretty near as long as it would to ...graph the baby.

...ell, my young gentlemen and how ... you like to get your hair cut? "Oh, ...papa's, please—with a little round hole ... top."

"... it, mamma," said a bright little ..., a girl as she brought a piece of bread ... butter to her mother which she had ...ed on the floor butter side down.

"... dear," said a wife to her husband, "... a party of men should break into ... some night when you were away, ... what would you do?"

"... is not a supposeable case," he re...

"... know it is not likely to occur, but just ... it."

"... impossible."

"Well, you certainly can imagine it."

"No I can't, my dear."

THE BASTINADO.

A Terrible Punishment Inflicted on Robbers—Graphic Description by An Eye-Witness.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 15 ... surrounding Constantinople are infested ... robbers who have for some time carried on their trade almost ... police have recently made an effort ... a dozen of the thieves were captured ... were given a summary trial and the bastinado was inflicted upon two of them ... others were acquitted for want of evidence.

THE BASTINADO.

Mr. Hilaire Gay, a Genevan gentleman, has published a brochure in which he ... his experiences of torture in Egypt:— "... second time that I presented myself ... Prefecture," he writes, "I was compelled to witness, much against my will, the punishment of the bastinado inflicted on unfortunate Arabs, and on several subsequent occasions I had to undergo a similar ordeal. I hesitate to describe these ... which to us Europeans recall the days of mediæval times; but it being my duty as a faithful chronicler to set forth the most striking facts that come under my observation I must ask my readers to overcome their repugnance and accompany me to the place of torture. His Excellency Osman Bey is seated on the divan of a room of cold and sinister aspect, the ... covered with large slabs and lighted by windows looking on the street. He ... the *stramboulin*e, or official costume, a frock-coat with a straight collar, ... waistcoat, black trousers and tarboosh. His face, of a light olive tint, is adorned with a scanty black beard and whiskers; the nose is strong, the lips are thick, eyes dark and deep. Though rather ... he is well formed and above middle height. When Osman Bey smiles his countenance becomes pleasing and amiable, but when the smile is absent his regard is cold and stern. Near him, before a little table covered with green baize, sits his secretary.

THE PREFECT.

"As I walk up the room a clock strikes the hour of two. The Prefect offers me his hand, and at his invitation I take a seat by his side. Then a negro, clad in a long robe and wearing on his head an enormous yellow turban, brings me a little cup of coffee and a bundle of cigarettes. As I ... my cup to this imposing servitor, ... Arabs, escorted by two guards, are led before the Prefect. These unfortunates ... belong to the poorest of the people; ... are bare, their clothing is worn and ragged, their hands tremble convulsively, their eyes are haggard, and their ... watch in apprehension as they listen in mournful silence to the words addressed to them by the Prefect. But they answer questions with feverish vivacity, and after an exchange of a few words two of the prisoners are led from the room. Then ... enter. These are the torturers, ... nothing more fell or hang-dog than ... can be imagined. Four of them ... Arab who is still standing before ... fect, and the poor wretch, as he is ... the ground, throws at him a glance ... with agony and fear, but the ... 's countenance remains fixed and ... ive, and he makes no sign of grace.

THE VICTIM.

The victim was then placed on ... slabs with his chest resting on the ... which position he was held by two of ... utioners. Two others next raised ... until his feet were in a horizontal ... a position in which they were retained by means of a cord fastened to either ... stick. Each man held the stick ... hand while with the other he kept ... of one of the Arab's legs. In the ... ese four powerful and expert men ... impossible for him to move and almost impossible for him to writhe. On this ... torturer, who had taken no part in ... minary proceedings, came forward ... g in his hand a sort of lash consisting of ... strands of twisted gut or hide. ... f this man was singularly hideous ... ive—the yellow and tawny skin, ... forehead, the round eyes, dull and ... thick black eyebrows, the ... in retreating from coarse, thick ... eased and furrowed cheeks, imparted a countenance of the chief executioner of ferocious and bestial stupidity.

THE TORMENTOR.

The tormentor raised his arm and struck with the regularity of a pendulum the ... feet of his helpless victim. At ... stroke the Arab uttered a cry ... and at every fresh stroke the cry ... d. But soon the cry became a scream ... gellated flesh visibly shuddered, ... les were seamed with red and ... Sitting silently on my cushion ... g mechanically the tobacco of ... nished cigarette, I could not ... g with horror at the sight of so m... g. I felt as if I were under the ... of some terrible nightmare. Osman ... is secretary, the five executioners ... eir stern and sinister features, ... moved at so cruel a sight, seemed ... nt rather the creations of a disordered imagination than beings of flesh ... but the heavy thud of the stroke ... screams of the victim recalled me ... reality which I was so reluctant ... ng. Then the punishment ceased ... Arab, with ghastly face, and ... with a feverish trembling, had ... himself respectfully before the ... e order he had been so cruelly ... Helped by a guard, for his maimed ... ding feet refused to support him, ... n led, still moaning with agony ... torture chamber. The two others ... were afterwards punished in ... It was now past three o'clock ... Excellency, putting on his ... smile, gave me his orders concerning ... service of the police. I then saluted ... hurried away from the place where ... een the practical application of ... s jurisprudence."

... o "Vulgaritas."—The earl of B... , stiffly: "Yes, Mr. Ballicrop, ... good glass of wine, as you say. ... sir, some of my '39 port—a ... t is called." Mr. Ballicrop, ... parliament: "Lor, bless me, ... You don't say so? That's ... Why that's only three and ... Wherever d'ye you get ... I 'aven't a drop in my cellar ... in less than five an' six, and the ..."

... man scientist says that ... of air contains fifteen million ... a traveling man says that ... otel beds he has been sleeping ... uilt entirely of air.

UP A POLE.

A Line Repairer's Story.

One of my companions had a queer experience ... laughing stock of the whole party for a ... We were stringing a line of wire ... Elmira, and were on one of the ... streets. Jim, as we called the ... shinned up a high pole and began fastening a wire to an insulator. The cross-bar ... just in front of a fourth story window, ... Jim was not more than forty-eight ... from the building. A boy on the ... yelled: 'The pole is falling,' and Jim ... through the open window. When ... lighted inside he found he was in a nice, ... little bedroom with little boxes of ... and numerous bottles of perfumery ... about on the stands and shelves. Jim ... the slightest idea what to do. He ... not attempt to climb back on the pole, ... could hear voices in the next room. ... waited below for him, thinking he was ... coming down the inside stairway while he ... trembling inside for fear the regular ... occupant of the room might enter. Finally, ... a paper to a thread and let it down. ... ; What the d—l shall I do? I'm ... up here in some infernal old maid's ... room.' We let him stay up there half ... hour longer; and then went up and made ... right with the tenants."

Persian Imitations of Antiques.

The art of manufacturing "Brumagem" ... appears to be rapidly extending all ... the globe. Japan and China, not to ... of France and America, have long ... taken up the trade, but among the ... recent to enter the field are the subjects of the King of Kings, as he likes ... styled, the Shah of Persia. An American Consul in that country gives an interesting account of how the modern Persians ... by the present craze or mania for antiques among the British and American. ... says:—

... has been lost by Persia in the pearl ... she seems likely to make up in part ... new industry of manufacturing imitations of ancient Persian armor and coins ... the extensive demands of European ... But the museums of Europe long ... absorbed most of the best specimens ... most interesting of the industrial arts ... East. Specimens still exist but are ... only obtained and only at a high price, ... by those able to ferret out the old family ... If there are no armies now to be clad ... carved and inlaid helmets, breast plates, ... buckles, there is an army of collectors, ... and virtuosi, studios or banqueting ... and the artists of Persia have taken up ... business of manufacturing old arms which ... be purchased for reasonable prices. ... times these pseudo-antiques are sold ... little attempt to conceal the fact that ... are new, while in many cases much cunning has been exercised in giving them the ... appearance of antiquity. Only an expert ... detect the difference between some of ... imitations and the genuine antique. ... Jews of Hamadan also carry on an extensive manufacture of spurious antique ... That city, the ancient Ecbatana, ... stands above any other city in Persia, pro... in antiquities, and the soil seems to ... of gold and silver ornaments, coins, ... the like. Although pretty well dug ... of late years, yet the supply does not ... to be exhausted. Fine examples of ... coins of Alexander the Great and the ... idæ are common, but the greed with ... they have been snatched up by travellers has led the Jews of that city to consider it easier to counterfeit them than to ... for them. A steady supply of spurious ... is therefore constantly furnished the ... market from this source. Even gold an... are thus imitated, having a coating of ... gold, and cleverly simulating all the ... appearance of age."

Living on Human Flesh.

Winnipeg special to the Chicago Tribune says: W.B. McBride, of Chicago, who arrived here from a trip to the Rocky ... mountains, brings word that a man named ... Owens, a California miner, was ... by some railway navvies near Kicking Horse river a few days ago in a famished and partially demented condition. ... said he started June 13, with Joseph ... Williamson, from Kamloops on a prospecting trip, expecting to strike the Columbus ... but their supply of provisions gave ... before reaching there. They travelled ... six days and a half without food, ... Williamson laid down and died, ... then cut strips of flesh from his dead companion's legs, which he ate sparingly, ... proceeded on his tramp. He had been ... six days on human flesh when found ... still had a quantity of the dried flesh in ... handkerchief. He was very weak and ... emaciated, and told his story with difficulty. ... repeated the horrible details on several ... occasions and all who heard him are convinced that the story is true. He had a ... roll of bills with him. The police have ... the matter in hand and will investigate.

The Cherubs.

... friend sends the following: "Last ... Christmas eve Mrs. J——went up stairs to ... the children had hung up their stockings for Santa Claus, and found that little ... had pinned up his in a prominent ... with a slip of paper attached, containing this suggestive sentence, 'The Lord ... a cheerful giver.'"

..., why do you not need torchlight processions during the campaign when we have ... corps?" asked the 8 year old. "Give ... my son." Because the drums are torturing enough." Whack! Whack! Whack! ... the slipper.

... eminent astronomer says "it would ... ten years to photograph the heavens. ... Pretty near as long as it would to ... photograph the baby.

"Well, my young gentlemen and how ... you like to get your hair cut? "Oh, ... papa's, pleare—with a little round hole ... top."

"Sweep it, mamma," said a bright litttle ... girl as she brought a piece of bread ... butter to her mother which she had ... dropped on the floor butter side down.

"My dear," said a wife to her husband, "suppose a party of men should break into ... house some night when you were away, ... abduct me, what would you do?" "That is not a supposeable case," he re... "I know it is not likely to occur, but just ... suppose it." "Impossible." "Well, you certainly can imagine it." "... I can't, my dear."

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

Wounds given to honor never heal.

Never accuse others to excuse yourself.

He that sips of many arts, drinks of none.

Busy fools ... labor ... but ... peddling ... hope.

He who lives but for himself lives but for a little thing.

Our acts make or mar us; we are the children of our own deeds.

Human government is imperfect because human nature is.

Fiction pleases the more in proportion as it resembles truth.

Innocence is like polished armour, it adorns and defends.

Who so keepeth his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from trouble.

To succeed one must sometimes be very bold, and sometimes very prudent.

Sincerity is the way to heaven. To think how to be sincere is the way of man.

There is no knife thas cuts so sharply and with such poisoned blade as treachery.

As to trouble, who expects to find cherries without stones, or roses without thorns?

Vanity keeps persons in favor with themselves who are out of favor with all others.

Religion is not a thing of noise and spasm, but of silent self-sacrifice and quiet growth.

Live on what you have; live if you can on less; do not borrow, for vanity will end in shame.

If you had the abilities of all the great men past and present, you could do nothing well, with out sincerely meaning it, and setting about it.

Many persons fancy themselves friendly when they are only officious. They counsel not so much that they should become wise, as that they should be recognized as teachers of wisdom.

Verily, verily, travellers have seen many idols in many countries; but no human eyes have ever seen more daring, gross, and shocking images of the Divine nature than we creatures of the dust make in our own likenesses of our own bad passions.

Christianity means to the merchant that he should be honest; to the judge it means that he should be just: to the servant, that he should be faithful; to the schoolboy that he should be diligent; to the street-sweeper, that he should sweep clean; to every worker that his work shall be well done:

There is a "divine discontent" which lies at the root of all improvement, and without which we should stagnate. The indolence which craves nothing but quiet, the stupidity which sees nothing to hope or work for, and the vanity which is self-satisfied through its ignorance of better things are all foes to happiness and clogs upon progress.

An Old Enemy.

Macpheaton, an eminent cholera historian, says that the cholera is one of the most ancient diseases of which distinct descriptions exist, and there are few diseases respecting which such an interrupted chain of evidence has been preserved.

Sporadic, or spasmodic, cholera prevailed in the time af Hippocrates (B. C. 460), of which he gives a description, showing all the characteristics of the disease at the same time.

Avurveda, of Sucruta, in Sanscrit, describes a fatal disease called visuchika, embracing all of the striking symptoms of the cholera of the present day.

In A. D 7, Celsus gives a full account of the disease at that time, as, also, Galen in A. D, 381; Alexander, of Trallas, 460; Paulus Ægureta, 760; Rhazes, of Bagdad, 900, Arisenna, in 1000, and we find a history of its prevalence down to the present date.

The birthplace of cholera is admitted by all cholera historians to be in the delta of the Ganges, spreading thence over the globe through the medium of the religious and commercial gatherings.

An Indian Fable.

An owl, puffed up with pride and vanity, was repeating his doleful cries at midnight, from the hollow of an old oak. "How is it," he said, "that silence prevails in these woods, unless it be to allow my melodious voice to be heard with effect? Surely the groves are charmed with my voice, and when I sing all nature listens." An echo repeated the words, "All nature listens." "The nightingale has usurped my rights," continued the owl; "his note is sweet, it is true, but mine is much more melodious." "Much more melodious," repeated the echo. Excited by the approval, the owl, at the rising of the sun, instead of going to sleep as usual, continued to join his horrible hooting with the matin songs of other birds. But they were disgusted by the sounds, and with one consent attacked the owl and drove him from their society, harassing him wherever he appeared, so that to escape from them he was glad to avoid the light and return to obscurity. Vain people fancy that their imaginary perfections are the cause of admiration in others, and mistake their self-flattery for the voice of fame.

Directions for Intelligent Lying.

1. Never tell an unnecessary lie.
2. Never tell a lie at all unless required by honor or the exigencies of society.
3. When you tell one, remember it and stick to it.
4. Tell it with perfect politeness and an air of conviction.
5. If your statement is questioned, say, as to those parts of it which are true, that you may be mistaken (you can prove them); pledge your word to the rest if it is a question of honor.

She Needed Rest.

Fair Patient—"Have you any idea what is the matter with me, doctor?"

"Doctor—"Why, I can diagnose your case, miss, with my eyes shut. There is nothing the matter with you except that you need rest.

Fair Patient—"Why, I have just come back from a whole month at the most popular health resorts."

Doctor—"Yes, as I said, you need rest."

Pullman cars are a great comfort to travellers in Mexico. The wise bandits never bother the passengers. They go for the porters.

Not another Pill shall go down my throat again, said a citizen "when I can get such a prompt and pleasant cure for my Billious attacks, such as Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It renders the Blood Pure and Cool and is a splendid Spring Medicine. Large bottles 50 cents.

Treatment of Criminals.

A somewhat remarkable account appears in the Paris Temps on the way in which persons convicted of murder are treated in some of the European states where capital punishment is either abolished or never enforced. In Belgium it appears that many murderers who are confined under life sentences, may be seen "going about unshackled or working at some easy occupation, like toy making, in cells that have been made to look homelike with pictures and other little things which the convict has bought out of his earnings. This is one way of punishing murderers, because the king is too tender hearted to allow a capital sentence to take effect. The other side of the picture is shown in Italy, where conscientious scruples also prevent the executioner from doing his duty." Passamante, who tried to murder King Humbert in 1878, is confined in the Island of Elba. He is secured to the wall of an almost dark cell by a chain five feet in length, which is riveted to an iron ring around his ankle, and which does not allow him to take more than one step in any direction. His keepers are forbidden to speak to him or answer his questions. He has become imbecile. The most sensational French novelist never invented anything worse than this of the Bastile in its palmiest days.

A Good Meal.

Charles Dickens used to say that he judged the quality of house-keeping by the condition of the castors on the table. If the mustard was freshly made, the vinegar cruet stainless, the silver brilliant, and the pepper-boxes perpendicular, he expected a good, clean, well-served meal, "with behavour to match," If, on the contrary, the castors were unclean, and out of order, he knew what he had to expect, and was seldom disappointed. It is, in truth, simple things that denote quality. The test of a good cook is not the cake she can make, nor the mysterous sausage she can concoct, nor the rich pudding she can produce. A good cook is known by her boiled potatoes, her mutton chop, her roasted joint. Such plain things require personal care and judgment, and are the basis of "a good meal."

Universal Testimony

Cannot be disputed, and the case is yet to be heard from in which Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor has failed to perform a perfect cure. This with painless and rapid action and freedom from annnyance during use. The great corn and bunion cure stands unrivalled. Sure, safe, painless. Beware of frauds offered as substitutes for the great corn cure, Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. N C Polson & Co., Kingston, proprietors. Use no other.

Russia on several occasions sent expeditions to the Poles and got around them very successfully.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star.

Enos says he will reside in Canada permanently. Enos where he is well off.

Oh! how tired and weak I feel, I don't believe I will ever get through this Spring house-cleaning! Oh yes you will if you take a bottle or two of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters to purify your blood and tone up the system. In large bottles 50 cents.

There is nothing so tiresome as the dude except the talk about him.

A Single Trial

Is all that is needed to prove that Poison's NERVILINE is the most rapid and certain remedy in the world for pain. It only costs 10 cents for a trial bottle. A single trial bottle will prove Nerviline to be equally efficacious as an external or internal remedy, and for pain of every description it has no equal. Try a 10-cent sample bottle. Sold by druggists. Large bottles 25 cents. Avoid substitutes.

To count but few things necessary is the foundation of many virtues.

Young Men! Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated Electro-Volatic Belt and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Happiness is like the statue of Isis, whose veil no mortal ever raised.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

MEN WANTED

Active pushing men wanted to wholesale my famous teas to consumers. Salary from $600 to $1000 per year. Send stamp for particulars, JAMES LAUT, Importer, Toronto.

PARTY WANTED TO PURCHASE CARRIAGE shops 24 x 118 feet; double stoop, with office 24 x ...; blacksmith's shop, 20 x 42; lumber, barn, and shed, horse barn, two acres of land with dwelling-house suitable for two small families, two cisterns, cellar, and well; situated at Rose Corners, four miles from Belleville, on main gravelled road; good locality, where a business from $8,000 to $10,000 per annum is done. The premises are new in full blast, and will be sold to good live man at a bargain. HARFORD ASHLEY, Belleville.

GUELPH BUSINESS COLLEGE

GUELPH, ONT.,

Offers the best facilities for obtaining a thorough preparation for a successful business career. The latest and most approved methods of instruction are adopted. Six Teachers and Lecturers, including two first class Penmen, are permanently employed. The Annual College Circular will be mailed free to any address.

MacCormick, Begle & Timmins.

There are lots of people going around grumbling, and half sick at the Stomach all the time; who might be well and happy, if they only used Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters occasionally. It is a splendid Blood Purifier. All Druggists 50 cents.

PHRENOLOGY. EXAMINATIONS GIVEN. WALLACE MASON, ...

WHEAT ... Rye ...

THOS. GALLOWAY ... Co., ... Woollen ... pet, and ... Dundas, Ont

1883-St. John Exhibition-1883

Leather Belting, Fire Engine Hose, &c. Four First Prizes and Two Diplomas. The highest of all Awards for Leather Belting and Fire Engine Hose were accorded by the Judges at the St. John Centennial and Dominion Exhibition, to ROBIN & SADLER, Montreal, over all competitors.

W. & F. P. CURRIE & Co.

100 Grey Nun Street, Montreal.

Importers of

Drain Pipes, Portland Cement, Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings, Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting, Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay, Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay

Manufacturers of

Bessemer Steel Sofa, Chair & Bed Springs

MACHINERY. For sale 1 Westinghouse Traction Farm Engine. 1 Able Triumph do. 1 G. C. Morrison do. 1 8 h. p. Portable Engine and Boiler on Skids. 1 35 h. p. Horozontal by Northy. 1 do. by Waterous with cut off valve, and 20 engines and boilers of smaller sizes, all thoroughly refitted before leaving shop. 2 24-inch Planers and Matchers. 1 20-inch Pony Planer. 1 Iron Frame Tenoning machine. 1 Blind Slat Tenoner. 1 Buggy Plainer or jointer. 2 band saws. 10 Saw Tables. 1 Fire-Proof Safe. 1 Jeweler's Rools Steel. 1 Book-Binder's Screw Press. 1 42-inch French Burr Portable Grist Mill. 1 62-inch Inserted Tooth-Saw &c., &c. Send for new list, No. 9, containing full description of machinery in stock. Address,

H. W. PETRIE, Brantford, Ont.

HOUSE CLEANING TIME.

If you want your houses to be attractive, use

Ramsay's Improved Calsomine Colors

for tinting Walls.—Can be used without the aid of a Painter and do not rub off. Made in fifteen differen tints. Apply to your local dealers for them.

MANUFACTURED BY

A. RAMSAY & SON, MONTREAL.

SMOKED SAUSAGES.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for price to W. CLARK, P. O. Box

F. E. DIXON & CO.,

Manufacturers of Star Rivet

Leather Belting!

70 King Street, East, Toronto

Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts.

The White Glycerine—The Sharon Bouquet—Palm Oil Bath Soap—Oatmeal Skin Soap, and The Baby's Own Soap.

—MADE BY—

The Albert Toilet Soap Co.'y

ARE UNSURPASSED FOR

Purity and Excellence.

Sold by all leading druggists.

CONBOY'S

CARRIAGE TOPS

ARE THE

Latest, Neatest, Lightest, Strongest, Cheapest and most Stylish Top in the market.

Buy no other until you see them.

For sale by all the leading Carriage Builders.

Manufactured in great variety at 407, 409, and 411 King St., W., Toronto.

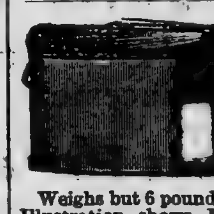
MUTUAL MARRIAGE ENDOWMENT ASN Incorporated. Head Office, London, Ont. Issues Certificates from $125 to $3,000, payable on marriage, at following rates. For $500, or half certificate, $4; quarterly dues in advance, $0.75. For $1,000 Certificate, $10; quarterly dues in advance, $2.00. For $3,000 Certificate, $15; quarterly dues in advance, $3.00. The only cash payments. Assessments on marriages $1.00 ... $10 ... quarterly assessments are ... at membership at end of year. ... Endowment ... full amount to $10,000, ... a ... endowments, which places ... financial position. No ... the institution. A good savings society for young people. Charter By-Laws, &c. W. J. IMLACH, Secretary, London, Ont.

Dominion Line of Steamships.

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from

QUEBEC TO LIVERPOOL.

Brooklyn,	Aug. 23	Montreal,	Sept. 13
Toronto,	Aug. 30	*Vancouver,	Sept. 20
*Oregon	Sept. 6



Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $50, $60 $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $36.75, Steerage at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to

DAVID TORRANCE & CO., General Agents, Montreal.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter between Portland and Glasgow, and Boston and Glasgow alternately; and during summer between Quebec and Glasgow and Boston and Glasgow every week.

For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B. Allan & Co., Chicago; Leve & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; H A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal

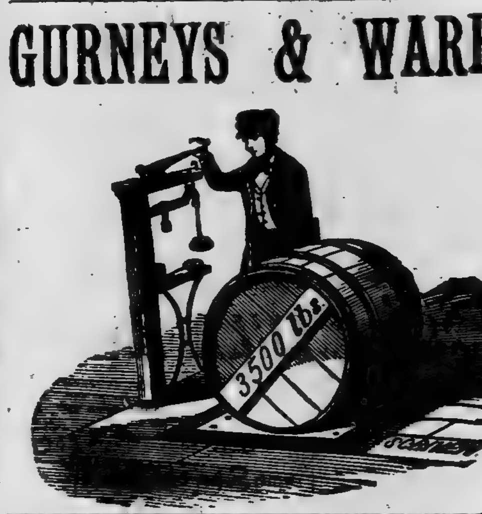
THE MODEL Washer AND BLEACHER

Weighs but 6 pounds, Can be carried in a small valise. Illustration shows Machine in boiler. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded within 30 days.

$1000.00 REWARD FOR ITS SUPERIOR.

Washing made light and easy. The clothes have that pure whiteness which no other mode of washing can produce. No rubbing required, no friction to injure the fabric. A 10 year old girl can do the washing as well as an older person.

To place it in every household THE PRICE HAS BEEN REDUCED to $2.50, and if not found satisfactory, money refunded. See what the "Canada Presbyterian," says about it—The Model Washer and Bleacher which Mr. C. W. Dennis offers to the public has many and valuable advantages. It is a time and labor saving machine, substantial and enduring, and is very cheap. From trial in the household we can testify to its excellence. Delivered to any express office in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Charges paid $3.00. Send for circulars.



AGENTS WANTED.

C. W. DENNIS,

TORONTO BARGAIN HOUSE.

213 YONGE STREET, TORONTO, ONT.

GURNEYS & WARE,

STANDARD SCALES.

THE BEST,
THE STRONGEST,
THE MOST RELIABLE.

Unrivalled in material, construction and finish, perfect in accuracy and unequalled in durability. Guaranteed to give entire satisfaction.

THEY EXCEL ALL OTHERS.

RAILROAD, WAREHOUSE AND MILL TRUCKS.

Mills' Alarm Money Drawers.

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST.

GURNEYS & WARE,

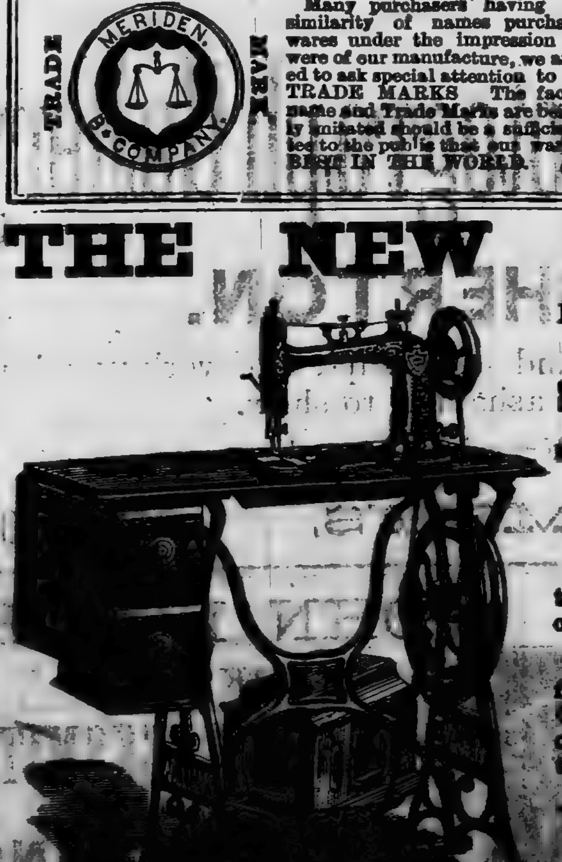
HAMILTON, ONT

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.,

—:) MANUFACTURERS OF (:—

Finest Electro Gold and Silver Plate,

New York, Meriden (Ct.), Chicago, San Francisco, London, (Eng.).



BRANCH FACTORY—Cor. Cannon and Wellington Streets, Hamilton, Ont.

TRADE MERIDEN B. COMPANY MARK

Many purchasers having through a similarity of names purchased other wares under the impression that they were of our manufacture, we are compelled to ask special attention to the above TRADE MARKS. The fact that our name and Trade Marks are being so closely imitated should be a sufficient guarantee to the public that our wares are the BEST IN THE WORLD.

TRADE
1847 Rogers Bros. A1.
MARK.

THE NEW WILLIAMS

High Arm Machine is now recognized as the

Sewing Machine of the Period.

It is Light and Easy to run.

Silent and Rapid in movement

Plain and Simple to Learn.

It is strong, durable, and well built, of the very best material that money can buy or skill produce.

It was awarded five medals and three first prizes at the Dominion Exhibition last October. It is rapidly superseding all the old fashioned makes everywhere. See it, try it, buy it, and make sure that you get it.

THE WILLIAMS' MFG CO.

1733 Notre Dame St., Montreal, and 58 King St. West, Toronto.

BROWN'S!

Cor. Brown & Toronto St's

MARKDALE

Is the place to get BARGAINS in

Dry Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Crockery, Classware &c &c.

NEW PRINTS from 5 cents up, New DRESS STUFF 10 cents and upwards in NEW DESIGNS and

LATEST FASHIONS.

Gloves, Hosiery, Ribbons, Laces, Embroidery, Small wares &c &c, at greatly reduced prices.

Our 25 cent T is unsurpass'd

Being determined to curtail credit trade, we offer special discounts and inducements to cash customers.

The Highest Price for Butter and Eggs.

A lot of seed oats (White Australian), free from all impurities; also Potatoes, large and small, of finest quality, for sale cheap.

GIVE US A CALL.

April, 1884. 190-tf WM. BROWN.

ROBT. S. RAE, Sydenham St., Markdale. TAILOR,

SAW MILL AND TIMBER LAND FOR SALE OR TO LET

In the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, 4 miles from Flesherton Station, on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The mill is situated at Little Falls, in a block of about 400 acres timber lnd, with other timber land surrounding. The building is substantially built on stone foundation. The machinery is all good and driven with great power by a 23 inch Leffell wheel, under 36 ft. head of water. There are one large circular saw for cutting logs, 2 small circulars for sawing lath and broom handles, 1 guage lathe for turning broom handles, etc., 1 shingle machine with jointer and packer complete. The water power is excellent, the stream being very regular. There are several other good mill sites on the proyerty. The land in the valley is considered the best in the country. The place would make an excellent stock farm when the timber is taken off.

This offers a good opportunity for a practical, energetic man to go into this kind of business, as the place will be sold or let on liberal terms.

The bush is so convenient to the mill logs can be trucked in summer time. Immediate possession given.

Apply to the proprietor, WM. HOCG,
FLESHERTON STATION P. O., ONT.

—Good Work Guaranteed—

—AT—

Bulmers Photograph Gallery

FLESHERTON.

Call at once and see samples of work which we ared not ashamed to show.

All kinds of Framing done cheap at

JAS. BULMER'S, FLESHERTON.

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

☞ Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

JOHN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING
SPECIALTY.
Also agent for the celebrated
CHATHAM WAGONS,

Worms often destroy children, but Freeman's Worm Powders destroy Worms, and expel them from the system.

Stratford had a $12,000 fire on Monday.

A crying evil, Children are often fretful and ill when Worms is the cause. Dr. Low's Worm Syrup safely expels all Worms.

A Newboro farmer, named Wm. Betton, had eight cows poisoned recently.

GOOD THE YEAR ROUND.—National Pills are a good blood purifier, liver regulator, and mild purgative for all seasons.

Much of the fruit coming to market these days is loaded with stomachache.

FOR THE COMPLEXION.—For Pimples, Blotches, Tan, and all itching tumors of the skin, use Prof. Low's Magic Sulphur Soap

"Canada, my Home," is a very popular song among American bankers and bank officers just now.

Worms often cause serious illness. The cure is Dr. Low's Worm Syrup. It destroys and expels Worms effectually.

F. F. Teeple of Inistioge has sold his farm for $1,750 to one Mr. Hames of Napanee.

The Signs of Worms are well known, but the remedy is not always so well determined Worm Powders will destroy them,

THE foundry and machine shops of Messrs. Hiller and Nesbit of Port Elgin were burned on Thursday night last. Loss $6,000 Insured for $300.

A WIDE AWAKE DRUGGIST.

Mr. A. Turner is always wide awake in his business, and spares no pains to secure the best of every article in his line. He has secured the agency for the celebrated Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. The only certain cure known for Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Asthma, Hay Fever, Bronchitis, or any affection of the throat and lungs. Sold on positive guarantee. Will give you a trial bottle free. Regular size $1.00. 3

Hanlan was defeated by seven lengths, on Saturday, by Beach, in the match for the championship of the world and five hundred pounds a side, on the Paramatta river, New South Wales.

THOUSANDS SAY SO.

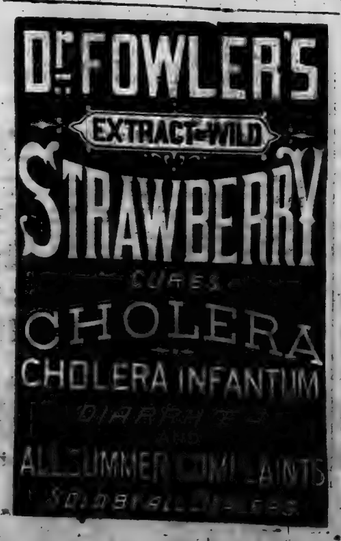
Mr. T W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by A. Turner & Co. 3

ENOCH EBY, a respectable farmer, near Port Elgin committed sueside last Friday by hanging.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best Salve in the world for cuts, bruises sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by A. Turner & Co.

Fifteen thousand men are out of employment in New York city on account of the strike of the bricklayers. Of course there are not so many bricklayers on strike, but many other trades are affected. Carpenters, plasterers, painters, glaziers, plumbers, and many others have to wait until the bricks are laid before they can do their part of the work.



McGregor's Speedy ure.

Every purchaser of common sense business capacity, when requiring an article for a certain purpose, purchases only that which has been tried or is allowed first to test before buying. You are allowed a free trial bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure, the great remedy for Dyspepsia, Impure Blood and Liver Disorders at Hill Bro's. Sold at 50 cents and $1 per bottle. See testimonials from persons in your own town. A. & S. 6

A vote was taken in Moncton, N. B., last Thursday, to have the Canada Temperance Act repealed, and was defeated by a large majority. A vote was also taken in West Midland for the same purpose, and defeated by a small majority.

STRONG ADJECTIVES.

"It sells immensely, in fact it has the largest sale of any patent medicine in Summer." says J. F. Smith, druggist, Dunnville, of Fowler's Wild Strawberry. The great remedy for Summer Complaints.

The following is from J. W. Peabody, of Winnipeg, formerly grain buyer for William Gillesky, of Hamilton, and Grimsby: "I was for many years much afflicted with Costiveness, Biliousness, and ultimately Dyspepsia. I suffered very much and tried many different medicines, which gave me only temporary relief and then I was as bad as ever again. I was recommended by a friend, who had been restored to health by it, to try McGregor's Speedy Cure. I did so, and it was not long before I felt like a new man, and I have enjoyed excellent health ever since. I first commenced taking it February 7th, 1879. Sold by Hill Bro's. A. & S. 5

In process of time all the cars used on the Credit Valley and T. G. & B. divisions will be rattled along under the name of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Instructions have been issued whereby all the cars belonging to these roads will be repainted, renumbered and renamed in order to prevent confusion in keeping a record of them. A very large number have already undergone the change.

Prominent among the greatest medical discoveries, by the many cures it has effected, McGregor's Speedy Cure leads the van. Subjected to the minutest chemical analysis, it has been found to contain none of those injurious ingredients characterizing the worthless specifics daily offered to the public. Every ingredient possesses a peculiar adaptability to the various complaints for which it has been compounded, and its efficacy is being established by testimonials hourly received. We are therefore confident that we have a preparation which we can offer to the public with the assurance that it will be found not only a relief but an absolute cure for Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Constipation and Impure Blood. Free trial bottles at Hill Bro's. A. & S. 4

Several new buildings are in progress in Shelburne. Mr. Jelly is building five new stores and a hotel. Mr. Marshall has erected a fine brick residence in the east end. Mr. R. McKay is building a residence on Main Street. Mr. E. F. Bowes has completed a very handsome house on Main Street, and is busy building another on one of the back streets.—Shelburne Free Press.

A VALUABLE FIND.

Mr. Isaac Brown, of Bothwell, declares that he found one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters worth $500 to him. It cured him of Salt Rheum from which he had suffered years after other treatment had failed to relieve.

As far as heard from, says the Howick Enterprise, the fall wheat crop will average fully twenty-five bushels to the acre in this neighborhood. Spring wheat looks very promising and will be ready for the reaper by the 20th of August.

THE FRUITS OF FOLLY.

Eating green apples, cucumbers and unripe fruits generally, may be so termed, Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry cures all Summer Complaints.

The Dominion Government has consented to a vote for the repeal of the Scott Act in Halton, though it has only been in operation for two years. The antis say that the Act has been a failure and that there is more liquor sold than ever; but if this is the case, why are the liquor men so desirous of its repeal? From all we can hear as to the working of the Act in Halton, we are satisfied that it has given general satisfaction, and we believe that the effort to repeal it will be defeated by a larger majority than it had when it passed.—Orangeville Advertiser.

NOT BAD.

It is so agreeable that even an infant will take it. For coughs, colds, hoarseness, croup, asthma and bronchitis, Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is reliable for young or old,

The last township heard from in the egg contest is Holland, where Mrs. Wm. Howey has a common hen which was ambitious to enter the lists, with the result of an egg which has been sent us, measuring 6¼ by 8¼ inches. Keppel and Brooke will now have to take back seats.—O. S. Times.

WARNING.

The most suddenly fatal diseases of Summer and Fall are and various forms of Bowel Complaints which Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry will promptly remedy.

An Editor Insulted.

Editors have put up with all manner of taunts and insults. Not so long ago, at a social gathering, a Markdale lady said to a young man who is connected with the local paper:

"You ought to belong to a church choir."

"But I can't sing. What put the idea of my belonging to a choir into your head."

"O nothing, except that I was reading the other day that a San Francisco church proposes to introduce harp music into the choir, and there is not much difference, you know, between a harp and a lyre, so I thought I'd just make the suggestion."

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Mr. James Moye and wife, well known in Leamington, were both chronic sufferers from dispepsia that the best medical aid failed to relieve. Three bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters cured both husband and wife.

Franco - Chinese

Notwithstanding the war now raging in China it increase the price of Teas at the

Belfast House, Mark

Having imported prior to the ing of hostilities, a sufficient to supply 20,000 MEN for a 12 months. In other departments the Grocery trade the BELFAST HOUSE has KILLED BY THOUSAND those who assume to transact business by purchasing of small dealers exorbitant rates of interest on credit. Our imports of

PRESERVED MEATS, SALMON, LOBSTERS, SARDINES, HAMS, BACON, ASSORTED PICKLES

and every articles in the grocery

LIQUORS

Of the best brands and quality, for Sacramental purposes warranted pure. Brandies direct from the manufacturer and all other kinds of liquors.

Coffees, Teas and Tobaccoes cannot fail to give satisfaction. Oranges, Lemons, &c. Family Flour supplied at Lowest Rates.

THOS. McNEA.
BELFAST HOUSE, - MARKDALE

NEW GROCERY STO

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed St

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Sel STOCK OF

Teas, Sugars, Tobacco,&

Which will be sold VERY CHE

I respectfully solicit the pu patronage.

193 J. PLEWES

CHATSWORTH HOU

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)
CHATSWORTH, Ont.
TUCK & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.

The best brand of liquors and cigars ways in stock. Good meals and comfor rooms guaranteed. Good stabling a tentive hostler.

HENRY GILL,

HOUSE PAINTE

GRAINER, GLAZIER AND PA HANGER, CALCIMINING AND WALL TINTING.

Residence opposite Planing Fac

MARKDALE.

ORDERS SOLICITED. ESTIMATES G

P. DUCOLON'S LIVERY,

IN HULL'S OLD STAND,

MILL - STREE

Good Horses and comfortable Rigs moderate charges.

195

ROOKE'S BAKER

BREAD, the staff of life PASTRY that will p your wife, always on hand, to sup the demand.

So when your stock is low Step in and let us know, And we'll your wants sup Or you'll know the rea why.

E. ROOKE,
Markdale

J. G. IRVIN

MARKDALE,
Manufacturer of all Kinds of

PUMPS

Drop Valve, Cylinder, Force, and C Pumps.

All kinds of

IRON - PUM

SUPPLIED.

...OL. 4.--No. 2

...e Markdale Standa

...ed every Thursday, at the office, ... Street, Markdale.

...MS—$1 per year in advance; $1.2 ...aid within three months.

...ofessional and business cards one i ...e and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3
...le column	$50 00	$27 50	$15
... column	27 00	15 00	10
...ter column	15 00	10 00	6
...inch space	7 00	4 00
...e inch space	10 00	5 00

...ual advertisements 8 cents per line f ...rtion, 3 cents per line each subsequ ...tion, nonpareil measure.

...ecial notices, or notices in local c 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cen ...subsequents insertion.

...ray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks ...ble advertisement not to exceed twel

...paper discontinued until all arre ...paid except at the option of the publish

—JOB PRINTING.—

...E STANDARD office has a splendid equi ...of poster as well as fine job type. Sp ...attention to orders by mail. Orde ...with dispatch.

W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

...ANDS & PERRY
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),
...ARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, No ...taries, Conveyancers, &c. Money ... at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
...251 TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,
...ARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-A ... Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conve ...rs, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed a ...herton, Office open every Thursday, a ...tofore.
...RD FROST, J. W. FROST, LL. ... County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,
...ARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG ... in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyan ...&c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
...FFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block ...lett St.; Branch office in Markdale, ove ...Farland's Store, on Friday and Saturday ...y week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
...ARRI... ...RS, SOLICITORS, CONVEY ...ances, &c. &c.
...FFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block ... W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE:
... W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday ... Friday of each week.
... Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
...N CREASOR, Q. C., DUNCAN MORISON
...arkdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown,
...SUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and ...Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner ...B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed ...ctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers ...raisants, and Land Sales, Punctually at ...ded to and charges made very moderate ...Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,
...SSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c ... Commissioner in B. R. &c. ...Conveyancing in all its branches promptly ...ended to and carefully executed. ...N.B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se ...rity.

...ANSION HOUSE,

MARKDALE,

...as. Bryan, Proprietor.

...CITY HOTEL,

MARKDALE,

...hn McAleer, - Proprietor.

This house is fitted up in good style, situ ...d on Mill street, where the travelling pub ...may depend on the very best accommo ...tions. Union bus to all trains. 194

...ARKDALE HOUSE,

...MARKDALE, - - ONT.

...RS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

... A. HILL,

...Fashionable Tailor,

OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.

PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

Franco - Chinese W
Notwithstanding the war now raging in China it will increase the price of Tea as the Belfast House, Markd
Having imported prior to the o
ing of hostilities, a sufficient quan
to supply 20,000 MEN for a perio 12 months. In other department the, Grocery trade the BELFA
HOUSE has KILLED BY THO
SAND those who assume to tran business by purchasing of small d ers exorbitant rates of interest on l redit. Our imports of
PRESERVED MEATS, SALMO
LOBSTERS, SARDINES, HAM
BACON, ASSORTED PICKELS
nd every articles in the grocery tr
LIQUORS
f the best brands and quality. W or Sacramental purposes warra
ure. Brandies direct from the m facturer and all other kinds of liqu Coffees, Teas and Tobaccoes ca il to give satisfaction. Oran emons, &c. Family Flour supp
Lowest Rates.
THOS. McNEA
ELFAST HOUSE, - MARKD
EW GROCERY STOR
IN CONNECTION WITH
Plewes' Flour and Feed Sto
Having just received a hoicee, Fresh and Sele
STOCK OF
eas,
Sugars,
Tobacco, &
hich will be sold VERY CHE respectfully solicit the publ ronage.
J. PLEWES.
HATSWORTH HOUS
(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)
CHATSWORTH, Ont.
TUCK & McLEOD Proprietors.
e best brand of liquors and cigar in stock. Good meals and comfort s guaranteed. Good stabling and ve hostler. 1
HENRY GILL,
OUSE PAINTE
AINER, GLAZIER AND PAP
HANGER, CALCIMINING
AND WALL TINTING.
dence opposite Planing Facto
MARKDALE.
ss Solicited. Estimates Gi
192
P. DUCOLON'S
IVERY,
IN HULL'S OLD STAND,
LL - STREE
Good Horses
comfortable Rigs
oderate charges.
OKE'S BAKER
READ, the staff of life
STRY that will ple wife, always on hand, to sup
the demand.
hen your stock is low
ep in and let us know,
we'll your wants supp
you'll know the reas
why.
E. ROOKE,
Markdale.
G. IRVIN
MARKDALE,
Manufacturer of all Kinds of
UMPS
Valve, Cylinder, Force, and Cis
All kinds of
ON - PUMP
SUPPLIED.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 4.--No. 207. MARKDALE, ONT., AUG 28, 1884. {COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.}

e Markdale Standard

ned evesy Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

MS—$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if paid within three months.

fessional and business cards one inch and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
le column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
f column	27 00	15 00	10 00
er column	15 00	10 00	6 00
inch space	7 00	4 00
e inch space	10 00	5 00

ual advertisements 8 cents per line first rtion, 3 cents per line each subsequent rtion, nonpareil measure.

rial notices, or notices in local col- 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents subsequents insertion.

ay animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for the advertisement not to exceed twelve paper discontinued until all arrears paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

STANDARD office has a splendid equip- of poster as well as fine job type. Spe- attention to orders by mail. Orders with dispatch.

W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS & PERRY,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),
BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, No- taries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
951 TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,
BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Convey ers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at herton, Office open every Thursday, as retofore.
ND FROST, J. W. FROST, LL. B. County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,
BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyanc &c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block ulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over Farland's Store, on Friday and Saturday ery week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
BARRI[S]..NS, SOLICITORS, CONVEY- Dances, &c. &c.
OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, er W. F. Wolf's Store and in MARKDALE;
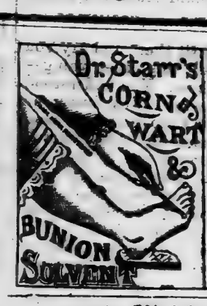
er W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday Friday of each week.
Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
N CREASOR, Q. C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown,
ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner R. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Viewer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually at- tended to and charges made very moderate. Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y



Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed. N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curity.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.
This house is fitted up in good style, situ- ated on Mill street, where the travelling pub- lic may depend on the very best accommo- dation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
MRS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

CURE YOUR CORNS by using the Wonderful Corn Remover, DR. STARR'S CORN SOLVENT.
A Safe and Sure Remedy for the Painless Re- moval of Corns, Warts, Bunions, and Callous. Each bottle has a brush attached to the cork for applying. Beware of COUNTERFEITS. Ask for genuine. Sent by mail for PRICE, 25 CENTS.
J. T. FLINT & CO., Pharmacists, Prop'rs, Rock Island, P. Q., and Derby Line, Vt.

Medical.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O. Physician and Surgeon, Priceville, Graduate of University. Vict. College. " " New York, and Hon. Graduate, of the same, " " Ayleth Medical Institute. " " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y. Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at Rutledge's Hotel, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the prac tice of his profession.
122-47.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHI- TECT.—Residence on Mill Street, Mark- dale.
124ly

HAMILTON'S
PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY
MARKDALE.
OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.
Fine work executed in all the latest sizes and shapes, fully equal to city work. Special attention given to
FRAMING
A large stock of moulding to choose from.
Call and leave your measure for a picture.
Jas. Hamilton.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market af fords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calcomining in all Shades and Colors.
Charges moderate and satisfaction guar- anteed. Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

Dr. Hixon,
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, AND ACCOUCHER,
PRICEVILLE.
All calls promptly attended to.

ISAAC STINSON,
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

SAMUEL WARDELL,
WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Resi dence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 167-339

ALEX KAY
BOOT & SHOE
MAKER,
Mill Street, - Markdale

Poetry.

Time's Exchange.

The knot is tied;
The groom and bride,
Without an earthly care.
Sail up the lake.
Where they can take
A little sun and air.

A year goes by;
Again July
Comes with its heat and glare,
They seek the lake,
But now they take
A little son and heir.

A Frolic with Papa.

Hi! my baby! and ho! my baby!
And how do you do to day?
Come! papa has just an hour to spare,
And help his little one to play,
What, indeed!
Must I get on my knees,
And be a "big bear"
Your highness to please?

I wonder what next I shall have to do,
To satisfy such a young tyrant as you?
But high, my baby, and ho, my baby,
Whatever you wish to play,
I'll give you an hour of frolic and fun,
Before taking myself away.

Hi, my baby, and ho, my baby.
I'm tired of being a "bear,"
Come sit on my foot, and I'll give you a ride
But—tumble off, if you dare!
For mamma would come,
And I know what she'd do;
She'd scold poor papa
For hurting you.

And you, you roghue, would shirk all the blame.
For babies are all the world over the same
But hi, my baby, and ho, my baby,
I've no more time for play.
So give me a kiss, and say good-bye,
And—I wish you a very good day.

Mangled by A Bear.

"PETER THE GREAT" INFLICTS DREADFUL INJURIES UPON A TORMENTOR.

"Drunken men and fools are always safe" is an old adage, which, however true as a rule, has some exceptions. One of these exceptional cases, if they are exceptional, happened on Saturday last at the Zoo. A man named Sam Thompson, who is employed as engineer on the Mazeppa, managed to gain admission to the Gardens, after being refused twice at the door because of his being intoxicated, and was found in the cage with the camels teasing them. From thence he was very summarily ejected and thrown out of the grounds, but managed again to get in, and returned to the same place, but was again put out on the street, as it was thought finally. A short time afterwards one of the keepers was horrified to see him standing inside the guard rail of the cage occupied by the large bear "Peter the Great," and with his hand in the bear's mouth. Peter, as the board in front of his cage tells everyone, is dangerous, and no sooner had the man's hand in his throat than he commenced to crunch it, and when finally the bear was forced to let go the hand and arm were found to be so badly mangled that it had to be amputated at the General Hospital. The managers of the Zoo have taken every possible precaution to prevent accidents of this kind, and have placed an extra stout railing in front of all the cages occupied by dangerous animals, but they seem of no use in keeping drunken men away.

Canada's Great Fair.

NOTES ON THE EXHIBITIONS AND THE DIFFERENT ATTRACTIONS.

Bicycle races will form one of the features of the program during the second week.

A large number of entries and photographs for the exhibit of types of beauty have been received.

Cheap rates have been arranged with all the railways, and a great influx of visitors is expected.

The grounds have been closed to the public and no person is admitted except those having business.

Numerous applications are being received for programmes from all parts of Canada and the United States.

A large glass case nearly sixty feet long has been erected for the display of ladies work of a valuable kind.

Over one hundered electric lights and an electric tower 150 feet high, will be used to illuminate the grounds and buildings each evening.

The art gallery has been fitted out as a concert room, and organ and piano recitals, and vocal and instrumental music will be given each day and evening.

Those who have not made their enteries should do so at once, as it is possible, on account of the large number already in, that those coming in late may have to be refused for want of space.

The engines and shafting in the machinery hall have received a thorough overhauling and cleaning. Steam was got up yesterday and the engines tested. The boilers will be tested next week.

The Committee on horses visited the grounds yesterday afternoon and decided to erect additional stalls, but those exhibitors whose entries are in before Monday will have the preference in getting stalls.

It has been decided by the gas company to erect an elevator from the ground floor to the top gallery of the main building which will be a great convenience to exhibitors as well as the public in general.

The electric railway is rapidly approaching completion. Mr. Vandepoele, of Chicago, is here, and is giving it his personal superintendance. Three cars arrived from London yesterday, and were placed on the track.

Toronto's great Industrial Fair, which will be held from Sept. 10th to 20th, promises to excel that of any previous years. The entries are pouring in and the energetic secretary, Mr. Hill, and his assistant are kept busy almost night and day.

Mr. Robertson, of the "Little World" exhibit, arrived hear yesterday with the exhibit, from San Francisco. As soon as the building is completed he will at once commence its erection, which will take considerable time.

On account of the large number of firemen that have notified the secretary of their intention to take part in the fireman's demonstrations September, 15th and 16th, it is desirable that the proprietors of boarding houses who may be able to accommodate any of the visitors should leave word to that effect at the Association's office.

The exhibition will be opened by his Honor the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Robinson, on Wednesday, Sept. 10th, at 2 p. m., at which time Sir John A. Macdonald and other prominent gentlemen are expected to be present. His Excellency the Governor General will officially visit the Exhibition on Tuesday, Sept. 16th when an address will be presented to him at three o'clock p. m.

Committed for Manslaughter.

On Saturday morning last, Dr. Dowsley was called in to see a notorious woman named Mrs. Robinson, who resides on a hill near the Catholic Church, and found her dead. As there were marks of violence on the body, he informed the County Attorney, and an inquest was held before Coroner Cameron. Drs. Dowsley and C. E. Barnhart having made a post mortem examination, testified that there were several marks of ill-usage on the body, which might have been there for some time, but that she came to her death from a blow on the temple with some blunt instrument, which had not been inflicted many hours. The other inmates of the house, besides the deceased, were her daughter Miss. Maggie Campbell and a man named Wm. Scoones who lived with her. Mrs. Forsyth and her son, a young man named Robert Blyth, besides a couple of children. All except the children were called to give evedence, and it was quite apparent that all the women and Scoones had been drinking on the Friday; that the deceased had been violent and abusive, and had taken a bottle of whiskey which Scoones had brought home. Evidence was elicited from them with great difficulty, but Mrs. Forsyth testified at last to a scuffle between the deceased and Scoones towards evening; and though the latter spoke of having seen her alive several times during the night, neither Mrs. Forsyth nor her son appeared to have heard or seen her after nightfall till they saw her dead next day.

The inquest was adjourned from Saturday till Monday, lasting all through that day and till three on Tuesday morning, when a verdict was rendered that Mrs. Annie Robinson came to her death at the hands of Wm. Scoones, and he was committed for trial.

Since the inquest, Chief Constable Egerton has been working up the case, and this morning obtained sufficient evidence to arrest Maggie Campbell alias Cox, as accessory. She was brought before the Public Magistrate and remanded to gaol. We understand clear evidence has been obtained that the blow on the temple which caused the death of the woman was a kick by Wm. Scoones on the Friday afternoon.—O. S. Times.

General News.

Fighting has commenced between France and China.

Thornbury papers continue to agitate in favor of incorporation.

The repeal petition will be voted on in Halton on September ninth.

Mr. J. D. Edgar was elected to the House of Commons for West Ontario last Friday.

Mr. Norman McIntyre has sold his grocery and liquor business in Durham to Mr. McLaughlan.

The McCullough house, Dundalk, has changed hands, Mr. McCullough of Orangevill being the new host.

There have been sixty-nine deaths from whooping cough, in Brooklyn, during the past seven weeks.

The Arcade scating rink at Goderich was burned on Saturday night last. Loss covered by Insurance.

There was a $100,000 fire at Duluth last Friday; The lumber mill of G. W Peck & Son was destroyed.

The Owen Sound Dredging, Towing, and Wrecking Company have been incorporated with a capital of $40,000.

TWELVE attempts at burglary and three incendiary fires have occurred in the city of Belleville during the past three months.

Proton Agricultural Society are distributing 1,000 prize lists; It's no wonder they are taking the lead as a township fall show.

A lamp exploded in Dr. Moffat's bedroom, Owen Sound, last week, scattering the oil over the carpet, destroying it; but the fire was extinguished without further serious damage.

The C. P. R. elevator, at Owen Sound, is complete. The people of the town presented, last week, the company with a fine Canadian flag to adorn the building, and also presented Mr. W. J. Ross, the gentleman who had charge of the construction, with a beautiful gold watch.

GOOD FOR ALLISTON.—The by-law granting to Knight & Wilson the sum of $10,000 to help to rebuild the foundry and machine shop recently destroyed by fire was carried by over two to one. Work on the new buildings will be commenced immediately.

The Industrial Exhibition in Toronto this year promises to eclipse all previous efforts. Any thing approaching to it in the Province, or even in Canada, has never been seen. Every year the Fair is thought to have reached perfection, and every next year what was previously so much admired, is found to have been comparatavely but a poor affair.

GOOD THE YEAR ROUND.—National Pills are a good blood purifier, liver regulator, and mild purgative for all seasons.

SPLENDID factory cotton 5c. per yard and all other goods accordingly at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

A MORAL EXIGENCY.

BY MARY E. WILKINS.

At five o'clock, Eunice Fairweather went up-stairs to dress herself for the sociable and Christmas tree to be given at the parsonage that night in honor of Christmas-eve. She had been very busy all day making preparations for it. She was the minister's daughter, and had, of a necessity, to take an active part in such affairs.

She took it as usual loyally and energetically, but there had always been seasons from her childhood—and she was twenty-five now—when the social duties to which she had been born seemed a weariness and a bore to her. They had seemed so to-day. She had patiently and faithfully sewed up little lace bags with divers colored worsteds, and stuffed them with candy. She had strung pop-corn, and marked the parcels which had been pouring in since daybreak from all quarters. She had taken her prominent part among the corps of indefatigable women always present to assist on such occasions, and kept up her end of the line as minister's daughter bravely. Now, however, the last of the zealous, chattering women she had been working with had bustled home, with a pleasant importance in every hitch of her shawled shoulders, and would not bustle back again until half-past six or so; and the tree, fully bedecked, stood in unconscious impressiveness in the parsonage parlor.

Eunice had come up stairs with the resolution to dress herself directly for the festive occasion, and to hasten down again to be in readiness for new exigencies. Her mother was delicate, and had kept her room all day in order to prepare herself for the evening, her father was inefficient at such times, there was no servant, and the brunt of everything came on her.

But her resolution gave way; she wrapped herself in an old plaid shawl and lay down on her bed to rest a few minutes. She did not close her eyes, but lay studying idly the familiar details of the room. It was small, and one side ran in under the eaves; for the parsonage was a cottage. There was one window, with a white cotton curtain trimmed with tasselled fringe, and looped up on an old porcelain knob with a picture painted on it. That knob, with its tiny bright landscape, had been one of the pretty wonders of Eunice's childhood. She looked at it even now with interest, and the marvel and the beauty of it had not wholly departed for her eyes. The walls of the little room had a scraggly-patterned paper on them. The first lustre of it had departed, for that too was one of the associates of Eunice's childhood, but in certain lights there was a satin sheen and a blue line visible. Blur roses on a satin ground had been the original pattern. It had never been pretty, but Eunice had always had faith in it. There was an ancient straw matting on the floor, a home-made braided rug before the cottage bedstead, and one before the stained pine bureau. There were a few poor attempts at adornment on the walls; a splint letter case, a motto worked in worsteds, a gay print of an eminently proper little girl holding a faithful little dog.

This last, in its brilliant crudeness, was not a work of art, but Eunice believed in it. She was a conservative creature. Even after her year at the seminary, for which money had been scraped together five years ago, she had the same admiring trust in all the revelations of her childhood. Her home, on her return to it, looked as fair to her as it had always done; no old ugliness which familiarity had caused to pass unnoticed before gave her a shock of surprise.

She lay quietly, her shawl shrugged up over her face, so only her steady light brown eyes were visible. The room was drearily cold. She never had a fire; one in a sleeping-room would have been sinful luxury in the poor minister's family. Even her mother's was only warmed from the sitting-room.

In sunny weather Eunice's room was cheerful, and its look, if not actually its atmosphere, would warm one a little, for the windows faced south-west. But to-day all the light had come through low gray clouds, for it had been threatening snow ever since morning, and the room had been dismal.

A comfortless dusk was fast spreading over everything now. Eunice rose at length, thinking that she must either dress herself speedily, or go down-stairs for a candle.

She was a tall, heavily built girl, with large, well-formed feet and hands. She had a full face, and a thick, colorless skin. Her features were coarse, but their combination affected one pleasantly. It was a staunch, honest face, with a suggestion of obstinacy in it.

She looked unhappily at herself in her little square glass, as she brushed out her hair, and arranged it in a smooth twist at the top of her head. It was not becoming, but it was the way she had always done it. She did not admire the effect herself when the coiffure was complete, neither did she survey her appearance complacently when she had gotten into her best brown cashmere dress, with its ruffle of starched lace in the neck. But it did not occur to her that any change could be made for the better. It was her best dress, and it was the way she did up her hair. She did not like either, but the simple facts of them ended the matter for her.

After the same fashion she regarded her own lot in life, with a sort of resigned disapproval.

On account of her mother's ill health, she had been incumbered for the last five years with the numberless social duties to which the wife of a poor country minister is liable. She had been active in Sunday-school picnics and church sociables, in mission bands and neighborhood prayer-meetings. She was a church member, and a good girl, but the role did not suit her. Still she accepted it as inevitable, and would no more have thought of evading it than she would have thought of evading life altogether. There was about her an almost stubborn steadfastness of onward movement that would forever keep her in the same rut, no matter how disagreeable it might be, unless some influence outside of herself might move her.

When she went down-stairs she found her mother seated beside the sitting-room stove, also arrayed in her best—a shiny black silk, long in the shoulder seams, the tops of the sleeves adorned with pointed caps trimmed with black velvet ribbon.

She looked up at Eunice as she entered, a complacent smile on her long, delicate face; she thought her homely, honest-looking daughter charming in her best gown.

A murmur of men's voices came from the next room, whose door was closed.

"Father's got Mr. Wilson in there," explained Mrs. Fairweather, in response to Eunice's inquiring glance. "He came just after you went up-stairs. They've been talking very busily about something. Perhaps Mr. Wilson wants to exchange."

Just at that moment the study door opened and the two men came out, Eunice's father, tall and round-shouldered, with grayish sandy hair and beard, politely allowing his guest to precede him. There was a little resemblance between the two, though there was no relationship. Mr. Wilson was a younger man by ten years; he was shorter and slighter; but he had similarly sandy hair and beard, though they were not quite so gray, and something the same cast of countenance. He was settled over a neighboring parish; he was a widower with four young children; his wife had died a year before.

He had spoken to Mrs. Fairweather on his first entrance, so he stepped directly toward Eunice with extended hand. His ministerial affability was slightly dashed with embarrassment, and his thin cheeks were crimson around the roots of his sandy beard.

Eunice shook the proffered hand with calm courtesy, and inquired after his children. She had not a thought that his embarrassment betokened anything, if indeed she observed it at all.

Her father stood by with an air of awkward readiness to proceed to action, waiting until the two should cease the interchanging of courtesies.

When the expected pause came he himself placed a chair for Mr. Wilson. "Sit down, Brother Wilson," he said, nervously, "and I will consult with my daughter concerning the matter we were speaking of. Eunice, I would like to speak a moment with you in the study."

"Certainly, sir," said Eunice. She looked surprised, but she followed him at once into the study. "Tell me as quickly as you can what it is, father," she said, "for it is nearly time for people to begin coming, and I shall have to attend to them."

She had not seated herself, but stood leaning carelessly against the study wall, questioning her father with her steady eyes.

He stood in his awkward height before her. He was plainly trembling. "Eunice," he said, in a shaking voice, "Mr. Wilson came—to say—he would like to marry you, my dear daughter."

He cleared his throat to hide his embarrassment. He felt a terrible constraint in speaking to Eunice of such matters; he looked shamefaced and distressed.

Eunice eyed him steadily. She did not change color in the least. "I think I would rather remain as I am, father," she said quietly.

Her father roused himself then. "My dear daughter," he said, with restrained eagerness, "don't decide this matter too hastily, without giving it all the consideration it deserves. Mr. Wilson is a good man; he would make you a worthy husband; and he needs a wife sadly. Think what a wide field of action would be before you with those four little motherless children to love and care for! You would have a wonderful opportunity to do good."

"I don't think," said Eunice, bluntly, "that I should care for that sort of an opportunity."

"Then," her father went on, "you will forgive me if I speak plainly, my dear. You—are getting older; you have not had any other visitors. You would be well provided for in this way—"

"Exceedingly well," replied Eunice, slowly. "There would be six hundred a year and a leaky parsonage for a man and woman and four children, and—nobody knows how many more." She was almost coarse in her slow indignation, and did not blush at it.

"The Lord would provide for His servants."

"I don't know whether He would or not. I don't think He would be under any obligation to if His servant deliberately incumbered himself with more of a family than he had brains to support."

Her father looked so distressed that Eunice's heart smote her for her forcible words. "You don't want to get rid of me, surely, father," she said, in a changed tone.

Mr. Fairweather's lips moved uncertainly as he answered: "No, my dear daughter; don't ever let such a thought enter your head. I only—Mr. Wilson is a good man, and a woman is best off married, and your mother and I are old. I have never laid up anything. Sometimes— Maybe I don't trust the Lord enough, but I have felt anxious about you, if anything happened to me." Tears were standing in his light blue eyes, which had never been so steady and keen as his daughter's.

There came a loud peal of the door-bell. Eunice started. "There! I must go," she said. "We'll talk about this another time. Don't worry about it, father dear."

"But, Eunice, what shall I say to him?"

"Must something be said to-night?"

"It would hardly be treating him fairly otherwise."

Eunice looked hesitatingly at her father's worn, anxious face. "Tell him," she said at length, "that I will give him his answer in a week."

Her father looked gratified. "We will take it to the Lord, my dear."

Eunice's lip curled curiously; but she said, "Yes, sir," dutifully, and hastened from the room to answer the door-bell.

The fresh bevies that were constantly arriving after that engaged her whole attention. She could do no more than give a hurried "Good-evening" to Mr. Wilson when he came to take leave, after a second short conference with her father in the study. He looked deprecatingly hopeful.

The poor man was really in a sad case. Six years ago, when he married, he had been romantic. He would never be again. He was not thirsting for love and communion with a kindred spirit now, but for a good, capable woman who would take care of his four clamorous children without a salary.

He returned to his shabby, dirty parsonage that night, with, it seemed to him, quite a reasonable hope that his affairs might soon be changed for the better. Of course he would have preferred that the lady should have said yes directly; it would both have assured him, and shortened the time to when his burdens should be lightened; but he could hardly have expected that, when his proposal was so sudden, and there had been no preliminary attention on his part. The week's probation, therefore, did not daunt him much. He did not really see why Eunice should refuse him. She was plain, was getting older; it probably was her first, and very likely her last, chance of marriage. He was a clergyman in good standing, and she would not lower her social position. He felt sure that he was about to be relieved from the unpleasant predicament in which he had been ever since his wife's death, and from which he had been forced to make no effort to escape, for decency's sake, for a full year. The year, in fact, had been up five days ago. He actually took credit to himself for remaining quiescent during those five days. It was rather shocking, but there was a good deal to be said for him. No wife, and four small children, six hundred dollars a year, moderate brain, and an active conscience, are a hard combination of circumstances for any man.

He returned thanks, however, to-night to the Lord for His countless blessings with pious fervor, which would have been lessened had he known of the state of Eunice's mind just at that moment.

The merry company had all departed, the tree stood dismantled in the parlor, and she was preparing for bed, with her head full, not of him, but another man.

Standing before her glass combing out her rather scanty, lustreless hair, her fancy pictured to her, beside her own homely, sober face, another, a man's, blonde and handsome, with a gentle, almost womanish smile on the full red lips, and a dangerous softness in the blue eyes. Could a third person have seen the double picture as she did, he would have been struck with a sense of the incongruity, almost absurdity, of it. Eunice herself, with her hard, uncompromising common-sense, took the attitude of a third person in regard to it, and blew her light out at length, and shut it out, with a bitter amusement in her heart at her own folly.

There had been present that evening a young man who was comparatively a recent acquisition to the village society. He had been in town about three months. His father, two years before, had purchased one of the largest farms in the vicinity, moving there from an adjoining State. This son had been absent at the time; he was reported to be running a cattle ranch in one of those distant Territories which seem almost fabulous to New Englanders. Since he had come home he had been the cynosure of the village. He was thirty and a little over, but he was singularly boyish in his ways, and took part in all the town frolics with gusto. He was popularly supposed to be engaged to Ada Harris, Squire Harris's daughter, as she was often called. Her father was the prominent man of the village, lived in the best house, and had the loudest voice in public matters. He was a lawyer, with rather more pomposity than ability, perhaps, but there had always been money and influence in the Harris family, and these warded off all criticism.

The daughter was a pretty blonde of average attainments, but with keen wits and strong passions. She had not been present at the Christmas tree, and her lover, either on that account, or really from some sudden fancy he had taken to Eunice, had been at her elbow the whole evening. He had a fashion of making his attentions marked: he did on that occasion. He made a pretense of assisting her, but it was only a pretense, and she knew it, though she thought it marvellous. She had met him, but had not exchanged two words with him before. She had seen him with Ada Harris, and he had seemed almost as much out of her life as a lover in a book. Young men of his kind were unknown quantities heretofore to this steady, homely young woman. They seemed to belong to other girls.

So his devotion to her through the evening, and his asking permission to call when he took leave, seemed to her well-nigh incredible. Her head was not turned, in the usual acceptation of the term—it was not an easy head to turn—but it was full of Burr Mason, and every thought, no matter how wide a starting-point it had, lost itself at last in the thought of him.

Mr. Wilson's proposal weighed upon her terribly through the next week. Her father seemed bent upon her accepting it; so did her mother, who sighed in secret over the prospect of her daughter's remaining unmarried. Either through unworldliness, or their conviction of the desirability of the marriage in itself, the meagreness of the financial outlook did not seem to influence them in the least.

Eunice did not once think of Burr Mason as any reason for her reluctance, but when the day but one before her week of probation was up he called, and when, the next day, he took her to drive, she decided on a refusal of the minister's proposal easily enough. She had wavered a little before.

So Mr. Wilson was left to decide upon some other worthy reliable woman as a subject for his addresses, and Eunice kept on with her new lover.

How this sober, conscientious girl could reconcile to herself the course she was now taking was a question. It was probable she did not make the effort; she was so sensible that she would have known its futility and hypocrisy beforehand.

She knew her lover had been engaged to Ada Harris; that she was encouraging him in cruel and dishonourable treatment of another woman; but she kept steadily on. People even came to her and told her that the jilted girl was breaking her heart. She listened, her homely face set in an immovable calm. She listened quietly to her parents' remonstrance, and kept on.

There was an odd quality in Burr Mason's character. He was terribly vacillating, but he knew it. Once he said Eunice, with the careless freedom that would have been almost insolence in another man: "Don't let me see Ada Harris much, I warn you, dear. I mean to be true to you, but she has such a pretty face, and I meant to be true to her, but you have—I don't know just what, but something she has not."

Eunice knew the truth of what he said perfectly. The incomprehensibleness of it all to her, who was so sensible of her own disadvantages, was the fascination she had for such a man.

A few days after Burr Mason had made that remark, Ada Harris came to see her. When Eunice went into the sitting-room to greet her, she kept her quiet, unmoved face, but the change in the girl before her was terrible. It was not wasting of flesh or pallor that it consisted in, but something worse. Her red lips were set so hard that the soft curves in them were lost, her cheeks burned feverishly, her blue eyes had a fierce light in them, and most pitiful thing of all for another woman to see, she had not crimped her pretty blonde hair, but wore it combed straight back from her throbbing forehead.

When Eunice entered, she waited for no preliminary courtesies, but sprang forward, and caught hold of her hand with a strong nervous grasp, and stood so, her pretty, desperate face confronting Eunice's calm, plain one.

"Eunice!" she cried, "Eunice! why did you take him away from me, Eunice! Eunice!" Then she broke into a low wail, without any tears.

Eunice released her hand, and seated herself.

"You had better take a chair, Ada," she said, in her slow, even tones. "When you say him, you mean Burr Mason, I suppose."

"You know I do. Oh, Eunice, how could you? how could you? I thought you were so good!"

"You ask me why I do this and that, but don't you think he had anything to do with it himself?"

Ada stood before her, clinching her little white hands. "Eunice Fairweather, you know Burr Mason, and I know Burr Mason. You know that if you gave him up and refused to see him, he would come back to me. You knew it."

"Yes, I know it."

"You know it; you sit there and say you know it, and yet you do this cruel thing—you, a minister's daughter. You understood from the first how it was. You knew he was mine, that you had no right to him. You knew if you shunned him ever so little, that he would come back to me. And yet you let him come and make love to you. You knew it. There is no excuse for you: you knew it. It is no better for him. You have encouraged him in being false. You have dragged him down. You are a plainer girl than I, and a soberer one, but you are no better. You will not make him a better wife. You cannot make him a good wife after this. It is all for yourself—yourself!"

Eunice sat still.

Then Ada flung herself on her knees at her side, and pleaded, as for her life. "Eunice, oh, Eunice, give him to me. It is killing me. Eunice, dear Eunice, say that you will."

As Eunice sat looking at the poor dishevelled golden head bowed over her lap, a recollection flashed across her mind oddly enough, of a certain recess at the village school they two had attended years ago, when she was among the older girls, and Ada a child to her; how she had played she was her little girl and held her in her lap, and that golden head had nestled on her bosom.

"Eunice, oh, Eunice, he loved me first. You had better have stolen away my own heart. It would not have been so wicked or so cruel. How could you? Oh, Eunice, give him back to me. Eunice, won't you?"

"No."

Ada rose, staggering, without another word. She moaned a little to herself as she crossed the room to the door. Eunice accompanied her to the outer door, and said good-by. Ada did not return it. Eunice saw her steady herself by catching hold of the gate as she passed through.

Then she went slowly up stairs to her own room, wrapped herself in a shawl, and lay down on her bed, as she had that Christmas-eve. She was very pale, and there was a strange look, almost of horror, on her face. She stared, as she lay there, at all the familiar objects in the room, but the most common and insignificant of them had a strange and awful look to her. Yet the change was in herself, not in them. The shadow that was over her own soul overshadowed them and perverted her vision. But she felt also almost a fear of all those inanimate objects she was gazing at. They were so many reminders of a better state with her, for she had gazed at them all in her unconscious childhood. She was sickened with horror at their dumb accusations. There was the little glass she had looked at before she had stolen another woman's dearest wealth away from her, the chair she had sat in, the bed she had lain in.

At last Eunice Fairweather's strong will broke down before the accusations of her own conscience, which were so potent as to take upon themselves material shapes.

Ada Harris, in her pretty chamber, lying worn out on her bed, her face buried in the pillow, started at a touch on her shoulder. Some one had stolen into the room unannounced—not her mother, for she was waiting outside. Ada turned her head, and saw Eunice. She struck at her wildly with her slender hands. "Go away!" she screamed.

"Ada!"

"Go away!"

"Burr Mason is down-stairs. I came with him to call on you."

Ada sat upright, staring at her, her hand still uplifted.

"I am going to break my engagement with him."

"Oh, Eunice! Eunice! you blessed—"

Eunice drew the golden head down on her bosom, just as she had on that old school-day.

"Love me all you can, Ada," she aids. "I want—something."

Keep up Your Spirits.

Don't get down in the mouth, man! Don't lose your faith in men and thing just because for a time you have seemed to lose your hold. All broken up it may be you are, and insurance seems to be the best way toward bread-getting and paying the expenses of that little family that are now housed in a flat; but don't you show the white feather. Stick! Up, and at 'em again! The long road must turn, you know. You have been at it quite a good while, and somehow you fail to get your work in, they don't sign applications yet, and you are blue. But keep at it! Pluck and patience must win the day. Then just screw your courage up to the sticking-place, and peg away; and keep on pegging away and on, and on, and on; for there is no good in halting for an instant. It's all nonsense about you not being suited to the business. What you lack is just a little tact, most likely, and that will come to you soon. You have legs and brains, and therefore you can get around and do life insurance business. Having a hard time of it, you say? Yes, but how much harder time would that little woman have without you? Think of it. It will help put you in sympathy with your work; help you build a wall of protection around some other home, to shield when the worker and bread-getter has gone farther along and out of sight on life's road. Don't get blue; but if you must, don't look blue. That will be death to you. Fight against odds with a smiling face, and don't slack, but keep fighting. You will awake some sunshiny morning to find you have conquered.

"Mary," said Mrs. Sharply to her maid, "you really must put some sort of a dish out on the step to hold the ice, so there won't be a puddle of water left there every morning." "What dish shall I use, mum?" "Anything would do. Suppose you use a tea-cup."

Some Definitions.

Wages.—Sweet oil for human machinery.

Poverty.—Death in life.

Patronage.—A big boy helping a … boy to raise his kite.

Law.—A trap baited with promise of profit or revenge.

Debt.—The example set by Government to its people.

Prison.—An oven in which society p… newly made crime to harness.

Taxes.—Periodical bleeding, as prescribed by Government.

Congress.—Men assembled to prevent each other from doing anything.

Experience.—Life's daybook.

Soldier.—A target set up by one nation for another to shoot at.

Revenge.—The only debt it is wrong to pay.

Dinner.—The breakfast of the poor and the supper of the rich.

Luxury.—The labor of the wealthy.

Pawnbroker.—The man who holds your coat while you fight.

Miser.—One who makes bricks that his heirs may build houses.

Tobacco.—One whose life is consumed in establishing its character.

Time.—To the aged an atom; to the young a world.

Poetry.—Thought in blossom.

Ireland.—The Actæon of nations, torn to pieces by its own dogs.

Bachelor.—A wild goose that tame … envy.

Family.—Matrimony doing penance.

Marriage.—The only lottery not … down.

Child.—The future in the present.

Coat.—The scabbard that offers no guarantee for the blade it sheathes.

Theatre.—Nature in the "House of Correction."

Ink.—The Black Sea on which Thought rides at anchor.

TRACKING HIS MOTHER'S MURDERER.

A Young Polander's Faithful Watch and Prospective Revenge.

Fourteen years ago Joseph Comoski, Sr., died in Poland, leaving a snug estate to Joseph Comoski, Jr., his sister, and the children's mother. The hours of mourning had scarcely passed when Michael Stan… turned his eyes upon Miss Comoski. He wooed and won. To possess the estate became his unholy ambition. The widow stood in the way of the successful accomplishment of his foul object. He meditated and finally determined to resort to … means for the removal of his obstacle.

One morning the little Polish village was excited as it had never been before. Some one during the hour of sleep had foully murdered Widow Comoski. Suspicion at once attached itself to the son-in-law. Pursued by the law and a guilty conscience he fled from the land of his birth, crossed the ocean and found employment in the mines of Pennsylvania. Here he considered himself secure.

Joseph Comoski, Jr., though but a boy of 14 years, swore solemnly to avenge his mother's death, even should the murderer seek the most distant spot on earth. In pursuance of this resolve he bade a sad adieu to his betrayed sister and sailed for America. Fortune favored the brave youth, and after a time he discovered his mother's murderer in Pottsville. He at once made known his discovery to the Polish Consul at New York and acquainted him with all the facts in the case. The sympathy of the official was enlisted in the boy's behalf and he promised his assistance. The boy kept a watch over the murderer's doings, tracking him from town to town. Finally the fugitive was apprehended while engaged in the commission of a robbery and sent to the Philadelphia penitentiary for a term of three years. The consul, in the meantime, had written to Poland and learned of the correctness of the boy's story. He then securred the extradition papers, and the boy came to Mount Carmel, where so many of his countrymen reside, to work while the three years were passing. He found employment at the Pennsylvania colliery as ash-wheeler. By his industrious habits he gained the good will of his bosses, and was finally promoted foreman, a position which he now satisfactorily fills.

The young man is scrupulously careful in saving his earnings, and it was a knowledge of this, followed by an inquiry from an official, that led to a recital of the above facts. The young man has succeeded in keeping his secret from his countrymen, and this account will probably be to them startling. He has collected a snug sum by his economical habits, and, with fire in his eye, one day this week remarked to our informant that upon the completion of the murderer's term of imprisonment extradition papers would meet him in the face and the villain should swing from a Polish gallows if it took every cent he earned at the Pennsylvania colliery.—Mount Carmel News.

True Appreciation.

The observation of a great writer on receiving half a dozen bottles of brandy sent him by an anonymous admirer is well known. "This," he said with complacency, "is fame." For my part, as is only in accordance with the rules of proportion, I have had to be content with much inferior liquids—mere ginger beer, a drink which is effervescent no doubt, but while it lasts is refreshing enough. I once lost a Persian cat, which (I had almost written "who,") was very dear to me, and went to a suburban police office for professional advice as to hand-bills and rewards. "What is your name, Sir?" inquired the intelligent Inspector. (It is cynically observed that Inspectors are always called in the newspapers "intelligent;" but this one, as will be seen, fully deserved the title.) As my name was a lawful one, I of course gave him no alias. "James Payn?" he echoed. "Not you the story teller?" I modestly assured that I was. "Then I tell you what," he said, in a tone in which generosity and gratitude were finely blended, "you're out of my district, but I'll take the case." And he took it. That was my brandy. I have also had sums of money borrowed of me at various times by admirers of my genius—but that has given me less satisfaction.—James Payn, in the Cornhill Magazine.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

… in Europe—The … in Spain—Irish Ladies Cricketers—Proposed Canal Across Ireland, &c., &c.

A new sculpture room in the British Museum will soon be opened to the public. In this gallery have been arranged the remains of the mausoleum at Halicarnassus, erected by Artemisia about 350 B. C., over the remains of her husband, Mausolus.

The Moniteur des Arts says that … "Artistes Japonais" are now collecting at Tokio the material for special exhibition at Paris. A society has been formed in J… under the presidency of a member of the imperial family, for the protection and r… of Japanese art.

The Ottoman porte has taken in hand the preservation of ancient monuments. … are not to be disturbed, to be used as building materials, or worked up as lime. … useful provision forbids the erection of … lime-kiln within some miles of such remains.

At Bellona, on the northern frontier of Turkey, the administrator of the forest … of Baron Birsch was recently attacked by Turkish brigands while returning from a journey, and was carried off into the country. Ransom in the sum of 1,000 Turkish pounds is demanded.

Near Gastein, in Austria, there is a small watering place called Zelt-on-the-lake, which, during the past year, not a single … was made. The night watchman is the … and only representative of the po… force, and him the common council has unanimously resolved to pension.

There recently arrived at one of the hotels in Paris a young woman named Paul… ——, who paid a week's rent in advance, and two days afterward was found hanging behind the door in her room. Life was extinct. In her dress was found a pocket-book containing 60,000 francs in bank notes.

A bronze medal and certificate have just been awarded in England to a lad named Mitchell, only 13 years of age, who at Southampton saved from drowning a boy aged … The boy fell into the river Test while playing on its bank, and Mitchell, who was passing, took off his clothes, jumped, in and saved him.

The French Northern Railway company has begun experiments on the motive power generated by electricity at the Chapelle station. The company has established an electric lift, with two Siemens eletro magnetic machines, one for elevating the weight and the other for moving the machinery along the railway.

At the Louvre, in Paris, is once more to be seen in its former place the Venus de Milo. The statue stands on a new plinth, and the plaster which hid many of the details of the figure has been carefully removed, while the fragments of two arms, and the small Her… discovered in the same place with the statue having been placed at its side.

The new English judge, Mr. Justice Wills, a well-known mountaineer, and possesses in Switzerland the reputation owned by very few, even of the best climbers, of being able to ascend any mountain without the assistance of a guide. His books, "Wanderings among the High Alps," and "The Eagle's Nest," are widely read and circulated.

Two Frenchmen, the brothers Forre, have invented a new kind of harp, made entirely of wood. Instead of strings the inventors use strong strips of American fir. The sound is produced as in the ordinary harp, by the contact of the fingers, but the player wears leather gloves covered with rosin. The tone of the instrument is said to be of remarkable purity.

MM. Strauss and Roux, two of the students attached to the laboratory of M. Pasteur, have returned from Toulon, where they had been carrying out a series of anatomical researches complementary to those made by them at Alexandria. They are preparing a paper to read shortly before the Academy of Medicine on the anatomopathological view of the disease raging at Toulon.

The civil courts of Bengal, after paying their own expenses, yield a profit of more than 75 lakhs rupees. Out of this profit is paid the cost of most of the criminal courts, … offices, jails, and the penal settlement of the Andamans, after which the net profit amounts to about 12 lakhs of rupees. The fairness of compelling civil suitors to pay for the administration of criminal justice is questioned.

Next year, says the London World, we shall have the Indian exhibition; and, as a daughter of the ex-king of Punjaub is already being utilized as an attraction, there is no reason why Rummun Loil should not persuade a few ranees of the easier order to supply a fillip to the jaded appetite for aristocratic shop-girls which a succession of Shakspearean shows, mediæval streets, and Elizabethan booths have done much to …

At a public garden near Stuttgart, a few weeks ago, several young Frenchmen expressed pleasure at the insult which had been offered in Paris to the German flag. An elderly German who overheard the conversation, remonstrated with the young men on the unseemliness of such conversation in that place. Angry words followed which soon led to blows, one of which was inflicted with a cane on the old man's head. He died from the injury.

Irish ladies must be very good cricketers or the gentlemen must play very much below themselves when competing with a sex which in the matter of catching cricket-balls, is … During the recent Done… eleven ladies challenged eleven gentlemen to a cricket match. The ladies were to have bats, the gentlemen were to play with broomsticks. Now the broomstick … is, or used to be, no ordinary … of a broom. It is, or was, a round … not much lighter than a bat, and with … pleasantly fined down, so as to be easy to grasp. With this kind of a broomstick a strong defense was not easy to dis…, and you could hit as far, or even further, than you could with a bat. Armed with …, then, the gentlemen should have … the ladies, whose bowling can not … like that of Messrs. Spofforth and … But the ladies won a keenly-contested … by one wicket, in spite of the … innings of Mr. Richardson, an Irish …, who scored 93 off his own broomstick. … these Irish ladies will next play … of Australia.

… caused by the appearance of … the south of France has been in-

FOREIGN ITEMS.

Drinking Beer in Europe—The Cholera Scare in Spain—Irish Ladies as Cricketers—Proposed Canal Across Ireland, &c., &c.

A new sculpture room in the British museum will soon be opened to the public. In this gallery have been arranged the remains of the mausoleum at Halicarnassus, erected by Artemesia about 350 B. C., over the remains of her husband, Mausolus.

The Moniteur des Arts says that "Les Artistes Saponais" are now collecting in Tokio the material for special exhibition in Paris. A society has been formed in Japan, under the presidency of a member of the imperial family, for the protection and revival of Japanese art.

The Ottoman porte has taken in hand the preservation of ancient monuments. They are not to be disturbed, to be used as building materials, or worked up as lime. A careful provision forbids the erection of a lime-kiln within some miles of such remains.

At Bellona, on the northern frontier of Turkey, the administrator of the forest office of Baron Birach was recently attacked by Turkish brigands while returning from a journey, and was carried off into the country. A ransom in the sum of 1,000 Turkish pounds was demanded.

Near Gastein, in Austria, there is a small watering place called Zelt-on-the-lake, in which, during the past year, not a single arrest was made. The night watchman is the first and only representative of the police force, and him the common council has unanimously resolved to pension.

There recently arrived at one of the hotels in Paris a young woman named Pauline ——, who paid a week's rent in advance and two days afterward was found hanging behind the door in her room. Life was extinct. In her dress was found a pocket-book containing 60,000 francs in bank notes.

A bronze medal and certificate have just been awarded in England to a lad named Mitchell, only 13 years of age, who at Southampton saved from drowning a boy aged 5. The boy fell into the river Test while playing on its bank, and Mitchell, who was passing, took off his clothes, jumped, in and saved him.

The French Northern Railway company has begun experiments on the motive power operated by electricity at the Chapelle station. The company has established an electric lift, with two Siemens eletro magnetic machines, one for elevating the weight and the other for moving the machinery along the railway.

At the Louvre, in Paris, is once more to be seen in its former place the Venus de Milo. The statue stands on a new plinth, and the plaster which hid many of the details of the figure has been carefully removed, while the fragments of two arms, and the small Hermes discovered in the same place with the statue having been placed at its side.

The new English judge, Mr. Justice Wills, is a well-known mountaineer, and possesses in Switzerland the reputation owned by very few, even of the best climbers, of being able to ascend any mountain without the assistance of a guide. His books, "Wanderings among the High Alps," and "The Eagle's Nest," are widely read and circulated.

Two Frenchmen, the brothers Forre, have invented a new kind of harp, made entirely of wood. Instead of strings the inventors use strong strips of American fir. The sound is produced as in the ordinary harp, by the contract of the fingers, but the player wears leather gloves covered with rosin. The tone of the instrument is said to be of remarkable purity.

MM. Strauss and Roux, two of the students attached to the laboratory of M. Pasteur, have returned from Toulon, where they had been carrying out a series of anatomical researches complementary to those made by them at Alexandria. They are preparing a paper to read shortly before the Academy of Medicine on the anatomopathological view of the disease raging at Toulon.

The civil courts of Bengal, after paying their own expenses, yield a profit of more than 75 lakhs rupees. Out of this profit is paid the cost of most of the criminal courts, police offices, jails, and the penal settlement of the Andamans, after which the net profit amounts to about 12 lakhs of rupees. The process of compelling civil suitors to pay for the administration of criminal justice is mentioned.

Next year, says the London World, we shall have the Indian exhibition; and, as a daughter of the ex-king of Punjaub is already being utilized as an attraction, there is no reason why Rummun Loll should not be made a few ranees of the easier order to supply a fillip to the jaded appetite for aristocratic shop-girls which a succession of Hyperarean shows, mediæval streets, and Elizabethan booths have done much to sicken.

At a public garden near Stuttgart, a few days ago, several young Frenchmen expressed pleasure at the insult which had been offered in Paris to the German flag. An elderly German who overheard the conversation, remonstrated with the young men on the unseemliness of such conversation in a public place. Angry words followed which soon led to blows, one of which was inflicted with a cane on the old man's head. He died from the injury.

The Irish ladies must be very good cricketers or the gentlemen must play very much below themselves when competing with a sex which, in the matter of catching cricket-balls, is notably the softer. During the recent Donemana ladies eleven ladies challenged eleven gentlemen to a cricket match. The ladies chose to have bats, the gentlemen were to play with broomsticks. Now the broomstick with which is, or used to be, no ordinary handle of a broom. It is, or was, a round stick, not much lighter than a bat, and with which pleasantly fined down, so as to be easy to grasp. With this kind of a broomstick a strong defense was not easy to discover, but you could hit as far, or even further, than you could with a bat. Armed with these, then, the gentlemen should have been the ladies, whose bowling can not have been like that of Messrs. Spofforth and Palmer. But the ladies won a keenly-contested affair by one wicket, in spite of the fine innings of Mr. Richardson, an Irish lady, who scored 93 off his own broomstick. Perhaps these Irish ladies will next play the ladies of Australia.

The alarm caused by the appearance of cholera in the south of France has been intensified in the Spanish capital by the dangers arising from the condition of the cemeteries in that city. After the French occupation [illegible] century two cemeteries were opened, one to the north and the other to the south of the city, but the coffins, instead of being buried in the earth, were placed inside walls built for the purpose of receiving them. In 1831 religious associations called Beneficentales were formed for opening fresh cemeteries, where the coffins were also placed in walls above ground, and these cemeteries are now nine in number, exclusive of one reserved entirely for Protestants. Many of these cemeteries which, when first opened, were isolated from all buildings, are now surrounded by dwelling-houses, and for some time past the municipality has been anxious to open a large necropolis at some distance from the city. The ecclesiastical authorities, however, which derive large profits from the existing cemeteries, have opposed the scheme in a most uncompromising manner, and though the decree for closing the latter was signed a year ago by the king, it has not yet been put in force.

The Art of Not Being Understood.

The importance of the art of being able to express one's self, either in conversation or in writing, with conciseness, force and accuracy cannot be over-estimated. Yet, if one may judge from the talk of his neighbors in a railway car, and from the columns of the average newspaper, there is no branch of learning that, considering its importance, is so neglected. If he has plenty of time at his disposal almost everyone can make himself understood, but too often the number of words used is out of all proportion to the ideas. The peculiarly nervous temperament, and the limited vocabulary of most Americans lead them to express themselves in a vague, verbose fashion. They are too long in getting at the pith of what they are talking about; and when they reach this point their inability to remember the two or three words, that would put their thoughts in a compact, intelligible form, compels them to use ten, where one, were it the right one, would have been sufficient. Not infrequently this vagueness is a cloak assumed for the moment to cover imperfect information or ill-defined ideas regarding the subject that is being discussed.

This false pride which shows itself in a desire to seem to know something about that of which one knows little or nothing, is the cause of much loose, meaningless talk which may serve its purpose temporarily, but which more often leaves a listener in such a state of uncertainty that he is as likely as not to attribute his doubts to his own dulness. Honesty, simplicity and exactness are not qualities that are conspicuous in the conversation of an ordinary American, or even in that of a man of liberal education. The temptation to extravagance and insincerity, which strictly speaking, are forms of dishonesty, is great, especially if one wishes to create the impression that he is unusually clever; and simplicity and exactness of statement, being oftentimes unattainable, give way to circumlocution and generalities. The result is that one gives at best only imperfect expression to his ideas.

Imitation Pearls.

"You would hardly think," said a dealer in fancy goods, holding up a string of glass beads as big as a cherry, made in imitation of pearls, "that to get the pearl tint on each one of those little globes the lives of at least fifteen beautiful fish had to be sacrificed, would you? But they do, though, and although they are made in Venice, and that string represents a catch of nearly 500 fish and the exhaustion of a good many cubic inches of glassblower's breath, I can sell it to you for a quarter and make a fair profit.

"They've been turning out beads like these in Venice ever since 1656. There is a fish in the Adriatic they call the bleak fish, but why bleak I can't say. There is nothing bleak about its appearance. It is a graceful fish, with a glittering armor of silver scales. They are more prolific and swarm in larger schools than herring. One day in 1656 a resident of Venice, Salvator Jacquin by name, placed several of these fish in a small acquarium, to observe their habits. After they had been confined in the aquarium some time, he noticed that the water took on a pearly hue. Believing that this was communicated by the scales of the bleak fish, Jacquin tried some experiments with them. He found that water could be so densely charged with the tint from these scales that glass on being dipped in it and then allowed to dry had every appearance of a pearl. He coated glass beads with the liquid, and they were readily taken for large pearls. The coating would not resist much friction, however, and soon rubbed off of the surface. Finding that a great sale could be had for beads made in imitation of pearls if the coating could be made permanent, Jacquin conceived the idea of having the globes blown hollow and then fixing the fish-scale liquid to the inner surface. This was a success from the start, and the glass pearl bead business got its first boom. It requires the scales of 4,000 bleak fish to make half a pint of the pearl liquid. They are simply removed from the fish, which are as cheap as mossbunkers, and soaked in tepid water. Nowadays a very small quantity of salammonia and isinglass is added to the liquid. It is introduced inside the bead by a small tube, and when it is dry, a coating of wax is run over it. Fortunately for the fish, the trade in these beads, pretty and cheap as they are, is not alarmingly large.

A Unique Monomaniac.

There is a young woman at the seashore who disregards prevailing fashions and overstates her age. It is added, however, that she is not in her right mind. Persons who ride past a certain cottage see on the piazza a figure clad in the garments of a hundred years ago. A near view of the face indicates about twenty-five years. She is a unique monomaniac. She firmly believes that she has been dead a century. Her delusion had a start in her conversion to Spiritualism. She became deeply interested in the materialization of spirits, and for a time deemed herself a medium for that sort of alleged phenomena. Then the idea took possession of her mind that she was the permanently re-embodied form of a spirit which had long ago departed from mortal clay. Under this create she deems it suitable to dress in the styles which were in vogue at the time of her previous human existence. In all other matters she is sane and well-behaved.

PERSONAL.

While the minister is fishing and shooting in Scotland,

"Nearly all the rich men in the United States," says Mr. Moody, "were born poor."

A descendant of William Pitt, the famous British statesman, Mr. H. M. Pitt, plays in the Eajal.

Mr. Worth's flower garden outside the city of Paris contains fifty acres of plants and flowers.

Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson has left Wheatlands for Baltimore, there she intends to make her home.

It is said that Bret Harte now makes a handsome picture, with his silver hair and dark mustache.

"Wind Points" is the name of Jenny Lind's English country place, and the house is called "John's Folly."

The Egyptian deserts are to be explored by professor Schweinfurth for the Berlin Academy of Science.

The finest amateur singer in the world is said to be M. Jules de Soria, who had been singing in London society.

It is thought that the Queen of Sandwich Islands, who gives garden parties, should give nothing but Kalakaua balls.

A niece of Mr. Blaine is the mother superior of one of the largest convents in the country, in Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania.

Although eighty years of age Signor Scotti, the harp professor, at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Naples, still teaches.

"American complexion drinks" were dispensed by Lady Churchill at a bazar, the other day, in aid of a fashionable charity in England.

The decline of the vocal art is predicted by Tamberlik, who thinks that great singers are to disappear from the stage, and much be spoken that is now sung.

Miss Arnold resembles her father, Matthew Arnold, and is tall and stately. She was quite a belle in New York, and after marriage will reside there.

A costly cattle ranche has ben bought, forty miles west of Fort Macleod, in the Canadian North-west, by the son of the Earl of Shannon, Viscount Boyle.

One of the Central Pacific millionaires, Mr. Charles Crocker, says he began business at nine by selling oranges and newspapers in the streets of Troy, New York.

The inventor, Captain Ericsson, begins work after an early breakfast, and continues it for sixteen hours daily, either with pen or tools, although he is eighty-one years old.

Dr. Koch thinks that watering the streets during the cholera season is the worst thing to be done, as the microbe loves moisture, but dies when exposed to high temperature and a dry atmosphere.

Mrs. Hendricks is a fine-looking woman of about fifty, with dark eyes and hair; she wears eyeglasses, and has rather a distingue appearance. She has no children, having lost her only boy.

Mrs. Robert Ingersoll increases her resemblance to Martha Washington by dressing her hair and arranging her neck gear in the same style as that to be seen in the portraits of the elder lady.

The novelist Mrs. Augusta (Evans) Wilson is a friend of Mrs. Vanderbilt, widow of the commodore, and has given her assistance in the preparation, it is said, of a genealogy and history of the Vanderbilt family.

Wombwell's London Menagerie, latterly known as Edmond's, dating back to the time when lions were kept in the Tower, and contemporary with George IV's historical giraffe, has lately come under the hammer.

At the late Russian marriage festivities Prince Louis of Battenburg, who married the Queen's granddaughter, was excluded from the imperial table, where his wife sat, because he himself was not born in the purple.

The Father of Miss Catherine Wolfe, a lady who has an income of five hundred thousand dollars a year, began life as a wholesale dealer in hardware, tin, and general notions. She has refused many offers of marriage.

The front of the wedding gown of Signor Arditi's daughter, who was lately married in London, was designed by the bridegroom and wrought by the bride; and the bridemaid's gown was sprinkled with red, white, and green flowers, emblems of Italy.

Miss F. F. Beechy, youngest daughter of Admiral Beechy, of the British navy, who, for taking an active part in chess affairs, has been styled the "British Queen of Chess," has married Mr. T. B. Rowland, the leading Irish problem composer and solver.

At the recent festivals in honor of Lieutenant Greely, at Portsmouth, Mrs. Greely wore white cashmere with scarlet flowers on the corsage, and a white hat with scarlet tuffs; Mrs. Greely, the mother, wore rich black silk and black lace. Those who know the latter lady say it is very evident whence the arctic hero derived his pluck and courage.

Proposed Canal Across Ireland.

The project for constructing a ship canal across Ireland has been warmly espoused by influential people in England. Elaborate plans and surveys have been made at considerable expense, and have been submitted by Capt. Eads, the American engineer. The plans were prepared by Mr. T. A. Walker, of Great George street, Westminster. The proposed canal would be 127 miles in length, and would contain thirty locks. For ships of 1,500 tons the cost would be eight millions; for ships of 2,500, twelve millions; and for ships of 5,000 and upward, twenty millions sterling. If built on this scale the canal would be 200 feet wide on the surface and 100 feet at the bottom. The passage through the canal would be effected by a system of towage, and it is estimated that the passage of a ship from Galway Bay to Kingstown would occupy between twenty-four and thirty-six hours.

An alternative scheme of a ship railway in which the ships would be carried in cradles, which could be constructed for ten millions, is proposed, by which the duration of the passage through the island would be reduced to twelve hours. An immense aqueduct would have to be constructed to carry the canal over the Shannon at Banagher, and would be over three miles in length, being one of the most difficult and costly works in connection with the undertaking.

USEFUL RECEIPTS.

Lemons, Rockport biscuits, etc., often recommended for food on account of their cheapness. Epicures are fond of them. The taste for them is an acquired taste, which is not desirable to cultivate. The latest decision of physicians is that they are not suitable to eat; "as from their constant use in the animal system as excretory organs—organs which separate from the blood that which, if it remained in the blood, would poison the system—they are often liable to become diseased."

Darbie Pudding, or Fruit Tapioca.—Three-quarters of a cup of pearl tapioca, a pint and a half of boiling water, one saltspoonful of salt, quarter of a cup of sugar, and half a tumbler of currant jelly. Pick over and wash the tapioca. Put it in the double boiler with the boiling water, and cook one hour, or till soft and transparent, stirring often. Add the salt, sugar and currant jelly. Stir till the jelly is all dissolved. Pour into a glass dish, and keep on ice. Serve very cold with sugar and cream. Half a cup of lemon juice, or any acid fruit syrup, or one cup of canned apricot, peach or quince, may be used instead of the jelly. Or, in summer, use one pint of ripe berries or any small fruits, adding more sugar as required.

Mrs. Lincoln's Lemon Jelly.—Take a half box of gelatine, one scant cup of cold water, one pint of boiling water, one cup of sugar, half a (large) cup of lemon juice, one square inch stick of cinnamon. Soak the gelatine in cold water till soft. Shave the lemon rind thin, using none of the white. Steep it with the cinnamon in the pint of boiling water ten minutes, then add the soaked gelatine, sugar and lemon juice, and when dissolved, strain.

Grape Pickles.—Fill a jar with alternate layers of grapes and sugar, and cover with cold vinegar.

Hasty Cup Pudding.—Beat four spoonsful of flour with a pint of milk and four eggs to a good batter, nutmeg and sugar to taste; butter teacups, fill them three parts full, and send them to the oven. Will bake in a quarter of an hour.

No-Egg Cookies.—One cup of butter, one of milk, two of sugar, half a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda, half a teaspoonful of cinnamon or nutmeg, with flour enough to roll.

Light and Puffy Icing.—White of one egg beaten to a stiff froth, beat in gradually a quarter of a pound of powdered sugar, with not quite half a teaspoonful of baking powder mixed with it, flavor to taste. Nice for the top of any baked pudding whether to be served in what it is baked in or in saucers.

Stuffed Cabbage.—Cut out the heart of a fine large cabbage, fill the vacancy with cooked chicken or veal, minced very fine, highly seasoned, and rolled into balls with yolk of egg. Tie the cabbage firmly together, and boil in a covered kettle two hours.

Cheese Potatoes.—Select large potatoes of even size, bake, and when done cut a piece from each and remove the inside and rub through a fine sieve or mash thoroughly; put on the fire with half an ounce of butter, and one ounce of grated cheese for every four potatoes, add boiling milk, pepper and salt as for mashed potatoes, fill the potato shells, and put in a hot oven and brown.

Chili Sauce.—Twelve ripe tomatoes, four ripe peppers, two onions, two tablespoonsful of salt, two tablespoonsful of sugar, three teacups of vinegar, and a little cinnamon. Peel the tomatoes and chop them fine, also the peppers and onions, and boil all together one hour. Canned tomatoes may be used if fresh ones are not convenient.

Oatmeal Cakes.—One cup of cream, two cups of sour milk, two tablespoonsful of sugar, one large teaspoonful of soda, oatmeal sufficient to make a thick batter.

Rye Breakfast Cakes.—Two cups of rye meal, one-half cup of molasses, a little salt, a cup and a half of sweet milk, to be mixed very soft, and one teaspoonful of saleratus. Bake at once in a roll-pan or muffin-rings.

Skeltons.—Two eggs, three tablespoonsfuls of sugar, and one tablespoonful of butter. Flour to make very stiff, roll very thin, and cut in fancy shapes.

Wafers.—One quart of flour, four ounces of lard or butter, a little salt, mix with cold water; pound with a rolling pin twenty minutes, to be rolled out very thin and cut with a doughnut cutter. To be eaten with jelly.

Currant Jelly Pie.—One cup of currant jelly, rind and piece of one lemon, one cup of sugar, one spoonful of flour. Two crusts.

English Steamed Pudding.—One cup of molasses, one-half cup of butter, and one cup of milk, a teaspoonful of soda, a teaspoonful of different spices, one cup of chopped raisins, three and a half cups of flour. Steam two or three hours.

Uncomfortable Genius.

Half a dozen hearts are worth a world of heads. Once upon a time I worshipped intellect. Brains were all that were worth having. Brilliant men were the gods of my idolatry, and good people I thought stupid. Since those salad days I've discovered that, however fascinating genius may be in public, it is not the sweetest of boons in a private family, for nine times out of ten genius is intensely selfish. It wants to be coddled; it rarely coddles. It wants to be heard; it seldom listens. Ego is the burden of its song. Who and what you are matters little. Accustomed to be adored, it accepts devotion as a divine right. To receive is its due; to give is the privilege of lesser mortals. Now if I have a talent it is that of appreciation. If there is a good listener among women, I am that she. I delight in genius, but I've found it out, and have no more illusions.

An Easier Shave.

The minister had gone to see a dying parishioner, and when he reached the cottage he found the family bathed in tears. "Is he worse?" he asked. "Oh, Sir, he's just deein'," was the reply given in an agony of sorrow. Looking toward the "box bed" where the sufferer lay, he was astonished to see two men bending over it. "What are they doing there?" "Eh, Sir, they're just shaving him!" "Shaving him!" said the minister in amazement, "Can they not let the man die in peace?" "It's for easier nay," was the strange answer which mingled with the sobbing.

SCIENTIFIC GOSSIP.

Prof. [illegible] Professor of Physics in the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, has been elected an honorary member by the Philosophical Society, Cambridge, England.

In order to say what action superphosphates will have on a soil, M.P.P. Deherain insists that it is not sufficient to determine merely the total quantity of phosphoric acid, but to ascertain also with what bases it is combined.

In experiments on manures artificially prepared M. G. Joulie has determined that the loss of nitrogen during the process of fermentation is about 20 per cent., a proportion inferior to what takes place in actual practice.

To make plaster set quickly mix it with water into which a little sulphate of potash has been dissolved. To make plaster set slowly mix it with fine slacked lime. The time of setting may be regulated after a few trials by changing the relative proportions.

The report on recent improvements in astronomical instruments, drawn up by Prof. Newcomb and presented to Congress as the fruit of his visit last year to the principal observatories in Europe, has been received with due consideration by astronomers on that Continent.

The British Social Science Association meets this year in Birmingham, from Sept. 17 to 24, where its first meetings were held in 1857. It is now 16 years since this organization met for the second time in Birmingham. Mr. G. J. Shaw-Lefevre has accepted the Presidency of this body for the ensuing year.

Taking the nitrifying action of gypsum on soil as 100, M. Pichard says that of sodium sulphate is 47.71, that of potassium carbonate 12.52. The nitrifying power of gypsum explains its beneficial action in producing crops of lucerne, while that of the lime salts justifies the ancient practice of marling.

Horseshoes made entirely of the horns of sheep have been tested of late in Lyons, France. Horses shod with them have been driven over a variety of pavements, at a rapid pace without slipping. They are more expensive than the ordinary iron horseshoes, but they are more durable and more readily adapt themselves to the changing size and shape of the horse's hoofs.

A memoir by M. E. Maumene treats on the presence of manganese in plants and animals and on the part played by this substance in the animal system. Tea and tobacco are found to contain the largest quantities of metallic manganese, which is on the whole injurious to animals and constantly rejected by them; hence he infers it should no longer be employed medicinally.

That the various powers of a great nation may have free exercise and influence in the world its people must have, says Sir James Paget, distributed among them, besides the possibilities for the attainment of every form or depth of knowledge, "abilities to live healthily wherever work must be or can be done." Herein, he asserts, is the essential bond between health and education.

M. Yeyreneuf, says the Chemical News, finds that with coal gas or with hydrogen sound undergoes a less diminution of intensity than in traversing the same stratum of air. This result is contrary to that shown in Leslie's experiment, but in this latter the vibrations were communicated to the gas from a solid body, and not, as in the present researches, from one gas to another.

Dr. Pietra Santra injected the body of a rabbit with a solution containing two milligrammes of biniodide of mercury and that of a sheep with five milligrammes, and he asserts that, after several months, the preparation sufficed to keep the carcases in a perfect state of preservation. Of course this method of arresting decay will hardly recommend itself to dealers in game or meat, or to their customers.

It is reported from Kylealain, Isle of Skye Scotland, that a large basin made of small pieces of copper rivited together, and several wooden kegs containing "bog butter" have been dug up from a depth of seven feet in a peat moss at that place. The kegs were hollowed out of solid blocks of wood, and they show traces of fire all over the surface. The largest is 1 foot 6 inches in height and 3 feet 6 inches in circumference.

Mr. C. V. Boys, in a recent lecture, gave the results of some experiments on the crushing resistence of the small hardened steel balls used in the bearings of bicycles and tricycles. A ball .187 inch in diameter broke with a weight of 2 tons 13 hundredweights, one .25 inch in diameter broke with 4 tons 9 hundredweights, and one .375 inch in diameter broke with 8 tons 7 hundredweights. The wear of a set of 12 of these balls in an Otto machine after a thousand miles of running was under 21 grains.

Freaks of Watches.

Watches are queer things. They possess some unaccountable peculiarities. For instance, some time about the beginning of last summer, when there had been a succession of fine displays of aurora boreaus, it was estimated that in a single night in the City of New York the mainsprings of no less than 3,000 watches broke. This estimate is based on actual enquiries. Fine sensitive watches are particularly liable to be affected by electrical atmospheric disturbances. During the months of June, July and August, when these phenomena are most frequent, there are more mainsprings broken than during all the remaining months of the year. They break in a variety of ways, sometimes snapping into as many as twenty-seven pieces. It is a fact that since the introduction of the electric light has become so general a large number of watches, some of them very fine ones, have become magnetized. While in this condition they are as useless as timekeepers. This defect used to be incurable, and because of it thousands of watches have been thrown away after much money has been spent on them in vain attempts to persuade them to keep good time.

In ascending a peak in the Himalayas of more than 23,000 feet, or any similar elevation, Mr. Graham suffered no other inconvenience than a decided increase in the rate of the motion of the heart, the beating of which became audible. But he experienced no difficulty in breathing, and had no nausea, bleeding at the nose, or temporary loss of sight and hearing as other travellers say fall to their lot in accomplishing like mountaineering feats.

The Standard.

MARKDALE AUG. 28, 1884.

FRIGHTFUL TRAGEDY.

Norris the head Teacher fires three shots at Miss Ford, second teacher, and then shoots himself.

HE EXPIRES IN 40 MINUTES.

Miss Ford in a Critical Condition.

LOVE AND JEALOUSY.

Our village was thrown into intense excitement on Monday last about 11 o'clock, when a report spread like wild fire to the effect that M. Norris, head teacher of our public school had fired a shot out of a revolver at Miss Ford teacher of the second department while in school, and then shot himself. The terrified pupils fled from the school house to their various homes, wild with excitement and fear, when parents and citizens hurried to the school house finding the above report only too true, here Norris lay unconsious in the room of the second department where the tragedy occurred. Miss Ford, though shot three times in the head, remained consious throughout, and walked to a neighbors (Mr. Biggar's) house over 100 yards distant, the blood flowing profusely from the wounds and from her mouth. In order to describe the sad event it will be necessary to first state which led to the tragedy. M. Norris, who has been head teacher in the school since the 1st January, and who had, previous to the affair, given general satisfaction as a teacher, and conducted himself throughout in a manner which won for him the respect of the people generally, has shown a desire during several months past to win the affections of Miss Ford, and, though not encouraged by her, and latterly denied the privelege of her company, Norris' affection it appears, grew into a REVENGEFUL JEALOUSY.

THE CAUSE

When home on his vacation he brought a revolver with him on his return, and even previous to this, threatened to shoot any person who would go with Miss Ford, so that it is evident the black deed was premeditated; however, things went as usual until Monday last when the school was dismissed at half-past ten for intermission. Norris went up into the second department where Miss Ford was, doing some crotchet work, they talked about their school duties, and afterwards he said he had a question which he wished to have finally decided, viz., whether she was willing that he should keep company with her? (of course with a view to matrimony) she saw that he looked wild, and in order to evade a direct answer said, it is time to call in the school; he answered, not until I have an answer yes or no, then she said it would have to be the same as before, no. He then, having his right hand in his pocket, drew out a revolver and shot her, the bullet entering her face below the cheek bone and lodging in the upper maxillary, she dodged under a desk with both hands on her head for protection when he followed and discharged two other shots, both of which made flesh wounds near the top of the head, one of them first passing through the third finger of the left hand, she then hastened from the room bleeding terribly and was scarcely out of the door when she heard the 4th shot, supposing it was also at her but which proved to be the fatal one for himself, entering the right eye and coming out at the back of his head. He lived some 40 minutes but never spoke. Miss Ford entered the first department and endeavored to wash off the blood, and sent for the doctor, seeing the blood flow so freely she hastened away to meet the Dr., Mrs. Biggar met her and took her into her house by the way where medical assistance was at once on hand, and where the best of care in being administered and the patient is doing well so far, and hopes for her recovery are good.

She is about 20 years of age and a very highly respectable person as also the whole family, and universal sympathy is felt for them in their present sad trial. It is most remarkable how the young lady escaped, three shots being amed at her head from within less than two feet distance, yet none touching a vital point.

M. Norris was 28 years of age, his parents reside at Lyons Head, they were telegraphed for and his father and sister arrived Tuesday, taking the body home for interment same day. It was considered unnecessary to hold an inquest, or post mortem examination on the body, as the evidence was clear and undoubted both of Miss Ford and several children who were in the room at the time. His parents are very respectable people and great sympathy is felt for them.

The village people are scarcely over the shock yet, and we trust that we never againshall be called upon to chronicle such a horrible tragedy in our midst.

LATER.—As we go to press. Miss Ford is doing very nicely, having rested and slept well during nights, her finger is painfull and will likely have to be amputated as it is badly shattered; up to the present there is no bad symptom, she can speak clearly without any trouble and does not suffer much from the wounds in her head. She has a strong nerve and was very little excited through the dreadful tragedy.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

Manitoba Letter.

Tucas Manitoba, Aug. 12, 1884.

To the Editor of the Standard.

DEAR SIR.—Please allow me the privilege of inserting a few lines in your valuable columns.

There has been a great deal said with regard to this Western portion of our Dominion, many of the statements are quite correct while others are very far astray. I will just express my ideas in as short a space as possible. We have in this Province of Manitoba what I would term the flour of our vast Dominion. In the first place we will view it as an agricultural country and as that I might safely say that it cannot be surpassed on the continent, when compared with the older province of our dominion it is far ahead and I believe from this time forward it will be the principal support of our English markets. The land here is a black mould from two to three feet deep which has for a subsoil a very tenacious yellow clay. When once the Prairie is broken the land is easily worked, and one man here with a span of horses can work as much land and get it ready for crop as two men would in Ontario. I speak from experience as I lived in Ontario and at the present day live in Manitoba. A man can break and get ready for crop seventy acres of Prairie land and the following summer reap a harvest of from twenty-five to thirty bushels per acre. I have lived in Manitoba two years and that has been the average yield of wheat in our district, which is Arrow River settlement, this settlement lies north of the Assiniboine, in fact it is well settled from Brandon to Fort Ellice on each side of the Assiniboine. It is wondeful the change has taken place in the last three years. Three years ago this place was nothing but a vast extent of wild Prairie where no human trod except the indian bands, and to-day it is a fruitful country which will team out its millions of bushels of wheat and oats. I might just say here that every kind of grain ripens and is a good sample. The crops this year are looking well and are assuming their golden appearance, people expect to cut their grain about the twentieth of August. It is also a great stock raising country the grass grows in great abundance, it is composed of wild peas vetches and other natural grasses which grow to a great highth in the low land, there is also plenty of water, and roots are a successful crop, all kind of roots can be grown and they attain a great size.

A word about the climate, we have got one of the healthiest climates that can be found, it is a clear bracing atmosphere with very little cloudy or foggy weather, one cause of it being so healthy is because we have so much sunshine and very little damp weather the days are warm and the nights cool, true it is that the winter months are cold but no person appears to suffer much except they loose there way and it is not so easy getting lost now since every place is becoming settled and plenty of travel on the different trails, in fact there is little or no sickness in any part that I have been in. While speaking of the climate I would just state the reason we have such a good sample of grain; The reason simply is this, it has a longer time to grow and mature than it has in Ontario, this year grain was sowed the beginning of April and it won't be fit to cut till about the twentieth of this month, and another reason is the cool nights and our rainy season being in June and July.

Now I would advise men who have large families of boys and who wish to give them land and be able to live in the midst of their family in their old days to come to Manitoba or the North West where they can draw one hundred and sixty acres apiece for himself and boys and pre-emt another quarter section.

Also while the two great political parties of our day are disputing as to the class of emigrants, allow me to tell them to send out a larger supply of young ladies, there are a great many more men than women in this country and the bachelors find it very inconvenient to carry on farming alone.

I am yours truly,
J. H. CUNNINGTON.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

The Scott Act agitation has reached Flesherton in full. On Monday evening last the 6th inst., the Town Hall here was filled to the door in response to an invitation given to the citizens of this country to meet for the purpose of hearing a lecture from Mr. F. Spence of Toronto, on the present aspect of the temperance question also for discussion or debate upon the same. The platform was occupied by the Rev. Mr. Shaw of Maxwell, Rev. Mr. McGregor of this place, and others, the Rev. Mr. McDowell occupied the chair. A cordial invitation was given to any one who might wish to speak in favor of the liquor traffic to come on the platform, but no one seemed inclined to accept the opportunity offered. Mr. Spence spoke for more than two hours at times holding the large audience in brethless silence, his arguments were clear, logical and forcible. Mr. Spence thoroughly explained the provisions of the Scott Act as compared with the Dunkin Act and the Crooks Act, he concluded a very powerful speech by urging upon patriots, citizens, and Christians to support the measure. A vote was taken but only one or two persons stood up against the adoption of the act. A very pleasing feature in connection with the meeting was the large number of ladies present. The meeting closed by a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker, and singing God save the Queen when Rev. Mr. McGregor pronounced the benediction and thus closed an enthusiastic but most orderly meeting.

Dundalk.

From our own correspondent.

The organization of the Lodge of Royal Templars of Temperance will be completed to day (TUESDAY.) Rev. Mr. Keefer lectures in Victoria Hall in the evening on the Scott Act.

Miss Campbell, a teacher in a rural school near here, took her departure suddenly during Saturday night last in company with one of our young bloods. They were seen in your village last Sabbath morning, Miss C. lately received her dismissal from her trustees, and is reported to have live rather a fast life.

The return base-ball match between Flesherton and Dundalk was played last Thursday. The very unfair decisions of the umpire were a matter of comment by all the spectators. Notwithstanding that Flesherton club brought picked players from different parts of the county, our boy's are confident they would have won the game, had they received fair play.

W. T. JACKMAN is in Dundalk this week He seems quite at home among his lady acquaintances, but dont tell any of the young ladies of Markdale Mr. Editor.

The petition for submission of the Scott Act is expected to have the names of 300 Proton ratepayers on it.

Williamsford.

WHY THEY HAVE NO CHERRIES.

Mother don't you think these cherries are ripe enough to preserve. I reckon they are about fit to preserve you can look and see. But laws a massy! if there haint the Methodist parson and his wife. Well well! you will have to "thrash shim woll for they have a sweet tooth (eye you mind) though they do [illegible] Better Than The Best.

GRAND OFFER GOOD FOR AUGUST ONLY.

We will send to any address the STANDARD and Toronto Weekly News the balance of 1884 for 40 cents, or the STANDARD and Montreal Star, six months for 65 cents, or the three papers mentioned the balance of the year for 75 cents. This is the best opportunity yet presented to secure the news at a small cost. Do not delay, but send in your subscrsption early in the month and thereby secure the greater bargain. The cash must accompany the order in all cases. Mail all orders to STANDARD office, Markdale.

Personals.

Mr. John McIntyre has returned from Port Arthur.

Jake G. Keefer, of St. Thomas, called on us last Friday.

Mrs. A. Lyons of Sunderland, is visiting friends in this vicinity.

Mrs. D. J. Shanahan and Master Eddie are visiting friends in Penetanguishene and Medonte.

Mr. H. and Miss Carrie Foster of Williamsford left on Monday for the town of Perth on a three weeks visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Purvis of Brockville are visiting their daughter and other friends here.

Mrs. J. Garton, of Toronto, is this week visiting her sister Mrs. Wm. Armstrong.

C. P. R. Excursion to Montreal.

The Ontario Division of the C. P. R. which includes the Toronto Grey and Bruce and Credit Valley branches will give a cheap excursion to Ottawa and Montreal over the Ontario and Quebeck branch on Tuesday September the 2nd.

Tickets will be good to stop over at Ottawa on returning trip, and will be good for return by any regular train leaving Montreal up till 11th September. Fare from Toronto for round trip $5, from Owen Sound and Flesherton inclusive $9, from Orangeville $7. Trains will leave Toronto at 9, a. m. and 7, p. m. Tuesday the 2nd. For further particulars see bills.

THE BEST YET.—By special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Montreal Star together with the STANDARD six months for 65 cents. The Star is allowed to be the best family paper published while the STANDARD is hard to beat as a local paper, and the two are offered for about the price of one. Send in your subscription at once to this office for one or the both, you can have the Star for 30 cents or the STANDARD for 35 cents to any address, balance of year, cash in advance.

DARING ROBBERIES IN DURHAM.—On Wednesday morning Lower Town was thrown into quite a consternation by the report, that McAlister's stable had been burglarized and two valuable sets of harness, a leather horse net and some odd pieces of harness stolen and also that an attempt had been made to enter Middaugh's stable but the burglars had evidently been disturbed. The report turned out to be too true and McAlister is a loser to the tune of fifty or sixty dollars, all the harness taken belonging to gentlemen staying at his hotel. Later on, we learnt that Birnie had four bridles stolen, and also that he had a clue to the thieves, who are represented as a tough gang residing in Glenelg. A watch has been put on them and Birnie goes to day to Hanover to obtain a warrent for the arrest of two or three parties. It also developes that the scoundrels, had been prevented from effecting an entrance to Middaugh's place by Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre; both were on the look out for their boy, whom they were hourly expecting home, and hearing a rig supposed it to be the boy's and went out with a lantern, disturbing some fellow skulking about the stable. After using abusive language, they got into their rig and drove off. These fellows McIntyre can identify and the fact of them acting in such a suspicious manner is sufficient warranty for an arrest and enquiry. It is about time the silly idea was exploded that it is not absolutely necessary to catch well known rascals in the very act of committing a crime, before you can institute a prosecution. The town authorities should offer a handsome reward for their conviction and McAlister will deserve little sympathy, if he doesn't prosecute. Scoundrels should not be tolerated in one crime lest they should do you another and this superstition about burning out is rank nonsense. Very few men will risk fourteen years in the Penitentiary to gratify a revengeful feeling. Next week we trust, for once, to be able to give an account of an arrest for rascality.—Durham Chronicle.

FOR BOOTS.

Nobby and neat,
Fashionable and cheap,
and for
Satisfaction and comfort
Every day in the week,
Go to Alex. Kay, Markdale.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths twenty five cents.

DEATHS.

FOSTER.—In Artemesia, on the 25th inst., Henry C. eldest son of Mr. Jas. Foster, aged 6 years and 6 months.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness wherever tried. An assortment of Furnished School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL

TEACHER WANTED.

MALE TEACHER. BY MARKDALE public school board. Certificate second class, duties to commence immediately balance of year, state salary.

B. COLEMAN, Secretary,
107-109 Markdale P. O.

STEER ASTRAY.

LOT 90, Con. 2, West of Toronto Sydenham Road, Glenelg, red white spotted steer, with horns turned year old. Any person giving satisfactory formation will be suitably rewarded.

MARSHALL BAIRD.
205-207 Markdale P. O.

New Butcher Shop

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED.

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

RUTLEDGE & TRELFORD.
181

EUCENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mill

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted.

69 J. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

AN ACROSTIC.

Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a man
It's true, Lardine's the best oil
Nothing its equal, cast's aside
External its use, on every side

Use Lardine Machine Oil unexcelled for machinery, sold manufacturer, McCOLL Toronto.

WALTHAM, ELGIN, SWISS WATCHES.

LARGE STOCK OF CLOCKS.

Quadruple Plated Wares.

Wedding Rings, 18 RINGS, CHAINS, SEALS.

Lazarus & Morris and Specks, good Violin Strings, Musical Instruments.

Careful and accurate repairing personally attended to and fully warranted.

Square Dealing. - Fair Prices.

W. A. BROWN.
MARKDALE.

Local and Other Items

NOTICES in these columns intended to call any individual or Society will be charged 5 cents a line for the first insertion and 2 cents a line each subsequent insertion.

TEACHER wanted for Markdale S. S. See Adv.

THE excursion on Monday was well patronized.

GEO. GRANT and Co., have a large stock of furniture.

20 lbs. good brown sugar for $1 at J. R. Trimble's.

SATURDAY the 6th September is the cattle fair in Markdale.

JOHN MCKENNA expects to be in his new shop next week.

Seven new shops have been built on mill street this summer.

36 INCH factory cotton at J. R. Trimble's for 5 cents per yard.

THE sidewalks are still in a rickety condition in places; this is a shame.

MR. BENSON is pushing forward the new building which will be ready for occupation shortly.

R. S. RAE will soon have his premises ready for occupation, He is putting a plate glass front in.

WE were about 20 papers short last week, those who got none will know the reason when they read this.

THE Omnibus of the "Markdale House," with its splendid pair of bays has had a freshend appearance lately.

MR. P. DUCOLON is ornamenting the Livery Stable premises with a coat of paint, which adds materially to the appearance.

EXPECTED next week ex. S. S. Sardinia, via, 25 cases dry goods for W. J. Farland, direct importation from Europian markets.

THE hum of the threshing machine is heard in all directions, and the yield and sample both of barley and fall wheat is excellent.

J. R. TRIMBLE has a few forks, shovels and spades left which he will clear out away below cost.

D. J. Shanahan has yet a few rugs which he is determined to dispose of in order to fully clear out his stock call and get a bargain.

SPECIAL bargains for the next 30 days at R. J. Sprou Flesherton, annual clearing sale.

BOWLER BROS. threshed for Mr. Mercer on Wednesday last, twenty acres of fall wheat in 4 hours and 5 minutes, there being 332 bushels of splendid quality of grain.

J. R. TRIMBLE is now receiving his full stock Ready Made Clothing boots and shoes which for variety and style cannot be surpassed be sure you see them before purchasing elswhere.

SUCCESSFUL candidates at the intermediate examination Owen Sound Intermediate—J. Kelso, J. T. Luton, A. E. Smith, A. L. McNab, M. Tu[illegible], E. K. Richardson, M. C. Whit[illegible] Third class—G. Smith, A. M. Stewa[illegible] Danard, D. Day, F. E. Godfre[illegible] Robertson, M. E. De Le Matte[illegible] Hinkley, F. Ford, S. Davi[illegible] Second class—W. Bellamy, B. A. [illegible] B. A. P. Torr, B. A. [illegible] Dobie, B. D. H. Pearse, A.

Better Times [illegible]

RAND OFFER GOOD FOR AUGUS

ONLY.

We will send to any adre ne STANDARD and Toront Weekly News the balance 884 for 40 cents, or the STAN RD and Montreal Star, s nonths for 65 cents, or th hree papers mentioned th alance of the year for ents. This is the best opp nity yet presented to secu he news at a small cost. D ot delay, but send in yo ubscrsption early in th nonth and thereby secure t reater bargain. The ca nust accompany the order l cases. Mail all orders TANDARD office, Markda

FOR BOOTS.

Nobby and neat,
Fashionable and cheap,
and for
Satisfaction and comfort
Every day in the week,
Go to Alex. Kay, Markdale.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and De nty five cents.

DEATHS.

STER.—In Artemesia, on the 25th Henry C. eldest son of Mr. Jas. Fo ged 6 years and 6 months.

D SCHOOL TRUSTEE

undersigned is manufacturing cellent assortment of

School Furniture

sisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DE ACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the gn and most approved pattern. R mmended by School Trustees and T for cheapness, comfort and compa ever tried. An assortment of Farm ol Bells kept always on hand. Sen logue to Chatsworth P. O.

ANDREW McGIL

EACHER WANTE

ALE TEACHER, BY MARKD public school board. Certificate s , duties to commence immediately ce of year, state salary.

B. COLEMAN, Secretary,
7-109 Markdale P.

STEER ASTRAY

T 90, Con. 2, West of Toronto Sydenham Road, Glenelg, red spotted steer, with horns turned old. Any person giving satisfactor ation will be suitably rewarded. Ad

MARSHALL BAIRD,
07 Markdale P.

ew Butcher Sho

best meats the country can pr on hand and

IVERED TO ALL PARTS E TOWN WHERE ORDERE

hare of public patronage respe ed.
member the stand in McNea's Blo

RUTLEDGE & TRELFOR

EUGENIA

st, Saw and Lath M

ing made extensive improveme st Mill I feel confident I can atisfaction.

D FLOUR ALWAYS ON H

hopping Done Every D

om Sawing and, Bills Filled t notice.

BER AND LATH ALW ON HAND.

Butternut, White Ash, Blac od, Pine and Hemlock Logs w

M. AKITT, Eugen

AN ACROSTIC.

Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a man
It's true, Lardine's the best
Nothing its equal, can't aside External its use, on every ardine Machine Oil unexcelled ry, sold manufacturer, McColl

WALTHAM,

ELGIN, SWISS

WATCHES.

LARGE STOCK OF CLOCKS,

Quadruple Plated Ware,

Wedding Rings, 18 k.,

RINGS,

CHAINS,

SEALS,

Lazzarus & Morris and Boss Specks, good Violin Strings, Musical Instruments.

Careful and accurate repairing personally attended to and fully warranted.

Square Dealing. - Fair Prices.

W. A. BROWN.

MARKDALE.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

TEACHER wanted for Markdale School See Adv.

THE excursion on Monday was fairly patronized.

GEO. GRANT and Co., have a full stock of furniture.

20 lbs. good brown sugar for $1, at J. R. Trimble's.

SATURDAY the 6th September will be cattle fair in Markdale.

JOHN McKENNA expects to be into his new shop next week.

Seven new shops have been built on mill street this summer.

36 INCH factory cotton at J. R. Trimble's for 5 cents per yard.

THE sidewalks are still in a rickety condition in places; this is a shame.

MR. BENSON is pushing forward his new building which will be ready for occupation shortly.

R. S. RAE will soon have his new premises ready for occupation. He is putting a plate glass front in.

WE were about 20 papers short last week, those who got none will know the reason when they read this.

THE Omnibus of the "Markdale House," with its splendid pair of bays, has had a freshend appearance lately.

MR. P. DUCOLON is ornamenting his Livery Stable premises with a coat of paint, which adds materially to its appearance.

EXPECTED next week ex. S. S. Servia, 25 cases dry goods for W. J. McFarland, direct importation from Europian markets.

THE hum of the threshing machine is heard in all directions, and the yield and sample both of barley and fall wheat is excellent.

J. R. TRIMBLE has a few forks, shovels and spades left which he will clear out away below cost.

D. J. Shanahan has yet a few rigs, which he is determined to dispose of in order to fully clear out his stock, call and get a bargain.

SPECIAL bargains for the next 30 days at R. J. Sproule's Flesherton, annual clearing sale.

BOWLER BROS. threshed for Mr. A. Mercer on Wednesday last, twelve acres of fall wheat in 4 hours 7 minutes, there being 332 bushels of a splendid quality of grain.

J. R. TRIMBLE is now receiving his fall stock Ready Made Clothing, boots and shoes which for variety and style cannot be surpassed be sure you see them before purchasing elswhere.

SUCCESSFUL candidates at the intermediate examination Owen Sound: Intermediate—J. Kelso, J. T. Luton, A. E. Smith, A. L. McNab, M. Tupper, E. K. Richardson, M. G. White. Third class—G. Smith, A. M. Stewart F. A. Danard, D. Day, F. E. Godfrey, G. Robertson, M. E. De Le Matter, A. Harkley, F. Ford, S. Davis. Second class—W. Bellamy, B; A. E. Henderson, B; A. P. Torr, B; A. P. Dobie, B; D. H. Pearse, A.

37 yards good Factory Cotton for $1, at McFar lands.

Dye Stuff at at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

40 inch bleached and unbleached cotton for 10 cents at J. R. Trimble's.

National Pills the favorite purgative and anti-bilious medicine, they are mild and thorough.

FAST REAPING.—E. Wright cut, on Tuesday last, eleven acres of oats in five hours and fifteen minutes. This was his last field of grain to cut. The reaper was driven by Oscar Wright who is clerk in Trimble's store, Markdale.

A FEW of Mastins celebrated grain cradles at J. R. Trimble's. Will clear out the balance at $1, each.

PAIN from indigestion or sick head ache is instantly relieved by one dose of Rejuvinator Bitters, made from roots and herbs. Sold by Smith, the barber.

J. R. TRIMBLE wants 500 tubs Butter and 10,000 doz. eggs for which he will pay highest market price either in goods or cash.

The magical power over pain that Hagyard's Yellow Oil possesses, outrivals the marvels of ancient times. It acts in a natural manner to subdue inflammation; cures Rheumatism, Croup, Deafness, Sore Throat, and painful injuries.

School Books And Stationary at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

JUDGING from the prospects and reports of the wheat crop, and outside markets, the price of wheat will range about 75 cents per bushel.

HIGHEST price paid in cash for Butter, 1,000 tubs of good butter wanted by R. J. Sproule Flesherton.

IF you want a nice nobby suit in Canadian tweed French worsted or Scotch tweed go straight to J. R. Trimble's he can suit you both in quality and price.

ARE you a subscriber to the STANDARD and would like to send the paper to a friend, if so, we will forward it the balance of the year to any address free of postage for 25 cents.

ANOTHER lot of that famous Japan tea, 50 cents per lb., worth 70, at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

If you should be so unfortunate as to Burn Scald or Wound yourself in any way the proper thing to keep clean and heal it is McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Insist on having, and be sure you get, McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Price 25 cents. Hill Bro's. has the genuine. J. & J. 2

MR. J. R. TRIMBLE time expires in the building he now occupies on the 24 Febuary 1885 and the whole of the stock must be sold off by that time so look out for bargains.

STILL ANOTHER.—The C. P. R. will run an excursion on regular trains the 29th and 30th August at following rates, good to return up till the 6th Sept. From Owen Sound Markdale and Flesherton to Detroit $6, Bay City $9, Saginaw. $9, Grand Rapids, $8, Cincinati, $12, Chicago, $12.

J. R. TRIMBLE's tea takes the lead of anything in the tea line ever brought to Markdale if you dont believe it just try it, it is simply Immense. Every person who trys it comes back for more.

STACKS of wincey all shades at J. R. Trimble's. Dress goods in all the leading shades and styles just opened out, and remarkable value at J. R. Trimble's.

KEEP OUT THE COLD.—The use of tar paper for the building of houses will, we believe, come into general use in Ontario, as it has in the North West. Mr. John Lyons, of this village, has taken the battons off his dwelling, which was built some years ago, and has lined the house outside with this paper and put over it dressed siding which he intends to have painted. This will make the dwelling very warm and will cost but little. The tar paper can be used when the building is being first erected more cheaply than afterwards, and will doubtless become generally used and serve well the purpose of making houses air tight, a thing very desirable during our cold winters.

In addition to the large assortment of hats already on hand J. R. Trimble has received this week a large consignment of the newest and nobbiest hats ever brought to Markdale and purchased much below the regular price.

Canadian Pacific Railway

(ONTARIO DIVISION.)

Change of Time.

COM'CING MONDAY AUG. 11, '84

Toronto, Grey and Bruce Division.

TORONTO—Depart 9:40 a. m., 5:00 p. m.
Arrive 1:00 p. m., 10:20 "
Note—Mixed train leaves Parkdale 8:15 a. m.

Credit Valley Division.

Toronto, depart 7:10 a. m., 1:05 p. m., 4:50 p. m.
arrive 9:50 " 3:45 " 7:00 "
Note—Mixed train leaves Parkdale 1 a. m.

D. McNICOL, Gen. Pass. Agt. W. WHYTE, General Manager.

MARKDALE STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE AS FOLLOWS:

GOING SOUTH.—Express 9:10 a. m.
" " Mixed 10:05 "
" " Mail 6:07 p. m.

GOING NORTH.—Mail 2:00 p. m.
" " Mixed 4:26 "
" " Express 9:19 "

J. CÆSAR, Agent.

MARKDALE

HARNESS EMPORIUM

ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

SEEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,

Drugstore, - DURHAM.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt,

COFFINS, CASKETS, SHROUDS,

and all

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

HAGYARD'S

YELLOW OIL

CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults

---

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach or irregular action of the Bowels.

INVALUABLE TO EVERY LADY!

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun-burn, Tan, Ringworm, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented, it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness; imparting a perfectly healthy, natural and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price, $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Address all letters to the MAY DEW AGENCY, 167 Church Street, Toronto, Ont. Parlor and Reception Room for Ladies.

Trade Mark.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble

And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops, — in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

The Canadian Mutual Aid Association.

INCORPORATED AUGUST 20TH, 1880.

HEAD OFFICE, - - TORONTO.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

Wm. Rennie, Esq., Toronto, President;
E. H. Hilborn, Esq., Uxbridge, Treasurer;
G. H. Watson, L.L.B., Toronto, Solicitor;
C. H. Mackintosh, M.P., Ottawa;
Thos. Menzies, Peterboro;
Peter Graham, M.P.P., Warwick;
A. Gifford, Esq., Meaford, Vice-President;
W. Pemberton Page, Esq., Toronto, Sec'y;
R. H. Robertson, M.D., Toronto, Med. D'tr;
Lewis Wigle, M.P.P., Leamington;
J. P. Bull, Downsview;
S. W. Hill, Esq., Ridgeville, Memb. Supt.

The Directors have filed with the Hon. S. C. Wood, (Ex-Provincial Treasurer of Ontario) Trustee for the Association, Bonds to the amount of $60,000.00, as a guarantee for the honest carrying out of the terms of Certificates issued to members.

Reliable Aid to Families of Deceased Members at Small Cost.

The Association will do business on the following plan:

Applications.

All Applications for Membership shall be made upon printed forms furnished by the Association, (and applicants must pass a satisfactory medical examination). If accepted, a certificate will be issued within thirty days from date of such acceptance.

Membership.

The payment of TWELVE DOLLARS admits any of sound body and mind between the age of 18 and 60 years, to all the benefits of the Association. If the application is not accepted the money is promptly returned to the applicant.

Plan of Business.

The following table shows the amount for which Certificates of Membership will be issued by the Association, according to age:

AGE.	Amount at Death	AGE.	Amount at Death
From 18 to 30	$3 000	From 45 to 46	$2 200
30 to 31	2 950	46 to 47	2 150
31 to 32	2 900	47 to 48	2 100
32 to 33	2 850	48 to 49	2 050
33 to 34	2 800	49 to 50	2 000
34 to 35	2 750	50 to 51	1 900
35 to 36	2 700	51 to 52	1 800
36 to 37	2 650	52 to 53	1 700
37 to 38	2 600	53 to 54	1 600
38 to 39	2 550	54 to 55	1 500
39 to 40	2 500	55 to 56	1 400
40 to 41	2 450	56 to 57	1 300
41 to 42	2 400	57 to 58	1 200
42 to 43	2 350	58 to 59	1 100
43 to 44	2 300	59 to 60	1 000
44 to 45	2 250

HALF RATE PLAN.

Certificates will be issued for half the above amounts should the applicant so desire.

Assessments.

An Assessment of One Dollar upon each member will be made in case of death or total disability of a member, except when there is money enough in surplus funds to pay said claim.

Special Features.

1—Great inducements to provide for families in case of death, at small cost.
2—Equal benefits to both sexes.
3—Uniform assessments of one dollar only.
4—Careful medical examination required.
5—No annual dues or extra charges.
6—No large salaries or expenses.
7—Two hundred dollars advanced for funeral expenses when necessary.
8—Benefits secured at actual cost.
9—Members becoming totally disabled, may draw half of their claims, the balance being payable at death.
10—Ladies accepted in this Association as well as men.

For particulars apply to S. W. HILL, Membership Superintendent, Ridgeville, or to W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Secretary, [illegible] King Street West, Toronto.

AGENT FOR MARKDALE [illegible] THOS. MANN.

Also Agent for Dominion Grange Mutual Fire Insurance Association.

AGRICULTURAL.

Hay-Making.

The value of the hay crop of this country is immense, being exceeded only by that of corn and wheat, and the increase or diminution of half a dollar in the value of each ton made, would amount to a difference of over 18,000,000 for or against the farmers, and his difference is easily made by the difference in the time of cutting and the manner of curing. Though I am a firm believer in clover and clover hay, yet I realize that on many soils clover does not thrive, and that in much of the country, permanent meadows are a necessary part of farming, and that under such conditions the grasses must be used. The hay from them is not quite as easily ruined by the mode of curing; but it is as much dependent for its highest quality upon the time of cutting. Very much of the Timothy hay made is for sale in the city markets, and I have seen tons sold for the highest price, so ripe that on cutting the bales open the seed rattled out very freely, and the color showed that it had got by far too ripe before cutting, while by its side was other Timothy selling as second or third quality, which was green and nice and worth for feeding purposes several dollars per ton more than the other, and I wondered that city people knew so little of the real value of hay cut at different times. Though Prof. Sanborn, in what he said in the Rural of May 24, may be right as to the value of hay cut at different stages of maturity, yet I am quite sure that in practice ten times more injury results to hay by too late than by too early cutting. The time from the point indicated by the Professor (after bloom) to full ripening is so very short, and ripe Timothy straw is so very little better than any other straw, that I don't think it safe to advise farmers to wait for this period to arrive before cutting. In case of Orchard Grass, it is much worse, for though it makes a fair substitute for good hay, if cut just as it is passing out of bloom, it becomes only a poor substitute for good straw, if left till nearly or quite ripe.

My father was a firm believer in the theory of allowing Timothy to pass from the milk to the dough state before cutting, arguing that he got a greater weight of hay per acre, and, though well satisfied that he was right as to the weight, I always noticed that the cattle preferred the earliest cut, and after I began farming for myself, I began experimenting, and I found the earlier cut always the first eaten, and I believed this was because it was the most palatable and nutritious, and I preferred to let the stock be the judges, and for that reason I began cutting each year a little earlier until I arrived at my present custom of beginning the haying as soon as the grass is well out of bloom, and if there is a large area of meadow, some of it will get too ripe before it is cut.

Though the grasses are not as susceptible of injury or utter ruin as the clovers, yet much of their feeding value depends upon the manner in which they are handled. A heavy dew upon hay thoroughly cured, detracts much from its value, and the curing should be so managed that what is cut in the early part of each day should be in the barn or cock, or at least in the windrow, before dew falls at night. Where the labor of turning and stirring has to be done by hand, the mowers should not be started until the dew is all risen and the ground has become dry and hot. Should the hay be heavy, that cut before dinner should be stirred out immediately after, and if the weather is good for hay-making, it will be fit to rake by three o'clock, and go into the barn or stack. That mowed after dinner up to five o'clock, should be neatly turned over, so as to get the cured side next the ground, and the green side up to receive the dew, and that cut after five will not be sufficiently wilted to take any harm. In the morning following by 10 o'clock, any thick places should be stirred out, and the hay will be ready to rake and draw by one o'clock, so that no hay is left out over more than one night, and none is left partly cured except the uncured side left up. It one has a tedder (and one is very useful even in a Timothy meadow) the mower may be started at pleasure in the morning, as the dew makes no difference, because at 10 o'clock the boy and tedder should be started, and every particle of dew is dispelled by the shaking and airing, and the grass is left in the best possible condition for curing. If the hay is very heavy, let the tedder go over it the second time immediately after noon, and by one o'clock it will be fit to rake and draw, and all that is cut before one o'clock, can be put into windrows before the dew falls. I I keep my mower going till one o'clock, and then do not start it again till four, and mow from that time as long as the driver can see. In this way the dew falls only on wilted hay, and does no more harm than if it fell on standing grass.

This system leaves no hay out over night that has been cured, and dispenses with the necessity of putting the hay into cock, which involves great labor, and is not at all necessary unless storms threaten, and the hay will be found just as good as it is possible to get hay made from the grasses, though not nearly so good as first-class clover hay. —Rural New Yorker.

The Easiest Keeping Cattle.

This is precisely what most men who want cattle at all are in quest of. But it is true of cattle as it is of meadow grass, that by the law of nature we cannot get something from nothing. If any one attempts to keep two cows of any sort ordinarily kept for beef making, upon a surface pasture where only one had been kept before, he must select two animals possessing the qualities which enable them to digest and assimilate as nearly as is possible all the food taken. The easiest keeping cow may be compared, with profit, to the best heating furnace. The mere name given to the furnace may be but a slight index to its capacity for economical heating, especially if there be different grades or capacity for feeding up in any named breed of cattle.

Each forage crop has its peculiarities in the matter of taking up sustenance from the soil, as each breed of fattening cattle has its peculiarities in converting food into flesh and fat. Yet there are individual plants in a given species, as there are individual cows of a breed, that greatly excel, while there are others that fall materially below the average. To illustrate more fully that the fattening tendency is not confined to any one breed, we cite the fact that by breeding together two animals taken from two different so-called distinct breeds, neither of which individual animals possesses in a high degree the fattening tendencies of the breed from which it is taken, progeny may come that will take the highest rank when put up to feed. This is not owing to any superlative tendency in either parent breed, but is due to a quality which lies at the base of fact—that all breeds are made, and that we secure any particular tendency through combined forces. Two ounce bullets, when combined and ignited, may make a hotter fire than either can possibly make separate. So the digestive and assimilative power of the progeny from a cross between two distinct breeds, may be increased much beyond that of either progenitor.

It should not be lost sight of that there is a wide difference in the value of two animals, one being an easy keeper, while at the same time it is a slow grower, and the other a rapid grower, keeping fat while growing. To be an easy keeper because of being a small eater, presupposes slow growth, hence a non-paying piece of property. The value of the laboring ox lies in the work of his muscles. The value of the beef-making animal, regardless of breed or family, lies in the working capacity of its digestive and assimilative systems, presupposing, of course, that there is a favorable anatomical structure to build upon. If breeders could, figuratively speaking, mould cattle forms with as much uniformity and accuracy as the honey bee moulds her cell honey-receptacle, then supposing they all had views alike back of their breeding movements, they would have precisely what they like best; but they are quite a remove from that consummation yet, and must watch and work.—National Live Stock Journal.

A writer in the Chicago Live-Stock Journal dwells upon the necessity of caring for cattle during the summer months as well as at other seasons usually considered more critical. The same remark might well be profitably extended in its application to all kinds of stock. No class of live stock should be left long without careful scrutiny and frequent visits, even though plentifully supplied with pasturage and water. Where a number run together they are liable to mishaps that often end fatally, which a little timely attention might easily have avoided. Indeed the successful stock-man must keep constant vigil if best results are to be attained. A trusty little lad will answer very well for visiting and noticing as to how the flocks and herds get on, with an occasional visit from the owner. If the farm is large, the aid of a safe little pony may be profitably called in, in which case the daily visits are likely to become a source of pleasure to the lad rather than the reverse.

A Russian Wedding Feast.

The banquet is ordered at some fashionable confectioner's. Nothing is wanting—silver, crystal, flowers and lustres laden with candles of the purest wax. The young married pair occupy seats about the middle of the table, the parents supporting them on both sides, the rest of the company take seats according to the degree of relationship or rank. If they want a grand dinner they order a "general's" dinner, which costs $30 more than an ordinary one. At this dinner, so ordered, the master of ceremonies invites a real old pensioned off general, who is received with all the reverence due to his rank and seated in the place of honor. He is the first to drink to the health of the young couple, and is always helped before any one else. He never speakes unless it is absolutely necessary. He is there only for show, and he does his best, in return for the $20 paid him. He never refuses a single dish of all the thirty or more served on such occasions. As the last roast disappears from the table the champagne corks fly, the glasses are filled to the brim, the music strikes up, and huzzas resound from all parts. But here comes the brides father with glass in hand, going up to her bowing and making a most woeful face saying that his wine was so bitter that he could not drink it it until she had sweetened it. After a good deal of pressing she rises and gives her husband a kiss; her father still pretends that his wine is bitter, and it remains so till she has given her husband three kisses; each kiss not only sweetens his wine, but is accompanied with roars of laughter and bursts of applause After the dinner comes the ball and "the general's walk." They lead him through all the rooms once every half hour; everybody salutes him as he passes along, and he graciously replies by an inclination of the head. At last, at 3 o'clock in the morning, all the young girls and those who dressed the bride take her away to undress her and put her to rest; the men do the same by the husband. The next morning the house of the newly married couple is again filled with the crowds of the evening before. The young wife is seated in a drawing room on a sofa with a splendid tea service before her. One after another approaches her and salutes her. She then offers tea, coffee or chocklate, according to the taste of the visitor. She is throned for the first time in all splendor as the mistress of the house. The most intimate friends remain to spend the day with the young pair.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

Another wonder in the progenitive line has turned up three miles southeast of Eureka, in Jefferson County, her name being Mrs. H. W. Pullman Twelve days ago Mrs. Pullman became the happy mother of four bouncing boys, all of whom are in good condition, and to all appearances likely to grow up together in peace and harmony to inflict a double Dromio act upon an unsuspecting world. The chronicle of Mrs. Pullman's past career leads up to the present occurrence very naturally. One year after her marriage she was delivered of a boy, now living. A year after another boy came into the world, who died. Her next was still another boy, who still lives, and later on she became the mother of three more boys at one time, one of whom died. Her next experience was that of twelve days ago.

In East Africa nearly every woman wears the pelele. When she is a little girl a small hole is pierced through the middle of the upper lip, and into this is placed a small wooden pin to prevent the puncture from closing up. After a time this is changed for a larger pin, and so on until the hole is large enough to admit a ring. In proportion as the pelele is made gradually larger, so the lip enlarges also and come to look like a snout. An average specimen measures 1¼ inches in diameter and almost an inch in length. When she becomes a widow fashion compels her to take out her pelele, the lip falls, and the great round hole, called labercle, shows the teeth and jaw quite plainly, making her hideous.

CANNIBALISM.

Something About Men Who Have Eaten Their Fellow-Men.

The publication of the alleged cannibalism of the survivors of the Lady Franklin bay expedition turns public attention strongly to the subject of anthropophagy. The fact that men under stress of hunger will eat man is as old as the stone age of Europe. Remains of human banquets are to be found in the lately-opened caves of France and the prehistoric remains of Denmark. Savage tribes the world over have eaten their enemies, a fact which induced the philosopher Compte to declare that the greatest step forward in civilization made by man was the invention of slavery, which substituted service for food. When the early explorers came first to America, they found the West Indian islanders all man-eaters, whence the name cannibal comes, "Carribal" being the word used by the Spanish discoverers. These Indians were exceedingly partial to human flesh, eating, however, only that of their enemies. In Marco Polo's travels in the east, he described markets in which human flesh was offered for sale in Tartary, and later travellers have confirmed this fact. The same open sale is said to be the custom among the wild tribes near the Congo in Africa, and in other parts of the interior of the dark continent. In New Zealand and the South Sea islands generally, especially at Fee-jee, cannibalism was the rule rather than the exception. It was associated with the religious beliefs of the people, and the most horrible excesses were continued down into times within the memory of men now living. In the South seas the chief epicures in anthropophagy were to be found, the New Zealanders, and, indeed, all of those with educated palates, esteeming the palm of the human hand as the choicest tid-bit in all gastronomy. Singularly enough, the Australian cannibals, after a number of experiments, declared that civilized man had so saturated himself with salt and tobacco that his flesh was ruined for cookery, and the white man among the cannibals of the South seas is looked upon much as we regard a fish-eating duck. Instances are on record wherein crews of wrecked vessels were preserved for the sole reason that they were unfit to eat.

Among white men cannibalism has always been regarded with the deepest loathing and horror, and it has only been under the direst stress of famine that food so unnatural has been resorted to. There has always been an idea, amounting almost to a superstition, that once a man partakes of the ghoulish repast the foul appetite grows upon him, and that no fear of punishment or detection can keep him from seeking new victims. This is said to be a mania, and a name has been given to it, "anthrophagia," of which many well authenticated cases are to be found in the books.

A Milanese woman named Elizabeth, was burned in the middle of the thirteenth century for murdering and

DEVOURING A NUMBER OF CHILDREN.

In Saxony the celebrated Goldsmith case will be remembered. This wretch had killed a man, and in order to conceal the body burnt and ate it. He then committed several other murders for the same purpose, being finally executed in 1782. It is asserted that the reason that swine and similar flesh was declared unclean by the lawgivers of the east was the fact that it tasted much like man, and led to the use of the latter food. It is related of Richard Cœur de Lion that after being sick in Palestine he craved a boar's head, a luxury hard to get in a Mohammedan land, and that a Saracen's head was dressed, baked, and eaten ravenously by the king, who, according to the ballad, said:

> King Richard shall warrant
> There is no flesh so nourrissant
> Unto an English man,
> Partridge, plover, heron ne swan,
> Cow ne ox, sheep ne swine,
> As the head of a Saracyne.

In the wars that devastated Italy in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, cannibalism was common in the prolonged sieges and determined resistance of the besieged. At the siege of the castle of Borretino in 1340, the soldiers who formed the ward of the castle ate their horses, dogs, and other such domestic animals as they could find, and then devoured the servants, women, and children in the fortress. When the castle fell the constable was burned and the soldiers still living executed at once. When Cortez was besieging the city of Mexico the inhabitants were driven to the last extreme of famine, and slaughtered and ate their prisoners, making the most desperate sallies in quest of human food. It is noted, however, that in spite of their most desperate hunger the Mexicans would not eat their companions or their dead friends, regarding that as sacrilege. During the conquest of Peru instances of cannibalism are numerous, both on the part of the Spaniards and Peruvians, the former learning the habit from the latter. When the Spaniard De Narvaes was making his explorations in Florida, after a complete failure of provisions, those of his troops who died of the famine to the horror of the Indians, who exclaimed against the sacrilege of eating one's friends. Exploring parties in the Rocky mountains were driven to the same dreadful necessity; in one case, that of McCalmont and Hughes, being as recent as 1858, the latter killing and eating his companion, and subsequently going crazy. He was finally found a raving maniac beside the mutilated body of his friend.

WERE DEVOURED BY THE OTHERS,

Shipwrecks, and the consequent suffering and starvation have often tinged the pages of history red with the consequent records of inhuman and ghoulish feasts.

Perhaps the best known case in recent times followed the wreck of the Medusa in 1816. The Medusa frigate with several other ships set sail June 17, 1816, from Rochefort, France, for Senegal, Africa, and went aground on the Arguin bank on the west coast. A raft was constructed upon which over a hundred soldiers and some of the passengers of the ship were put. Most of the officers took to the boats and made off, leaving the others to get to the African coast the best way possible.

There was no food and no instruments on the raft; there was plenty of wine and some water. The raft was the scene of the most indescribable suffering. A storm arose and many of the unfortunates were washed away; others committed suicide before they had been a day afloat. The men became despondent and mutinied, seizing the wine and drinking themselves into a state of intoxication. They then tried to destroy the raft so that all might be involved in one common ruin. A desperate fight between the passengers and the officers on the one side and the drunken mutineers on the other followed, in which many were slain, the rafts being simply strewn with dead bodies. The survivors, wild with hunger, and entirely delirious, began feasting on the bodies of the dead. They tore the flesh from their dead comrades, and, strengthened by their horrible meal, again attacked the officers, against whom they seemed to be animated by a blind fury. For thirteen days these terrible scenes were repeated daily until the end. At last but twenty-seven remained alive, and of these twelve were so weak from wounds and exposure that the rest threw them into the sea in order to save their rations. This expedient saved the lives of the rest, who were rescued by the Argus brig thirteen days after parting company with the Medusa. There were 150 on the raft when it started; fifteen of these were picked up by the Argus, and five of them died immediately after their rescue.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Handy Housewife.

"I wish there was some way to keep those children quiet on a rainy day, or when it is too warm for them to be out in the sun playing," said a weary mother the other day to her frind and neighbor. "I always notice what little trouble you have with your children, although you have three more than I have, and I thought perhaps you could tell me how to manage it."

"A very easy matter, my dear," replied her friend, "Children must be amused or they will become cross and naughty; so would you or I. Suppose we were doomed to stay all day, or half a day, in one room, were not allowed to read, write, or sew, could only sit on certain chairs and handle certain articles, and there was no one to talk to or nothing but a game of solitaire for us to play. Why we'd be almost crazy. Any one, man, woman, or child, in good health, must have something to do during their waking hours. Yet how few mothers try to give this something to the busy hands and active brains of the little ones. You notice children out in the street or garden. Are they ever still or quiet? No. It is true they find amusement in the most trival things. Now, I have thought about all this, and I have fixed up one room in the house, the play-room exclusively for the children.

"The room is the large one on the top floor. It was all I had to spare, and as I could not afford a good carpet I painted the floor and left it bare. A poor carpet would be worn out in six months. In the winter the room is heated by a little circular stove, and over this I put a wire screen, so there is no danger of the children burning themselves. The walls are painted a delicate grey, with a pale pink border, and I have a wainscoting that is one of the chief charms of the room.

"What is it? Well, I collected all the pictures I could out of magazines, illustrated papers, etc., and pasted them on the wall from the floor almost as high as the mantel. pictures of birds and animals, and those of child-life, are, of course, the greatest number. I put the colored prints down near the surface, so that the smaller children could enjoy them, and they are pasted on so nicely that tearing them is impossible.

"Then," continued this nice little mother, "I have five boxes in the room, all of different sizes. These boxes have covers that fasten down, and are padded on the top, with a flounce around the edge, so that when the box is closed they have the appearance of little ottomans, Each child keeps his playthings in the box, and it is his particular property. A nursery rug, with all kinds of animals cut out of cloth, with the name embroidered underneath, is among the furnishings of the room.

"My children amuse themselves for hours in that room, with only excursions now and then to the kitchen for sometaing to play 'tea-party' with, and I flatter myself that they learn considerable from the pictures, as well as neatness and order with their playthings."

A Colossus of Colossi.

In the course of the excavations at San (Zoan-Tanis) there have been disclosed several portions of a red granite colossal statue of Rameses II., which, when whole, must have been the largest statue known. It appears to have been a standing figure of the usual type, crowned with the crown of Upper Egypt, and supported up the back by a pilaster. Judging from the dimensions of various parts, such as the ear and the instep; and comparing the proportionate size of the cartouenes (which are three feet wide) with those engraved upon other statues, this colossus must have been ninety-eight feet high from the foot to the crown. Together with its pedestal, which we can scarcely doubt was in one piece with it, it would altogether be about 115 feet high. The great toe measures 18 inches across. That it was a monolith is almost certain, from the fact that all the largest statues are without any joint; nor does this seem incredible, since there are obelisks nearly as long. But this may claim to have been the tallest and heaviest statue that we know of, as the figure alone would weigh 700 tons, to which the accessories would probably add as much again. A total weight of 1200 tons is most likely under rather than over the actual sum. The statue has been cut into building blocks by Sheshank III., and used in the construction of the great Pylon; hence only small pieces of a few tons each are now to be seen.

There is a little Shoshone papoose out West, only four years of age, and not much larger than a pickle jar, who evinces wonderful aptitude for moulding images out of mud and clay. His mother was engaged at a washtub outside of a house the other day, and from the mud caused by the sloppings the little savage moulded a deer and a horse, which were almost perfect in contour and form. He displayed but little pains in his work, to which he appeared to adapt himself as naturally as an ordinary white child would to the making of mud pies. With proper cultivation there is evidently the development of a wonderful sculptor in this infant redskin.

Precept at variance with practice is worse than useless, inasmuch as it only serves to teach that most cowardly of vices—hypocrisy. Even children are judges of hypocrisy, and the lessons of the parent who says one thing and does the opposite are quickly seen through. The teaching of the friar was not worth much who preached the virtue of honesty with a stolen goose in his sleeve.

LAUGHLETS.

The most verdant young man of the season was the one who attempted to cut grass with a bicycle.

The long and short of it: "When I'm waiting for Jam a minute seems an hour; when he is with me an hour seems but a minute."

A Jersey City man tans leather with stale eggs, and in view of the number of long-winded orators who are now taking in ballast this waste of useful material should be discouraged.

To enable ladies to view the dresses of others of their sex as they come into church a Western man has invented a seat which is set on a pivot. This saves much neck straining.

A Long Island man kicked a professional dude who visited his daughter, and broke his own leg. He was not familiar with the terrible rebound from kicking at nothing.

A quip by sweet sixteen: "What do you do down here at the shore when it is so awfully damp all the time?" was the inquiry of a young visiting miss. "Do? Why, we just mildew."

"Oh, ma!" exclaimed a little girl, running breathlessly into the house from the garden, "you know my beans that I planted, don't you?" Yes, dear." Well, there's peas on 'em."

Mrs. Bascom's pun: "Here is an article about 'The Land of the Midnight Sun,'" said Mrs. Bascom. "It can't mean this country, because this is the land of the midnight husband."

Verbatim: At a German court-martial—Captain (presiding): Then I'm to understand that the accused offered you a cigar when you were doing sentry duty?" "Yes, your honor." "And you declined?" "Yes, to command, your honor." "And what reply did he make?" "You are an ass, your honor!"

Entomological: A Pulman palace car porter refused to admit a lady's pet rabbit to a car and was shown a small turtle carried by another passanger, with the query why the rabbit was exoluded and a turtle admitted. "Cats is dogs and rabbits is dogs," was his emphatic answer, "but a turtle is an insect."

It is reported that King Thebaw has murdered four hundred and seventy-five of his relatives since he ascended the throne. He may have had provocation enough. No doubt they were city relatives, and the King, who has a country seat, anticipated a visit from them during the summer. Don't judge the King too harshly, until all the facts are known.

"But, oh, papa, Georgie and I do love each other so devotedly." "I don't care. I say you shall not marry him. How can he support the daughter of a wealthy merchant when his salary is only five thousand dollars a year?" "But, papa, you forget he is your confidential clerk, your trusted employe." "What of that?" "Why he probably owns more of that store than you do already."

Little Billy Simpson is age about ten. Not long since the Simpton family was increased by still another little boy, and a friend of the family, meeting Billy, said to him: "So you have got another baby at your house. He is a right smart little fellow, ain't he?" "Humph!" sneered Billy, turning up his nose; "how many smart boys do you expect us to have in our family?"

Lord Coleraine was noted for imperturbable presence of mind. Going up to his room in an Irish inn one night he found his bed occupied by a stranger, who started up, exclaiming furiously: "How dare you come into my bedroom sir! My name is Johnson; I shall demand satisfaction in the morning." Just then a waxen-faced little woman popped her head from under the clothes. Lord Coleraine pointed at her and coolly observed: "Mrs. Johnson, I presume."

The Growth and Vitality of Proverbs.

Since the dawn of history the East has always been the favorite breeding-ground of proverbs. Proverbs are the natural language of a contemplative race, and the people of the East are and have been always contemplative to a marked degree. To the East, therefore, the student of this kind of literature must look for the best specimens with the certainty of finding there a wealth, the abundance of which must be seen to be appreciated. But not alone in the East is there found a proverbial philosophy, for every nation to some extent grows its own proverbs as it raises the most necessary articles of daily use. Few nations impart what they can raise at home, so few nations incorporate into the language of daily life forms of speech from foreign sources. The literature of a country may perish, but proverbs never die, because they have in themselves a germ of life that renders them practically immortal. It is with the proverbs of a nation as with the proper names and the native flowers. Every kind of social, moral and political revolution may sweep over the land, the native language may disappear and the native people vanish before the sword of the destroyer, but the native names and the native flowers never perish, and the proverbs have an almost equal tenacity of life.

The Queen of Siam's Thimble.

The thimble is a Dutch invention that was first brought to England in 1695 by one John Lofting, who began its manufacture at Islington, near London, gaining thereby both honor and profit. Its name was derived from the words thumb and bell, being for a long time called thumble, and only lately thimble. Old records say that thimbles were first worn on the thumbs; but we can scarcely conceive how they would be of much use there. Formerly they were made of brass and iron only, but of late years, steel, silver, gold, horn, ivory and even pearl and glass have all been used for making thimbles.

A thimble owned by a Queen-consort of Siam is shaped like a lotus bud, that being the royal flower of the country, and almost everything about the court bearing, in a greater or less degree, some impress of the lotus. This thimble is of gold thickly studded with diamonds that are so arranged as to form the lady's name and the date of her marriage. It was a bridal gift from the King, who, having seen the English and American ladies at his court using thimbles, took this method of introducing them among his own people.

The Land of the Vedas.

It was close upon midnight when reached Ajmere, the last halting pla the journey to Bombay, writes a corre dent of the New York Tribune from Aj India. It was some consolation to that Dak bungalow, where we were to was just over the way from the st These Dak bungalows are an institutio cellar to a condition of things that is ra passing away in India. They are, in way, identical with the refuges that sprinkled over the bleak passes of the The structure is erected by the governm who at more frequented stations, pla khansamah, or caterer, who supplies fo charges subject to the supervision o district committee. In out-of-the places the Dak bungalow is simply a comfortless as any in Alpine passes had not hitherto come in our way to st a Dak bungalow, and hearing that there an exceptionally good one at Ajmere, w cided to go there. The room into whic were shown was plain but sufficiently fortable for a traveller's rest. The walls were recently whitewashed; t was a spacious bath-room, and the bed-r was furnished with a few chairs, a ta and a small truckle-bed in the corner. T were neither sheets, blankets or quilts the bed, but the man, who had disappe after showing us into the room, had do less gone in search of them.

After waiting a reasonable time I wen hurry him up, and made the pleasing covery that sheets, blankets, and coun panes do not enter into the domestic econo of a Dak bungalow. We had omitted, packing up for our journey, to put i leather-bed, a blanket or two, and a cha of sheets, and the prospect for the ni was not attractive. It was varied by appearance on the scene of a boister Briton, a fellow-lodger, who, hearing of dilemma, literally broke into the roo dragging his bed-clothes with him, and sisting upon our accepting the loan. weakly protested, but he stormed so, claring in typhoonic manner that he "cou not lie in his bed and know that a lady w without sheets," that there was no h for it. The matter settled by his insistan he left his bed-clothes and disappeared do the passage like a gale of wind blowing salt out to the southward.

Ajmere is not one of the show places India, lying out of the hurly-burly of tra and having nothing well-advertised in t way of tombs or temples. But it is, in quiet way, a singularly

INTERESTING EXAMPLAR OF NATIVE LIFE

Moreover, it has its Hindoo temple and Moslem mosque, both of hoar antiquit The temple is know to the Hindoos as A dia-ka jhopra, which, being translat means "the work of two days and a half The story is that the king, one of the o rajahs of Rajputana, projecting a journe to his residence on a hill overlooking t town, gave orders for the building of temple, mentioning by the way that would be back on the third day, and th he expected to find the work complete. went off, returned in sixty hours, and t temple was ready for service. This fac strange in itself, becomes even more amaz ing reflected upon among the ruins of th temple, and taking note of the enormous la bor that must have been expended on it construction. There remain now only th brick wall and the roof, supported by re sandstone pillars. These are exquisitel and elaborately carved. Some recent ex cavations, accidentally conducted, hav brought to light a number of slabs of ston covered with inscriptions which, as far as could gather from inquiries on the spot, n one has attempted to decipher. In the mai street stands the mosque, in much bette preservation and in daily use by the faith ful, who form a considerable proportion o the population of Ajmere. The mosqu was founded in the early days of the Mogu empire, by Khaia Synd, the first missionary to the heathen Hindoo of Ajmere. We have visited many mosques in India without le or hindrance, and were taken aback when on proposing to enter this building, a Mussulman, with ferocious beard and im agitary scimitar in his hand, waved us back.

The fortress of Zeraghur, whither the rajah went pending the building of the Hindoo temple, still stands on the hill with its ruined battlements looking down upon the city. A betel-nut man reclined in a chair while the barber, aproned and toweled hovered about him. The two squat down face to face and knee to knee, and thus is the shaving accomplished. The barber is one of the luxuries of European residence or travel in India. He is innumerable and ubiquitous. On arrival at a station after an all night journey he is sure to be waiting, and will enter the carriage and shave you without troubling you to remove from your seat. At the hotels he

KNOCKS TIMIDLY AT THE DOOR

as soon as he conceives time has been allowed for the consumption of chota hazree, will patiently wait half an hour or an hour, and thankfully takes his threepence, conscious that it is eight times as much as he would get from a native, whilst Sahib is not exigeant in the matter of nostrils and ears, and would even be angry if he laid waste a square inch or so on the crown of his head.

It was curious, as we strolled about, to find the dogs barking at us. One suddenly coming upon us would stand and gaze for a moment, marvelling at the strange thing, and then, first observing the precaution of sidling out of the way, begin to bark. Others coming out to see what was the matter, and being equally disturbed in their mind, took up the cry until matters began to seem exciting. We came upon a shoemaker sitting full in the sun by the dusty roadside with the forlornest agglomeration of wrecked boots and shoes ever seen off a dead heap. He was gazing upon the moldy mass of soleless uppers and earthquake-rent soles, a picture of despondency. A possible customer coming along, he brightened up, and in a long and animated speech appeared to be demonstrating that, though eccentric in appearance, these were the kind of shoes, which, with judicious mending, were warranted to carry a man on to fortune. Boot-making and boot-mending, a great trade generally throughout India, is peculiar in Ajmere, where the men are much given to wearing them than is the rule. Of course here as elsewhere invariably go barefooted. Shoes used by a native must necessarily be a size too large, since their owner is a constant alteration of slipping off and shuffling on. No native enters a room or shop with his shoes on.

Driving out to the gardens we came upon

LAUGHLETS.

most verdant young man of the ne who attempted to out pace bicycle.

ng and short of it: "When I'm for Jam s a minute seems an hour; he is with me an hour seems but a ."

rsey City man tans leather with stale n view of the number of long- orators who are now taking in ballast ate of useful material should be dis- d.

nable ladies to view the dresses of f their sex as they come into church rn man has invented a seat which a pivot. This saves much neck g.

g Island man kicked a professional no visited his daughter, and broke leg. He was not familiar with ible rebound from kicking at no-

p by sweet sixteen: "What do you here at the shore when it is so av- mp all the time?" was the inquiry of visiting miss. "Do? Why, we just ma!" exclaimed a little girl, running sly into the house from the garden, ow my beans that I planted, don't Yes, dear." Well, there's peas on Bascom's pun: "Here is an article The Land of the Midnight Sun," e, Bascom. "It can't mean this because this is the land of the mid- band."

im: At a German court-martial— (presiding): Then I'm to under- at the accused offered you a cigar were doing sentry duty?" "Yes, or." "And you declined?" "Yes, nd, your honor." "And what re- e make?" "You are an ass, your ological: A Pulman palace car used to admit a lady's pet rabbit nd was shown a small turtle car- nother passanger, with the query, abbit was excluded and a turtle ad- "Cats is dogs and rabbits is dogs," mphatic answer, "but a turtle is an orted that King Thebaw has mar- hundred and seventy-five of his ince he ascended the throne. He had provocation enough. No y were city relatives, and the has a country seat, anticipated them during the summer. Don't King too harshly, until all the facts

h, papa, Georgie and I do love so devotedly." "I don't care. I all not marry him. How can he e daughter of a wealthy merchant alary is only five thousand dollars But, papa, you forget he is your l clerk, your trusted employe,' f that?" "Why he probably of that store than you do al

illy Simpson is age about ten, since the Simpton family was y still another little boy, and a e family, meeting Billy, said to you have got another baby at He is a right smart little fel- e?" "Humph!" sneered Billy, his nose; "how many smart expect us to have in our fami-raine was noted for imperturb- e of mind. Going up to his room nn one night he found his bed a stranger, who started up, ex- iously: "How dare you come om sir! My name is Johnson; nd satisfaction in the morning." wizen-faced little woman popped m under the clothes. Lord nted at her and coolly observed: son, I presume."

h and Vitality of Proverbs.

dawn of history the East has the favorite breeding-ground of overbs are the natural language plative race, and the people of e and have been always e to a marked degree. ast, therefore, the student l of literature must look specimens with the certainty re a wealth, the abundance of e seen to be appreciated. But the East is there found a pro- ophy, for every nation to some its own proverbs as it raises the y articles of daily use. Few na- what they can raise at home, so corporate into the language of rms of speech from foreign literature of a country may overbs never die, because they elves a germ of life that re- ctically immortal. It is with of a nation as with the proper native flowers. Every kind l and political revolution may e land, the native language and the native people vanish rd of the destroyer, but the and the native flowers never e proverbs have an almost of life.

en of Siam's Thimble.

is a Dutch invention that was England in 1695 by one John began its manufacture at London, gaining thereby profit. Its name was deriv- rds thumb and bell, being for ed thumble, and only lately records say that thimbles on the thumbs; but we can e how they would be of much rmerly they were made of nly, but of late years, steel, orn, ivory and even pearl all been used for making med by a Queen-consort of ike a lotus bud, that being of the country, and almost t the court bearing, in a egree, some impress of the nble is of gold thickly stud- onds that are so arrang- e lady's name and the date It was a bridal gift from having seen the English and at his court using thimbles, of introducing them among

The Land of the Vedas.

It was close upon midnight when we reached Ajmere, the last halting place on the journey to Bombay, writes a correspondent of the New York Tribune from Ajmere, India. It was some consolation to know that Dak bungalow, where we were to stay, was just over the way from the station. These Dak bungalows are an institution peculiar to a condition of things that is rapidly passing away in India. They are, in their way, identical with the refuges that are sprinkled over the bleak passes of the Alps. The structure is erected by the government, who at more frequented stations, place a khansamah, or caterer, who supplies food at charges subject to the supervision of the district committee. In out-of-the-way places the Dak bungalow is simply a shed, as comfortless as any in Alpine passes. It had not hitherto come in our way to stop at a Dak bungalow, and hearing that there was an exceptionally good one at Ajmere, we decided to go there. The room into which we were shown was plain but sufficiently comfortable for a traveller's rest. The lofty walls were recently whitewashed; there was a spacious bath-room, and the bed-room was furnished with a few chairs, a table, and a small truckle-bed in the corner. There were neither sheets, blankets or quilts on the bed, but the man, who had disappeared after showing us into the room, had doubtless gone in search of them.

After waiting a reasonable time I went to hurry him up, and made the pleasing discovery that sheets, blankets, and counterpanes do not enter into the domestic economy of a Dak bungalow. We had omitted, in packing up for our journey, to put in a feather-bed, a blanket or two, and a change of sheets, and the prospect for the night was not attractive. It was varied by the appearance on the scene of a boisterous Briton, a fellow-lodger, who, hearing of our dilemma, literally broke into the room, dragging his bed-clothes with him, and insisting upon our accepting the loan. I weakly protested, but he stormed so, declaring in typhoonic manner that he "could not lie in his bed and know that a lady was without sheets," that there was no help for it. The matter settled by his insistance he left his bed-clothes and disappeared down the passage like a gale of wind blowing itself out to the southward.

Ajmere is not one of the show places of India, lying out of the hurly-burly of trade, and having nothing well-advertised in the way of tombs or temples. But it is, in its quiet way, a singularly

INTERESTING EXAMPLAR OF NATIVE LIFE.

Moreover, it has its Hindoo temple and its Moslem mosque, both of hoar antiquity. The temple is know to the Hindoos as Arai-din-ka jhopra, which, being translated, means "the work of two days and a half." The story is that the king, one of the old rajahs of Rajputana, projecting a journey to his residence on a hill overlooking the town, gave orders for the building of a temple, mentioning by the way that he would be back on the third day, and that he expected to find the work complete. He went off, returned in sixty hours, and the temple was ready for service. This fact, strange in itself, becomes even more amazing reflected upon among the ruins of the temple, and taking note of the enormous labor that must have been expended on its construction. There remain now only the brick wall and the roof, supported by red sandstone pillars. These are exquisitely and elaborately carved. Some recent excavations, accidentally conducted, have brought to light a number of slabs of stone covered with inscriptions which, as far as I could gather from inquiries on the spot, no one has attempted to decipher. In the main street stands the mosque, in much better perservation and in daily use by the faithful, who form a considerable proportion of the population of Ajmere. The mosque was founded in the early days of the Mogul empire, by Khaia Synd, the first missionary to the heathen Hindoo of Ajmere. We have visited many mosques in India without let or hindrance, and were taken aback when, on proposing to enter this building, a Mussulman, with ferocious beard and imaginary scimitar in his hand, waved us back.

The fortress of Zeraghur, whither the rajah went pending the building of the Hindoo temple, still stands on the hill with its ruined battlements looking down upon the city. A betel-nut man reclined in a chair while the barber, aproned and toweled hovered about him. The two squat down face to face and knee to knee, and thus is the shaving accomplished. The barber is one of the luxuries of European residence or travel in India. He is innumerable and ubiquitous. On arrival at a station after an all night journey he is sure to be waiting, and will enter the carriage and shave you without troubling you to remove from your seat. At the hotels he

KNOCKS TIMIDLY AT THE DOOR

as soon as he conceives time has been allowed for the consumption of chota hazree, will patiently wait half an hour or an hour, and thankfully takes his threepence, conscious that it is eight times as much as he would get from a native, whilst Sahib is not exigeant in the matter of nostrils and ears, and would even be angry if he laid waste a square inch or so on the crown of his head.

It was curious, as we strolled about, to find the dogs barking at us. One suddenly coming upon us would stand and gaze for a moment, marvelling at the strange thing, and then, first observing the precaution of sliding out of the way, begin to bark. Others coming out to see what was the matter, and being equally disturbed in their mind, took up the cry until matters began to grown exciting. We came upon a shoemaker sitting full in the sun by the dusty roadside with the forlornest agglomeration of wrecked boots and shoes ever seen off a dust heap. He was gazing upon the moldy mass of soleless uppers and earthquake-rent soles, a picture of despondency. A possible customer coming along, he brightened up, and in a long and animated speech appeared to be demonstrating that, though eccentric in appearance, these were the kind of shoes, which, with judicious mending, were warranted to carry a man on to fortune. Boot-making and boot-mending, a poor trade generally throughout India, is brisker in Ajmere, where the men are much more given to wearing them than is the rule. Women here as elsewhere invariably go barefooted. Shoes used by a native must necessarily be a size too large, since their career is a constant alteration of slipping off and shuffling on. No native enters a room or shop with his shoes on.

Driving out to the gardens we came upon a gang of road-makers. The process of mending the Ajmere roads is peculiar. A strip about six feet wide is formed in the centre with a mixture of hard clay and gravel. When it is level it is beaten down and makes an admirable road for light traffic. The outer edges get whatever may be left. A gang of ten or more were beating the road with rammers. They stood in double line, five facing five, one line retiring, and the other advancing. As they moved they a refrain which phonetically reads, "Sydly-hum, Sydly-hum," the rammers being brought down all together at the "hum." Women brought in baskets, carried on their heads, the road material, which they flung down as it was wanted. One woman, doing her full share under the hot sun, carried a lusty year old boy on her hip. This is a marked distinction between Japan and India. While in the former country babies are always carried on the back, in India they are invariably borne astride on the hip.

CHANTED IN QUICK TIME,

Women work hard in Ajmere. I expect it would not have taken four of them to make those thin cakes. By the Dak bungalow I saw a file of a dozen, chiefly young girls, uplifted high on an unfinished house, busily engaged in bricklaying. The drawing of water is an important item in the days work of the women in Ajmere. In most towns water is supplied in frequent wells, approachable from the street level. At Ajmere the daily store of water is found in a dip between two walls of rock, approached by steep flights of steps. One rock raising there out of the water was almost literally hidden from view by a cloud of pigeons that clung to its rugged front. It was a pretty sight, the constant stream of straight, lithe women in many-colored kirtles coming and going with their red jars poised on their heads. Some had a small ring of plaited straw, which they placed on their heads, and on this stood the water jar, slim-necked, full-bodied, and rounding off at the base to a ring not larger than the palm of the hand. Far up at the top of the steps on the town side was a stalwart blind beggar, who had miraculously caught sight of us, and at short intervals broke forth into stentorous entreaty for backsheesh. The pigeons, alarmed at the reverberation, started off from the rock, darkening the air in their flight. I don't know what becomes of the pigeons; evidently no one kills and eats them. In the peepal tree under which the betel-nut man was getting shaved there were trays suspended from the boughs on which passers-by threw a few grains of rice or millet. The tree was peopled with birds, which, when not overeating themselves, hopped about as if the place belonged to them; which indeed it does, for no Hindoo would disturb them.

All the life of an Indian bazaar dies out at sundown, as it began at sunrise. There are no flaring gas-lights, no crowd of promenaders. As darkness falls over the narrow streets the goods are taken in from the ever open shop, the shop-keepers disappear, the shops become dark, empty caverns, and only here and there the glare of a miniature furnace with a man's face suddenly lighted up, as he applies the blow-pipe, shows the late worker in silver or brass.

A Dog's Practical Joke.

There is in Sheepshead Bay a sad-eyed, black-muzzled brindle pup which is known thereabouts as "The Dude." He is the property of Mr. W. A. Edwards, the celebrated alligator expert. He (the dog) has a broad chest, parenthetical forelegs, and a small stub which is popularly supposed to be a tail. "The Dude" veils beneath a haughty and indifferent exterior a deep vein of humor. He has at various times in his career thrown the Edwards household, the whole of Sheepshead Bay, and a large portion of Coney Island into a state of excitement by his antics; but he never perpetrated quite so complete and thorough a practical joke as on Thursday night. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon "The Dude" went with his master to take a swim in the bay. When the master returned he suddenly discovered that "The Dude" was not with him. A search was made, but no trace of the brindle pup could be found. Mr. Edwards' brother and several neighbors searched Sheepshead Bay until dark, but were obliged to give "The Dude" up at last, and at 9 o'clock at night no trace of him could be found. At that hour several men and boys started out with lanterns to look for him. At 10 o'clock the youngest son of the Edwards family returned with the mournful intelligence that he had found "The Dude" lying in two compact and well-severed parts on either side of the railroad track. The dog was dead. When the boy returned to the house he was afraid to tell his mother for fear of the grief it would cause her, but after mustering up courage the family was apprised of the affliction, and a short time afterward Mr. Edwards and his brothers and friends took a wheelbarrow and a lantern and went forth to bury the remains. When they arrived at the railroad track a more minute examination of the dog revealed the startling fact that it was not "The Dude," but another brindle pup which had lived across the way, and which had waged perpetual warfare with "The Dude." Only that morning Mr. Edwards' pup had gloriously defeated the brindle which lived across the way, and it is now supposed that the brindle pup went and committed suicide through sheer chagrin.

The mourners returned to the house in great haste to convey the good news to Mrs. Howell, Mr. Edwards' mother. They threwopen the gate and were about to enter the grounds when they were brought to a stop by a low growl and they discovered "The Dude" himself, as large as life and in a great state of apparent ferocity, guarding the gate. He guarded it so effectively that he kept his master and all the younger members of the Edwards household at bay. They coaxed and pleaded, but without avail. "The Dude" positively refused to allow them to enter. When eventually Mrs. Howell came out and coaxed the dog away from the gate, there was a reunion in the front parlor, and the fact was developed that "The Dude" had been on the top floor of the house watching the search from a front window ever since his return from the water. When they went out to look at the brindle pup, the last thing before retiring, the youth of the Edwards family discovered a broad grin upon his rugged features and observed that his stubby tail was wriggling with the semblance of ecstastic joy.

The Transmission of Emotions.

The wife of Arthur Severn, the distinguished landscape painter, woke at 7 o'clock with a start, feeling a hard blow on the mouth, and with a distinct sense of being cut and bleeding on the under lip. She seized her handkerchief and put it to her mouth as she sat up in bed, and was surprised on taking it away to find that it was not bleeding. She concluded she had been dreaming. At breakfast her husband, who had been out for an early sail, appeared with a bad cut on the lip made at that hour by the tiller, which had struck him in a squall.

A case of transferred emotion is that of Rev. J. M. Wilson, headmaster of Clifton College, a senior-wrangler and a distinguished mathematician. When in good health, one evening, while a student at Cambridge, he suddenly felt ill, trembled with a sort of fright, thought he was dying, tried to study, but could not, went to see a friend, who tried to distract his mind, but could not. After three hours it passed off, and the next morning he was well. In the afternoon a letter informed him that his twin brother had died the evening before.

A case of transfer of will is given by Alex. Skirving, a foreman of masons. While at work, one morning, he suddenly felt an intense desire to go home. It was a long distance, and he could not well leave his work, and he resisted it. But the feeling became uncontrollable, and, though he believed his wife would ridicule him, he went home. There he was met by a woman who asked him: "Why, Skirving, how did you know?" He knew nothing, but he had been compelled to come home. He was told that his wife had been run over by a cab, and seriously injured, and had been piteously calling for him.

These cases do not go into the supernatural. They do not concern visions of the dead or assumed communications from them. They do not pass belief. We have all known of similar cases in our acquaintance. Science has laughed at them as incredible, but we may remember that Lavoisire said: "Stones cannot fall from the sky; for there are no stones in the sky." But there are stones in the sky, and stones do fall. The incredible happens, and it is of no use to deny such facts as we have given.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinay succes that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure the maiority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada. and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star.

Nature combs the rooster's head, but man has to comb his own.—N. Y. Times. Quite a comb-ination of circumstances, so to speak.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the City.

A man who sleeps at a lodging house in the West End call his neighbor's dog "Tree," because its bark is all on the outside.

Oh! how tired and weak I feel, I don't believe I will ever get through the Spring house-cleaning! Oh yes you will, if you take a bottle or two of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters to purify the blood and tone up the system In large bottles 50 cents

Why is it, that one woman who wants to get on a street car, always wants to get on before the half dozen who want to get off can get off?

Young Men!—Read This.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., of Marshall Mich., offer to send their celebrated ELECTRO-VOLTAIC BELT and other ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days' trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Will some of you smart paragraphers tell us who keeps the road to fame in repair?—Ky. State Journal. Yes we will, but for valuable information like that, we want $5. No charge, cash in hand.

Carrying War

Into the enemy's country. This is verified in the case of Putnam's Corn Extractor, so favorably known throughout Canada. The large demand from the United States for this great corn cure has induced the proprietors to put it up there, and boldly push it to the front as the leading article in its line. From England also a demand has arisen. This is the reverse of the usual methods, as a large portion of the proprietary goods sold here emanate from these countries. This speaks highly in favor of Putnam's Extractor, the great corn cure. We advise sufferers from this discomfort to test its merits.—Exchange.

"What do you mean by disturbing me at this hour of the night?" asked an Austin doctor angrily of a darky who woke him at 3 o'clock in the morning. "I jess thought, boss, dat as yer was busy yer didn't hab time to tend ter poor folks in de day, so I 'lowd I'd jess drap in after supper."

Not another Pill shall go down my throat again, said a citizen, "when I can get such a prompt and pleasant cure for my Bilious Attacks, such as Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It renders the Blood Pure and Cool and makes a Splendid Spring Medicine. Large bottles 50 cents.

"Look at that dirty little boy mamma." "Yes, my son." "Why he is just black. How I hate a dirty boy." You shouldn't hate anybody. You know we are all made out of dust, and one little boy is just the same as another in sight—" "Well," interrupted the urchin conclusively, "he must have been made out of coal dust."

There are lots of people going around grumbling, and half sick at the Stomach all the time; who might be well and happy, if they only used Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters occasionally. It is a splendid Blood Purifier. All Druggists 50 cents

Wagner, though modern, is given high rank among clash-ic composers.

Make a Note of This.

Pain banished as if by magic. Polson's NERVILINE is a positive and almost instantaneous remedy for external, internal, or local pains. The most active remedy hitherto known falls far short of Nerviline for potent power in the relief of nerve pain. Good for external or internal use. Buy a 10 cent sample bottle. Large bottles 25 cents; at all druggists.

A.P. 192.

WHEAT Valley $4, Scott $1.35, Dahl $1.35, Amber $1.35, (bus) Rye 85c, Jas. Rennie, Toronto.

PHRENOLOGY. EXAMINATIONS GIVEN BY WALLACE MASON, 12 Queen St, W., Toronto.

TEES. GALLOWAY & Co., Cotton, Woollen, Silk, Carpet, and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas, Ont.

FARM FOR SALE. 130 ACRES IN GOOD order; easy terms. DR. PYNE, Toronto.

SAW MILL PROPERTIES FOR SALE—stave machinery included if desired. Send for circular. H. J. LEACOCK, Brigden.

MEN WANTED.
Active pushing men wanted to wholesale my famous teas to consumers. Salary from $600 to $2000 per year. Send stamp for particulars. JAMES LAUT, Importer, Toronto.

W. & F. P. Currie & Co.
109 Grey Nun St., Montreal.
Importers of
Drain Pipes, Portland Cement,
Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings,
Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting,
Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay,
Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay
Manufacturers of
Bessemer Steel Sofa, Chair Bed & Springs

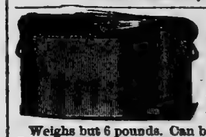
SMOKED SAUSAGES.
The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use Sold by grocers through the Dominion Send for price to W. CLARK P. O. Box 342 Montreal.

F. E DIXON & CO.
Manufacturers of Star Rivet
Leather Belting!
10 King Street, East, Toronto.
Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts

PARTY WANTED TO PURCHASE CARRIAGE shops 24 x 118 feet; double stoop, with office 24 x 60; blacksmith's shop, 20 x 42, lumber, barn, and shed, horse barn, two acres of land with dwelling-house suitable for two small families: two cisterns, cellar, and well; situated at Ross' Corners, four miles from Belleville, on main gravelled road; good locality, where a business from $3,900 to $10,000 per annum is done. The premises are now in full blast, and will be sold to good live man at a bargain. HARFORD ASHLEY Belleville.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday, and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter between Portland and Glasgow, and Boston and Glasgow alternately; and during summer between Quebec and Glasgow and Boston and Glasgow every week.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co, Halifax: Shea & Co., St. John's N. F.: Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Leve & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

MACHINERY. For sale 1 Westinghouse Traction Farm Engine. 1 Able Triumph Do. 1 G. C. Morrison do. 1 8 h. p. Portable Engine and Boiler on Skids. 1 35 h, p. Horozontal by Northy. 1 do. by Waterous with cut off valve, and 20 engines and boilers of smaller sizes, all thoroughly refitted before leaving shop. 2 24-inch Planers and Matchers. 1 20-inch Pony Planer. 1 Iron Frame Tenoning machine. 1 Blind Slat Tenoner. 1 Buggy Plainer or jointer. 2 band saws. 10 Saw Tables. 1 Fire-Proof Safe. 1 Jeweler's Tools Steel. 1 Book-Binder's Screw Press. 1 42-inch French Burr Portable Grist Mill. 1 62-inch inserted Tooth-Saw, &c., &c. Send for new list, No. 9, containing full description of machiner in stock. Address.
H. W. PETRIE, Brantford. Ont



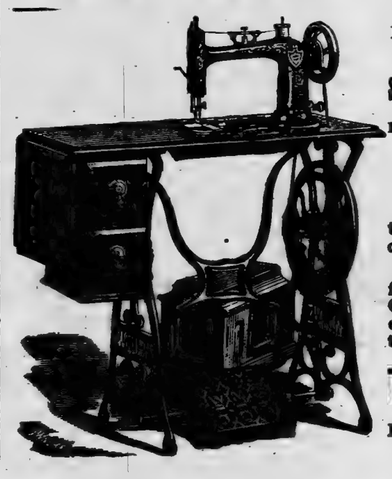
MUTUAL MARRIAGE ENDOWMENT ASS'N Incorporated, Head Office, London, Ont. Issues Certificates from $125 to $3,000, payable on marriage, at following rates. For $500, or half certificate, $4; quarterly dues in advance, $0.75. For $1,000 Certificate, $6; quarterly dues in advance, $1.00. For $2,000 Certificate, $10; quarterly dues in advance, $2.00. For $3,000 Certificate, $15; quarterly dues in advance, $3.00. The only cash payments. Assessments on marriages $1.60 on each $1000. First years quarterly assessments are promptly paid on present membership at end of year. Endowment reserve account will amount to $10,000, providing for a large number of endowments, which places this Association in a sound financial position. No connection with any similar institution. A good savings society for young people. Send for By-Laws, &c. W. J. IMLACH, Secretary, London, Ont

JUST PUBLISHED
"THE ONE MEDIATOR,"
By Rev. J. S. Evans, Hamilton, Ont.
This book, as indicated by the title page, contains "Selections and Thoughts on the Propitiatory Sacrifice and Intercession presented by the Lord Jesus Christ, as our Great High Priest." It has appended chapters on the conditions of salvation; also appended exposition of Romans V., 11-21, and notes. It revives the distinction correctly made by Anselm, between "Satisfaction" and "Punishment," and shows that what the Mediatator did in relation to God, was to render satisfaction to Divine Righteousness for the suspension of the punishment threatened by Divine Justice; and for its full remission on condition of repentance and faith.
The Editor of the Christian Guardian says: "This is an able and thoughtful work. The view of the Atonement presented by Mr. Evans, is sustained by Scripture and reason, and frees this great central doctrine from objections that have led to its rejection by many. It also combats a popular misleading theory with philosophical insight, and unanswerable logical arguments. This feature alone makes this book worthy of a wide circulation throughout the Methodist world." He adds "we regard this work to be the most important contribution to Christian Theology published by any Canadian author. We recommend all our ministers to to get it, and read it." It contains 412 pages on good toned paper. It will be sent by mail or otherwise for one dollar enclosed in a registered letter to MISS EVANS, Box 46 Hamilton, Ont.

The Ready Mixed Paints
MANUFACTURED BY
A. RAMSAY & SONS, MONTREAL,
are ground in Pure Linseed Oil and Turpentine. The American Mixed Paints are to a large extent ground with Silicate of Soda, and are dear at any price. Ask for Ramsay's, and see that you get them. Apply to your local dealers.

Dominion Line of Steamships.
Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday, during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from
QUEBEC TO LIVERPOOL
Brooklyn, Aug. 23 | Montreal, Sept. 13
Toronto, Aug. 30 | *Vancouver Sept. 20
*Oregon, Sept. 6 |
Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $50, $60, $65, $80. Return, $90, $105, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $35. Steerage, at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep are carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

GUELPH BUSINESS COLLEGE
GUELPH, ONT.,
Offers the best facilities for obtaining a thorough preparation for a successful business career. The latest and most approved methods of instruction are adopted. Six Teachers and Lecturers, including two first-class Penmen, are permanently employed. The Annual College Circular will be mailed free to any address.
MacCormick, Bogle & Timmins.



THE MODEL
Washer
BLEACHER.
Weighs but 6 pounds. Can be carried in a small valise. Illustration shows Machine in boiler. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded within 30 days.
$1000.00 REWARD FOR ITS SUPERIOR.
Washing made light and easy. The clothes have that pure whiteness which no other mode of washing can produce. No rubbing required, no friction to injure the fabric. A 10 year old girl can do the washing as well as an older person.
To place it in every household THE PRICE HAS BEEN REDUCED to $2 50, and if not found satisfactory, money refunded. See what the "Canada Presbyterian," says about it—The Model Washer and Bleacher which Mr. C. W. Dennis offers to the public has many and valuable advantages. It is a time and labor saving machine, substantial and enduring, and is very cheap. From trial in the household we can testify to its excellence. Delivered to any express office in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec Charges paid $3.00 Send for circulars.
AGENTS WANTED.
C. W. DENNIS,
TORONTO BARGAIN HOUSE,
213 YONGE SREET, TORONTO, ONT.

CONBOY'S
CARRIAGE TOPS
ARE THE
Latest, Neatest, Lightest, Strongest, Cheapest and most Stylish Top in the market.
☞ Buy no other until you see them. ☜
For sale by all the leading Carriage Builders.
Manufactured in great variety at 407, 409 and 411 King St. W., Toronto.

GURNEYS & WARE,

STANDARD SCALES.
THE BEST,
THE STRONGEST,
THE MOST RELIABLE.
Unrivalled in material, construction and finish, perfect in accuracy and unequalled in durability. Guaranteed to give entire satisfaction.
THEY EXCEL ALL OTHERS.
RAILROAD, WAREHOUSE AND MILL TRUCKS.
Mills' Alarm Money Drawers.
☞ SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST.
GURNEYS & WARE,

THE NEW WILLIAMS

High Arm Machine is now recognized as the
Sewing Machine of the Period.
It is Light and Easy to run.
Silent and Rapid in movement
Plain and Simple to learn
It is strong, durable, and well built, the very best material that money can buy or skill produce.
It was awarded five medals and three first prizes at the Dominion Exhibition last October. It is rapidly superseding all the old fashioned makes everywhere. See it, try it, buy it, and make sure that you get it.
THE WILLIAMS' MFG CO.
1763 Notre Dame St., Montreal, and 88 King St., West, Toronto.

BROWN'S!

Cor. Brown & Toronto St's

MARKDALE

Is the place to get BARGAINS in

Dry Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Crockery, Classware &c &c.

NEW PRINTS from 5 cents up, New DRESS STUFF 10 cents and upwards in NEW DESIGNS and

LATEST FASHIONS.

Gloves, Hosiery, Ribbons, Laces, Embroidery, Small wares &c &c, at greatly reduced prices.

Our 25 cent T is unsurpass'd

Being determined to curtail credit trade, we offer special discounts and inducements to cash customers.

The Highest Price for Butter and Eggs.

A lot of seed oats (White Australian), free from all impurities ; also Potatoes, large and small, of finest quality, for sale cheap.

GIVE US A CALL.

April, 1884. 190-tf WM. BROWN.

ROBT. S. RAE, Sydenham St., Markdale. TAILOR,

SAW MILL AND TIMBER LAND FOR SALE OR TO LET

In the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, 4 miles from Flesherton Station, on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The mill is situated at Little Falls, in a block of about 400 acres timber lnd, with other timber land surrounding. The building is substantially built on stone foundation. The machinery is all good and driven with great power by a 23 inch Leffell wheel, under 36 ft. head of water. There are one large circular saw for cutting logs, 2 small circulars for sawing lath and broom handles, 1 guage lathe for turning broom handles, etc., 1 shingle machine with jointer and packer complete. The water power is excellent, the stream being very regular. There are several other good mill sites on the proyerty. The land in the valley is considered the best in the country. The place would make an excellent stock farm when the timber is taken off.

This offers a good opportunity for a practical, energetic man to go into this kind of business, as the place will be sold or let on liberal terms.

The bush is so convenient to the mill logs can be trucked in summer time. Immediate possession given.

Apply to the proprietor, WM. HOCG,
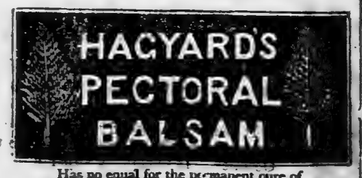
FLESHERTON STATION P. O., ONT.

—Good Work Guaranteed—

—AT—



Bulmers Photograph Gallery

FLESHERTON.

Call at once and see samples of work which we are not ashamed to show.

All kinds of Framing done cheap at

JAS. BULMER'S, FLESHERTON.

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

JOHN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING SPECIALTY.

Also agent for the celebrated CHATHAM WAGONS.

Fall Show Fairs.

Osprey, at McIntyre October 9th.

Provincial at Ottawa Sept. 22nd to 27th.

Western Fair, London, Sept. 22nd to 26th.

Proton, at Dundalk October 7th and 8th.

Toronto Industrial, Toronto, Sept. 10th to 20th.

Melancthon, at Shelburne October 7th and 8th.

Glenelg, at Markdale, on the 2nd and 3rd October.

East Grey, at Flesherton, the 23rd and 24th September.

Dominion Exhibition at Montreal September 5th to 13th.

South Grey, at Durham, the 30th September and 1st October.

Collingwood township, at Clarksburg, on the 25th and 26th September.

Worms often destroy children, but Freeman's Worm Powders destroy Worms, and expel them from the system.

THE FRUITS OF FOLLY.

Eating green apples, cucumbers and unripe fruits generally, may be so termed. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry cures all Summer Complaints.

Moody thinks he has been instrumental in converting 35,000 English sinners this season.

A crying evil, Children are often fretful and ill when Worms is the cause. Dr. Low's Worm Syrup safely expels all Worms.

A WIDE AWAKE DRUGGIST.

Mr. A. Turner is always wide awake in his business, and spares no pains to secure the best of every article in his line. He has secured the agency for the celebrated Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. The only certain cure known for Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Asthma, Hay Fever, Bronchitis, or any affection of the throat and lungs. Sold on positive guarantee. Will give you a trial bottle free. Regular size $1.00. 3

We will send the STANDARD the balanse of the year to any address for 35 cents.

Worms often cause serious illness. The cure is Dr. Low's Worm Syrup. It destroys and expels Worms effectually.

THOUSANDS SAY SO.

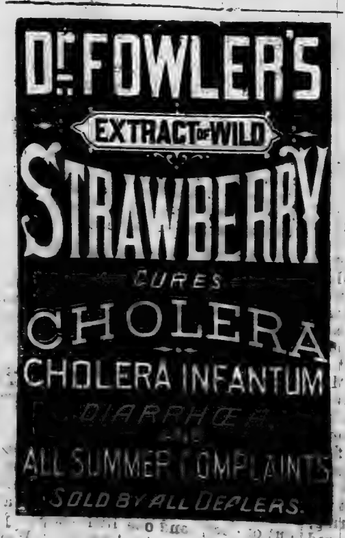
Mr. T W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by A. Turner & Co. 3

NOT BAD.

It is so agreeable that even an infant will take it. For coughs, colds, hoarseness, croup, asthma and bronchitis, Hagyard's Pectorial Balsam is reliable for young or old,

Some people suppose that the negro population of the United States will gradually amalgamate with the whites by intermarriage, but in most of the states there are laws against miscegenation. Henry Thornton, colored, of Madison, Ind., has been sentenced to three years' imprisonment for marrying a white woman.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.



The best Salve in the world for cuts, bruises sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by A. Turner & Co.

A RUN ON A DRUG STORE.

Never was such a rush made for any Drug Store as is now at A. Turner & Co's. Drug Store for a trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. All persons affected with Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Severe Coughs, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs, can get a trial bottle of this great remedy free, by calling at above drug store. Regular size $1. 5

STRONG ADJECTIVES.

"It sells immensely, in fact it has the largest sale of any patent medicine in Summer." says J. F. Smith, druggist, Dunnville, of Fowler's Wild Strawberry. The great remedy for Summer Complaints.

How To Grow Fine Celery.

A new method, by Mrs. H. M. Crider. Printed on very heavy paper, 16 pages, 12 months, price, by Mail, 25 cents. How to grow fine celery, according to a theory deduced from a study of the natural habits of the plant, and well attested by several years of experience, is now offered to the public.

The method has already been set forth in the columns of the New York Tribune and York Daily, but is now offered for the first time in a form convenient for preservation and reference.

The importance of Celery as an article of diet, and especially its value as a specific for nervous diseases, makes its successful culture of the first importance, and the method herein given will enable any one to have it in perfection in his own garden. Address

H. M. CRIDER,

Local Agents wanted at every Post Office. YORK, PA.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY.

Physicians are often startled by remarkable discoveries. The fact that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and all Throat and Lung diseases is daily curing patients that they have given up to die, is startling them to realize their sense of duty, and examine into the merits of this wonderful discovery ; resulting in hundreds of our best Physicians using it in their practice. Trial bottles free at A. Turner, & Co's. Drug Store. Regular Size $1.00. 4

To remove dandruff, Cleanse the scalp with Prof. Low's Magic Sulphur Soap. A delightful medicated soap for the toilet.

Profanity is a mark of vulgar mind.

HUSBAND AND WIFE,

Mr. James More and wife, well known in Leamington, were both chronic sufferers from dispepsia that the best medical aid failed to relieve. Three bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters cured both husband and wife.

The Signs of Worms are well known, but the remedy is not always so well determined Worm Powders will destroy them.

Single copies of the STANDARD five cents each.

THESE ARE SOLID FACTS.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly the Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Weak Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetizer, tonic or milk stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by A. Turner & Co. Markdale. 4

A VALUABLE FIND.

Mr. Isaac Brown, of Bothwell, declares that he found one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters worth $500 to him. It cured him of Salt Rheum from which he had suffered years after other treatment had failed to relieve.

The wife of a Montreal hotelkeeper eloped with one of the boarders. She took her husbands trousers with her. All his money was in his trousers. This was a clever way of retarding persuit by her husband. A moneyless and trouserless man cannot persue a woman with comfort to himself.

FOR THE COMPLEXION.—For Pimples, Blotches, Tan, and all itching tumors of the skin, use Prof. Low's Magic Sulphur Soap.

One hundered and four trains are handled daily at the Union Station, Toronto.

WARNING.

The most suddenly fatal diseases of Summer and Fall are and various forms of Bowel Complaints which Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry will promptly remedy.

TAKE IT HOME.—A level headed newspaper man comes down as follows: —We presume that some people think we newspaper men are presistent duns; let a farmer place himself in a similar business position and see if he would not do the same. Suppose he raise a crop of a thousand bushels of wheat, and his neighbor should come to buy a bushel, and the price was only the small sum of one dollar, or less, and the neighbor says, "I will pay you the sum in a very few days." As the farmer don't want to be small in the matter he says "all right." Another comes in the same way, until the whole of the one thousand bushels are gone out to one thousand different persons, and not one of the purchasers concern himself about it, for it is a small account he owes the farmer, and of course, that could not help him any. He does not realize that the farmer has frittered away his crop of wheat in little dribbles, and that he is seriously embarassed in his business because his debtors treat it as a little matter. But if all would pay him promptly, which they could do as well as not, it would be a very large amount indeed, to the farmer and enabled him to carry on his business without difficulty. The above comparison is too true of the difficulties that a newspaper man has to contend with.

Franco - Chinese War.

Notwithstanding the destructive war now raging in China it will not increase the price of Teas at the

Belfast House, Markdale.

Having imported prior to the opening of hostilities, a sufficient quantity to supply 20,000 MEN for a period of 12 months. In other departments of the Grocery trade the BELFAST HOUSE has KILLED BY THOUSAND those who assume to transact business by purchasing of small dealers exorbitant rates of interest on long credit. Our imports of

PRESERVED MEATS, SALMON, LOBSTERS, SARDINES, HAMS, BACON, ASSORTED PICKLES

and every articles in the grocery trade

LIQUORS

Of the best brands and quality. Wine for Sacramental purposes warranted pure. Brandies direct from the manufacturer and all other kinds of liquors.

Coffees, Teas and Tobaccoes cannot fail to give satisfaction. Oranges, Lemons, &c. Family Flour supplied at Lowest Rates.

THOS. McNEA,
BELFAST HOUSE, - MARKDALE

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed Store.

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c,

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

193 J. PLEWES.

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

TUCK & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.

The best brand of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meals and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler. 114

HENRY GILL,

HOUSE PAINTER

GRAINER, GLAZIER AND PAPER HANGER, CALCIMINING AND WALL TINTING.

Residence opposite Planing Factory.

MARKDALE.

ORDERS SOLICITED. ESTIMATES GIVEN

P. DUCOLON'S LIVERY,

IN HULL'S OLD STAND,

MILL - STREET

Good Horses and comfortable Rigs at moderate charges.

195

ROOKE'S BAKERY

BREAD, the staff of life and PASTRY that will please your wife, always on hand, to supply the demand.

So when your stock is low
Step in and let us know,
And we'll your wants supply
Or you'll know the reason why.

E. ROOKE,
Markdale.

J. G. IRVING

MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all Kinds of

PUMPS

Drop Valve, Cylinder, Force, and Chain Pumps.

All kinds of

IRON - PUMP

SUPPLIED.

The Markdale Standard

Issued every Thursday, at the office, Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1. paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one ince and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50
Half column.....	27 00	15 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00
One inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Estray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks in the advertisement not to exceed two lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

—JOB PRINTING.—

THE STANDARD office has a splendid assortment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

J. W. RUTLEDGE,
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

SANDS & PERRY
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & SANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East,
251 TORONTO

Frost & Frost.

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-at-Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed practice in Flesherton, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.

FRED FROST, J. W. FROST, LL.B., County Crown Attorney.

J. MASSON.

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REGISTRAR in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Bagott St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday of each week. 57-15

Creasor & Morrison.

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block over W. F. Wolf's Store and in MARKDALE; over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

H. CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORRISON.
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-1y

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner for B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers' Sales, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate. Priceville, Sept. 17. 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate at city.

MANSION HOUSE

MARKDALE,

Jas. Bryan, Proprietor

CITY HOTEL

MARKDALE,

John McAleer, - Proprietor

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 19

MARKDALE HOUSE

MARKDALE, ONT.

MRS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR

A. HILL,

Fashionable Tailor

OVER McFARLAND'S STORE.

PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED

anco - Chinese War.
othwithstanding the disastrous now raging in China, it still con ease the price of Teas at the
ast House, Markdale
aving imported prior to the open
of hostilities, a sufficient quantity
pply 20,000 MEN for a period of months. In other departments of Grocery trade the BELFAST
USE has KILLED BY THOU
D those who assume to transact
ness by purchasing of small deal xorbitant rates of interest on long
t. Our imports of
SERVED MEATS, SALMON
BSTERS, SARDINES, HAMS,
ACON, ASSORTED PICKELS
very articles in the grocery trade
LIQUORS
e best brands and quality. Wine
acramental purposes warranted
Brandies direct from the man
urer and all other kinds of liquors.
Fees, Teas and Tobaccoes cannot
to give satisfaction. Oranges,
ns, &c. Family Flour supplied
west Rates.
THOS. McNEA.
AST HOUSE, - MARKDALE
W GROCERY STORE
IN CONNECTION WITH
es' Flour and Feed Store.
aving just received a cee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF
s,
Sugars,
Tobacco, &c,
will be sold VERY CHEAP.
spectfully solicit the public's
age.
J. PLEWES.
TSWORTH HOUSE
(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)
HATSWORTH, Ont.
CK & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.
est brand of liquors and cigars al
stock. Good meals and comfortable arranteed. Good stabling and at ostler. 114
ENRY GILL,
USE PAINTER,
ER, GLAZIER AND PAPER
NGER, CALCIMINING
ND WALL TINTING.
ce opposite Planing Factory,
ARKDALE.
SOLICITED. ESTIMATES GIVEN.
192-202
DUCOLON'S
VERY,
N HULL'S OLD STAND, LL - STREET
od Horses
comfortable Rigs
derate charges.
KE'S BAKERY
EAD, the staff of life and
STRY that will please
e, always on hand, to supply
the demand.
en your stock is low
in and let us know,
e'll your wants supply
you'll know the reason
hy.
E. ROOKE,
Markdale.
IRVING
MARKDALE,
Manufacturer of all Kinds
UMPS,
alve, Cylinder, Force, and Gas
All kinds of
ON - PUMPS
SUPPLIED.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 4.--No. 208. MARKDALE, ONT., SEPT. 4, 1884. COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.

The Markdale Standard

Issued every Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
One inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Yearly unusual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Local editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents per line subsequents insertion.

Notices of stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for 75 cents the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

J. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS & PERRY,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),
BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
3351 TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,
BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Markdale, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.
EDWARD FROST, J. W. FROST, LL. B.
County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,
BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG. in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Bagott St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c,
OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.
Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
O. CREASOR, Q. C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown,
ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Thos. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.
This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - ONT.
MRS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

★DR STARR'S★
★CATARRH CONQUEROR.★
THE GREAT CURE FOR CATARRH,
And all diseases arising from it. A Speedy and Certain Antidote for Catarrh, Influenza, Bronchitis, Cold in the Head, Hay Fever and Polypus. It gives immediate relief and effects a cure in a short time. Sold by Medicine Dealers at 50 cents.
TRIAL SIZE, BY MAIL, 15 CENTS.
J. T. FLINT & CO., Pharmacists, Proprietors, Rock Island, P. Q., and Derby Line, Vt.

Medical.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O.
Physician and Surgeon, Priceville,
Graduate of University. Vict. College.
" " New York, and
Hon. Graduate, of the same,
" " Aylesth Medical Institute.
" " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y.
Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at Rutledge's Hotel, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.
122-47.

W. G. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT.—Residence on Mill Street, Markdale.
124ly

HAMILTON'S
PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY
MARKDALE.
OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.
Fine work executed in all the latest sizes and shapes, fully equal to city work. Special attention given to
FRAMING
A large stock of moulding to choose from.
Call and leave your measure for a picture.
Jas. Hamilton.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larder well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.
Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

Dr. Hixon,
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, AND ACCOUCHER,
PRICEVILLE.
All calls promptly attended to.

ISAAC STINSON,
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

SAMUEL WARDELL,
WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

A PRIZE. Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

ALEX KAY
BOOT & SHOE
MAKER,
Mill Street, - Markdale

Poetry.

Now and Then.

One starry night
By Luna's light
A loving couple walked and talked,
Of wedding rings
And senseless things.

Two years hence,
Above the fence,
Their eyes did meet, and she did scowl
And loudly curse
His empty purse.

In later days,
By candle's rays,
She surg him songs while she sewed
Numerous patches
On his breeches.

Will M. Clemens.

Flesherton.

From our own Correspondent.

TEACHER'S FAREWELL—PRESENTATION BY HIS PUPILS.

On Friday afternoon last a number of our villagers paid a visit to our public school, it being the last day in which the teacher, Mr. McMaster, was to preside over the school. Before closing Mr. McMaster was presented by his pupils with a very handsome and valuable silver cornet, accompanied by a complimentary address expressive of their high appreciation of his services among them. A few brief and pithy addresses were delivered by some of the visitors present giving expression to the kind feelings which had existed between teacher and parents for the past five years, and of their appreciation of his genuine work as a man and a teacher, and their deep and universal regret at his removal. Mr. McMaster replied to pupils and visitors in feeling befitting terms, regretting that associations so mutually pleasant and profitable had to be severed.

Mr. McMaster commenced his duties as head teacher of the public school in the Town of Thorold on Monday the first of September.

GRAND ILLUMINATION.—On Friday evening last Mr. M. Richardson's new and magnificent building was for the first time illuminated, Mr. Kay having just finished the gass fixtures. There were about fifty lights burning. Tthe shops are very artistically finished inside and in the bright gas light presented a very fine appearance.

Mr. D. Munroe, who is well and favorably known and who taught in section 3 for two years has been engaged as head teacher for the Flesherton School which was vacated by Mr. M. P. McMaster.

Miss Lizzie Richardson and Miss Van Dusen has very efficintly taught the junior department of the school here, while Miss Hopkins took charge of the senior department since Mr. McMaster left.

The decisive game between the Dundalk and Flesherton base-ball clubs on the grounds of the latter yesterday stands a disputed game. The Flesherton club say they played against all odds and unfair decisions by the Dundalk umpire and felt sure of winning the game, but bearing as long as they could until he called an out which was so unfair they walked in off the field and would play no longer, under such ruling.

The Model Woman.

She only is a true and noble wife for whose ambition a husband's love and her children's adoration are sufficient, who applies her military instincts to the discipline of her household, and whose legislatives exercise themselves in making laws for her nurse, whose intellect has field enough for her in communion with her husband, and whose heart asks no other honors than his love and admiration; a woman who does not think it a weakness to attend to her toilet, and who does not disdain to be beautiful, who believes in the virtue of glossy hair and well-fitting gowns, and who eschews rents and reveled edges, woman who speaks low, and does not speak much; who is patient, and gentle, and intellectual and industrious; who loves more than she reasons, and yet does not love blindly; who never scolds and never argues, but adjusts with a smile: such a woman is the wife we have all dreamed of once in our lives, and is the mother we still worship in the backward distance of the past.—Charles Dickens.

A HORRIBLE OUTRAGE.

Perpetrated upon a Weak Minded Drunken Girl.

THE AUTHORITIES UNABLE TO TRACE THE BLACK-HEARTED SCOUNDRELS.

DUNDALK, Aug. 23.—This usually quiet and peaceable hamlet was on Wednesday, 13th inst., the scene of one of the most dastardly affairs which has ever trken place in that part of the country, and it was with great difficulty that your correspondent, even at this late day, was able to ascertain the facts of the case. On the above-mentioned day a simple minded girl, apparently about twenty years of age, who gave her name as Mary Campbell, or Cameron, of Hopeville, came to the village and applied at the residence of several prominent citizens for employment as a servant. A few minutes conversation soon convinced the parties to whom she made full application that she was of weak intellect, and naturally they refused to employ her. While walking around the village she had, by her strange behavior and eccentric movements, attracted the attention of some roughs from Shelburne who were in town that day, and others belonging to the village, who, under the pretence of assisting her in "getting a place," took her to a hotel and all afternoon plied her with liquor until she was in a beastly state of intoxication. When evening arrived the inhuman brutes carried or dragged her down the railway track to Hogan's bush, where they repeatedly outraged her. After satisfying their lusts, the black-hearted villains brought her back to the village, when the poor girl wandered around aimlessly until she reached Main street, where she told her story to G. R. Middleton, one of the police trustees, who, together with Thomas Hanbury, secured her lodgings for the night at the McCullough house. The next morning she was unable to give any description of her assailants, and the police trustees could take no action in the matter. She left the village on foot that afternoon and nothing has been since heard of her.

Notwithstanding that diligent inquiries have been made, all efforts to discover the names of the perpetrators of the outrage have failed, as those who pretend to know something of the affair are very reticent.—Toronto News.

Attempted Suicide.

BY A WOMAN IN THE VILLAGE OF MAXWELL.

Our Maxwell correspondent sends the following which arrived too late for last week:—Last Sunday afternoon an old woman aged about 55 or 60 years, named Saigeon, residing in the village of Maxwell with her two sons and a daughter, all being grown up, attempted to end her existence by hanging. Ascending the stairs she suspended herself from a rafter by a cord, doing it so noiselessly that the daughter, who was alone at the time, did not hear it for some time. However, a low strange sound reached her ear, and she went up stairs to ascertain the cause, when the body of the suicide met her gaze, the face already being black, and life nearly extinct. The cord was instantly severed and the body fell down, and in a few minutes animation was restored. She has nearly recovered now. The cause is said to be her inability to obtain any whiskey, being under its influence a little already. This is not the first time she has tried such an act, doing it once before, about two months since, when for the same reason she took nearly two ounces of laudanum, and great efforts were then required to resuscitate. She says she will do it yet. Some talk is heard of sending her to an asylum, but she is simply crazed through drink, the old woman being quiet sensible and well conducted when away from its influence. Score another for drink.

The temperance folk expect to deposit the Scott Act petition in the registrar's office this week. The campaign is being warmly carried on.—Shelburne Economist.

Cyclone In Manitoba.

HOUSES AND CHURCHES DESTROYED BY THE FORCE OF THE WIND.

WINNIPEG, Man., August 29.—A terrific wind storm of cyclonic character swept over the province last night, doing incalculable damage to property in various towns, and also damaging crops, which are now being reaped, to a large extent. The wind, which began to blow from the southwest about eight o'clock after a hot day, was encountered by a violent gale coming from the north. A fierce fight between the elements followed, resulting in great losses. No less than fifty buildings in this city were affected. Houses were blown down, roofs were wrenched from their position and carried far away, ends were blown out of houses, and plate glass windows were smashed. A house, and a stable occupied by a horse were blown away, the stable being carried into the Assiniboine River, and a street car, with a number of passengers, was lifted of its track and borne some distance by the wind. At Portage La Prairie, a town sixty miles from here, a church was blown down and a freight shed overturned. A paper mill was destroyed at Headingly, a village fifteen miles west of here, and a large number of stores, dwelling houses and farmhouses suffered. Mr. Francis' store was blown to pieces, and his stock scattered on the prairie. The dwelling house occupied by Mr. Buchanan and wife was blown entirely away, the pair having a narrow escape from being killed, and a church was blown over a house.

Fatal Reaping Maching Accident.

A fatal accident took place Thursday, 21st, on lot 14, con. 1, Euphrasia, whereby Mr. Richard White lost his life. It seems that something went wrong with his horses or harness, and that he went round to the off side in front of the reaper, and while there the horses ran away, and the machine being in gear, he was caught on the guards and knife, and carried about eight rods and then got free from the machine in some way. the horses ran a short distance farther and stopped, his father and hired man were in the field binding, and they ran to his assistance, and when they got to him he was lying in a pool of blood. A doctor was at once sent for but when he got there he was breathing his last. He bled to death, having received a very bad cut on the back of his right leg close to the body, and two of the guards appear to have run into his hip. The deceased was a very quiet and inoffensive young man, and upright in all his dealings. He leaves a loving wife, a young child, and aged father to mourn his loss. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon, when a very large company assembled to pay their last respects. In fact it was one of the largest funerals that has been in that part for a long time.—Meaford Monitor.

Farmers' Homes.

Why should not a farmer's home be a varitable little paradise? Who else has so good an opportunity for beautifying his grounds until they shall far exceed in beauty and elegance the grandest possibilities of any cramped and pent up city lawn? We neglect this altogether too much; we have so much to do, we say, in looking after our crops that bring us money, that we have no time to spend with flowers, shade trees, etc., which simply ornament the place, and bring no money. As an investment even, we believe this to be a mistake; but aside from the financial side of the matter, we think it pays to take a little time—considerable, if necessary—to improve the external appearance of our homes. Shade trees are at the disposal of every farmer, flowers and plants are cheap, and easy obtained and cultivated, and we believe it is as much every man's duty to make his home and its sorroundings the most beautiful and attractive place on earth, as it is to pile up a large fortune for the benefit of the future generations and lawyers. We do not expect to come this way again, so why not enjoy as much as we can as we go along.—Ex.

Caught a Bear.

Recently Mr. W. H. Campaigne, our well known hunter, set some bear traps on the banks of the Saugeen river near what is known as Currie's clearing, Artemesia. On Wednesday morning a farmer living near by discovered a large black bear in one of them. As it was living he shot it and notified Campaigne of the fact, who forthwith proceeded to bring his bearship home. The hair is long and of a rich black color. Markdale sports will have to waken up.—Advance.

Osprey.

Mr. John Batie of the police force Toronto was home on a visit recently.

Mr. John Phillips was married on the 9th Aug.

Died.

BONNELL.—In Scott Tp. Ontario Co., Honor, beloved wife of Mr. H. V. Bonnell and Mother of Bonnell Bro's. of Walter's Falls, on the 31st July aged 56 years 10 months, her end was peace. The above deceased lady had a very large circle of friends and acquaintances among whom she was universally respected. There were 160 carriages in the funeral cortege. The following tribute of condolence and respect was recently tendered to her son's at Walter's Falls.

Cassode Lodge Room,
Walter's Falls, Aug. 5th, 1884.

To Bros. Henry & John Bonnell.

DEAR BROTHERS.—In view of your recent affliction in the death of a beloved mother, we the members of Cassode Lodge C. O. O. F. beg leave to express our sympathy with you and we do hereby tender to you in your deep affliction our most sincere condolance. in your crushing sorrow, it is a source of real joy to us and comfort to you to know that your loss is not that of those who mourn without hope of a future re-union, you have the comforting assurance that your loss is the unspeakable gain of the departed loved one. Our wish and prayer is that the promise of God's word may give you comfort through the journey of this life and when the grand roll is called that we may all answer present robed in proper regalie and that you may then experience that blessed re union where farewell words are never spoken and tears of sorrow are unknown.

Signed on behalf of the lodge,
T. DUNN, N. G.
J. FINDLAY, V. G.
J. C. PATERSON, P. G.

AGRICULTURAL.

Farm Work for September.

The yield of wheat depends largely upon he tillering, therefore sow early on rich, mellow soil. Wheat needs to make a strong growth of roots before winter. Use superphosphate or other commercial fertiliser, when there is no sufficent barnyard manure. Lime may be used to roll rich in vegetable matter. Its chief value is in liberating other elements of plant food. As a preventive of rust, wet the seed grain in strong brine, or a solution of four ounces of bluestone (sulphate of copper), to a gallon of water. Sow with a drill when possible. If the wheat land is not well drained, make the water furrows with the plow after all else is done. These will quickly carry off surface water after hard rains. Grass seed may be sown a few weeks later. Clover is best sown in spring, and the seed may be scattered on the last snow.

The best way to harvest corn is to cut the stalks close to the ground, and place them in shocks. A "shocking horse" is almost indispeneable in setting up corn so that it will stand. Willow, or other tough withes are excellent for tying the shocks when the stalks are not suitable. The seed corn should have been selected in mid-summer, but if delayed, neglect this important work no longer. Carefully decide what are the superior points in the corn desired and choose that. This can be best done while the stalks are standing. Go through the corn field and cut the selected stalks and place them in separate shocks.

Buckwheat should be harvested before frost can injure it. Cut it in the morning when the dew is on, to prevent shelling. Thresh as soon as the straw is sufficiently dry, and spread the grain thinly upon a floor as it may heat in a large heap.

Harvest potatoes when ripe, and before hard rains induce new growth, or cause them to rot.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.—One of the leading requisites for health and thrift in live stock, is regularity in feeding and watering. Both the quantity and quality of food should be uniform. Pastures are now beyond their prime, and need to be reinforced by roots, fodder corn, or other green food. Any falling off in condition in farm stock should be strictly guarded against as cold weather approaches. Young animals profit much from any extra feed during the first year. Horses after a day's work enjoy being sponged with clean water containing a few drops of carbolic acid. After the regular feed, they may pass the night in the pasture. Look well to the feet and the shoulders of workhorses.

SUNDRY MATTERS.—Clean up all rubbish about the yards and buildings, and store all farm implements not in use in a dry place. Do not think lightly of the fairs, but compete for some of the premiums. Make it a point to go to at least one exhibition and take the family. Prepare storage room for roots and other late crops, and be well ready for taking in the live stock when cold weather comes and autumn storms threaten.

Care of the Work Team.

A dear work team makes farm operations more costly. Grooming is essential, as it gives rest to tired muscles. It is second only to proper food. It has been said: "A good grooming is worth four quarts of oats." Feed liberally, but do not over feed. Feed regularly, and see that the team has its breakfast, dinner, and supper, before you have your own. It is poor policy to give horses no grain until they are about to do some hard job, or a season's hard work. Over-feeding with grain or grass, causes derangement of the digestion. Imperfect digestion means impaired usefulness in the long run. A horse will do more work on oats than on corn. Corn will prepare a horse for labor, but oats make a better ration during hard work. Oil and starch in corn make it an undesirable summer food; it is heating. Old hay, cut and mixed with bran or a little meal, makes a good work ration, if old hay is not plenty, feed newly cured clover or timothy. Give an occasional feed of roots, apples, and the like; they afford a variety and help digestion.

If at all possible, let the team during hard summer work drink once in the forenoon and once in the afternoon, besides at their regular meals. Judge them somewhat by yourself. See that the breast and shoulders do not chafe. To prevent it, take care to have well-fitting collars, and bathe the shoulders with cool water on returning from the field.

A HINT TO SHIPPERS OF APPLES.—An English agricultural paper prints some excellent advice to American apple-growers. In the first place, it complains of a kind of two and three quarter bushel barrel, which is extensively used in New York, and advises all who wish to ship fruit to England to use the old fashioned three-bushel barrel, with an honest bulge. Then it alludes politely, but plainly, to the American habit of sorting the fruit, and stowing the second rate article in the middle of the barrel, while the red cheeked, plumb apples are invariably placed in the exposed ends. The apple packers of New England will do well to ponder on these remarks, for they are good. Let them check their inclination to place the pleasant faces of their apples all on the outside, and rest assured that if they can get a reputation for honest sorting, their reward shall be substantial.

ALL THE EGGS IN ONE BASKET.—We do not believe in it. The eggs may all be of excellent quality, and the basket strong and large enough to hold them, and yet we think it unwise to risk them all at once. There are manychances which a farmer must take, but he is rarely warranted to hazarding his present comforts in the hope of great gains. A man may invest all his capital in hops or cranberries, or some other special crop, and —lose. He may clog all the machinery of his farm operations, by going largely into grape growing, when he might better have kept to his wheat. Farmers have been sold out by the sheriff because the horses possessed too much speed, and the race track had greater fascinations than the corn field. Some men run all to cider, have a mill to make it, and that is all they make. Others raise only hay, and sell it off the farm. Their eggs are all in one basket. Mixed husbandry, and not specialties, wins in the long run.

How does Pat propose to get over single blessedness? Why, he proposes to bridge-it, of course.

Drinking Ceremonies.

The custom of touching glasses prior to drinking healths is very common in England and many othes countries, and especially in Germany. It is curious to trace how this custom has prevailed, and still exists, even among savage tribes. To drink out of the same cup and eat of the same plate, was one of the ways in which the ancients celebrated a marriage, and the wedding feast continues to be not the least important of the marriage ceremonies to the present day. The Indians of Brazil retain a custom of drinking together a little brandy, as a sign that the marriage is concluded. In China similar customs are met with. In the mediæval banquets of Germany it was the custom to pass a "loving cup" from hand to hand, but this gradually necessitated that the cup should be of enormous size, and thus smaller cups or glasses were adopted, and the old custom was conformed to by the drinkers touching their glasses before drinking, The ceremony attending the passing and drinking out of the "loving cup," as practiced at our great city festivals and at some of our college halls, is said to have arisen from the assassination of King Edward. It was then the custom among the Anglo-Saxons to pass round a large cup, from which each guest drank; he who thus drank stood up, and as he lifted the cup with both hands, his body was exposed without any defence to a blow, and the occasion was often seized by an enemy to murder him. To prevent this the following plan was adopted: When one of the company stood up to drink, he required the companion who sat next to him to be his pledge—that is, to be responsible for protecting him against anybody who should attempt to take advantage of his defenceless position; this companion stood up also, and raised his drawn sword in his hand to defend the drinker while drinking. This practice in a somewhat altered form, continued long after the condition of society had ceased to require it, and was the origin of the modern practice of pledging in drinking. In drinking from the "loving cup" as now practiced, each person rises and takes the cup in his hand to drink, and at the same time the person seated next to him rises also, and when the latter takes the cup in his turn, the individual next to him does the same.

How Opium is Smoked.

The smoker lies curled up, with his head resting on a bamboo or earthenware pillow about five inches high. Near him stands an opium lamp, the flame of which is protected by a glass shade low enough for the point of the flame to project above the top of the shade. The smoker takes a wire and dips it into a little box containing prepared opium. A small quantity adheres to the point of the wire, which is then held over the flame of the lamp until the heat has swollen it into ten times its original size. This is rolled over on the flat side of the clap bowl, the opium all the time adhering to the wire. When it has been rolled to a soft, solid mass it is again applied to the lamp, and this alternate roasting and rolling is kept up for at least ten minutes, by which time it is in the shape of a pill and ready for use. The aperture in the pipe is so small that it can only receive the smalleat quantity and the most careful manipulation is needed to transfer the tiny ball of opium from the end of the wire to the bowl of the pipe. The point of the wire is inserted into the hole of the pipe and worked round and round till the soft opium forms into a conical shaped ring around the wire. By twirling the wire the drug is gradually detached from it, leaving a hole through the opium about as large as the hole of the pipe bowl, with which it communicates, The pipe is now ready and the bowl is held over the lamp so that the opium comes in contact with the flame. A spluttering noise ensues as the smoker sucks at his pipe. After each successive draw he ejects from nose and mouth a volume of smoke, the very smell of which is enough to turn a horse's stomach. By the end of the fourth or fifth whiff the pipe is empty. The smoker scoops up another dose of opium, rolls it into a pill and repeats the operation with the same patience as before and smokes away until the pipe falls from his hands and he is lost in dreamland. If tobacco smoking were only half the trouble tobacconists would soon have to shut up shop.

How Eclipses of the Moon Impress Savages.

The Greenlanders have a personal apprehension in the matter and believe that the moon rummages their houses for skins or victuals, and destroys those persons who have not observed due sobriety. The South American Chiquitos try to help the darkened star against a dog that has worried it till its light has been colored red, and extinguished by its streaming blood; and they shoot arrows into the sky to drive away the dog. Charlevoix gives a similar account of the Guarani, except that with them a tiger takes the place of a dog; and in the language of the Tupis the literal translation of the word eclipse is, "The jaguar has eaten the sun." So, in Asia, the Tunguses believe an evil spirit has swallowed the earth's satellite, and they try to frighten it away by shots at the darkened disk. In Sumatra and Malacca the fear is aroused that a great snake will swallow the sun or the moon; and the Nagas of Assam set up a great drum-beating, as if in battle, to frighten away the devouring monster. Among the American tribes are some who believe that eclipses are a warning of the approaching disappearance of the sun and the fall of the moon at the end of the world. The Pottawattamies tell of a demon in the shape of an old woman sitting in the moon weaving a basket, on the completion of which the world will be destroyed. A dog contends with the woman, tearing the basket to pieces every once in a while, and then an eclipse of the moon takes place; others imagine that the moon is hungry, sick or dying at these times; while the Alfuras, of Ceram, think he is asleep, and make a great uproar to awake him.

A Little Quarrel.

Two ladies had a little tiff, and one of them remarked as she departed:

"Well, as I told my husband this morning, I shouldn't care to be in your shoes."

"I imagine not," the other one responded. "You would find them painfully close fitting."

Motto for cyclists (adapted, by kind permission, from the popular cry of tradesmen in cheap neighborhoods).—"Tri before you bi."

[FIVE MONTHS WITHOUT FOOD.

Kate Smulsey's Extraordinary Period of Fasting.

FORT PLAIN, N. Y.—Interest in the case of Kate Smulsey, the young girl who, for 163 days has been involuntarily starving to death, is spreading throughout this section of the country with extraordinary rapidity. Within the past week or two scores of persons have come to this village from places many miles away to see or inquire about this remarkable girl. To-day she was very low, and the members of her family believe that she cannot live more than a few hours longer. Although she has suffered great pain of late she has not felt any inclination to take any nourishment. The mother of Miss Smulsey said to-night that her parents and every member of the family had coaxed and implored the girl to swallow some food, but without avail. Even when her agony caused her body to sway to and fro with the

CONSTANT REGULARITY OF A PENDULUM,

she turned her face away from the most tempting morsels that could be prepared, and said that she could eat nothing. She was conscious and able to talk this afternoon. Kate Smulsey was a bright and industrious girl a little more than two years ago. She was then 18 years of age, and had acquired an excellent reputation among the good people of this vicinity as a dressmaker. She was quick and willing and always had plenty to do. In July, 1882, she was taken sick and was confined to her bed. She gradually improved, and for a short time was able to be about. In October, however, she grew worse and was compelled to return to the sick bed, from which she has never since been able to rise. The first symptoms of her disease was trembling and shaking of the hand, followed by an involuntary motion of her right leg and foot. After a while her head had a sidewise movement to the right. Doctors diagnosed the case as St. Vitus' dance, and the usual remedies were applied, but with no benefit to the patient. The girl grew worse and the motion at first confined to the limbs of one side seized her whole body. The motion was at first perpendicular and like that of a person sawing wood, only not so violent. To this particular motion was soon added one partly rolling, and the two were combined. Lately the motion has been rolling only, the rolls constantly moving her entire body from side to side with perfect regularity at the rate of 50 per minute. This motion is perpetual for 22 or 23 hours out of 24, and is perfectly involuntary. The poor girl would be quiet if she could. For an hour or more—never more than two—in the night she is motionless. She then

SLEEPS FROM SHEER EXHAUSTION,

but is awakened by the slightest noise. The moment that she wakens the ceaseless rolling begins, to stop only when, worn out, she again sinks to rest. Some persons doubted the necessity of this constant moving of the girl's body, and thought it was voluntary. One physician sat by her side for three hours, during which time there was not the slightest diminution of the rolling. Another physician said he could stop it if he wished, and seizing her by the shoulders, held her tightly a few minutes, but the instant he relaxed his hold her body resumed its motion. She feels the result of this yet, and says that there is not a spot on her person that is not sore. The weight of a pin is actually painful to her, and cannot be endured. Her arms are larger and harder than one would expect for a young lady of her size in perfect health. To the touch they indicate strong muscle. In fact, all the muscles of her body are well developed. This is accounted for by the constant motion of her body, which keeps her in perpetual exercise. Another remarkable thing about Miss Smulsey's case is that she has no bed sores on her person. In most cases where persons are confined to their bed for a long period sores show themselves and become very troublesome. In her case, although she has not left her bed since a year last October, there are none. Since January 1st she has not been able to raise her head from her pillow. About three months ago she began to have trouble with her eyes. A strong light was painful to her. She lies now in a darkened room and wears blue glasses. The color of the glasses contrasts strongly with the pale, white face and the snowy bedding. During the early part of her sickness Miss Smulsey relished delicacies, and the neighbors sent in such little dishes as they thought would please her. Her appetite was not ravenous, still she ate as much as an invalid ordinarily would eat. At length solid food distressed her, and since March 11, 1884,

SHE HAS NOT SWALLOWED A MORSEL.

For some time she was able to drink either milk or water and drank two or three glasses each day. After a time she could not drink milk, and water only was taken, and that in small quantities. At length she could not even drink water. One day she drank a glass of water and was soon seized with convulsions, and for two days was in terrible distress. She bloated till she measured nearly twice her natural size about the waist. During the last eight weeks she has not swallowed a drop of water or any other nourishment. Attempts have been made to give her a teaspoonful of water, but invariably it brought on convulsions and great distress. Every exertion seems to bloat her. Long conversation causes her to turn purple and bloat. She has no desire to eat, and thirst is satisfied by holding water in her mouth and ejecting it. This she does several times a day. Her stomach feels full, as if she had recently eaten a hearty meal.

Miss Smulsey's sickness has been accompanied by no delusion whatever, and her mind is clear and rational. She would be glad to eat if she could, and at the request of her physician she has made attempts to eat or drink, with the results described. All efforts to feed her in other ways than by the mouth have proved futile. There is no denial of the positive fact that for 163 days up to noon to-day she has not tasted food and that for weeks she has not swallowed anything. Her case stands without parallel. Reporters, doctors, scientists have visited her and gone away puzzled.

The Smulsey family are Germans, and are highly respected. Dr. Zoller, the attending physician, says that the girl looks as though suffering from normal dropsy. Dr. Ayers thinks it a peculiar form of St. Vitus' dance.

The difference between the Quaker form of marriage and the Episcopal form is, that in the former the bride does not promise to obey but does obey, while in the latter the bride does promise to obey but does not obey.

THE LEGEND OF STAR ISLAND.

The Only Monument to John Smith, the Friend of Pocahontas.

During the troublesome times before and subsequent to the revolution, the Isles of Shoals, off the coast of New Hampshire, were the resort and hiding places of the freebooters who haunted the northern coast, and these silent rocks, if they could speak, would tell many a tale of bloody cruelty and gloomy wrong. The pirates used to come here to divide and hide their booty, and melt up the silverplate they captured from the colonists along the coast.

For a long time it was supposed that bushels of doubloons were buried in the gaping crevices of the rocks, or the little caves that have been eaten out of the ledges by the restless tide; but the place was thoroughly searched by several generations of fishermen, and nothing more valuable than a rusty cutlass or a bursted blunderbuss was ever found.

The grandames tell how Capt. Kydd came here often, "as he sailed, as he sailed," and there are legends of other pirates quite as fierce and free as he. The Star Island used to be haunted by a beautiful spectre with long white robes and golden tresses reaching to her heels, who used to come out of some undiscovered cavern at dawn, and shading her eyes with a hand that was as white and beautiful as a lily's bosom, gaze off upon the sea in hopeless expectancy of the return of a clipper that sailed away and never came back again.

The story goes that a bloody-hearted old pirate, being pursued by a cruiser, brought his beautiful mistress here and left her while he went out to battle, telling her that by dawn he would be back again, but he came not, not even till now. She died of starvation, but her frithful spirit still comes to the summit of the island as the sun rises each morning, to meet the corsair who never returned.

There are eight of the islands, the smallest being as large, or rather as small, as a city building lot, and the largest containing only a couple of hundred acres—nothing but bare, lifeless rocks, carved by the incessant waves into strange grotesqueness, and covered by no vegetation except low clinging vines and the New England blueberry. Four of the islands are inhabited, the largest, the Appledore, bears a hotel and a few cottages. Star Island has another hotel and a small settlement of fishermen; a third has a few fishermen's huts, and the fourth has a bold, white lighthouse springing out of its crest. They were discovered by Cap. John Smith, the friend of Pocahontas, who in 1614 explored the New England coast in an open boat, and spent some time here making repairs and resting.

On Star Island stands the only monument erected in America to Capt. John Smith. It is a rude affair—a prismatic-shaped shaft of marble, upon a pedestal of sandstone, inscribed at length with the record of his valorous deeds, and some cyclopedias say he is buried here, but that is a mistake.

The War on the Condor.

The announcement that the Chilian Government has declared a war of extermination against the monarch of vultures—the condor—and offers about five dollars for every condor killed, justifies some remark as to the possibility of the Chilian Government realizing its purpose. The Condor has indeed been declared "an enemy to the republic," and condor hunting has become a highly lucrative business; but when one takes into consideration the astounding powers of the bird, and its wonderful habits, one finds it hard to believe that the government can ever succeed in destroying the species at any price. Shooting it on the wing is almost out of the question; for it sails at altitudes far beyond the reach of the human eye, and roosts on peaks immeasurably above the clouds. It has been seen at altitudes of 20,000 feet. It can withstand variation of temperature beyond human endurance, and hatches its young far above the snow line; nevertheless, it rests quite comfortably on the buring sands of the Southern seacoast. It haunts the whole western slopes of the Andes—not only Cauli, but Peru, Bolivia and Patagonia. With the vast spread of its wings—often exceeding twelve feet—it can perform prodigious journeys in a few hours, Its eye is miraculously keen; for when no bird is visible in the sky, even with the aid of a powerful glass, if a mule or other animal in a convoy fall or die, the condors instantly drop upon it like lightning from heaven.

Latterly the birds have so increased as to form a veritable scourge—notwithstanding the fact that the female lays but two eggs at a time, and that condor hunting has been a regular and lucrative calling for more than a century. Traps are the only reliable means of catching them; but the day will certainly come when traps shall be of no avail whatever. Condors have already learned to fear a gun; and with their wonderful sight it is absolutely impossible to get within rifle range of them. Birds soon learn to avoid danger, as has been proved since the erection of the telegraph lines in United States; few are now killed by flying against the wires. It will be strange if the condor does not learn to avoid snares instinctively.

When the birds find life in Chili or in Peru unusually difficult they have only to migrate further south or north, and propagate their species in other altitudes, until they become so numerous as to migrate again to those regions which outlawed them. Then the work of destruction would have to be done over. All things considered it seems impossible to exterminate such a race of vultures unless means of destroying their eggs can be devised; but nobody—not even Mr. Graham—would undertake to scale icy peaks 19,000 or 20,000 feet high for such a purpose. The condor is certainly gifted with rare powers of self-preservation; and it is not unlikely his huge shadow may float above the corpse of the last South American in that lurid twilight preceding the world's final dissolution.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Refused.

The moon beat silently upon the waves, and the waves beat noisily upon the sand, and they strolled quietly along the beach, and as he looked down into her eyes lovingly, he asked pleadingly: "Mildred, will you return my love?" "Yes, George," she answered hesitatingly, "on one condition." "Only tell me that condition," he pleaded breathlessly. "It is," she replied solemnly, "that you do not again ask me to accept it," and the moon and the waves and his heart continued to beat as they walked home sorrowfully and silently.

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

Good, the more communicated, more abundant grows.

To keep one's opinion is a charge and a sweet one.

What is defeat? Nothing but education, nothing but the first step to something better.

Keep carefully out of a quarrel—keep your son's way, and still more carefully out of your own ways.

A person under the firm persuasion that he can command resources virtually controls them.

If you hit the mark, you must aim a little above it; every arrow that flies feels the attraction of the earth.

It is the pleasure of the gods—that which is in conformity with justice shall also be in conformity to the laws.

Whatever people may think of you, be sure that which you believe right. It is altogether different to censure or praise.

The moment we feel angry in controversy we have already ceased striving for truth, and begun striving for ourselves.

Philanthropy, like charity, must begin at home. From this centre our sympathies may extend in an ever-extending circle.

He who is dear to the heart is near, though far as he can be; he whom the heart rejects is remote, though near as our very soul.

Any coward can fight a battle when sure of winnning; but give the man who has pluck to fight when he is sure of losing.

As the soil however rich it may be, can not be productive without culture, so the mind without cultivation can never produce good fruit.

Every man is not so much a workman in the world as he is a suggestion of what he should be. Men walk as prophecies of the next age.

Where are there two things so opposite and yet so nearly related, so unlike and yet often so hard to be distinguished from each other, as humility and pride?

Conversation should be pleasant without scurrility, witty without affectation, wise without indecency, learned without conceit, edness, novel without falsehood.

True glory consists in doing what deserves a place in history, writing what deserves to be read, and in so living as to make the world happier and better for living in it.

Expect not praise without envy until you are dead. Honors bestowed on the illustrious dead have in them no admixture of envy; for the living pity the dead; pity and envy, like oil and vinegar, assimilate not.

Educate all the faculties and propensities of children; but, above all, see that the conscience, the balance-wheel of the whole system, is trained unto perfect accord with the principles of positive truth and absolute justice.

If Satan ever laughs it must be at hypocrites. They are the greatest dupes in the world. They serve him better than any others, and receive no wages. Nay, what is still more extraordinary, they submit to greater mortifications than the sincerest Christians.

We are ruined not by what we really want but by what we think we do; and therefore never go abroad in search of your wants if they are real wants, they will come home in search of you; for she who buys what she does not want will soon want what she cannot buy.

Never be ashamed to confess your ignorance, for the wisest man on earth is ignorant of many things, insomuch that what he knows is mere nothing in comparison with what he does not know. There cannot be a greater folly in the world than to suppose we know everything.

The most glorious exploits do not always furnish us with the clearest discoveries of virtue or vice in men. Sometimes a word of least moment, an expression or a jest, informs us better of their characters and declinations than the most famous sieges, the greatest armaments, or the bloodiest battles whatsoever.

What is death? To go out like a light and in a sweet trance to forget ourselves and all the passing phenomena of the day; we forget the phantom of a fleeting dream to form as in a dream new connections with God's world; to enter into a more exalted sphere, and to make a new step up the graduated ascent of creation.

Where and How We Remember.

If, now, we take models of our brain and on the first mark out the location of the various areas connected with the various sensory organs as determined by the anatomical connection of the white nerve threads; on the second mark out the location of the various areas which physiologists have shown to govern various sensory organs; on the third mark out the various areas which disease produces disturbance of action in the various sensory organs, and lose the memory of perceptions by those organs; and on the fourth mark out the various areas which wither after disease of the various sensory organs—we shall find that upon the four brains the areas belonging to any one organ coincide. We may therefore conclude that each class of sensations and each class of memories has its own definite area of the gray matter on the surface of the brain. Memories of objects seen are located in the posterior part in the occipital region. Memories of sounds heard are located in the lower lateral part in the temporal region. Memories of motions in the limbs, and touch in those limbs, are located side by side in the central lateral region. Memories of speech are located in the fronal region. It is therefore a mistake to speak of memory as a single faculty of the mind. It is really an assemblage of distinct memories which we possess, each kind of memory being as different from the others both in its nature and in its location as are the different organs of sense through which the original perceptions came.

Early Marriages.

Early marriages are reported to be very common among boys and girls in the east end of London. They begin "keeping company" when twelve years of age. In one district there are four married boys. The eldest is 19, and receives 13s a week; the other is 18; has three years of his apprenticeship yet to serve, and has two children; the other is between 16 and 17, and has two children; the fourth is 16 and keeps a wife and child on 11s a week.

A Fight with a Crocodile.

"What a queer craft! I'm glad I have ... to go up to Khartoum in a thing li...

... spoke a bearded, brown-faced Engli... standing upon the bank of the Upp... close to the Arab Village of Shend... way between Berber and Khartoum. ... Certainly it was a "queer craft," and ... it well be glad that he had not got ... a long voyage in it. It was a hu... ...ay, flat-bottomed barge, almost as bro... ...ree long, and steered by a gaunt, ha... Arab with something that looked ve... ...h like an overgrown wooden shov... the rigging was more curious still. ... bony native standing bolt upright up... deck, served as a mast, while the pie... ...arse canvas which he held up at fu... ...th in his outstretched hands did du... ...sail. This living mast was kept in i... ...e by two other men, one of whom clas... ...round the waist, while the other he... ...o its knees with all his might and mai... ...o use living rigging is not always a s... ...eriment, and in this case it proved ve... ...fe indeed. A sudden gust of wind too... ...sail aback, and the Arab who was ser... ...e mast for it, and who had planted h... ...upon the two lower corners of the ca... ...in order to keep it stretched to its fu... ...nt, found himself entangled in it almo... ...re he knew what had happened. Losi... ...balance, he fell backward, and rolle... ...the edge of the boat into the wate... ...ging along with him one of the two me... ...had been holding him up.

...he other man scrambled back into th... ...almost as quickly as he had tumble... ...of it; but the mast-man was not s... ...y. It took him two or three seconds t... ...rid of the canvas that was hamperin... ...and those two or three seconds mad... ...the difference. By the time he had g... ...r the ferry boat had drifted a good wa... ...n the stream, the steersman having le... ...post and run forward when he saw hi... ...rades fall overboard.

...his of itself would have mattered little ...very Arab in the Nile valley can swim ...a duck. But while the struggling ma... ...swimming with all his might towar... ...boat, and the steersman was workin... ...boat's head round to meet him, a new ...or suddenly appeared on the scene, whos... ...ing made the affair look much more seri...

...o one had taken any particular notic... ...long black log which was lying on th... ...e of a sand-bank a little way out in th... ...am. But at the splash made by the two ...bs as they plunged overboard, the seem... ...log made a sudden movement, display... ...as it did so the vast, scaly bulk, grim... ...teeth, and small, cunning, cruel eye o... ...onstrous crocodile!

...The hideous creature waddled down into ...river so clumsily that any one who had ...n watching it would have been startled ...the arrow-like swiftness of its course the ...moment it touched the water. The poor ...h knew only too well what was in store ...him, and made frantic efforts to reach ...boat, which was now close at hand, ...the monster was too quick for him. ...ding in between him and the approach... ...barge, it spun around suddenly and dart... ...right at him, opening its terrible jaws ...e enough to show two ranges of spiky ...th that might have crushed a buffalo.

...But just as all seemed over, one of the ...rymen took a flying leap from the side of ...boat and came plump on to the croco... ...'s back. There he stuck like a limpet, ...ile the long, sharp jambeyah (dagger) in ...right hand dealt stab after stab into the ...ster's undefended side, just behind the ...e-shoulder.

...Could the crocodile have spoken, he would ...obably have cried out: "Foul play! two ...ainst one!" As it was he showed his dis... ...t plainly enough by his savage snortings ...d the furious lashings of his ponderous ...l, till, finding that its enemy was not to ...shaken off, he plunged suddenly under ...e water. Man and beast went down in a ...irling eddy, the ripples of which were ...k with blood.

...A cry of dismay burst from the crowd ...at had gathered upon the bank, as they ...w the brave Arab disappear. But all at ...ce the water began to heave and bubble ...if some fierce struggle were going on in ...e depths below, and then the Mussul... ...n's lean, dark face rose again to the sur... ...ce, upon which, a moment later, the croco... ...e's mighty bulk floated limp and dead, ...ain by a mortal stab in the throat.

..."Aferin, ya babioi!" (Well done, my ...iend) cried the Englishman, as the con... ...er struggled ashore. "Here are twenty ...astres (fifty cents) for you, if you can ac... ...pt the gift of an unbeliever."

..."No matter for that, effendi," (gentle... ...an), replied the Arab, with a grin, tying ...y the coins in the greasy waistcoat which ...as his only clothing. "You may be an ...nbeliever, but your money is true Moham... ...dan."

Eastern Idleness.

...In the East they dedicate a small portion ...f the year to avowed idleness, and nothing ...s then permitted to disturb the halycon of ...ster leisure. The doors are shut even to ...riends. No one goes in or out. The in... ...ates of the house are in their filmiest ties... ...; they go unshod. The hawks sit nod... ...ing on their perches, the horses are idle in ...he stable. The fountain splashes in the ...court-yard, and the turtle doves among the ...pomegranate trees lull the garden to sleep ...with their sultry, slumberous cooing. The ...interval is sacred to the refreshment of the ...body. Gentle medicines are taken of a re... ...laxing and blood-cooling kind. The hardest ...exertion of the day is the bath; its chief em... ...ployment the shampooing of the limbs with ...soft-scented oils. The ladies of the house... ...hold recline with their citharas by the side ...of their master's couch, and the slave girl ...sits at his head with a fan, lest some pre... ...sumptuous fly should break the pious calm. ...The master of the house stretches himself at ...his ease and dozes all the day through, while ...the story-teller drones away in the corner ...like a bumble-bee in a scrape, and the cithara ...tinkles one of the thin, monotonous airs of ...the East. Now and then he stirs himself— ...a kite shrilling far up in the blue sky, a dog ...barking far off in the outer dust has aroused ...him—and he solemnly cites Allah as a wit... ...ness that the day is hot, and in the name of ...the prophet calls for a sherbet of citrons. ...Such is the Afghan holiday. Or, turn to ...Africa, where the sun compels idleness for ...a long interval of each day, and note how ...the barbarian fences with the weather. Un... ...der an awning of grass-mats that is stretched ...under some deep-foliaged tree, he lies tran... ...quilly, accepting the heat without any res... ...ervation. Out in the sunshine he sees the

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

ood, the more communicated, more nt grows.

keep one's opinion is a a sweet one.

hat is defeat? Nothing but ing but the first step to ep carefully out of a way, and still more carefully out of person under the first an command resources

you hit the mark, you must aim a it; every arrow that flies feels ion of the earth.

s the pleasure of the gods—that conformity with justice shall also rmity to the laws.

atever people may think of you,
which you believe right. Be nt to censure or praise.

moment we feel angry in ve already ceased striving for egun striving for ourselves.

lanthropy, like charity, must
From this centre our xtend in an ever-extending circle, who is dear to the heart is near,
he can be; he whom the heart ote; though near as our very self.

coward can fight a battle when winning; but give the man ck to fight when he is sure of he soil however rich it may be, productive without culture, so the t cultivation can never uit.

y man is not so much a ld as he is a suggestion of
be. Men walk as prophecies of e.

re are there two things so so nearly related, so unlike and hard to be distinguished from humility and pride?

eration should be pleasant
y, witty without affectation, indecency, learned without novel without falsehood.

glory consists in doing what in history, writing what and in so living as to make appier and better for living not praise without envy until

l. Honors bestowed on the ead have in them no admixture or the living pity the dead;
envy, like oil and vinegar, te all the faculties and en; but, above all, see that e, the balance-wheel of the s trained unto perfect accord iples of positive truth and n ever laughs it must be at

They are the greatest dupes he re him better than any others.
wages. Nay, what is still nary, they submit to ions than the sincerest ruined not by what we by what we think we do; the go abroad in search of your real wants, they will come of you; for she who buys what ant will soon want what she e ashamed to confess your he wisest man on earth is y things, insomuch that what here nothing in comparison es not know. There cannot olly in the world than to verything.

t glorious exploits do not with the clearest discoveries ice in men. Sometimes a ment, an expression or a jest, tter of their characters and han the most famous sieges, naments, or the bloodiest leath? To go out like a eet trance to forget passing phenomena of the e phantom of a fleeting n a dream new connections

; to enter into a more to make a new step up scent of creation.

and How We Remember.

we take models of our irst mark out the location of e connected with the various as determined by the n of the white nerve d mark out the location of as which physiologists
vern various sensory organs;
rk out the various areas
uces disturbance of sensory organs, and erceptions by those organs;
mark out the various after disease of the
as—we shall find that e areas belonging to any
e. We may therefore s of sensations and each as its own definite area of on the surface of the bjects seen are located in rt in the occipital ounds heard are located in part in the temporal notions in the limbs, and limbs, are located side by lateral region. Memories ated in the fronal region. It stake to speak of memory of the mind. It is really distinct memories which kind of memory being others both in its nature as are the different organs which the original arly Marriages.

ages are reported to be g boys and girls in the
They begin "keeping welve years of age. In are four married boys.
d receives 13s a week;
three years of his
ve, and has two children en 16 and 17, and has fourth is 16 and keeps a s a week.

A Fight with a Crocodile.

"What a queer craft! I'm glad I haven't to go up to Khartoum in a thing like
"

He spoke a bearded, brown-faced English er standing upon the bank of the Upper
, close to the Arab Village of Shendy, way between Berber and Khartoum.
Certainly it was a "queer craft," and he ht well be glad that he had not got to his a long voyage in it. It was a big, y, flat-bottomed barge, almost as broad
It was long, and steered by a gaunt, half Arab with something that looked very like an overgrown wooden shovel.
the rigging was more curious still. A heavy native standing bolt upright upon deck, served as a mast, while the piece coarse canvas which he held up at full ath in his outstretched hands did duty sail. This living mast was kept in its e by two other men, one of whom clasp-d round the waist, while the other held to its knees with all his might and main.
o fine living rigging is not always a safe vernment, and in this case it proved very e indeed. A sudden gust of wind took sail aback, and the Arab who was serv-as mast for it, and who had planted his upon the two lower corners of the can-in order to keep it stretched to its full th, found himself entangled in it almost re he knew what had happened. Losing balance, he fell backward, and rolled er the edge of the boat into the water, ging along with him one of the two men had been holding him up.
The other man scrambled back into the almost as quickly as he had tumbled of it; but the mast-man was not so
y. It took him two or three seconds to nd of the canvas that was hampering
, and those two or three seconds made the difference. By the time he had got r the ferry boat had drifted a good way n the stream, the steersman having left boat and run forward when he saw his ades fall overboard.
This of itself would have mattered little,
very Arab in the Nile valley can swim a duck. But while the struggling man swimming with all his might toward boat, and the steersman was working boat's head round to meet him, a new er suddenly appeared on the scene, whose ing made the affair look much more seri-

No one had taken any particular notice a long black log which was lying on the e of a sand-bank a little way out in the am. But at the splash made by the two as they plunged overboard, the seem-log made a sudden movement, display-as it did so the vast, scaly bulk, grin-g teeth, and small, cunning, cruel eye of onstrous crocodile!
The hideous creature waddled down into river so clumsily that any one who had n watching it would have been startled the arrow-like swiftness of its course the moment it touched the water. The poor ab knew only too well what was in store him, and made frantic efforts to reach e boat, which was now close at hand,
t the monster was too quick for him.
shing in between him and the approach-barge, it spun around suddenly and dart-right at him, opening its terrible jaws
e enough to show two ranges of spiky
th that might have crushed a buffalo.
But just as all seemed over, one of the rymen took a flying leap from the side of boat and came plump on to the croco-e's back. There he stuck like a limpet, ile the long, sharp jambeyah (dagger) in right hand dealt stab after stab into the nster's undefended side, just behind the e-shoulder.
Could the crocodile have spoken, he would obably have cried out: "Foul play! two ainst one!" As it was he showed his dist plainly enough by his savage snortings
d the furious lashings of his ponderous il till, finding that its enemy was not to shaken off, he plunged suddenly under e water. Man and beast went down in a rling eddy, the ripples of which were ck with blood.
A cry of dismay burst from the crowd at had gathered upon the bank, as they w the brave Arab disappear. But all at ce the water began to heave and bubble if some fierce struggle were going on in e depths below, and then the Mussuln's lean, dark face rose again to the sur-ce, upon which, a moment later, the croco-e's mighty bulk floated limp and dead, ain by a mortal stab in the throat.
"Aferin, ya habioi!" (Well done, my end) cried the Englishman, as the conror struggled ashore. "Here are twenty estres (fifty cents) for you, if you can ac-pt the gift of an unbeliever."
"No matter for that, effendi," (gentle-an), replied the Arab, with a grin, tying y the coins in the greasy waistcoat which s his only clothing. "You may be an nbeliever, but your money is true Moham-dan."

Eastern Idleness.

In the East they dedicate a small portion the year to avowed idleness, and nothing then permitted to disturb the halycon of tter leisure. The doors are shut even to iends. No one goes in or out. The inates of the house are in their filmiest tis-es; they go unshod. The hawks sit nod-ing on their perches, the horses are idle in e stable. The fountain splashes in the ourt-yard, and the turtle doves among the pomegranate trees lull the garden to sleep ith their sultry, slumberous cooing. The terval is sacred to the refreshment of the ody. Gentle medicines are taken of a re-reating and blood-cooling kind. The hardest ertion of the day is the bath; its chief emloyment the shampooing of the limbs with ilt-scented oils. The ladies of the house-old recline with their citharas by the side
f their master's couch, and the slave girl its at his head with a fan, lest some pre-umptuous fly should break the pious calm.
The master of the house stretches himself at s ease and dozes all the day through, while he story teller drones away in the corner ike a bumble-bee in a scrape, and the citthara inkles one of the thin, monotonous airs of he East. Now and then he stirs himself—kite shrilling far up in the blue sky, a dog arking far off in the outer dust has aroused im—and he solemnly cites Allah as a witess that the day is hot, and in the name of he prophet calls for a sherbet of citrons.
Such is the Afghan holiday. Or, turn to Africa, where the sun compels idleness for a long interval of each day, and note how the barbarian fences with the weather. Under an awning of grass-mats that is stretched under some deep-foliaged tree, he lies tranquilly, accepting the heat without any reservation. Out in the sunshine he sees the herbage shimmering in the refraction, and the shadows of the plants are gathered close about their roots. So he knows it is noon, and turns around to slumber again. The dogs are lying on their sides in the shadow of the hut, fast asleep. From within the kraal there is not a sound of life. High up in a tree a barbet is piping the hours, and, clinging to a twig, the shrill-voiced cicada cries all the afternoon through. But the negro dozes on until the evening breeze comes up and the shadows lie asleep. The dog is now up on its haunches, huskily barking at nothing; the chickens are abroad again; the grass-mats of the huts rustle as the women come out, and the sound of food being prepared awakes the sleeper. The day is not fit, he says, for human beings to be busy.

American Fables.

An Ox which had for some time had his eye on the Rich Pasture of a certain Peasant, but who feared Results in case of Trespass, finally went to the owner and said:

"My Dear Friend, I have Reasons to believe that the Goats and the Sheep Contemplate a raid on your Meadow. I am very Tender on the matter of Trespass, Stealing, Embezzlement, etc., and will Volunteer my Services to act as a Sentinal for you."

The Peasant Accepted the offer with many Expressions of Gratitude, and for the first time in many Weeks went to bed wit a Feeling of Security.

Next morning, However, as he walked out to view his Meadow, he found the Ox just Sneaking away, after Having filled his Hide to Bursting with the juciest Grass.

"Ah! is this the way you Guard my Property!" exclaimed the Peasant,

"Well, you see,' replied the Ox as he Continued moving away, "on Second Consideration I Decided it would be less trouble to eat your Grass than to Guard it from Others."

MORAL:

The Reformer is generally the biggest Robber.

THE CLAM AND THE LOBSTER.

A Clam and a Lobster fell out one day as to Whether the Fisherman had a Legal Right to catch their prey by appealing to their Hunger. From words they came to blows, and the Lobster had one eye blacked and two ribs broken, and the Clam had his jaw broken and his chin knocked off. They were Repairing Damages for a fight to the finish when both were suddenly scooped out of the Water by the Fisherman, who quietly Observed:

"Had they not been so Intent on Destroying each other I should have got neither."

MORAL:

The fisherman still fishes in the same old way.

THE OWL AND THE HAWK.

An Owl and a Hawk who Dwelt Together on a Certain Island got by the ears as to which had the best Right to be called the Queen of Song. (Tickets $5, and standing room only.)

It was agreed to leave the case to a Fox who dwelt on the Mainland, and after Hearing all the Particulars, Reynaad replied:

"Gentlemen, my Decision is that the title Belongs to the one who can sing the Loudest. Come and see me this day week.'

The Disputants Returned home and Tuned up. As the Hawk sang all day, and the Owl all night, Neither could sleep, and Before the week was up both Dropped the Disputed point in Disgust.

MORAL:

Quarrels Between Neighbors cannot last Unless fed by the gossip of Tale-bearers.

MAKING A HUMAN FACE.

Thomas Colt's Thirteen Years of Experience Under the Surgeons.

In 1871 Thomas Colt, then 12 years old, was taken to Bellevue Hospital, New York, suffering from a disease which had destroyed his nose and lips and had begun to affect his eyes. He was taken in charge by Dr. Gustavus Sabine, and since that time has been under treatment with a view to replacing the lost part of the face.

After the course of the disease had been checked the process of building up was begun by cutting away the flesh about the edges of the orifice, where the nose had been. Then the inside of the large finger of the right hand was flayed, and the fresh cut wound was fitted where the nose should be. The hand was held in place by bandages and plaster of paris until the finger had grown fast to the forehead and cheeks of the patient. In the meantime the mouth was covered by the hand, and a silver tube was inserted into the lad's throat, through which he was fed, and through which he also breathed.

When the grafting of the finger to the face was completed, and the circulation established, the finger was amputated near the knuckle, leaving two and a half joints attached to the face. The operations so far had required about a year, but the process was only begun. The next step was to trim down the finger into the shape of a nose by removing the bone and gradually building up the flesh on each side and drawing up the skin from the cheeks and forehead over it. In course of time the result sought was obtained, except that there were as yet no nostrils.

The eyes of the unfortunate boy had both been drawn out of position somewhat, and these were straightened by clipping nerves in the manner usually adopted by oculists in treating cross-eyed people. The eyebrows were also patched up at the inner ends.

The next step was to give the boy a new pair of lips. This was done gradually by taking pieces of flesh from the cheeks and grafting them in place bit by bit.

Recently, after thirteen years of experience under a surgeon's knife, having meantime undergone and recovered from thirty different operations, the patient, now a young man, left the hospital. His face was smooth, and to the casual observer bore no traces of what he had gone through. The case is extraordinary for the extent of the work done and the perfect result obtained. Not less extraordinary was the fortitude of the patient, who never murmured under the necessarily painful operations, and who, when walking the floor because of his suffering, was wont to cheer up the other patients in the ward by telling droll stories, of which he had a large supply. He was known in the hospital as "Patient Tommy."

Not another Pill shall go down my throat again, said a citizen, "when I can get such a prompt and pleasant cure for my Billious attacks, such as Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It renders the Blood Pure and Cool and makes a splendid Spring Medicine. Large bottles 50 cents.

NEWSPAPER FUN.

The boiled wave has come.

Ben Butler wishes to send a Minister to England who does not wear mutton chop whiskers. The bald headed diplomat's whiskers must be cut bias, and of a sunset or dynamite hue.

Just exhumed by Punch: Real hard-ships—Ironclads.

There is a town in Arkansas which struggles under the name of Limburger. We'll wager a scent that it's a live town.

"Poetry is the sister of sorrow," writes Mr. Andre, who had evidently been having a narrow escape from a newspaper office.

First Speculator.—"Pek'n Turnpikes second mortgage bonds! What did you clear by them?" Second ditto.—"My pockets!"

Is it not odd that the boot blacks can command five cents for a shine when the advertisements say that "The New York Sun shines for all for two cents!" Competition is the soul of trade.

A Michigan justice of the peace advertises: "Marriage ceremonies performed at all hours of the day or night. Knots tied after midnight fifty per cent. extra." Western enterprise is something astonishing.

A news item says that the inventor of a device for fastening a necktie sold the patent for $1,000,000, and received as much more in royalties. His good fortune is easily explained. The news item lies,

A lady in Fonda, N. Y., who is ninety-two years old, is just learning to play the piano. She says that a woman who can't play some sort of an instrument nowadays stands a pretty poor chance of getting married.

"Why," he pleaded, our very circumstances bind us together; our similar tastes, our friendship, long acquaintance——" "Yes," she replied, "even age could bind us together." "What age, dearest?" he asked. "Mucilage," answered she, gluemily. A minute later, as he paste up and down the room alone, he realized that his failure was gumplete.

"How can you account for those fine stalks of corn coming up in the fence corners?" asked a man of a farmer! "That's not corn," the farmer replied. "Only weeds." "Ah, how singular!" "D'n't know much about farmin', I reckin'?" "Very little. I am the editor of an agricultural paper."

160 Days Without Food.

Probably the most extraordinary case on record of a person living in a conscious state without eating is that of Miss Kate Smusley of Fort Plain, who is at the point of death because of self-starvation. She is at her father's residence, and it is asserted with a positiveness undisputed by those who attend her that not a particle of food has passed her lips for now over 160 days. She takes a little water in her mouth occasionally, but does not swallow it, as, when swallowed, it at once throws her into convulsions which seem to wrench her stomach most terribly. She is emaciated to a skeleton. She is conscious, recognizes her friends and is able to converse with them.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star

The commander-in-chief of the pig-tail army has issued his first command, "Tomtoms to the front and centre, march."

Young Men!—Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Elizabeth, N. J., has been painting her laws of a bluish tint, and the air has been full of streaks of a similar shade.

Oh! how tired and weak I feel, I don't believe I will ever get through this Spring house-cleaning! Oh yes you will if you take a bottle or two of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters to purify your blood and set up the system. In large bottles 50 cents.

The relations of the sun and moon, and intimate personal friends of the seven stars should offer Chinese Gordon the contract to clean out the French.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel, than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

"Another expedition to the pole," said the man, as he wended his way to the barber shop.

How would it do!

This bad weather requires a remedy. It seems as if the whole responsibility should rest on Vennor and Wiggins, for we had some kind of weather before they appeared upon the scene. How would it do to string them up! Would it make things better. Another hint of importance—don't hang on to your corns as weather indicators. Better string them out root and branch. Putnams Painless Corn Extractor will do it quickly, painlessly and with certainty. Don't buy dangerous flesh-eating substitutes. Get Putnam's, and no other.

The Opinion of All

Who have tried Polson's NERVILINE, the great pain remedy is that it is never failing in pain of every description. Neuralgia, toothache, cramps, pain in the stomach, and kindred complaints are banished as if by magic. Rapid and certain in operation, pleasant to take, Nerviline stands at the very front rank of remedies of this class. A trial bottle may be purchased for 10 cents, a very small amount to any one; but the best expenditure you can make, if a sufferer from any kind of pain, is a 10 or 25 cent bottle of Nerviline at druggists and country dealers.

Young man from the country to Scotch policeman—"Whar's Oxford street?" Constable, sternly—"Why, whar it was yesterday! None o' ye larkin' wi' me!"

There are lots of people going around grumbling, and half sick at the Stomach all the time; who might be well and happy, if they only used Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters occasionally. It is a splendid Blood Purifier At Druggists 50 cents

A.P 193.

FARM FOR SALE. 130 ACRES IN GOOD order; easy terms. DR. PYNE, Toronto.

SAW MILL PROPERTIES FOR SALE—STAVE machinery included if desired. Send for circular. H. J. LEACOCK, Brigden.

THOS. GALLOWAY & Co., Cotton, Woollen, Silk & Carpet, and Worsted, Shuttle Makers, Dundas, Ont

PHRENOLOGY. EXAMINATIONS GIVEN BY WALLACE MASON, 12 Queen St. W., Toronto.

OVER 200 FARMS IN MICHIGAN FOR SALE Description and price list furnished free to all applicants. GEO. W. SNOVER, 103 Griswold St., Detroit, Mich.

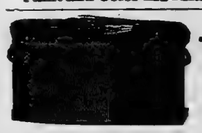
SEND And get a sample copy o TRUTH, free, the best 28-page Weekly Magazine published. See the big list of rewards for answering Bible Problems. S. FRANK WILSON, 33 & 35 Adelaide Street, West, Toronto, Canada.

SMOKED SAUSAGES.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for price to W. CLARK, P. O. Box 342 Montreal.

MEN WANTED.

Active, pushing men wanted to wholesale my famous teas to consumers. Salaries from $600 to $2,000 per year Send stamp for particulars. JAMES LAUT, Importer, Toronto.



PARTY WANTED TO PURCHASE CARRIAGE shops 24 x 118 feet; double stoop, with office 24 x 60 lacksmith's shop, 20 x 42; lumber, barn, and shed, horse barn, two acres of land with dwelling house suitable for two small families; two cisterns, cellar, and well; situated at Ross' Corners, four miles from Belleville, on main gravelled road; good locality, where a business from $8,000 to $10,000 per annum is done. The premises are now in full blast, and will be sold to good live man at a bargain. HARFORD ASHLEY Belleville.

1883.-ST. JOHN EXHIBITION.-1883

Leather Belting, Fire Engine Hose, &c. Four First Prizes and Two Diplomas. The highest of all Awards for Leather Belting, and Fire Engine Hose were accorded by th Judges at the St. John Centennial and Dominion Exhibition, to ROBIN & SADLER, Montreal, over all competitors.

W. & F. P. Currie & Co.
100 Bleury Nun Street, Montreal.
Importers of
Drain Pipes, Portland Cement,
Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings.
Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting,
Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay
Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay
Manufacturers of
Bessemer Steel Sofa, Chair & Bed Springs

DEATH TO POTATO BUGS.
ASK YOUR LOCAL DEALER FOR
RAMSAY'S PURE PARIS GREEN.
Nothing has been found more effective for destroying Potato Bugs. The purest is the cheapest.
A. Ramsay & Son,
Paint and Color Manufacturers, Montreal.

THE MODEL Washer AND BLEACHER
Weighs but 6 pounds. Can be carried in a small valise. Illustration shows Machine in boiler. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded within 30 days.
$1000.00 REWARD FOR ITS SUPERIOR.
Washing made light and easy. The clothes have that pure whiteness which no other mode of washing can produce. No rubbing required, no friction to injure the fabric. A 10 year old girl can do the washing as well as an older person.
To place it in every household THE PRICE HAS BEEN REDUCED to $2.50, and if not found satisfactory, money refunded. See what the "Canada Presbyterian," says about it—The Model Washer and Bleacher which Mr. C. W. Dennis offers to the public has many and valuable advantages. It is a time and labor saving machine, substantial and enduring, and is very cheap. From trial in the household we can testify to its excellence Delivered to any express office in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Charges paid $3.00. Send for circulars
AGENTS WANTED.
C. W. DENNIS,
TORONTO BARGAIN HOUSE,
213 YONGE STREET, TORONTO, ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow line sail during winter between Portland and Glasgow, and Boston and Glasgow alternately; and during summer between Quebec and Glasgow and Boston and Glasgow every week.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B. Allan & Co, Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

MUTUAL MARRIAGE ENDOWMENT ASN, Incorporated. Head Office, London, Ont. Issues Certificates from $125 to $3,000, payable on marriage, at following rates. For $500, or half certificate, $4; quarterly dues in advance, $0.75. For $1,000 Certificate, $8; quarterly dues in advance, $1.60. For $2,000 Certificate, $10; quarterly dues in advance, $3.00. For $3,000 Certificate, $15; quarterly dues in advance, $3.00. The only cash payments. Assessments on marriages $1.50 on each $1000. First years quarterly assessments are promptly paid, on present membership at end of year. Endowment reserve account will amount to $10,000 providing for a large number of endowments, which places this Association in a sound financial position. No connection with any similar Institution. A good savings society for young people. Send for By-Laws, &c. W. J. IMLACH, Secretary, London, Ont.

MACHINERY. 1 Portsmouth Westinghouse Engine. 1 Able Triumph do. 1 G. C. Morrison do. 1 8 h p Portable Engine and Boiler on Skids. 1 35 h. p. Horozontal by Northy. 1 do. by Waterous with cut off valve, and 20 engines and boilers of smaller sizes, all thoroughly refitted before leaving shop. 2 24-inch Planers and Matchers. 1 20-inch Pony Planer. 1 Iron frame Tenoning machine. 1 Blind Slat Tenoner. 1 Buggy Plainer or Jointer. 2 band saws 10 Saw Tables. 1 Fire-Proof Safe. 1 Jeweler's Rolls. Steel. 1 Book-Binder's Screw Press. 1 42-inch French Burr Portable Grist Mill. 1 62-inch inserted Tooth Saw &c., &c. Send for new list, No. 9, containing full description of machinery in stock. Address,
H. W. PETRIE, Brantford, Ont.

Dominion Line of Steamships.

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from

QUEBEC TO LIVERPOOL.

*Brooklyn, Aug 25 | Montreal, Sept. 13
Toronto, Aug 30 | *Vancouver, Sept 20
*Oregon, Sept 6 |

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $50, $60, $65, $80. Return, $90, $105, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $35, Steerage, at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

The White Glycerine--The Sharon Bouquet — Palm Oil Bath Soap—Oatmeal Skin Soap, and The Baby's Own Soap.
MADE BY
THE ALBERT TOILET SOAP CO.'Y
ARE UNSURPASSED FOR PURITY & EXCELLENCE.
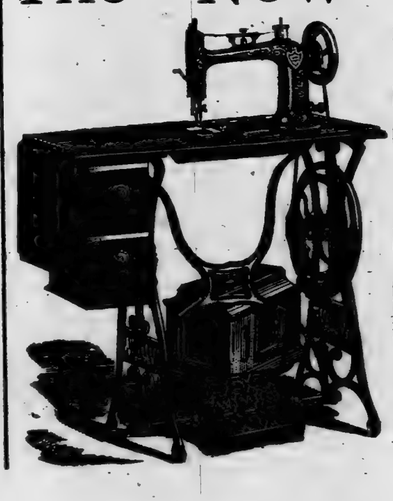
Sold by all leading druggists.



GURNEYS & WARE,

STANDARD SCALES.
THE BEST,
THE STRONGEST,
THE MOST RELIABLE.
Unrivalled in material, construction and finish, perfect in accuracy and unequalled in durability. Guaranteed to give entire satisfaction.
THEY EXCEL ALL OTHERS.
RAILROAD, WAREHOUSE AND MILL TRUCKS
Mills' Alarm Money Drawers.
SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST.
GURNEYS & WARE,
HAMILTON, ONT.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.,
MANUFACTURERS OF
Finest Electro Gold and Silver Plate,
New York, Meriden (Ct.), Chicago, San Francisco, London, (Eng.).
BRANCH FACTORY—Cor. Cannon and Wellington Streets, Hamilton, Ont.
TRADE MERIDEN B'T'A CO. MARK
Many purchasers having through a similarity of names purchased other wares under the impression that they were of our manufacture, we are compelled to ask special attention to the above TRADE MARKS. The fact that our name and Trade Marks are being so closely imitated should be a sufficient guarantee to the public that our wares are the BEST IN THE WORLD.
TRADE
1847 Rogers Bros. A1.
MARK.

The New Williams

High Arm Machine is now recognised as the
Sewing Machine of the Period.
It is Light and Easy to run!
Silent and Rapid movement,
Plain and Simple to learn!
It is strong, durable, and well built, of the very best material that money can buy or skill produce.
It was awarded five medals and three first prizes at the Dominion Exhibition last October. It is rapidly superseding all the old fashioned makes everywhere. See it, try it, buy it, and make sure that you get it.
THE WILLIAMS' MFG CO.
1738 Notre Dame St., Montreal, and 6[illegible] St., West, Toronto.

The Standard.

MARKDALE SEPT. 4, 1884.

NINE YEARS OLD.

Four years have come and gone since we launched our bark on the sea of public journalism. The paper was five years established when it came into our hands, hence it is now a "nine year old."

We have had our share of the numerous perplexities common to the lot of country editors yet we have not been overcome by despondency, but rather feel encouraged by the measure of success which has attended our labors. We do not pretend to compete with the city weeklies either in political strife or foreign news; but we shall continue to fill the colums of the STANDARD with interesting local and district news such as our readers cannot find in the city papers, and which ought to be of more interest than that from a distance. We are more than convinced that the STANDARD as a non-political paper, is what the public are after. It is an old saying that "the proof of the pudding is in the eating thereof."

And we are fully satisfied to accept the proof received during past years in a patronage far exceeding our expectations. We are now in the midst of a "boom" in regard to the circulation of the STANDARD, which if continued another two months equal to the past we will be under the necessity of substituting a power press for the hand press now in use; we only trust it shall be so, and we can assure our patrons that they will share the benefits of a still further improvement in the STANDARD. Should this change take place, it would incur an outlay of about $1,000, and it will be necessary for all who are in arrears to square their indebtedness, and we know it will not be a difficult task: now just try, pay up to date and a year in advance, and see if the paper will not appear more interesting than ever. Hoping our many agricultural friends may secure an abundant harvest and realize a good market price for the same we remain your humble servant, the Editor.

THE LATE TRAGEDY.

The general topic of conversation, the past ten days, through the whole district has been the late tragedy. Various false and erronious reports have been circulated, some of which have found their way into public print, and as we have taken pains in finding correct particulars in regard to the same we will endeavor to give the facts. One report, to the effect that M. Norris had sent Miss Ford a sealed letter the morning of the sad event, and that said letter contained a proposal of marriage, giving her until 10:30 intermission to decide. Now, there is no truth whatever in said report, as no such letter was either sent by Norris, or received by Miss Ford.

During the morning session Norris handed to Miss Ford, in her department, a large sheet of paper, containing an outline of what the senior class in her department were to give special attention to in their studies between that date and Christmas, in view of their promotion to a higher department; this, it is supposed, gave rise to the report of a sealed letter. Then it is commonly believed, having appeared in most of the newspaper reports that (after Miss Ford had received one shot and endeavored to hide partially under a desk for protection) Norris took hold of her with one hand, dragging her from under the desk, etc. This is also without foundation, as he never laid a hand on her in any shape or form during the whole affair.

The young lady was fully conscious throughout, and, since 24 hours after the sad occurrence, has been quite communicative. We have been enabled to get the facts from herself, so that this report is not second-handed.

We are glad to be able to say that Miss Ford has continued to improve, resting well and sleeping peacefully during nights. Several pieces of bone were taken from her finger, and also a piece of lead. The finger will be partially stiff.

Miss Ford, we understand, was carefully driven to her home (a distance of about half a mile from Markdale) in a covered carriage, last Monday afternoon. We feel pleased to note that she arrived safely home, and is recovering as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

BASE-BALL.

On Tuesday last a return match was played between the Flesherton and Dundalk clubs, on the grounds of the former. Ball should have been pitched at 2 p. m. sharp, but owing to a delay in the railway train, two of the "Atlantic" club, of Toronto, who were employed for the occasion, delayed the "pitching of the ball" till half-past three. The toss sent Flesherton to the bat. Watt and Belford made one each, but it was evident Flesherton had "old hands" to compete with; and when we compared the tithe, youthful physique of the Fleshertonians with that of their adversaries, had we been a betting man, three to one would have been our venture.

Dundalk took bat and made one successful run, but on the second and third. were caught by Ruston and Bulmer, respectively.—1 run.

Flesherton took bat, and Clarke, on a neat stroke, was run out. H. Bull, on the fourth run, made good time, but rather risky for a less able dodger. —2 runs.

Dundalk.—Hanbury made good his third base at a single run. P. Langley made a similar success, and the innings ended with 2 runs.

Flesherton took bat to the striking of W. Campaigne, who was not in training, but a substitute for Mr McDowell, the best player of the club, who was invalided by a painful malady in one eye; but, altho' Will. was out of training, he proved himself an efficient striker and fielder; and altho' the fielding of the Dundalkers was keen, Will's agility was more than a match for them.—1 run.

Dundalk took bat, and several good runs made, when D. Langley was caught by Hannah; a ball struck by Glazier was caught at long-field by Hannah. A ball from Rundle was cleverly caught by Campaign, who "Stumped" third bace, ending this innings with a score of 6 to the credit of Dundalk.

Flesherton sent Ruskin as its first representative, who made a successful run, followed by A. R. Hannah. G. Bulmer made a neat hit, but was caught "on fly."—2 runs.

Dundalk was represented by J. D. Morgan, who made a herculean hit, and throughout the game distinguished himself by good, cautious, play. Hanbury and Langley went on the three strike rule. Rundle and Glazier made brilliant runs, but Hanbury was caught "on the fly" by H. Bull, at 4 runs.

Flesherton seemed to "waken up" at this point. and sent Rutherford to bat, who took an easy run. Bull went out "on fly"; Ruskin made his third base at one run; while R. J. Hannah made a successful run to second base; but the failure of Watt in reaching first base, ended the innings.—2 runs.

Dundalk sent Langley to bat, but was "run out" on third base. Glazier was caught by Rutherford. Morgan made an excellent hit in this innings, which cleared all the bases. Barber was caught "on fly," which ended this innings.—8 runs.

Flesherton took bat to the hitting of J. Bulmer, who was caught "on fly." Geo. Bull made a good hit and a successful run. H. Bull was equally vigorous, when H. Clarke sent a ball across the field, and immediately followed by H. Bull, which cleared every base. Ruskin took bat, and made his third base in an easy run; but the most successful "hit" of the day was made by R. J. Hannah, who ran the entire bases in an easy trot. G. Bull was caught "on fly," ending the innings with 7 runs.

Dundalk took bat to the striking of Finnerty, who was caught on second base, and Dean was caught by Watt, which terminated the innings with a credit to Dundalk of an 0.

Flesherton had apparently awoke from its slumbers, and the scientific agility displayed on both sides was pleasing to any appreciative beholder Watt proved himself "a successful dodger."—3 runs.

Dundalk lost her three first men in less time than it takes the writer to pen it, and the innings closed with an 0, from the "fly catches" of Hannah and Watt's.

In the two succeeding innings little may be said. The usual "fouls," etc., were indulged in, and altho' the game was not carried out to termination, it is to be hoped all "rulings" of the umpire will be extinguished in the ocean of oblivion.

McGregor's Speedy Cure.

Every purchaser of common sense business capacity, when requiring an article for a certain purpose, purchases only that which has been tried or is allowed first to test before buying. You are allowed a free trial bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure, the great remedy for Dyspepsia, Impure Blood and Liver Disorders at Hill Bro's. Sold at 50 cents and $1 per bottle. See testimonials from persons in your own town. A.&S. 6

MARKDALE SCHOOL.

The trustees of Markdale school have engaged Mr. Frank Porter, of Peel Co., as head teacher. Mr. P. holds a second-class A certificate, has taught two years and has since taken a course in the Toronto Normal School. Miss Ford's sister takes her place in the meantime, while Miss Lyons takes her accustomed position over the junior department.

Mr. Porter was accompanied by Mr. Thos. Hill, trustee, Mr. Dunbar, a former teacher and the editor of the STANDARD. After a few brief remarks by each to the school, the various teachers commenced their duties, there being an average attendance.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the Standard.

Flesherton Sept. 3rd 1884.

DEAR SIR,—A base-ball match was played here yesterday between the Dundalk and Flesherton clubs. The game was keenly contested favorable in the beginning to Dundalk club. At the close the Flesherton boys played well giving Dundalk three (3) straight whitewashes, but owing to a repeated attempt at cheating on the part of Dundalk club, the game was broken up on the 8th innings leaving Dundalk ahead, being 25 to 18 the general opinion of those present were that Flesherton would have come out best had the game been finished. Advantages were two (2) men from Toronto and a partial umpire who appeared determined that Dundalk should win.

Yours,
M.

Intemperance, a Prevalent, Deceitful, Loathsome, and Destructive Vice.

To the Editor of the STANDARD,

Pro. xx., 1—Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. Chap. xxiii, 21—The drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty. 29—Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath redness of eyes? who hath contentions? who hath bablings? They that tarry long at the wine, they that go to seek mixed wine. 34—Yea, thou shalt be as he that lieth down in the midst of the sea, or he that lieth upon the top of a mast. 35—They have stricken me, shalt thou say, and I was not sick; they have beaten me, but I felt it not; when shall I awake, I will seek it yet again. Isa. xxviii, 7—They also have erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way; the Priest and the Prophet have erred through strong drink; they are swallowed up of wine; they are out of the way through strong drink; they err in vision; they stumble in judgment. 8—For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean. Chap. lvi, 12—Come, say they, I will fetch wine and we will fill ourselves with strong drink. Dan. v, 1—Belshazzar the King made a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before the thousand. 4—They drank wine and praised the gods of gold and of silver. Hos. iv, 11—Whoredom and wine take away the heart.

INTEMPERANCE FORBIDDEN.

St. xxi, 20—They shall say unto the Elders of his city: This our son is stubborn and rebellious; he will not obey our voice; he is a glutten and a drunkard. 21—And all the men of the city shall stone him with stones, that he die; so shalt thou put away evil from amongst you, and all Israel shall hear and fear. Pro. xxiii, 30—Be not among wine bibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh. 31—Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. 32—At last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder. Isa. v, 11—Wo unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink, and continue until night, till wine inflame them. 12—And the harp and the viol, the tabrot, and pipe and wine are in their feasts. 22—Wo unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle with strong drink. Chap. xxviii, 1—Wo to the crown of pride to the drunkards of Ephraim whose glorious beauty is a fading flower, which are on the head of the fat valleys of them that are overcome with wine. Rom. xiii, 13—Let us walk honestly as in the day, not in rioting and drunkness. Etc. 1st Cor. vi, 10—Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revelers, nor Extortioners shall inherit the Kingdom of God. Gal. v, 21—Envyings, murders, drunkness, revelings, and such like, of which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the Kingdom of God. Eph. v, 18—And be not drunk with wine wherein is excess, but be ye filled with the spirit.

THE LIQUOR SELLER VIRTUALLY AND EXPLICITLY CONDEMNED.

Gen. xli, 9—And the Lord said unto Cain, where is Abel? thy brother, and he said, I know not. Am I my brother's keeper. 10—And he said what has thou done, the voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground, and now art thou cursed from the earth which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from the earth. Det. xxxii, 33—Their wine is the poison dragons, and the cruel vinom of asps. 34—Is not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my treasures. 35—To me belongeth vengence and recompence; their foot shall slide in due time, for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that come upon them make haste. Hab. xxi, 9—Wo unto him that giveth his neighbor drink that puttest thy bottle to him and makest him drunken, also that thou mayest look on his nakedness. John iii, 19—This is the condemnation that light is come into the world, and men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil. Luke i, 15—He, John shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink. Rom. xiv, 21—It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine, or anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended or is made weak.

Several other passages might be quoted, but we think the above is sufficient.

P. S.

Personals.

Mr. Dunbar, a former head teacher of Markdale school, spent a few days in the village, he is now teaching in Derby township.

Mr. C. H. Buchanan, of the Hamilton Times, called on us, while we were out, last week. We regret not seeing him.

Mrs. T. Hall, of Dundalk, spent a few days last week in this village.

Miss Boomer left for Acton on Monday.

Mr. H. D. Irwin is able to be about again, his right arm is till a patient.

Mrs. E. Purvis left on Tuesday to visit friends at Smith's Falls.

Mrs. Waldie of Streetsville is visiting friends in this vicinity.

Mr. John Galbraith returned last week from Manitoba after a two years sojourn.

Miss M. Edge of Glenelg took the morning train on Monday to Attend the Normal School in Toronto, having received a Second A. at Walkerton examination recently.

Mr. F. McRae returned a week ago from Minnesota and Dakota. He gave us a call on Friday.

Miss McSurley, of Bowmanville, is visiting at Dr. Sproule's.

Dr. Airth was in town Monday prospecting for a field of practice.

C. W. Rutledge, editor, left on Tuesday to visit friends in Leeds and Carleton counties.

BIRTHS.

McLEOD—In Markdale, on the 2nd. of August, the wife of Wm. McLeod, shoemaker, of a daughter.

DEATHS.

McLEOD—In Markdale, on the 3rd. of August, the infant daughter of W. McLeod shoemaker.

VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE.

A splendid farm for sale two miles from the rising town of Markdale, an important station on the Toronto, Grey & Bruce division of the C. P. R. Being lots No. 108 2nd and 108 & 109 in 3rd range, West of T. & S. Road, Glenelg, Co. Grey, containing 180 acres. The farm is admirably adapted for grain or stock and especially for the latter, is watered by a beautiful never failing stream of spring water. There is 110 acres cleared and is in a good state of cultivation, well fenced with cedar rails, balance hardwood with sufficient cedar for fencing the place, also a comfortable house, with splendid well adjoining, good out buildings, young orchard bearing. This is a most desirable farm for stock raising. Title indisputable, for further particulars and terms apply to EDWARD BUTLEDGE, on the premises, Markdale P. O., or to STANDARD Office, Markdale. 200-4

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	90	00
Spring Wheat	0	00
Barley	0	00
Peas	0	00
Oat	0	00
Butter	0	00
Eggs	0	00
Potatoes	0	00
Hay	0	00
Pork	7	00
Flour	7	00
	4	75

VISITORS TO OWEN SOU

DON'T FAIL TO CALL AT

THE "BON MARCHE

THEY HAVE THE

LARGEST, BEST and CHEAPES

ASSORTMENT OF

CROCKERY

AND WILL SELL

Lower than the Toron Houses.

Look at This

A GOOD ENGLISH-MADE

SERGE SUI

(This is no Shoddy.)

BOYS' - - - FROM $4 00
YOUTHS' - - - " 6 00
MENS' - - - " 8 00

Everybody should look at the

Bon Marche

They sell everything at

ROCK BOTTOM PRICES.

B. ALLEN'S old sta

OWEN SOUND.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTE

The undersigned is manufacturing a cellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DES TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the la design and most approved pattern. H recommended by School Trustees and Te ers, for cheapness, comfort and compact wherever tried. An assortment of Farm School Bells kept always on hand. Send catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL

STEER ASTRAY.

LOT 90, Con. 2, West of Toronto Sydenham Road, Glenelg, red white spotted steer, with horns turned u year old. Any person giving satisfactory formation will be suitably rewarded. Addr

MARSHALL BAIRD,

205-207 Markdale P. O.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can prod kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS O

THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED

A share of public patronage respectfu solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

RUTLEDGE & TRELFORD.

181

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mill

Having made eqtensive improvements my Grist Mill I feel confident I can g good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAN

Chopping Done Every Day

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on th shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWA ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

AN ACROSTIC.

Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a man
If's true, Lardine's the best Oil
Nothing its equal, cast's aside toil
External its use, on every soil.

Use Lardine Machine Oil unexcelled for machinery, sold manufacturer, McColl Bros. Toronto.

WALTHAM,

ELGIN SWISS

WATCHES.

LARGE STOCK OF CLOC
Quadruple Plated Ware,
Wedding Rings, 18
RINGS,
CHAINS,
SEAL
Lazzarus & Morris and B
Specks, good Violin Strin
Musical Instruments.
Careful and accurate repa
ing personally attended to a
fully warranted.
Square Dealing. - Fair Pric

W. A. BROWN.

MARKDALE.

Local and Other Items

NOTICES in these columns intended to be by individual or Society will be charged ents a line for the first insertion and ents a line each subsequent insertion.

Dye Stuffs at the Medical Hall. urner & Co.

THE long stairs at Eugenia to t ot of the falls was destroyed by fi ast week.

ANOTHER case of long clear bac st to hand at J. R. Trimble's.

School Books.—And Stationa the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

MR. THOS. MATHEWS, harness mak e removed four doors north of t ecent stand on Mill st.

A GOOD factory cotton at J. rimble's for 3½ cents per yard.

National Pills the favorite purgative an ti-bilious medicine, they are mild an horough.

MEN's and boy's NEW HATS soft an iff, latest styles, at M. Richardson's

MR. H. BONNELL and Mr. R. Clar WaltersFalls will accept thanks fo indness, which we highly appreciate hile in their village last week.

WHITE and colored canton flannels much used now, in all shades ver heap at M. Richardson's.

PAIN from indigestion or sick hea che is instantly relieved by one dos Rejuvinator Bitters, made fro oots and herbs. Sold by Smith, th arber.

MOTTO. PHOTO, and picture frame elling out at a great discount for on onth at the photo gallery, Markdale

The magical power over pain t at Hagyard' ellow Oil possesses, outrivals the marvel ancient times. It acts in a natural manne subdue inflammation; cures Rheumatism roup, Deafness, Sore Throat, and painfu injuries.

MR. E. E. KNOTT visited his old ome in Euphrasia recently, he has old the old homestead, Springfield arm, 4th con. for $16,500.

J. R. TRIMBLE has received this eek, a choice lot of Mantle cloths new patterns; extra value.

SEVEN GRADES of Waltham move ents in stock this week, with 3 and oz. coin cases to fit. Prices educed. W. A. Brown, Markdale.

ARE you a subscriber to the STAND and would like to send the paper a friend, if so we will forward the balance of the year to any ddress free of postage for 25 cents.

J. R. TRIMBLE's Fall stock is now early complete in every department; nd for variety, style, and cheapness annot be surpassed.

NEW TIN SHOP.—Mr. W. R. Wal er has opened a new stove and tin epot in the premises recently occupied y Mr. Thos. Mathews. Mr. W. is ow opening up his stock. Give him call.

M. RICHARDSON, Flesherton, for he newest styles and the lowest prices Takes the lead in ready made clothing. large stock now opened to chose MARKDALE senior base-ball club in ends playing a match game with the Flesherton team to-morrow (Friday). o the home club we would suggest. make every run count one, and come back with a sweeping majority.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	90 cts to 91
Spring Wheat	0 00 to 1
Barley	0 00 to 0
Peas	0 00 to 0
Oat	0 00 to 0
Butter	15 to
Eggs	13 to
Potatoes	50 to
Hay	7 00 to 0
Pork	7 00 to 7
Flour	4 75 to 5

VISITORS TO OWEN SOU

DON'T FAIL TO CALL AT

THE "BON MARCHE

THEY HAVE THE

LARGEST,
BEST and CHEAPES

ASSORTMENT OF

CROCKERY

AND WILL SELL

Lower than the Toront Houses.

Look at This

A GOOD ENGLISH-MADE

SERGE SUI

(This is no Shoddy,)

BOYS' - - - FROM $4 0
YOUTHS' - - " 6 0
MENS' - - - " 8 0

Everybody should look i at the

Bon Marche

They sell everything at ROCK BOTTOM PRICES.

ALLEN'S old sta

OWEN SOUND

SCHOOL TRUSTE

Undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

including SCHOOL SEATS and DES TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the la and most approved pattern. Hig recommended by School Trustees and Te Cheapness, comfort and compactn ever tried. An assortment of Farm Bells kept always on hand. Send ice to Chatsworth P. O.

ANDREW McGILL

STEER ASTRAY.

Lot 30, Con. 2, West of Toronto Gardenham Road, Glenelg, red s spotted steer, with horns turned up Any person giving satisfactory n will be suitably rewarded. Addr

MARSHALL BAIRD,
Markdale P. O.

Butcher Shop.

Best meats the country can prod and and

SHIPPED TO ALL PARTS O TOWN WHERE ORDERED

Thanks of public patronage respectfu Over the stand in McNea's block.

CUTLEDGE & TRELFORD.

EUGENIA

Saw and Lath Mill

Having made extensive improvements will I feel confident I can gi satisfaction.

YOUR ALWAYS ON HAN

Planing Done Every Day

Sawing and Bills Filled on th short notice.

LATH AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Butternut, White Ash, Black As Pine and Hemlock Logs wante

M. AKITT, Eugenia.

AN ACROSTIC.

Wish to a good old age
Should be wise as a sage
Should all you can
Don't dispel, like a man
Virtue, Lardine's the best Oil
Having its equal, cast's aside tri
Journal its use, on every soil

Lardine Machine Oil unexcelled for Oil manufacturer, McColl Bros.

WALTHAM,

ELGIN, SWISS

WATCHES.

LARGE STOCK OF CLOCKS,

Quadruple Plated Ware,

Wedding Rings, 18 k.,

RINGS,
CHAINS,
SEALS,

Lazzarus & Morris and Boss Specks, good Violin Strings, Musical Instruments.

Careful and accurate repairing personally attended to and fully warranted.

Square Dealing. - Fair Prices.

W. A. BROWN.

MARKDALE.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

Dye Stuffs at the Medical Hall. A Turner & Co.

The long stairs at Eugenia to the foot of the falls was destroyed by fire last week.

Another case of long clear bacon just to hand at J. R. Trimble's.

School Books.—And Stationary at the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

Mr. Thos. Mathews, harness maker has removed four doors north of his recent stand on Mill st.

A good factory cotton at J. R. Trimble's for 3½ cents per yard.

National Pills the favorite purgative and anti-bilious medicine, they are mild and thorough.

Men's and boy's new hats soft and stiff, latest styles, at M. Richardson's.

Mr. H. Bonnell and Mr. R. Clark of WaltersFalls will accept thanks for kindness, which we highly appreciate, while in their village last week.

White and colored canton flannels, so much used now, in all shades very cheap at M. Richardson's.

Pain from indigestion or sick head ache is instantly relieved by one dose of Rejuvinator Bitters, made from roots and herbs. Sold by Smith, the barber.

Motto. Photo, and picture frames selling out at a great discount for one month at the photo gallery, Markdale.

The magical power over pain that Hagyard's Yellow Oil possesses, outrivals the marvels of ancient times. It acts in a natural manner to subdue inflammation; cures Rheumatism, Croup, Deafness, Sore Throat, and painful injuries.

Mr. E. E. Knott visited his old home in Euphrasia recently, he has sold the old homestead, Springfield farm, 4th con. for $16,500.

J. R. Trimble has received this week, a choice lot of Mantle cloths in new patterns; extra value.

Seven grades of Waltham movements in stock this week, with 3 and 8 oz. coin cases to fit. Prices reduced. W. A. Brown, Markdale.

Are you a subscriber to the Standard and would like to send the paper to a friend, if so we will forward the balance of the year to any address free of postage for 25 cents.

J. R. Trimble's Fall stock is now nearly complete in every department; and for variety, style, and cheapness cannot be surpassed.

New Tin Shop.—Mr. W. R. Walker has opened a new stove and tin shop in the premises recently occupied by Mr. Thos. Mathews. Mr. W. is busy opening up his stock. Give him a call.

M. Richardson, Flesherton, for the newest styles and the lowest prices takes the lead in ready made clothing. A large stock now opened to chose from.

Markdale senior base-ball club intends playing a match game with the Flesherton team to-morrow (Friday). To the home club we would suggest, make every run count one, and come back with a sweeping majority.

Ladies! don't fail to see M. Richardson's choice and large stock of new, plain and fancy dress goods in the newest designs, now open for inspection.

The Weekly Globe.—We are now prepared to take subscriptions for the Weekly Globe for balance of this year and all of 1885 for $1. The cash must accompany the order. Hand them in to this office at once and get four months free.

Another lot of that famous Japan tea, 50 cents per lb., worth 70, at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

If you should be so unfortunate as to Burn Scald or Wound yourself in any way the proper thing to keep clean and heal it is McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Insist on having, and be sure you get, McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Price 25 cents. Hill Bro's. has the genuine. J. & J. 2

Cattle Fair.—Saturday next, the 6th, is fair day in Markdale, and we expect a large number of cattle out. Scott Bros. of Owen Sound will attend, and they inform us that they want all the heavy cattle they can get. Other outside buyers are also expected.

Why Jennie.—Would you believe it! You can get Factory Cotton for 4 cents a yard at the "Bon Marche," Owen Sound. They sell everything at rock bottom prices.

To the Ladies.—Miss Wilson, of Thornbury, wishes to inform the ladies of Markdale and surrounding country that she is now prepared to do all kinds of dress-making in the latest style. Shop next door to T. Mathews' residence, Mill st.

Well Mother.—I am sure no one need be afraid to by at the "Bon Marche," Owen Sound. Just listen. They will refund the money for any article not approved of, if returned within seven days, neither soiled nor worn. No credit.

Our Little Ones for September is as bright and attractive as ever. For beauty and variety of illustrations and interesting and attractive reading matter, it stands unsurpassed as a magazine for children. $1.50 a year. Russell Publishing Co., Boston, Mass.

Oh Mary.—Call and get me a Spool of Cotton from the "Bon Marche," Owen Sound. It is only 3 cents. They keep all makes. The cheapest store in town. Needles 2 cents a packet.

The readers of the Standard may look for something spicy in the way of editorials. The junior editor being freed from the thraldom of the task-master, will be able to surprise the reading public with some of his wit, which he has been too modest to give while under the eye of his senior.

Parents should not forget that $4 will buy a suit for Boys—$6 for Youths and $8 for men. This is not hoddy but good English Serge. Come and inspect them at the "Bon Marche," B. Allens old stand Owen Sound.

Improved roads.—There is a greater improvement in the road from Markdale to Walter's Falls, being the townline between Euphrasia and Holland, than any road we have travelled. It speaks well for the farmers in that district and shows that they expend labor on the road, not merely time while performing their statute labor.

Sherman's New York Comedy Aggregation, "Mated & Mismated," "Blue & Red," plays in the Oranga Hall, Markdale, on Friday, the 12th inst. Don't miss it; it will be grand. We are informed that it is conducted on strictly moral principles; so bring along your lady friends.

We are glad to inform the many readers of the Standard that a brass band is about to be organized in Markdale. We are informed that a petition is being gotten out, and will be presented to the citizens of our town and vicinity in a day or two. Subscribe liberally towards the band fund and secure for yourselves an occasional evening's enjoyment in the park, or on the market-square.

Magistrates Court.—On Monday last two young men, James Frame and John Whitmore, were brought up before the Mayor on a charge of being concerned in disorderly conduct, and breaking windows on the previous Thursday evening. They pleaded guilty and were fined $5 and costs each or 20 days in gaol. Warrants are out against two more, Joseph Parrot and Albert Eva, who have left town, on the same charge.—Grey Review.

Canadian Pacific Railway

(ONTARIO DIVISION.)

Change of Time.

COM'CING MONDAY AUG. 11, '84

Toronto, Grey and Bruce Division.

TORONTO—Depart 9:40 a. m., 5:00 p. m.
" Arrive 1:00 p. m., 10:30 "

Note—Mixed train leaves Parkdale 8:15 a.m.

Credit Valley Division.

Toronto, depart 7:10 a.m, 1:05 p.m, 4:50 p.m
" arrive 9:30 " 3:45 " 7:00 "

Note—Mixed train leaves Parkdale 1 a. m.

D. McNICOL, Gen. Pass. Agt. W. WHYTE. General Manager.

MARKDALE STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE AS FOLLOWS:

GOING SOUTH.—	Express	9:10	a. m.
" "	Mixed	10:05	"
" "	Mail	6:07	p. m.
GOING NORTH.—	Mail	2:00	p. m.
" "	Mixed	4:26	"
" "	Express	9:19	"

J. CÆSAR, Agent.

MARKDALE

HARNESS EMPORIUM

ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

SEEDS SEEDS

—IMPORTED—

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,

Drugstore, - DURHAM.

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT.

And therefore has supplied a want long felt,

COFFINS,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

INVALUABLE TO EVERY LADY!

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworm, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness; imparting a perfectly healthy, natural and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price, $1. When ordering mention this paper

Address all letters to the MAY DEW AGENCY, 167 Church Street, Toronto, Ont. Parlor and Reception Room for Ladies.

Trade Mark.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble

And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

The Canadian Mutual Aid Association.

INCORPORATED AUGUST 20TH, 1880.

HEAD OFFICE, - - TORONTO.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

Wm. Rennie, Esq., Toronto, President; A. Gifford, Esq., Meaford, Vice-President;
E. H. Hilborn, Esq., Uxbridge, Treasurer; W. Pemberton Page, Esq., Toronto, Sec'y;
G. H. Watson, L.L.B., Toronto, Solicitor; R. H. Robertson, M.D., Toronto, Med. D'tr;
C. H. Mackintosh, M.P., Ottawa; Lewis Wigle, M.P.P., Leamington;
Thos. Menzies, Peterboro; J. P. Bull, Downsview;
Peter Graham, M.P.P., Warwick; S. W. Hill, Esq., Bidgeville, Memb. Supt.

The Directors have filed with the Hon. S. C. Wood, (Ex-Provincial Treasurer of Ontario), Trustee for the Association, Bonds to the amount of $60,000.00, as a guarantee for the honest carrying out of the terms of Certificates issued to members.

Reliable Aid to Families of Deceased Members at Small Cost.

The Association will do business on the following plan:

Applications.

All Applications for Membership shall be made upon printed forms furnished by the Association, (and applicants must pass a satisfactory medical examination). If accepted, a certificate will be issued within thirty days from date of such acceptance.

Membership.

The payment of TWELVE DOLLARS admits any of sound body and mind between the age of 18 and 60 years, to all the benefits of the Association. If the application is not accepted the money is promptly returned to the applicant.

Plan of Business.

The following table shows the amount for which Certificates of Membership will be issued, by the Association, according to age:

AGE.	Amount at Death	AGE.	Amount at Death
From 18 to 30	$3 000	From 45 to 46	$2 200
30 to 31	2 950	46 to 47	2 150
1 to 32	2 900	47 to 48	2 100
32 to 33	2 850	48 to 49	2 050
33 to 34	2 800	49 to 50	2 000
34 to 35	2 750	50 to 51	1 900
35 to 36	2 700	51 to 52	1 800
36 to 37	2 650	52 to 53	1 700
37 to 38	2 600	53 to 54	1 600
38 to 39	2 550	54 to 55	1 500
39 to 40	2 500	55 to 56	1 400
40 to 41	2 450	56 to 57	1 300
41 to 42	2 400	57 to 58	1 200
42 to 43	2 350	58 to 59	1 100
43 to 44	2 300	59 to 60	1 000
44 to 45	2 250

HALF RATE PLAN.

Certificates will be issued for half the above amounts should the applicant so desire.

Assessments.

An Assessment of One Dollar upon each member will be made in case of death or total disability of a member, except when there is money enough in surplus funds to pay said claim.

Special Features.

1—Great inducements to provide for families in case of death, at small cost.
2—Equal benefits to both sexes.
3—Uniform assessments of one dollar only.
4—Careful medical examination required.
5—No annual dues or extra charges.
6—No large salaries or expenses.
7—Two hundred dollars advanced for funeral expenses when necessary.
8—Benefits secured at actual cost.
9—Members becoming totally disabled, may draw half of their claims, the balance being payable at death.
10—Ladies accepted in this Association as well as men.

For particulars apply to S. W. HILL, Membership Superintendent, Bidgeville, or to W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Secretary, 37 King Street West, Toronto.

AGENT FOR MARKDALE, THOS. MANN.

Also Agent for Dominion Grange Mutual Fire Insurance Association.

A TASTE OF HONEY.

By Mary E. Wilkins.

The long, low, red painted cottage was raised above the level of the street on an embankment separated into two terraces. Steep stone steps led up the terraces. They were covered with green slimy moss, and little ferns and weeds sprung out of every crack. A walk of flat slate stones led from them to the front door, which was painted green, sagged on its hinges, and had a brass knocker on it.

The whole yard and the double banks were covered with a tall waving crop of red timothy and herds-grass and red and white clover. It was in the height of haying-time.

A grassy wheel track lay round the side of the house to the barn dashed with streaks of red paint.

Off to the left stretched some waving pasture-land, a garden patch marked by bean holes and glancing corn blades, and a long row of bee-hives showing in the midst of it.

A rusty open buggy and a lop-eared white horse stood in the drive opposite the side door of the house.

An elderly woman with a green cotton umbrella over her head sat in the buggy placidly waiting. She had a flattish black straw bonnet with purple strings, and wore a dull green silk shawl sprinkled with little bright palm leaves over her broad shoulders.

She had a large smiling face, crinkly gray hair, and quite a thick white beard cropped close on her double chin.

The side door stood open, and a young woman kept coming out, bringing pails and round wooden boxes, which she stowed away in the buggy, in back and under the seat. She was a little round-shouldered, her face with its thick, dull-colored complexion was like her mother's, just as pleasant and smiling, only with a suggestion of shrewd sense about it which the older's woman's did not have.

When the pails and boxes were all in the buggy, she locked the door, got in herself, and drove carefully out of the yard.

The road along which they proceeded lay between waving grain fields. The air was full of the rattle of mowing-machines this morning; nearly every field had its broad furrows where they had passed.

The old white horse jogged slowly along; the two women sat behind him in silence, the older one gazing about her with placid interest, the younger one apparently absorbed in her own thoughts. She was calculating how much her butter and eggs and berries would bring in Bolton, the large market town towards which they were travelling.

Every week Inez Morse and her mother drove there to sell the produce of their little farm. Her father had died three years before; ever since, the daughter had carried on the farm, hiring very little help. There was a six hundred dollar mortgage on it, which she was trying to pay up. It was slow work, though they saved every penny they could, and denied themselves even the fruit of their own land.

Inez had a mild joke about the honey which her bees made. She and her mother scarcely tasted it; it all went into the Bolton markets.

"I tell you what 'tis mother,' Inez used to say, "the day the mortgage is paid off we'll have warm biscuit and honey for supper."

Whenever her mother looked wistfully at the delicacies which they could not keep for their own enjoyment, Inez would tell her to never mind—by-and-by they would eat their own honey. The remark grew into a sort of household proverb for them.

The mother felt the privations much more keenly than the daughter. She was one of those women for whom these simple animal pleasures form a great part of life. She had not much resource in her mind. The payment of the mortgage did not afford her the keen delight in anticipation that it did Inez; she was hardly capable of it, though she would be pleased enough when the time came. Now she though more about eating the honey. However, she had never grumbled at any of her daughter's management. In her opinion, Inez always did about right.

When they reached Bolton, Inez drove about the village from house to house, selling her wares at the doors, while her mother sat in the buggy and held the horse. She had a good many regular costomers; her goods were always excellent, and gave satisfaction, though she had the name of being a trifle exacting in her bargains, and asking as much as she possibly could.

To day one of her customers in making change did not give her enough by a cent. Inez, when she discovered it, drove back a quarter of a mile to have the error rectified.

The woman looked amused and a trifle contemptuous when she asked her for the missing penny. Inez saw it. "You think it is queer that I came back for one cent," with slow dignity, "but cents are my dollars."

"Yes, I suppose so," assented the woman, hastily changing her expression.

Inez driving through Bolton streets, looks at the girls of her own age whom she met in their pretty street suits in grave feminine admiration. She had never had anything but the very barest necessaries in the way of clothes herself. Lately a vain desire had crept into her heart for a bright ribbon bow to wear at the throat, as some of those girls did. She never dreamed of gratifying the desire, but it remained. She thought of it so much that, before she knew, she mentioned it to her mother on her way home.

"Mother," said she, "a red ribbon bow with long ends like those girls wore would be pretty for me wouldn't it?"

Her mother stared at her in amazement. It did not sound like Inez. "Real pretty, child," she said. "I'd hev one ef I was you; you're young, an' you want sech things. I hed 'em when I was a girl."

"Oh no, mother," cried Inez, hastily. "Of course I never thought of such a thing really. I only spoke of it. We've got to wait till the morgage is paid to eat our honey, you know."

That evening after the mother and daughter had eaten their supper, and were sitting in the kitchen in the twilight, there came a knock at the door.

Inez answered it. Willy Linfield stood there.

"How do you do, Willy?" said she.

"Pretty well, thanky, Inez."

Then there was a pause. Inez stood looking gravely at the young man. She wondered what he wanted, and why he did not tell his errand.

"Nice evening," said he finally.

"Beautiful."

Then there was another pause. The young fellow stood on one foot, then on the other, and got red in the face.

Inez could not imagine why he did not tell her what he wanted. At last she grew desperate.

"Did your mother want to buy some eggs, Willy?" she asked.

"No-o," he faultered, looking rather taken aback. "I don't—she does—leastways she didn't say anything about it."

"Was it butter, then?"

"No—I guess not. I rather think she's got plenty."

Inez started at him in growing amazement—what did he want?

He was a fairly complexioned young man, and he looked as if the blood was fairly bursting through his face.

"Good-night, Inez," said he finally.

"Good-night, Willy," she responded. Then he walked off.

Inez went into the kitchen, entirely mystified. She told her mother about it. "What do you suppose he wanted?" asked she.

Mrs. Morse was an obtuse woman, but Inez's father had come courting her in bygone days. She caught the clew to the mystery quicker than her daughter.

"Why, I guess he comes to see you Inez, most likely."

"Come to see me! Why, what for?"

"Why, 'cause he wanted to. Why does any feller go to see a girl?"

It was Inez turn to color then. "I never thought of such a thing as that," said she. "I don't believe it, mother."

"He did, sure's preachin'."

"I never thought of asking him to come in. I guess you are mistaken, mother. Nobody ever came to see me so."

Inez kept thinking about it uneasily. It was a new uneasiness for her.

The next day she met Willy Linfield in the village store. She stepped up to him at once.

"Willy," said she, "I didn't ask you to come in last night, and I thought p'raps, afterward, I'd ought to. I never thought of your wanting to come in. I supposed you'd come on an errand."

The young fellow had looked stiff and offended when she first approached him, but it was impossible to doubt her honest apology.

"Well, I kinder thought of making a little call on you, Inez," he owned, coloring.

"I'm very sorry, then; but no young man ever came to see me before, and I never thought of such a thing."

She looked into his face pleasantly. He gained courage. "Say, Inez," said he, "the bell-ringers are going to perform in the hall to-morrow night. Would you like to go with me?"

"Yes, I'd like to. Thank you, Willy."

Inez was not easily perturbed, but she went home now in a flutter. Such a thing as this had never happened to her before. Young men had never much partiality for her. Now she was exceedingly pleased. She had never realized that she cared, because she had not had the experience of other girls; but now her girlish instincts awoke. She really had a good deal of her mother's simplicity about her, though it was redeemed by native shrewdness.

Now she began to revolve in her mind again the project of the red ribbon. She did want it so much, but she felt as if it was such a dreadful extravagance. At last she decided to get it. She actually looked pale and scared when she stood at the counter in the little millinery shop buying it.

She went home with it feeling a guilty delight, and showed it to her mother, and told her of Willy Lindfield's invitation. She had not before. This was the afternoon of the concert day.

"My!" said her mother, elated, "you've got a beau, Inez, as sure as preachin', an' the red ribbon's beautiful."

Inez could not rid herself of the guilty feeling, however. She gave her mother a piece of honey-comb for her supper. "It ain't fair for me to be buying ribbon out of the mortgage money, and mother have nothing,' said she to herself. "So she must have the honey, and that makes two things out."

But when Inez, with the crisp red bow at her throat, followed her escort awkardly through the lighted hall, and sat by his side listening to the crystal notes of the bell-ringers, the worry about the ribbon and the weight of the mortgage seemed to slip for a moment from her young, bowed shoulders. She hardly though of them, only to look at some other girls with ribbons, and to be glad she had one too. She was making a grasp for a few minutes at the girl-hood she had never had.

The concert was Wednesday. Saturday she and her mother drove to Bolton to sell their butter and eggs again. When they got home, Inez opened the parlor, which was never used, and swept and dusted it. It was a grand apartment to her and her mother. It had never been opened since her father's funeral. When she first unclosed the door to-day she seemed to see the long coffin in the middle of the floor, where it had rested then.

She shuddered a little. "Folks that have had troubles do see coffins afterward, even when they're happy, I suppose," muttered she to herself.

Then she went to work. There was a large mahogany bureau in one corner of the room; some flat-bottomed chairs stood stiffly around; there was an old-fashioned card-table, with Mrs. Hemans's poems and the best lamp in a bead lamp mat on it, between the two front windows. A narrow gilt-framed looking-glass hung over it.

Mrs. Morse heard Inez at work, and came in. "What air you doing on, Inez?" she asked, in wonder.

"I just thought I'd slick up here a little. Willy Linfield said—he might—drop in a while Sunday night." Inez did not look at her mother. Somehow she felt more ashamed before her than she would have before a smarter woman.

"My sakes, Inez, you don't say so! You have got a beau as sure as preachin'. Your father kept right on reg'lar, after we once sat up a Sunday night. You'll have to put a new wick in that lamp, Inez."

"I'll see to it mother," replied Inez, shortly. She was delighted herself, but see felt angry with her mother for showing so much elation; it seemed to cheapen her happiness.

Sunday, Inez went with her mother to church in the morning and afternoon. She went to Sabbath-school after the morning service too. She was in a class of girls of her own age. She had never felt, someway, as if she was in the least one of their kind. She never had the things they had, or did anything which they were accostomed to do. To-day she looked at them with a feeling of kinship. She was a girl too. Three or four of them had lovers. Inez eyed them, and thought how she had one too, and he was coming to night as well as theirs.

She had work to do Sunday as well as week-days. There were cows to milk and hens to feed. But she changed her dress after supper, and put on the new red ribbon bow. She picked a little nosegay of cinnamon roses out in the front yard (there were a few of these little dwarf roses half buried in the tall grass there), and arranged them in an old wine-glass on the parlor mantol. When she heard Willy's feet on the slate walk and his knock on the front door, her heart beat as it never had before.

"There's your beau, Inez!" cried her mother; "he's come!"

Inez was terribly afraid Willy would hear what her mother said: the windows were all open. She went to the door trembling, and asked him into the garnished parlor.

Mrs. Morse staid out in the kichen, The twilight deepened. She could hear the soft hum of voices in the parlor. "Inez is in there courtin'," said she. "Her father an' me used to court, but it's all over. There's something queer about everything."

Willy Linfield came many Sunday night after that. It got to be said all around that Willy Linfield was "going" with Inez Morse. Folks wondered why he fancied her. He was a pretty, rather dandified young fellow, and Inez was so plain in her ways. He looks ten years older than she, though she was about the same age.

One Monday afternoon she told her mother that Willy the night before had asked her to marry him. The two women sat at the kitchen windows resting. They had been washing and were just through. The kitchen floor was freshly scoured; everything looked damp and clean.

"You don't say so, Inez!" cried her mother, admiringly. "What did you tell him? Of course you'll have him; he's a real nice feller; an' I don't believe you'll get anybody else."

"I told him I'd have him if he'd wait three years for me to pay off the mortgage," replied Inez, quietly.

"Did he say he would?"

"Yes."

"It's a long time for a feller to wait," said her mother, shaking her head dubiously. "I'm afraid you'll lose him Inez."

"Then I'll lose him," said Inez. "I'm going to pay off the mortgage before I marry any man. Mother, look here," she went on, with a passion which was totally foreign to her, and showed how deeply she felt about the matter. "You know a little how I feel about that mortgage. You know how father felt about it."

"Yes, I know, Inez," said her mother, with a sob.

"Many's the time," Inez went on, "that father has talked about it to me over in the field there. He'd been trying all his life to get this place clear; he'd worked like a dog; we all worked and went without. But to save his life he couldn't pay it up within six hundred dollars. When the doctor told him he couldn't live many months longer, he fretted and fretted over it to me. I guess he always talked more about his troubles to me, mother, than he did to you."

"I guess he did, Inez."

"Finally I told him one day—it was when he was able to be about, just before he gave up; I was out in the garden picking peas, and he was there with his cane. 'Inez,' said he, 'I've got to die an' leave that mortgage unpaid, an' I've been workin' ever since I was a young man to do it.' 'Father,' says I, 'don't you worry. I'll pay up that mortgage.' 'You can't, Inez,' says he. 'Yes I will,' says I; 'I promise you father.' It seemed to cheer him up. He didn't fret so much about it to me afterwards, but he kept asking me if I shought I really could. I always said 'Yes.'

"Now, mother, if I marry Willy now, nobody knows what's going to be to hinder my keeping my promise to father. Willy 'ain't got anything laid up, and he ain't very strong. Besides, he got his mother and sister to do for. Hattie's just beginning to help herself a little, but she can't do much for her mother yet. Mrs. Linfield ain't able to work, and Willy's got to look out for her. Then I've got you. And there might be more still to do for in the course of two or three years; nobody knows. If I marry Willy now, I shall never pay off the mortgage that I promised poor father I would, and I ain't going to do it. It'll take just three years to pay it every cent; and then I'll marry him, if he's willing to wait. If the mortgage was just for me, I wouldn't care, though I don't think it would be very wiseanyway. But it's for father."

Mrs. Morse was crying. "I know you're jest right about the mortgage, Inez," she sobbed; "but you'll lose your beau as sure as preachin'."

Nevertheless, it seemed for a long time as if she would not. Willy kept faithful. He was a good sort of young fellow, and very fond of Inez, though he hardly entered into her feelings about the mortgage. There was at times a perfect agony of pity in her heart over her father. It made no difference to her that all his earthly troubles were over for him now. When she thought over how he had toiled and worried and denied himself for the sake of owning their little farm clear, and then had to die without seeing it accomplished, it seemed as if she could not bear it. The pitiful spectacle of her poor dull father working all his life for such a small aim in such small ways in vain haunted her.

During the next three years she strained every nerve. She denied herself even more than she had formerly. Sometimes she used to think her clothes were hardly fit for her to appear in beside Willy, he always looked so nice. But she thought he knew why she dressed so poorly, and would not mind. "It brings the time when we can eat our honey together," she said.

Willy was faithful for a long time; but the last six monts of the third year he began to drop off a little. Once and a while he would miss a Sunday night. Inez fretted over it a little; but she did not really think of doubting him, he had been constant to her so long. Besides, there was only one more payment to be made on the mortgage, and she was so jubilant over that that she was hopeful about everything else.

Still, it was not with an altogether light heart that she went to the lawyer's office one afternoon and made the last payment. She was not as happy as she anticipated. Willy had not been near her for three weeks now. She had not seen him even in church.

Still she went straight to his house from the lawyer's office; that had been the old laughing bargain between them. She was to go and tell him the good news; then he was to go home with her, and help eat the festive supper of warm biscuit and honey.

She walked right in at the side door, and entered the sitting-room. She was familar with the place. In the sitting room sat Willy's mother and sister. They both started when they saw her.

"Oh, mother, here she is!" cried Hattie, without speaking to Inez.

Inez's heart sank, but she tried to speak naturally.

"Where's Willy?" asked she. "He's home from the shop ain't he? I've made the last payment on the mortgage, and I've come to tell him."

The mother and daughter made no reply, but gazed at each other in silent distress.

"Oh, Inez!" cried Hattie at length, as if she had nothing else to say. "Come into the parlor a minute with me, Inez," she added, after a little.

Inez followed her trembling.

Hattie shut the door, and threw her arms around Inez. "Oh, Inez!" she cried again, and began weeping; "I don't know how to tell you. Willy has treated you awful mean. We've all talked to him, but it didn't do any good. Oh, Inez, I can't tell you! He's—gone over to West Dorset this afternoon—to get married? Oh, Inez!"

"Who is he going to marry?"

"Her name's Tower—Minnie Tower. Oh, Inez, we're so awful sorry! He hasn't known her long. We never dreamed of such a thing."

"Never mind," said Inez, quietly. "Don't take on so, Hattie. Perhaps its all for the best."

"Why, don't you care, Inez?"

There was a pitiful calm on Inez's dull face. "There's no use fretting over what can't be helped," said she. "I don't think Willy has acted bad. I made him wait a long time."

"That was the trouble, Inez."

"I couldn't help it. I should do it over again."

Inez took it so calmly that the other girl brightened. She had felt frightened and distressed over this, but she had not a very deep nature.

"Inez," said she, hesitatingly, when she made a motion to go, "they've got a room fixed upstairs, you know; would you like to see it? It looks real pretty."

Inez shuddered. This fine stab served to pierce the deepest, though she knew the girl meant all right.

"No, thank you, Hattie, I won't stop."

Inez was thankful when she got out in the air. She felt a little faint. She had to walk a mile before she reached home. Once she stopped and rested, sitting on a stone beside the road. She looked wearily around at the familiar landscape.

"The mortgage is paid," said she, "but I'll never eat my honey."

Her mother was watching at the kitchen window for her when she entered the yard.

"Is it paid, Inez?" asked she, eagerly, when the door opened.

"Every cent, mother," replied the daughter, kissing her—something she seldom did; she was not given to caresses.

"Where's your beau?" was the next question. "I thought you was going to bring him home."

"He ain't coming, mother. He's gone over to West Dorset to get married."

"Inez Morse, you don't mean to say so! You don't mean you've really lost your beau! Wa'al I told you you would."

Mrs. Morse sat down and began to cry.

Inez had taken her things off, and now she was getting out the moulding-board and some flour.

"Wat air you doin' on, Inez?"

"I'm making the warm biscuits for supper, mother, to eat with the honey."

"You ain't goin' to make warm biscuit when you've lost your beau?"

"I don't see how that need to cheat us out of our supper we've talked about all these years."

"I do declar', I don't believe you mind it a bit," said the poor simple mother, her sorrow for her daughter lighting up a little.

"I don't care so much but what I've got enough comfort left to live on, mother."

"Wa'al, I'm glad you can look at it so, Inez, but you air a queer girl."

The biscuit were as light as puffs. Inez's face was as cheerful as usual, when she and her mother sat down at the little table, with the biscuit and golden honey-comb in a clear glass dish between them. The mother looked placidly happy. She was delighted that Inez could "take it so."

But when she saw her help herself to the biscuit and honey, she said again: "You air a queer girl, Inez. I know the mortgage is paid, an' I only wish your poor father knew, an' here we sit eatin' the warm biscuit and honey. But I should think losin' your beau would take all the sweetness out of the honey."

The pleasant patience in Inez's face was more pathetic than tears. "I guess there's a good many folks find it the same way with their honey in this world," says she. "Tomorrow, if it's pleasant, we'll drive to Boston, and get you a new dress, mother."

"Is This Hot Enough For You?"

In 1303 and 1304, according to a French periodical, the Rhine, Loire and Seine ran dry. In 1615 the heat throughout Europe became excessive. Scotland suffered particularly in 1625; men and beasts died in scores. The heat in several departments during the summer of 1705 was equal to that in a glass furnace. Meat could be cooked by merely exposing it to the sun. Not a soul dare venture out between noon and 4 p. m. In 1718 many shops had to close; the theatres never opened their doors for several months. Not a drop of water fell during six months. In 1773 the thermometer rose to 118 degrees. In 1779 the heat at Bologna was so great that a great number of people were stifled. There was not sufficient air for thair breath, and people had to take refuge under ground. In July, 1793, the heat became intolerable. Vegetables were burned up and fruit dried upon the trees. The furniture and woodwork in dwelling-houses cracked and split up; meat went bad in an hour. The rivers ran dry in several provinces during 1811; expedients had to be devised for the grinding of corn. In 1822 a protracted heat was accompanied by storms and earthquakes; during the drought legions of mice overran Lorraine and Alsace, committing incalculable damage. In 1832 the heat brought about cholera in France; 20,000 persons fell victims to the visitation in Paris alone. In 1846 the thermometer marked 125 degrees in the sun.

VARIED TOPICS.

A girl in Georgia, says the Elijay Courier, has drunk 300 bottles of laudanum during the past year. But there is no limit to the capabilities of Georgia girls in many directions.

On some of the sheep ranches in the Western territories there are as many as 300,000 sheep. Shearing begins in September, and October is a busy season. The sight of from 300 to 400 men at work, each clipping a sheep in a dexterous manner, is very animated.

It is reported from Berlin that Dr. Schweinfurth, the African traveller, has been charged by the Academy of Sciences of that city with a mission to Central Africa, and will shortly set out at the head of an expedition. German colonization projects are doubtless connected with Dr. Schweinfurth's plans.

The number of vessels totally lost on or near the coasts of Great Britain during the five years, 1877 82, was, according to the report of the Committee on Harbors, 2495, or an average of 497 per annum, with a loss of life equal to nearly 739 per annum. The return takes no account of missing ships.

Miss Mary Anderson's picture, "showing her classic oval face to perfection," had an enormous sale in England, making the fortune of the photographers to whom she has given sittings. One of the London newspapers says that the three most popular beauty plates rank, judging from the sales, as follows: First, the Princess of Wales; second, Miss Anderson, and third, Mrs. Langtry.

Herr Binder, the Austrian manager of the estate of Baron Hirsch at Bellova, who was carried off to the hills by brigands some time since, is reported still to be alive, but ill from fright. The robbers have sent a letter in Greek, which Herr Binder was compelled to sign, to Baron Hirsch's representative, demanding £4000 as his ransom. Negotiations have been opened with the brigands on this basis.

The disease known as "English cholera," which had broken out virulently in some parts of Lancashire, has been ascribed to the use of impure water. The unwonted hot weather had caused a scarcity of the supply, and the people, in their extremity, had recourse to impure springs. In Northampton, where there were numbers of persons affected, the sewers also had given off noxious exhalations for want of flushing.

The Rev. Charles E. B. Reed, Secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, recently met his death by falling over a precipice at Pontresina, at which place he was spending his summer vacation. The deceased was born in 1846, and was a graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge. His services to the Bible Society were greatly valued. He was an expert rower and was always fond of athletic exercises, and it was while engaged in mountain climbing that he lost his life.

The English governmental gun factories have finished about four hundred new steel guns for the re-armament of the smaller ships of the royal navy. More than one hundred and fifty of the new guns are of the six-inch class of breech-loaders, and seven-eighths of the whole are especially adapted to sea service. Larger guns for the heavier iron clads are also in course of construction, the new ordinance being of the type which combines all that is perfect in the best systems. It is believed that within a year or two all existing deficiencies in the armament of the British navy will be repaired.

Recent lectures on lace making, delivered by Mr. Allan Cole in various towns in Ireland at the request of the Schools of Art in Cork and Limerick, are said to have already borne fruit. Queen Victoria has given photographs of fine specimens of ancient lace from her collections for use in the convents and schools, showing the variety of patterns adopted and the mode of production during the best period of the art. Typical specimens from the South Kensington Museum have also been taken, and photographs furnished at low prices, and a plan for further improving the standard of design for Irish lace-making is under consideration.

Mr. Labouchere, who has a very sharp tongue and sometimes dips his pen in gall, did not score his usual victory recently in an incident which occurred in the House of Commons. He gravely asked the Under Secretary for the Home Department if it were true that Mr. W. H. Smith, M. P., had lost his watch at a Conservative meeting and whether steps would be taken to prevent such on occurence at similar gatherings. The inuendo conveyed by the question was so patent that "amidst roars of laughter" the member for Westminster replied the watch was not lost at the meeting, but outside the doors, among the friends of the questioner, who objected to Mr. Smith's going into the building.

Oriental Jugglers.

A set of gifted Oriental Jugglers are to treat the Londoners to the most astounding of the series of the "twenty-eight miracles" produced before Ichanguire, Emperor of Hindostan, as attested by that monarch and witnessed by Ibu Batula, the Mohammedan Marco Polo." They will cut a citizen in pieces and make him whole again; the Oriental mystic is also prepared to put into a pot on the stage the seed of any plant selected by a committee of the beholders. During the time it will take to repeat ten times a prayer to the Prophet the seed will shoot into stem, branch, and bud, and will burst into leaf and fruit. They also announce "the grand mystery." The company will take a chain fifty cubits long and will throw one end towards the sky, where it will remain as if fastened in the air. A dog will be led to the foot of the chain, when the animal will at once run up and disappear at the other end. A hog, a rat, a goat, and a young cow will be then sent up and disappear in the same way, after which the operator will draw down the chain and put it in a bag. It is to be hoped that these mystic Orientals will not return to their native retirement without giving us a taste of their quality and collecting a lot of dollars.

Didn't Want a Bite.

"I haven't had a bite for two days," plained a tramp.

"Is it possible?" answered the woman with sympathy. "I'll see what I can do for you. Here, Tige—Tige—"

The tramp broke a $2 gate getting away.

ROBBING JEWS IN RUSSI

A Graphic Account of the Recent Riots Recovered—The Barefoot

The Jewish question is yet far fr lved in Russia, says a New York respondent, and it is rather doubtf the Imperial Government is able bout friendly ralations between and He'brew subjects. According to as it stands Jews can only reside thirteen western provinces of Russ the exception that professional Je clanics, and others pursuing an i occupation are free to reside in any the country. If the law were obeyed by the Jews there would no Jewish riots in Russia, at least of the Jewish quarters. But the t that the Jews too often circumvent
It must be admitted also that the peasants being exasperated, are too take the law into their own hands, when there is plenty of combustible al, the lesar spark may cause a co tion.

The city of Nijuy-Novgorod is situ the Volga, hundreds of miles from t ish provinces. There dwelt in that out twenty Jewish families, of who one-half are said to have been tre against the laws. Some of them kep shops, pawn shops, and disreputable Almost all the Jews lived in one par town. The relations between the Je the Christians were not the best. H nobody feared any serious trouble evening when the workingmen were ing home, a rumor spread that a Ch girl, eighteen months old, was m
Soon a large crowd of people ga around the crying mother. Some c said that the child had been taken Jewess to the synagogue. A dreadf picion arose in the minds of the wo men. 'They want Christian blood!'
shouted. That was enough. The e crowd rushed in a body to the syna
They began to batter the door. A s of stones dashed in the windows. The was dropped out of a window aliv with a bleeding hand. But it was to The sight of the blood seemed to m
the crowd. With the shout, "Death Jews!' they thronged into the synagog a few minutes the house was nearly de ed, and four Jews—a man, a woman two children—were murdered. The hurried to the scene of the riot, but unable to stop it.

"Let us go for the other Jews," sh
the barefoot militia, as the poor, hon workmen are called here.

The Jewish houses were besieged, their inmates mobbed. A Hebrew mer from Moscow named Deitzelman was in one of those house. He has taken a tract to pave some of the streets of Novgorod. On the eve of the riot he rec
3,000 roubles to pay his employes.
in the hands of the rioters the poor old gave them all the money he had in house, and even promised to embrace C tianity. It was all in vain. He was nearly dead, and expired in a few h
Nine Jews were killed, and twelve seri wounded. The rest of the Jews found re in Christian houses.

Gov. Baranoff called in military
When the Cossacks and soldiers arrived
Jewish quarter presented a frightful sc
Fifth street was packed with the bare militia, shouting, breaking in houses, throwing furniture, and tearing to pi Jewish books and clothes. The crowd at once dispersed at the point of the bay et, and the rioters about 150 in num were arrested. It is said that the Chris child which was the cause of the riot, w playing with Jewish children fell and her hand, and that the Jewess who live
the house occupied by the synagogue, the child in order to stop the bleeding to dress the wound. The crowd either not know or did not believe this story.

As to the barefoot militia, it is becom a rather dangerous element among people. It is the product of the freed p antry. The land granted to the libera serfs is not sufficient for their supp
Therefore, many peasants, particul
those who are unmarried, leave their na places and go elsewhere to seek their tune. The large cities, when trade industry are lively, attract thousands them. They necessarily act as jacks of trades. One is deemed lucky if he g steady work for a month or two. Many them are daily engaged and daily discha
ed. How they prosper is best suggested their collective appellation. They are lled barefoot. They are a militia too, they work together, live together in h lodgings, and struggle together for t pitiful existence. A hot and daring h among them may do great mischief,

Women as Telephonists.

Three years ago the United Telephone Company began to employ women. "Chiefly for reasons of economy," we learn, but besides this there are other advantages. If a boy 14 years old is employed as a telephonist his voice will before long become hoarse and indistinct; with a girl this is not the case. The female voice is always clear and as a clear voice (besides a good ear) is one of the chief requirements of a telephonist, woman are naturally preferred. They are admitted at the age of 16, the majority of those at present employed by the United Telephone Company being between the ages of 16 and 22. From the number of two with whom the experiment was begun, they have risen to over a hundred, who perform their duties to the satisfaction of the company.

Preference is given to the daughters of professional men; this, however, is no strict rule. There are no preliminary examinations to be passed before admittance into the telephone office. The different ranks are the clerk in charge, who has the supervision of a room in which are employed from six to fifteen clerks; the deputy of the clerk in charge, the first and second class operator, and the learner. According to these ranks the payment varies; as a rule, however, 15s. to 16s. is the weekly pay, which sometimes rises to £1, and in rare cases to 25s. The hours of work are from 9 to 6 or 10 to 7 respectively. No case of illness has occurred on the staff since the commencement of the work; the general state of health is also satisfactory, and Mrs. Merlin, the lady superintendent of the whole staff, is of opinion that the girls are on an average well satisfied with their situation and fond of their work.

It is perhaps a disadvantage that telephonists have to talk all day long; but this every fault is said to prevent them from in

VARIED TOPICS.

A girl in Georgia, says the Ellijay Courier, drunk 300 bottles of laudanum during the past year. But there is no limit to the capabilities of Georgia girls in many directions.

On some of the sheep ranches in the western territories there are as many as ,000 sheep. Shearing begins in September, and October is a busy season. The sight of from 300 to 400 men at work, each clipping a sheep in a dexterous manner, is very animated.

It is reported from Berlin that Dr. Schweinfurth, the African traveller, has been charged by the Academy of Sciences of that city with a mission to Central Africa. He will shortly set out at the head of an expedition. German colonization projects are doubtless connected with Dr. Schweinfurth's plans.

The number of vessels totally lost on or near the coasts of Great Britain during the years, 1877 82, was, according to the report of the Committee on Harbors, 2485, an average of 497 per annum, with a loss of life equal to nearly 739 per annum. This return takes no account of missing ships.

Miss Mary Anderson's picture, "shewing her classic oval face to perfection," has had an enormous sale in England, making the fortune of one of the photographers to whom she has given sittings. One of the London newspapers says that the three most popular beauty plates rank, judging from the sales, as follows: First, the Princess of Wales; second, Miss Anderson, and third, Mrs. Langtry.

Herr Binder, the Austrian manager of the estate of Baron Hirsch at Bellova, who was carried off to the hills by brigands some time since, is reported still to be alive, but ill from fright. The robbers have sent a letter in Greek, which Herr Binder was compelled to sign, to Baron Hirsch's representative, demanding £4000 as his ransom. Negotiations have been opened with the brigands on this basis.

The disease known as "English cholera," which had broken out virulently in some parts of Lancashire, has been ascribed to the use of impure water. The unwonted hot weather had caused a scarcity of the supply, and the people, in their extremity, had resorted to impure springs. In Northampton, where there were numbers of persons affected, the sewers also had given off noxious exhalations for want of flushing.

The Rev. Charles E. B. Reed, Secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, who lately met his death by falling over a precipice at Pontresina, at which place he was spending his summer vacation. The deceased was born in 1846, and was a graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge. His services to the Bible Society were greatly valued. He was an expert rower and was very fond of athletic exercises, and it was while engaged in mountain climbing that he lost his life.

English governmental gun factories have finished about four hundred new steel guns for the re-armament of the smaller ships of the royal navy. More than one hundred of the new guns are of the six-inch breech-loaders, and seven-eighths of the whole are especially adapted to sea service. Larger guns for the heavier iron clads are in course of construction, the new ordnance being of the type which combines what is perfect in the best systems. It is believed that within a year or two all existing deficiencies in the armament of the navy will be repaired.

Recent lectures on lace making, delivered by Allan Cole in various towns in Ireland at the request of the Schools of art in Cork and Limerick, are said to have already borne fruit. Queen Victoria has given photographs of fine specimens of ancient lace from her collections for use in the convent schools, showing the variety of patterns and the mode of production during each period of the art. Typical specimens in the South Kensington Museum have been taken, and photographs furnished at low prices, and a plan for further raising the standard of design for Irish lace making is under consideration.

Labouchere, who has a very sharp pen and sometimes dips his pen in gall, ... ore his usual victory recently in ... nt which occurred in the House of ... He gravely asked the Under ... for the Home Department if it ... that Mr. W. H. Smith, M. P., ... is watch at a Conservative meeting ... whether steps would be taken to ... such an occurence at similar gatherings ... he inuendo conveyed by the question ... so patent that "amidst roars of ... the member for Westminster re... watch was not lost at the meeting ... the doors, among the friends of ... ner, who objected to Mr. Smith's ... the building.

Oriental Jugglers.

... gifted Oriental Jugglers are to ... Londoners to the most astounding ... es of the "twenty-eight miracles ... before Ichanguire, Emperor of ..., as attested by that monarch and ... by Ibu Batula, the Mohammedan ... o." They will cut a citizen in ... make him whole again; the Ori... ic is also prepared to put into a ... stage the seed of any plant se... committee of the beholders ... time it will take to repeat ten ... yer to the Prophet the seed will ... stem, branch, and bud, and will ... eaf and fruit. They also an... e grand mystery." The company ... chain fifty cubits long and will ... end towards the sky, where it ... as if fastened in the air. A ... led to the foot of the chain, when ... will at once run up and disappear ... r end. A hog, a rat, a goat, and ... will be then sent up and disap... same way, after which the ope... raw down the chain and put it ... It is to be hoped that these mys... will not return to their native ... without giving us a taste of their ... collecting a lot of dollars.

Didn't Want a Bite.

... t had a bite for two days," pleaded ...

... ossible!" answered the woman ... thy. "I'll see what I can do for ..., Tige—Tige—"

... p broke a $2 gate getting away.

MOBBING JEWS IN RUSSIA.

A Graphic Account of the Recent Riot in Nijny Novgorod—The Barefoot Militia.

The Jewish question is yet far from being solved in Russia, says a New York Sun correspondent, and it is rather doubtful whether the Imperial Government is able to bring about friendly relations between Christian and Hebrew subjects. According to the law as it stands Jews can only reside in the thirteen western provinces of Russia, with the exception that professional Jews, mechanics, and others pursuing an industrial occupation are free to reside in any part of the country. If the law were faithfully obeyed by the Jews there would be no anti-Jewish riots in Russia, at least outside of the Jewish quarters. But the trouble is that the Jews too often circumvent the law. It must be admitted also that the Russian peasants being exasperated, are too ready to take the law into their own hands. Now, when there is plenty of combustible material, the least spark may cause a conflagration.

The city of Nijuy-Novgorod is situated on the Volga, hundreds of miles from the Jewish provinces. There dwelt in that city about twenty Jewish families, of whom fully one-half are said to have been trespassers against the laws. Some of them kept vodka shops, pawn shops, and disreputable houses. Almost all the Jews lived in one part of the town. The relations between the Jews and the Christians were not the best. However, nobody feared any serious trouble. One evening when the workingmen were returning home, a rumor spread that a Christian girl, eighteen months old, was missing. Soon a large crowd of people gathered around the crying mother. Some children said that the child had been taken by a Jewess to the synagogue. A dreadful suspicion arose in the minds of the workingmen. 'They want Christian blood!" a voice shouted. That was enough. The enraged crowd rushed in a body to the synagogue. They began to batter the door. A shower of stones dashed in the windows. The child was dropped out of a window alive, but with a bleeding hand. But it was too late. The sight of the blood seemed to madden the crowd. With the shout, "Death to the Jews!" they thronged into the synagogue. In a few minutes the house was nearly destroyed, and four Jews—a man, a woman, and two children—were murdered. The police hurried to the scene of the riot, but were unable to stop it.

"Let us go for the other Jews," shouted the barefoot militia, as the poor, homeless workmen are called here.

The Jewish houses were besieged, and their inmates mobbed. A Hebrew merchant from Moscow named Deitzelman was found in one of those house. He has taken a contract to pave some of the streets of Nijuy Novgorod. On the eve of the riot he received 3,000 roubles to pay his employes. When in the hands of the rioters the poor old Jew gave them all the money he had in the house, and even promised to embrace Christianity. It was all in vain. He was left nearly dead, and expired in a few hours. Five Jews were killed, and twelve seriously wounded. The rest of the Jews found refuge in Christian houses.

Gov. Baranoff called in military aid. When the Cossacks and soldiers arrived the Jewish quarter presented a frightful scene. Fifth street was packed with the barefoot militia, shouting, breaking in houses, destroying furniture, and tearing to pieces Jewish books and clothes. The crowd was at once dispersed at the point of the bayonet, and the rioters about 150 in number were arrested. It is said that the Christian child which was the cause of the riot, while playing with Jewish children fell and cut her hand, and that the Jewess who lived in the house occupied by the synagogue, took the child in order to stop the bleeding and to dress the wound. The crowd either did not know or did not believe this story.

As to the barefoot militia, it is becoming a rather dangerous element among the people. It is the product of the freed peasantry. The land granted to the liberated serfs is not sufficient for their support. Therefore, many peasants, particularly those who are unmarried, leave their native places and go elsewhere to seek their fortune. The large cities, when trade and industry are lively, attract thousands of them. They necessarily act as jacks of all trades. One is deemed lucky if he gets steady work for a month or two. Many of them are daily engaged and daily discharged. How they prosper is best suggested by their collective appellation. They are indeed barefoot. They are a militia too, for they work together, live together in huge lodgings, and struggle together for their pitiful existence. A hot and daring head among them may do great mischief,

Women as Telephonists.

Three years ago the United Telephone Company began to employ women. "Chiefly for reasons of economy," we learn, but besides this there are other advantages. If a boy 14 years old is employed as a telephonist his voice will before long become hoarse and indistinct; with a girl this is not the case. The female voice is always clearer, and as a clear voice (besides a good ear) is one of the chief requirements of a telephonist, woman are naturally preferred. They are admitted at the age of 16, the majority of those at present employed by the United Telephone Company being between the ages of 16 and 22. From the number of two, with whom the experiment was begun, they have risen to over a hundred, who perform their duties to the satisfaction of the company.

Preference is given to the daughters of professional men; this, however, is no strict rule. There are no preliminary examinations to be passed before admittance into the telephone office. The different ranks are the clerk in charge, who has the supervision of a room in which are employed from six to fifteen clerks; the deputy of the clerk in charge, the first and second class operator, and the learner. According to these ranks the payment varies; as a rule, however 11s. to 16s. is the weekly pay, which sometimes rises to £1, and in rare cases to 25s. The hours of work are from 9 to 6 or 10 to 7 respectively. No case of illness has occurred on the staff since the commencement of the work; the general state of health is also satisfactory, and Mrs. Merlin, the lady superintendent of the whole staff, is of opinion that the girls are on an average well satisfied with their situation and fond of the work.

It is perhaps a disadvantage that telephonists have to talk all day long; but this very fact is said to prevent them from indulging in disputes and gossip and makes their work comparatively quiet—a point upon which some subscribers to the exchange have been known to entertain a different opinion. The aspect of a telephone office is curious enough to an outsider. A number of young girls sitting before a cupboard-like structure into the apertures of which they are busily chattering, holding in the meanwhile an instrument like an ear trumpet to their heads, would appear ridiculous enough were it not well known how indispensable the telephone has become to civilization.

Stanley's Views.

The London Times says: In the course of a conversation with a correspondent on board the Kinsembo, Mr. Stanley declared that General Gordon might leave Khartoum whenever he chose, and had three routes of escape open to him. He was a soldier, but not a traveller. He would never leave Khartoum ingloriously. He would probably remain in Khartoum until he finally decided to escape by one of three routes. He could escape by means of the Congo, the Nile, and across the desert to Zanzibar. He could force his way through the country, because the people would be afraid of an armed force. He is perfectly well supplied with stores and ammunition, and is quite strong enough to meet the Mahdi. Mr. Stanley derides the suggested expedition to Khartoum, and says the men would die like flies when the summer sun is waning. He says that Gordon only requires to act like a soldier, as he believes he will, to settle the whole difficulty. Mr. Stanley added, I now return from a voyage which comprises almost two years' absence, having on this occasion been exploring that part of the Dark Continent which extends to the place named after me, the Stanley Falls. I did not proceed on this travel in connection with any work which I may subsequently undertake on behalf of the King of the Belgians. I have not been to Khartoum during my travels. I hava been to Assouan, but never to Khartoum. General Gordon could easily escape from Khartoum by way of the Congo if he wants to do so. It is just as easy as going from here to London. If, as the papers represent, the Mahdi and his followers are on the north side of Khartoum, that is on the river Nile, it is very easy for Gordon to escape. He has a large force under his command.

Politeness Rewarded.

"Will you be kind enough, sir, to hold this ram for me while I open this gate? It is fastened on the inside, and I must climb over." This modest request was made recently by a man who was standing at a gate on a lonely road running out of New Dorp, Staten Island, and was addressed to a stalwart sailor who had just come up. The only other living object visible on the long, straight road, was the large black ram, whose massive crooked horns were being held by the man as the two stood quite still in front of the gate. "Why, sartinly, shipmate," said the obliging tar, as he seized the big horns, and relieved the first holder. The latter climbed quickly over the gate. "I thank you very much," he said politely, when he got to the other side. "You will be surprised to hear that I never saw that ram before to-day. The brute attacked me about half an hour ago, and we have been tussling ever since. As long as you stand before him holding his horns firmly, he can't hurt you much. Good-by. I hope you will be as lucky in getting away from him as I have been." The New Dorp man, when telling this story last night, neglected to repeat the sailor's reply. He did not know what became of him.—New York Sun.

French Ladies' Æsthetic Bathing-Suits.

Here is a lady habited in scarlet, dainty shoes and stockings to match, and a bewitching cap (none of your hideous oil skin) with falling lace and telling little bows of ribbon. Here another, clad in pale blue, with a becoming hat tied under her chin, and many bangles on her wrists. The shoes alone are a marvel. How do all these intricate knots and lacings, these glancing buckles, survive the rough and sportive usage of the waves? Who but our Gallic sisters could imagine those delicate blendings of dark blue and silver, crimson and brown, those strange stripes and æsthetic olives and drabs? Two amiable persons, dressed in imitation of the British tar, obligingly spent the greater part of the day in the sea. Their business is to conduct timid ladies from the beach and to assist them in their bath. The braver spirits allow themselves to be plunged under the brine; the more fearful are content to be sprinkled delicately from a tin basin. There is also a rower, whose little boat, furnished with life-saving appliances, plies up and down among the crowd, lest one, more venturesome than his neighbors should pass beyond his depth.—Chambers' Journal.

Chinese Soldiers.

The distinctive military qualities of the Chinese are said to be unflinching bravery, or as some would have it foolhardiness. Chinese soldiers resemble the Mohammedans in this:—They believe that by exposing themselves to the deadliest dangers and dying in the heat of battle they are sure to win eternal bliss in their Celestial Paradise. Life is therefore, little cherished by them, and death—even though it be caused by a recklessness that is akin to suicide—is held to be the most desirable of all things. This wild religious devotion urges them to do the most extraordinary deeds. They have been known to leap by hundreds into a river and to die by drowning, though it was possible for them to escape from their enemies by land. This contempt for life in one sense enchances their value as soldiers, since by it they are driven to do deeds that less enthusiastic nations might refrain from.

An Encounter With a Bloodhound.

David M. Sherts of Lancaster, Pa., had a terrible encounter with a blood hound at Miller's soap factory, where he is employed, recently. The bloodhound roams about at night, and attacked Sherts who was the first to enter the premises, biting him in the right leg, which was lacerated from hip to knee. Sherts defended himself with his fists, pounding the dog about the head, but at last the infuriated animal bit him through the right arm, his teeth meeting. Shets finally succeeded in beating him off and escaped from the yard. His injuries are serious. The dog was killed.

ALL SORTS.

A tight fit—the jim jams.

Gastronomy—Cooking with a gas stove.

A rare specimen—Restaurant beef steak

Hand-book—A work on palmistry.

A man with a cast in his eye—A trout fisherman.

Earnest prayer is the disinfectant of the soul.

"The Mormon question:" Will you join the plurality?

Er good jedge o' er hoss is nearly allus er good jedge o' er man.

When a lady indulges in a round of shopping she might be said to go out on a buy-cycle.

What kind of official would Butler make? Well, to strain a point, we should say very Benay-ficial.

A Vermont dog has been seen with two tails. We throw this out as a pointer to the wags.

Unconscious Homeopathy: "I was vaccinated straight from the calf, you know." "Ah! similia similibus!"

"Why is an old lawyer always fat?" asked Atom. "Because," replied Molecule, "they feed him so much."

Frozen mutton is sold in England, and it is no uncommon thing there for a butcher to give a customer the cold shoulder.

Love goes not where it is cent, as much as where it is dollars. And dolorous it is, that it's true.

A writer in the Providence Journal says we "must wait until 1892 for Jupiter's next perihelion." Well, if we must we must, though it seem pretty tough.

A fat man who wants to get thin, but can't control his appetite, should wear a shepherd's plaid vest. He will then be always able to keep his stomach in check.

A little girl joyfully assured her mother the other day that she had found out where they made horses; she had seen a man finishing one. "He was nailing on his last foot."

"There is nothing impossible to the determined spirit," says a philosopher. Evidently that philosopher never tried to reach up behind his shoulder to get hold of the end of a broken suspender.

A prominent preacher recently chose for the subject of a sermon, "How to treat your enemies." The average man, however, thinks he has done his duty if he treats his friends.

An Irish witness was recently asked what he knew of the prisoner's character for truth and veracity. "Why, troth," said he, "since ever I've known her, she's kept the house clane and dacent."

A witty young lady having two suitors, one of whom was an army officer and the other a physician, she said it was very difficult to choose between them as they were both such killing fellows.

If a man wants peace to reign in the house hold he should count ten before speaking at times when he feels as if his clothes don't fit him. And on days when the kitchen stove doesn't draw he should count 480.

When a fellow is going by a place of regalation and kind of hesitates—argues with himself whether or not it is best to go in and take one, he can easily have the question decided by going in and seeing the barkeeper about it.

CURIOUS FACTS.

Louis XVI. was wiser than Marie Antoinette. While she spoiled the silk trade by wearing white muslin, he destroyed the sale of English nankeen, which was driving French cottons from the market, by ordering the executioner to perform his office in a dress of the foreign cloth.

A strong breeze off Lake Erie recently blew the lake flies broadcast into Cleveland. Local papers said there were a thousand bushels rotting in the streets. The lake fly is born, lives and dies in twelve hours. It never bites, but its laziness and familiarity and the nonchalance with which it stands still to be killed make it more despised than the mosquito. The lake fly cannot do much of anything except get drunk on light and die.

A notable drunkard who has just died at Paris in his 70th year, has kept a diary of his "drinks" for the last half century. It was his custom to take four bottles of wine as his daily allowance; so that in fifty years he must have emptied no less than 73 000 bottles! He could never eat until he had taken a dram of absinthe and as he regularly had three meals every day he must have swallowed down 109,500 drams of absinthe in the half century. In addition he found it necessary to his comfort to drink about twelve petits verres of some spirit or other during the spare hours of each day, so that he imbibed 219,000 glasses of spirituous liquor in the course of fifty years. He was never seen perfectly sober.

Co-operative baby farming is a success at Guise, France. In a late issue of Le Devoir, the official organ of M. Godin, who is the governor of the familistere at that place it is stated that the birth rate under his communal system is about the same as in French towns of the same population, while the infant mortality is fifty per cent. less. The baby farm comprises a baby house and a baby garden. The house contains 100 beds and one immense play-room, especially fitted up for its inmates. It opens flush with the garden, and is surrounded with spacious verandas. The administration is by a governess, with two assistants and the mothers that volunteer to serve. The children are generally brought there in the morning and taken to their homes at night, but a few make it a permanent home.

One of the most remarkable instances of the dumb spirit occurred in Glastonbury, Eng., during the present generation. This strange case was fully attested by a physician and reported to the London Lancet essentially as follows: Before the birth of Eli H., his father made a vow that should his wife bring him another girl—he now had three daughters in succession—he would never speak to the child as long as he lived. The expected infant proved to be a boy, and this son manifested from infancy the most pronounced antipathy towards his father. He never spoke to him, nor as long as this parent lived would he utter a word to anyone save to his mother and sisters. When Eli was 35 years old his father died, and after that the young man's tongue was loosed to every one, he becoming indeed quite loquacious, as though to make up for his long silence.

"THE HAPPY CITY."

Description of Foo Chow.

Foo Choo, the scene of the opening of hostilities between France and China, is called by the natives Hokchiu, or Happy City. It lies in latitude 26 degrees, 5 min. north, and longitude 119 deg. 20 min. east, on the northern side of the Min, thirty-four miles from its mouth and nine from Pagoda Island. The city is situated in a plain, surrounded by hills, forming a natural and most magnificent amphitheatre of vast dimensions, whose fertility emulates and adds to its beauty. Suburbs extend from the walls three miles to the banks and stretch along on both sides of the stream. They are connected with each other, and a small islet in the river, by a stone bridge built in the eleventh century. The scenery is bold, and such parts of the surrounding hills as are not cultivated or used for graves are covered with pines. Some of the hills north of the city are 300 feet high. Opposite Foo Chow the land is lower, and the suburb is built upon an island formerly the division of the main channel, seven miles above the city. The branches reunite at Pagoda Island. This island and the plain on each side form a large basin, about twenty miles long by fifteen wide. The river is crowded with floating habitations, ferryboats and trading craft, rendering its surface an animated and noisy scene. The flowers grown in pots in the boats and those usually worn by the boat women in their hair all assist in imparting a pleasing aspect to the lively sight.

A CHARMING PROSPECT.

The walls are about thirty feet high and twelve wide at the top. The gates, seven in number, are overlooked by high towers; smaller guard houses stand upon the walls at short intervals, in which a few soldiers lodge, and where two or three cannon indicate their object. The city is divided into wards and neighborhoods, each of which is under its own police and head men, who are responsible for the peace in their respective districts. From the Wa-shiu shan, an eminence on the north side of the city, the view is extensive, and presents a great diversity of charming objects. The square battlements of the wall are seen extending in a devious and irregular circuit for more than eight miles, and enclosing most of the buildings except on the south. On the south-west a hill rises abruptly more than two hundred feet, its ridge built up with interspersed dwellings, and another on the extreme north of the city, surmounting a watch tower, closes the prospect in that direction. Two pagodas within and fantastic looking watch towers upon the walls, large, regular built granaries, and a vast number of flagstaffs in pairs, indicating temples and offices, contribute to relieve the otherwise dull monotony, which is still further diversified by many large trees. Several lookout houses are placed on the streets or upon the roofs of buildings for the accommodation of watchmen, one of which immediately attracts the attention of the visitor from its height and its clock dial, with Roman letters. Few vacant spaces occur within the walls of the city, which is everywhere equally well built.

THE SOUNDS OF A BUSY LIFE.

Serpentine canals divide the country round about into plots of greater or less extent, of every form and hue, while they help to drain the city and provide channels for boats coming from the river. These parts of the landscape are dotted with hamlets and cottages, and, where the ground is higher, with graves and tombstones. To one seated on this eminence, says Dr. S. W. Williams in "the Middle Kingdom," the confused hum of mingling cries ascending from the town below—the beating of gongs, crackling of fire-works, reports of guns, vociferous cries of hucksters and coolies, combined with the barking of dogs and other domestic sounds, as well as those from the crows, fish hawks, and magpies nearer by—inform him in the livliest manner that the beautiful panorama he is looking down upon is filled with teeming multitudes in all the tide of life. On the western side of the city is a sheet of water called Si Hu, or West lake, with a series of unpretending buildings and temples lying along its margin, a bridge crossing its expanse and fishing nets and boats floating upon its bosom. The watch tower on the hill in the northern part of the city is upon the wall which here runs near a precipice 200 feet high; it is a most conspicuous object when approaching the place.

A BATTLE OF ANTS.

A Terrific Fight Between Rival Tribes.

A number of persons were standing in front of the City Hall, Denver, the other afternoon. A large number of ants were noticed running about on the steps and ground constantly augumented by numbers from unknown quarters. Examination revealed the fact that the ants were of two species, and that a battle begun in the air was raging on the ground. One of the species of the warring insects was large and red, with wings the size of a house fly; the other was a small red ant, with a black head and small wings. They were in superior numbers and attacked their enemies by twos, fours and scores. Several balls of the ferocious warriors when separated showed as many as thirty small ants on one larger one. Here and there could be seen single combats, the small ants in every case victorious. Those that were clinched in the air remained clinched on the ground until one or the other was vanquished and dead.

But as a general thing they fell to the ground and at once prepared for battle. Each side was under leaders, who massed their forces and marched them with military precision upon the foe. Skirmish lines were thrown out. The lines advanced, retreated, advanced again, and then the battle became general. The rules of civilized warfare were observed for a while, but before the fight was over it was a go-as-you-please affair. The small ants were in the majority but their opponents were giants compared with them and they crushed the pigmies in their strong mandibles as an alligator would a gnat.

For at least half an hour the battle raged. The ground was thick with the dead and the dying, the latter being dispatched wherever found. At last the giants were routed. They fled ignominiously, pursued by the pigmies, who slaughtered them by scores while in full retreat, some flying, others running to escape with their lives. The visitors acted as if they wanted to crow and probably did, but if they made any noise the spectators were not aware of it, it the vanquished were.

A PRETTY NURSE'S REVENGE.

How She Tortured an Old Gentleman Who Made Remarks About a Baby.

A Third avenue car, which had been jolting along wearily for half an hour, and groaning under its weight of heated humanity, stopped at One Hundred and Eighteenth street. There was no reason why it should have stopped, for it had been deliberately passing people who were frantically waving umbrellas and sticks after the manner of those who are anxious to ride. On this occasion, however, a remarkably pretty, pert-looking girl, whose cap denoted that she was a nurse, stood on the sidewalk, waving, not her hand, but a baby. The conductor kindly condescended to stop the car, not being entirely adamantine, and the girl entered. She clutched a strap with one hand and her baby with the other, and then stood glaring at a chubby old gentleman, who actually dared to keep his seat.

Presently the baby began to howl, Whether it was really uncomfortable or hungry, or simply guilty of infantile perversity did not appear, but it howled till it could howl no longer. The chubby old gentleman looked up indignantly and said loudly to one in particular: "What an intolerable nuisance a woman and a screeching baby are on a car! It is really most trying."

The young woman said nothing, but glanced at the receding figure of a man who had just vacated his seat and left the car. Quick as lightning she let go the strap, stooped down to the level of the old gentleman's knees, deposited the crying child thereon, and betook herself to the vacant seat before anyone could utter a sound. There as she could command a perfect view of the chubby old gentleman, she sat quietly with a provoking smile on her pretty face.

The old gentleman was dumfounded. Being somewhat gouty he could not rise in the moving car, but sat there, the personification of helpless indignation. If the child had howled previously, it roared now. The passengers were convulsed with laughter. Several ladies stuffed their handkerchiefs into their mouths, and the conductor looked everbody's head into vacancy and saw nothing. The chubby gentleman turned scarlet and appeared to be going off by spontaneous combustion. He, however, bent over the child, apparently with the intention of taking the matter as a joke, in reality to hide his furious countenance.

"Sing 'Tootsy-wootsy, darlin',' guv'nor," shouted a cheeky urchin at the end of the car. "Pat its back," shouted another. "Kids like that." The afflicted gentleman said nothing, but seemed to be revolving matters in his mind. Meanwhile the young woman never took her eyes from her baby, except to glance provokingly at the old man.

'Conducton,' shouted that individual in an awful tone, "I'll report you. How is it that you allow this ridiculous scene to take place on your car?"

"Ain't seen nothin'," was the imperturable rejoinder. "What is it?"

"Look at this baby on my lap."

"My! what a pretty child. Is it yours, sir?" very respectfully.

"I have had enough of this," said the chubby old gentleman. "Stop the car," The car was stopped. "Hang me if I don't keep the baby and take it home to my wife," and he prepared to descend with the child.

Then the young woman arose and snatched the baby from the old man's arms. "Insolent old buffer," she said, angrily "I thought I'd teach you a lesson. Maybe you think it's pleasant for a woman to board a car with with a crying child. Now, I'll venture to say you know more about it. Don't think I was afraid you'd keep the baby. Such innocents weren't for the like of crusty old toads such as you, Go home to your wife and joy go with you."

The chubby old geneleman thought it better to leave the car, and departed. The pert young woman took his place in the car, and the conductor who had seen nothing was actually guilty of the indiscretion of winking at her and then chuckling with apparent delight.—New York Times.

Mythical Snakes.

Rheem, who has charge of the reptile specimens in the Smithsonian Institute, contradicts much of the popular belief as to snakes. Some of the most dreaded have no existence. The hoop snake, which takes the end of its tail in its mouth and rolls over and over like a hoop, killing everything it touches with its venom, and the blow snake, the breath of which is deadly, are fictions. As serpents move about they are constantly feeling ahead with the tongue, and the forward thrust and peculiar forked appearance of this organ has given rise to the false idea that with them the stinging is done. It is generally thought that there are a great number of poisonous snakes. In North America there are but three species—the ratlesnake, the copperhead or moccasin, and the coral. There are about thirty varieties of these species altogether. The copperhead is probably the most dangerous, as it is vicious, and never gives warning of any kind before striking. The rattlesnake, though more poisonous than either of the others, will rattle at the approach of anything, and try to get away unless brought to bay. The coral is much smaller, and is a native of the Southern States. The bite is not necessarily fatal if the proper remedies are used in time, as, on account of its size, the quantity of poison is small. When a reptile strikes he throws his whole body forward, and the fangs penetrate the object against which they come. He does not jump; the hinder part of the body remains in position, and none of our snakes are in the habit of reaching more than half its length.

Have the courage to do with out that which you do not need, however much your eyes may covet it.

Have the courage to show your respect for honesty, in whatever guise it appears; and your contempt for dishonest duplicity by whomsoever exhibited.

Have the courage to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones.

Have the courage to obey your Maker, at the risk of being ridiculed by man.

Have the courage to prefer comfort and propriety to fashion, in all things.

Have the courage to acknowledge your ignorance, rather than to seek credit for knowledge under false pretences.

Have the courage to provide entertainment for your friends within your means—not beyond.

BROWN'S!

Cor. Brown & Toronto St's

MARKDALE

Is the place to get BARGAINS in

Dry Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Crockery, Classware &c &c.

NEW PRINTS from 5 cents up, New DRESS STUFF 10 cents and upwards in NEW DESIGNS and

LATEST FASHIONS.

Gloves, Hosiery, Ribbons, Laces, Embroidery, Small wares &c &c, at greatly reduced prices.

Our 25 cent T is unsurpass'd

Being determined to curtail credit trade, we offer special discounts and inducements to cash customers.

The Highest Price for Butter and Eggs.

A lot of seed oats (White Australian), free from all impurities ; also Potatoes, large and small, of finest quality, for sale cheap.

GIVE US A CALL.

April, 1884. 190-tf WM. BROWN.

ROBT. S. RAE, Sydenham St., Markdale. TAILOR,

SAW MILL AND TIMBER LAND FOR SALE OR TO LET

In the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, 4 miles from Flesherton Station, on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The mill is situated at Little Falls, in a block of about 400 acres timber lnd, with other timber land surrounding. The building is substantially built on stone foundation. The machinery is all good and driven with great power by a 23 inch Leffell wheel, under 36 ft. head of water. There are one large circular saw for cutting logs, 2 small circulars for sawing lath and broom handles, 1 guage lathe for turning broom handles, etc., 1 shingle machine with jointer and packer complete. The water power is excellent, the stream being very regular. There are several other good mill sites on the proyerty. The land in the valley is considered the best in the country. The place would make an excellent stock farm when the timber is taken off.

This offers a good opportunity for a practical, energetic man to go into this kind of business, as the place will be sold or let on liberal terms.

The bush is so convenient to the mill logs can be trucked in summer time. Immediate possession given.

Apply to the proprietor, WM. HOCG,

FLESHERTON STATION P. O., ONT.

—Good Work Guaranteed—

—AT—

Bulmers Photograph Gallery

FLESHERTON.

Call at once and see samples of work which we area not ashamed to show.

All kinds of Framing done cheap at

JAS. BULMER'S, FLESHERTON.

HAGYARD'S PECTORAL BALSAM

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

☞ Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

SPECIALTY.

Also agent for the celebrated

CHATHAM WAGONS.

Fall Show Fairs.

Osprey, at McIntyre October 9th.

Provincial at Ottawa Sept. 22nd to 27th.

Western Fair, London, Sept. 22nd to 26th.

Proton, at Dundalk October 7th and 8th.

Toronto Industrial, Toronto, Sept. 10th to 20th.

Melancthon, at Shelburne October 7th and 8th.

Glenelg, at Markdale, on the 2nd and 3rd October.

East Grey, at Flesherton, the 23rd and 24th September.

Dominion Exhibition at Montreal September 5th to 13th.

South Grey, at Durham, the 30th September and 1st October.

Collingwood township, at Clarksburg, on the 25th and 26th September.

Normanby, in Ayton on Sept. 24th.

Some people suppose that the negro population of the United States will gradually amalgamate with the whites by intermarriage, but in most of the states there are laws against miscegenation. Henry Thornton, colored, of Madison, Ind., has been sentenced to three years' imprisonment for marrying a white woman.

AN EX-ALDERMAN TRIED IT.

Ex-Alderman Taylor of Toronto, tried Hagyard's Yellow Oil for rheumatism. It cured him after all other remedies had failed.

Hatred does not cease by hatred at any time ; hatred ceases by love. This is an old rule.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best Salve in the world for cuts, bruises sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by A. Turner & Co.

If a man speaks or acts with a pure thought, happiness follows him, like a shadow that never leaves him.

A SAD NEGLECT.

Neglecting a constipated condition of the bowels is sure to bring ill-health and great suffering. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate the bowels in a natural manner, purifying the blood and promote a healthy action of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

Great talent renders a man famous; great merit, respected ; great learning, esteemed ; but good breeding alone insures love and affection.

A CURE FOR CHOLERA MORBUS.

A positive cure for this dangerous complaint, and for all acute or chronic forms of Bowel Complaint incident to summer and fall, is found in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry ; to be procured from any druggist.

Good, kind, true, holy words dropped in conversation may be little thought of, but they are like seed of flower or fruitful tree falling by the wayside, borne by some bird afar, happy thereafter to fringe with beauty some barren mountain-side, or to make glad some lonely wilderness.

RESPECT AGE.

Age should always command respect, in the case of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry it certainly does. for 25 years that has been the standard remedy with the people, for Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colic and all bowel complaints.

FIRE.—On Friday afternoon last, the villagers were startled by the ringing of the fire bell. It was soon discovered that the new house belonging to Mr. John Marshall was in flames. Had there been a supply of water near, the building might have been saved, but as it was nothing could be done to save it. The building was just completed. The plasters had put the last stroke of work to the chimney, and leaving their tools in the house, had taken the ladder they had used to its owner, being absent not more than fifteen minutes, when the house was discovered to be in flames. Mr. Marshall places his loss at nearly $500, there being no insurance. There are only two ways of accounting for the fire ; a spark from the burning stumps near by, or the carelessness of some smoker. The wind was not blowing towards the house at the time, and the men say they had not been smoking.—Dundalk Herald.

A STRONG ENDORSEMENT.

The Clergy, the Medical Faculty, the press and the people all endorse Burdock Blood Bitters as the best system renovating blood purifying tonic known. Its work bears out their best recommend.

On Sunday night last, Mr. Jas. Fleming of Kilsyth, lost a valuable mare. He had purchased the animal a short time before from Mr. Jas. Cochrane. On Sunday night she was apparently all right, and on Monday morning he found her dead in the field.—O. S. Times.

A RARE PLANT.

The Wild Strawberry Plant possesses rare virtue as a cleansing, cooling, astringent, anteseptic and healing medicine, and when combined with other valuable vegetable extracts, as in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, it is an unfailing remedy in all bowel complaints.

Notice is given in the Canada Gazette by Mr. George B. Cox, of Goderich, Ont., that he will apply at the next session of parliament for a divorce, on the ground of adultery and desertion.

National Pills purifies the blood, regulate stomach, Liver and bowels.

A woman's tongue is the only edged tool that grows keener with constant use.—Irving.

Dr. Low's Worm Syrup will remove worms and cause, quicker than any other medicine.

A Buffalo paper publishes a dispatch from Cincinnati containing a sensational account of an interview with one John D. Caldwell, who, it is said, alleges that Captain McClintock, of the Franklin Arctic expedition, was shot by his starving companions, and his body used as food.

For Nettle Rash, Itching Piles, Ringworm Eruptions, and all skin diseases, use Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap

FIRE AT STAYNER.—A fire broke out last Monday morning, the 1st inst., in a house owned by Mrs. Crookshank and occupied by Thos. Hartnell as a general store. The fire spread to the drug store of T. W. Coleman, the furniture store of J. Mathers, the oddfellows' hall, and the dwelling of Mr. Kelly, the whole of which were totally destroyed.

Destroy the worms or they may destroy the children. Use Freeman's Worm Powders, they expel all kinds of worms.

BURGLARS AT ALLISTON.—Geo. Cumming's store was entered by burglars last Monday night, the 1st inst., and $80 was taken from the safe.

A GREAT DISCOVERY

That is daily bringing joy to the homes of thousands by saving many of their dear ones from an early grave. Truly is Dr. King's King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, hay fever, loss of voice, tickling in the throat, pain in side, and chest, any disease of the throat and lungs, a positive cure guaranteed. Trial bottles free at Turner & Co's. drug store. Large size $1. 6

THE ALBERTA.—The iron steamer Alberta, of the C. P. R., which recently collided with and sunk a barge steamer in Lake Superior during a fog, has been thoroughly repaired and has resumed her regular trips between Owen Sound and Port Arthur.

Prominent among the greatest medical discoveries, by the many cures it has effected, McGregor's Speedy Cure leads the van. Subjected to the minutest chemical analysis, it has been found to contain none of those injurious ingredients characterizing the worthless specifics daily offered to the public. Every ingredient possesses a peculiar adaptability to the various complaints for which it has been compounded, and its efficacy is being established by testimonials hourly received. We are therefore confident that we have a preparation which we can offer to the public with the assurance that it will be found not only a relief but an absolute cure for Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Constipation and Impure Blood. Free trial bottles at Hill Bro's. A. & S. 4

Serious riots have occurred in the mining district of Hocking Valley, Ohio, Owing to disagreements between the mind of owners and the miners, ten thousand men are idle, and are on the road to starvation. On Saturday night the miners made an attack on the guards of one of the mines, and in the collision which ensued seven men were killed and wounded. The militia have been ordered out, but it is believed that the worst is over, and that order will be soon restored.

The following is from J. W. Ptolemy, of Winnipeg, formerly grain buyer for William Gillesby, of Hamilton and Grimsby: "I was for many years much afflicted with Costiveness, Biliousness, and ultimately Dyspepsia. I suffered very much and tried many different medicines, which gave me only temporary relief and then I was as bad as ever again. I was recommended by a friend, who had been restored to health by it, to try McGregor's Speedy Cure. I did so, and it was not long before I felt like a new man, and I have enjoyed excellent health ever since. I first commenced taking it February 7th, 1879. Sold by Hill Bro's. A. & S. 5

NEVER GIVE UP.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease; and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Turner & Co. 6

DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY CURES CHOLERA CHOLERA INFANTUM DIARRHŒA AND ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS SOLD BY ALL DEALERS.

Franco - Chinese War

Nothwithstanding the deadly war now raging in China it will not increase the price of Teas at the

Belfast House, Markdale

Having imported prior to the opening of hostilities, a sufficient quantity to supply 20,000 MEN for a period of 12 months. In other departments of the Grocery trade the BELFAST HOUSE has KILLED BY THOUSAND those who assume to transact business by purchasing of small dealers exorbitant rates of interest on long credit. Our imports of

PRESERVED MEATS, SALMON, LOBSTERS, SARDINES, HAMS, BACON, ASSORTED PICKELS

and every articles in the grocery line

LIQUORS

Of the best brands and quality. Wines for Sacramental purposes warranted pure. Brandies direct from the manufacturer and all other kinds of liquors.

Coffees, Teas and Tobaccoes cannot fail to give satisfaction. Oranges, Lemons, &c. Family Flour supplied at Lowest Rates.

THOS. McNEA.

BELFAST HOUSE, - MARKDALE

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed Store

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c.

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP

I respectfully solicit the public patronage.

193 J. PLEWES.

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

TUCK & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.

The best brand of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meals and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler. 194

HENRY GILL,

HOUSE PAINTER

GRAINER, GLAZIER AND PAPER HANGER, CALCIMINING AND WALL TINTING.

Residence opposite Planing Factory

MARKDALE.

ORDERS SOLICITED. ESTIMATES GIVEN

P. DUCOLON'S LIVERY,

IN HULL'S OLD STAND,

MILL - STREET

Good Horses and comfortable Rigs at moderate charges.

195

ROOKE'S BAKERY

BREAD, the staff of life and PASTRY that will please your wife, always on hand, to supply the demand.

So when your stock is low
Step in and let us know,
And we'll your wants supply
Or you'll know the reason why.

E. ROOKE,
Markdale.

J. G. IRVING

MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all Kinds of

PUMPS,

Drop Valve, Cylinder, Force, and Cistern Pumps.

All kinds of

IRON - PUMPS

SUPPLIED.

The Markdale Standard

VOL. 4.--No. 21

Issued evesy Thursday, at the office, Main Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch and under, per year, $4.

	1 yr.	6 mo.	3 mo.
Single column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
One inch space	7 00	4 00
Two inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion 5 cents per line subsequents insertions.

Strayanimals &c., advertised 3 weeks for the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

—JOB PRINTING—

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

J. W. RUTLEDGE,
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

SANDS & PERRY,

(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & SANDS.)

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East, Toronto.

1-251

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have removed to Flesherton, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.

FRED FROST, J. W. FROST, LL. B. County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND REFEREE in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Victoria Block Bagott St.; Branch office in Markdale, over Farland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

Creasor & Morrison.

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCES, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in MARKDALE; over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.

Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

W. CREASOR, Q. C. DUNCAN MORRISON.

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-1y

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Orrisville, Sept. 17. 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c. Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,

MARKDALE,

Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,

MARKDALE.

John McAleer, - Proprietor.

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

MRS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

A. HILL,

Fashionable Tailor,

OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.

A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

ISSUE MISSING

Markdale Standard

VOL. 4.--No. 210. MARKDALE, ONT., SEPT. 18, 1884. COPIES OF THE STANDAR FIVE CENTS EACH.

The Markdale Standard

Published every Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

Terms--$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
One column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
One inch space	7 00	4 00
One inch space	10 00	5 00

Seasonal advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local col. 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents per sub-sequent insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1 the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

J. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS & PERRY,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),
BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to lend at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
3351 TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,
BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Chatterton, Office open every Thursday, as before.
FRED FROST. J. W. FROST, LL. B.
County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,
BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG. in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Bailiff St.: Branch office in Markdale, over Graham's Store, on Friday and Saturday of each week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c,
Offices in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday of each Friday of each week.
Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
W. CREASOR, Q. C. DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.
ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17. 1880. 1-v

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N.B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se cured.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Thos. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.
This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
MRS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

25 Doses, 25 Cents.
TAKE
Flint's Mandrake Pills
If you have Sick Headache, Liver is Torpid, Are Bilious, Appetite is Poor, Bowels are Costive, Have a Bad Breath, Want your Stomach thoroughly Cleansed, they are the medicine to use. Work like a charm. Are purely Vegetable.
Mildest Pill ever taken.
TRY THEM.
Sold by Medicine Dealers.
J. T. FLINT & CO.,
Pharmacists, Prop'rs,
Rock Island, P. Q., and Derby Line, Vt.

Medical.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O.
Physician and Surgeon, Priceville,
Graduate of University. Vict. College.
" " New York, and
Hon. Graduate, of the same,
" " Avleth Medical Institute.
" " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y.
Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at Rutledge's Hotel, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.
122-47.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT.—Residence on Mill Street, Markdale.
124ly

HAMILTON'S
PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY
MARKDALE.
OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.
Fine work executed in all the latest sizes and shapes, fully equal to city work. Special attention given to
FRAMING
A large stock of moulding to choose from.
Call and leave your measure for a picture.
Jas. Hamilton.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.
Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

Dr. Hixon,
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, AND ACCOUCHER,
PRICEVILLE.
All calls promptly attended to.

ISAAC STINSON,
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

SAMUEL WARDELL,
WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

ALEX KAY
BOOT & SHOE
MAKER,
Mill Street, - Markdale

Across The Sea.

A PLEASANT CONVERSATION ABOUT VARIOUS COUNTRIES IN EUROPE—WHAT REV. MR. CHISHOLM NOTICED IN HIS TRAVELS.

From Kingston Daily News of 2nd inst.

We had a very pleasant visit yesterday from the Rev. John Chisholm, B. A. of McIntyre, Ont., a recent graduate of Queen's, who has just returned from an extended tour of Europe. He visited England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Switzerland, Italy and Belgium, and brought back new ideas, and tales of the sights he has seen and places he has visited. He has a high opinion of the North of Ireland whose people he found clean and contented, frugal and industrious. While at Londondarry he attended a fair at which were farmers and the people of the whole surrounding district, and in appearance and intelligence he considered them the equals of the people who would be brought together at a similar gathering in Kingston, Toronto, or any other Canadian city, while the quality of the horses, sheep and cattle was infinitely superior to anything he had ever seen in the best counties of Western Ontario. I was particularly struck, he said, with the absence of trees, and the peculiar shape and small size of the farms. This however, was compensated for by the superior quality of the stock they raised, cows there selling for 80 dollars. "The people" don't grow wheat, but import their flour from this country, finding it more profitable so to do. In regard to their politics, the feeling is something intense and the name of Gladstone is perfectly abhorred. The reason of this is that the property is chiefly in the hands of the Protestants and in the event of the bill passing they will be outvoted, even in Derry, by the Roman Catholics, who own only a small portion of the property; and ruled by people who have really very little interest in the land. In the North the people fear Catholic supremacy more than they do the rule of the Landlords, with whom nevertheless, they are by no means satisfied although they pay the rent and keep the law. From Derry I went to Bundooran, a seaside watering place, and there on Sabbath afternoon I attended a meeting of Nationalists which was addressed by Parnell and other celebrities. Parnell then expressed his assurance that at the next general election he would have seventy followers, not one of whom would be brought out unless he was perfectly free from party politics and bound himself to follow Parnell and the National party through thick and thin; and this number he said would be sufficient to block all legislation and force the government to give them what they wanted. I was told by a number of priests with whom I conversed that although Parnell is a Protestant, he is held higher in the estimation of the people than even O'Connell. They name bridges, streets, squares and buildings after him, and even Parnell potatoes are numerous.

AGAINST THE FRANCHISE BILL

IN THE SOUTH AND WEST.

After leaving Derry I visited Kerry, Galway Donegal, Cork, and all through the west and south, but I much preferred the north. The people of the southdo not cultivate their lands as well as their follow countrymen of the north, and have not the same thrifty and well-to-do air. The prospects are that there will not be a largs emigration from Ireland for years to come. The priests are strongly opposed to it from the fear of losing the people to the church; the politicians are opposed to it because of the support they would lose in the event of the passage of the franchise bill; and the people themselves are opposed to it because they confidently expect soon to be made absolute owners of the land by act of Parliament.

I also visited Scotland and found the people of the northwestern highlands and western islands as much dissatisfied with their land laws as the Irish. The people there are naturally liberal and opposed to the Lords. They are not in favor of the abolition of the House of Lords, but agitate for its reform, arguing that it should be elective and that they might just as well have hereditary judges and hereditary physicians as hereditary legislators.

LONDON AND THE CONTINENT.

I spent ten days in London and was present at the great Liberal demonstration in West Kensington, at which there were over a hundred thousand people present. From London I went to Paris and spent six days there. Paris impressed me with its beauty and cleanliness. It had not the vast awe and inspiring effect of London. but had a light fantastic air which was a revelation to me. The home life is there almost unknown to the people, the people spending the most of their time in places of amusement. A tourist can live much cheaper in Paris than in London, by making the proper bargains with the landlord before he moves in. The church has lost much of its hold upon the people owing to the attacks of Infidels who are gaining in numbers every day.

STOPPED BY CHOLERA.

I started, out from Paris to go to Italy but while passing through Switzerland I was informed that I would have to pass five days in a lazaretto both going and returning, if ever I did return, and be fumigated for four hours each day, all my luggage being taken out and fumigated as a preventative of cholera. Besides I would have to pay my board and all the expenses of my fumigation while I was in the lazaretto. Not relishing the prospect I retraced my steps northward, visiting Pague and Antwerp, Belgium I found the people divided in their politics into the Church party and the Liberal party, the chief subject of dispute being the school question.

From Antwerp I returned to London, from whence I went to Liverpool and set sail for Canada again.

NEWFOUNDLAND MATTERS.

Before coming west, however, I visited Newfoundland and found the people there strongly opposed to confederation. The majority of the people are Irish Roman Catholics who have the idea that union with Canada would be as bad for Newfoundland as they think Ireland's union with England is for her. Hence they are bitterly opposed to confederation. Among the Protestants also there are many who opposed it in 1866 and who still feel as strongly as they did then. Owing to the recent riots between Orangemen and Catholics, party politics are likely to be divided on religious lines, Protestant against Catholic. The school system of the island is the most contemptible that could possibly be devised. The government divides the money for educational purposes in proportion to the numerical strength of each religious sect. The consequence is, each denomination has its own public schools, and small towns have several very poor schools instead of having one large good public school where the rising generation could be properly educated. As now conducted, each religious denominatinon forms a set of its own, the children as well as the grown people mingling with none but those of their own set.

POLITICS IN THE MARITIME PROVINCES.

I also spent some time in the Maritime provinces and I think Fielding's success in Halifax was due chiefly to his personal popularity. The views of the people of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick are just the same as they were in 1882 and a general election would have the same result as it had then."

"I have been spending a couple of days here seeing some of the friends of my college days and as I have more to call on yet I will have to leave you. So long!"

Glenelg Council.

Town Hall Glenelg, August 25th 1884.

Council met this day pursuant to adjournmant all the members present, the Reeve in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed, road jobs were paid for as follows, in Ward No. 4, under Mr. Dunsmore.

D. Sweeny, gravelling at lot 7, con. 10, $8.75; Arch. Robertson gravelling at lot 1, con. 13, $39; Murdoch McQuarrie, gravelling at lot 1, con. 13, $10; Jas. Vaughen, repairing approach to Cliff's bridge $6; in Ward No. 3, under Mr. Neil.

Jno. Gallagher, gravelling at lot 16, con. 12, $16.23; John Gallagher, at lot 22, con. 12, $6.15; John Fogarty, work at lots 19 and 20 con. 10, $10.70; John Ryan, repairing bride at lot 12, con. 6, $5; R. McCaskell, cutting hill at lot 25 con. 8, $12; Thos. McAssey, repairing crossing at lot 15, con. 8, $5; John Tuohy, work at lot 18, con. 8, $4; Mal. Campbell, work at lot 20, con. 6, $1; John Carney, crossway at lot 14, con. 12, $25; John Wilson, work at Barrhead Mills $36; Henry Boyce, work at Barrhead Mills in 1883, $8; James Lauder, work at lot 13, con. 5, $2; John Cameron, work at lot 9, con. 2, N. D. R. $5; W. J. Rowe, plank for repair of bridge, $1.25; Micheal Henry, work on town-line A. & G. $2.62½; Edward Harrison, cutting hill at lot 18, con. 2, S. D. R. $35; Amos Chislett, plank for culvert, $1;

Members of Council were paid as follows.

J. A. McMillen, committee work 5, days, $10; P. Neil, 4, days on committee, $8; P. Neil, commision on appropriation $14,50; N. G. Dunsmore, committee 1 day, $2; Commission, $5.10; A. McCuaig, committee 4, days, $8; Thos. Davis, committee 4 days, $8; the Treasurer committee 1 day, $2; The Reeve, Treasurer and Clerk were paid $10; each for pay and expences in attending Court of appeal against report of County Valuation. Samuel Overfield, was paid $1.50; mending Scrapers, John Quillician, was paid $1.25; for repair of plough, broken at statute labor, $15 was granted to repair bridge at lot 9. con. 1. E. G. R. The Reeve and Mr. Neil reported on the dangerous condition of the road at Barrhead Mills, the council granted $225; towards putting the road in good condition. The proprietor of the mill agreeing to remove the saw-mill for that amount. By-law was passed striking rates as follows.

County and county Railway 4 six-tenths mills in the dollar, Township and railway 5 mills in the dollar, School Equivelant, 9 tenths of a mill in the dollar. Total 10 and 5 tenths in the dollar.

The Council adjourned to September 29th, at 10 a. m.

J. S. BLACK,
Clerk.

Personals.

Stanley and Eddie Reynolds returned last week from a trip to Montreal.

H. Foster, Merchant of Williamsford returned from Perth two weeks ago.

Rev. Mr. Hart and lady of Williamsford returned recently from an extended visit East.

Mr. Traynor P. L. S. of Dundalk was in Markdale last week.

John Cameron Esq., Warden, was in town last Friday, he gave us a pleasant call.

Mr. Thos. J. Spears of Williamsford has removed with his family to Essex Centre.

Mr. Jas. McDougall of fort William has been spending a few days in Markdale.

Mr. Oliver Daunis. miner from Algoma district near Port Arthur dropped off a day here on his way to Toronto last week.

Mrs. John McKenna is visiting friends in Tara.

Mr. G. S. and Mrs. Bowes have been visiting friends at Milton and Georgetown recently.

Mrs. Grant and Mrs. A. McFarland are making a prolonged visit with friends distant. We pity the grass widowers; had a trial ourselves recently.

Miss Laura Rorke returned last week to Whitby to take her last course in the college.

Mr. and Mrs. Saunders of Regina N. W. T. are visiting at Mr. J. R. Trimble's, Mrs. S. being a sister to Mrs. Trimble.

Mr. Alex. Mathers returned this week from Caledonia.

Meaford Road.

From our own correspondent.

Rev. Dr. Strongman of Eugenia, preached in the Wesley Church last Sabbath afternoon from the text. "What is man that thou art mindeful of him" at the close of the service a collection was taken up in aid of the Educational fund.

Mr. William Buchanan Jr. has been laid up with a severe attact of rheumatism.

Mr. David Johnston met with a serious loss last week, by a fire which he had set out in an old slash, running across his meadow and catching in a stack of hay in which there was some eight or ten tons, this should be a warning to be careful about putting out fire during such dry weather.

The Scott Act will be voted on in Simcoe on the 9th October.

The Scott Act was passed in Hamilton Co., in 1881 by 81 of a majority, and sustained on Tuesday the 9th inst., by a majority of 188 when a vote was taken for its repeal.

C. P. R.

The Ontario and Quebec division of the C. P. R. between Toronto and Smiths Falls which was open about a month ago, is now doing an extensive freight and passenger traffic. It is now the short line to Montreal, is equipped in first class condition, having first class drawing room and sleeping cars, attached, refreshments served on the train, corteous train officials and everything which can be done for the comfort and speedy conveyance of the public is to be found on this new line. We had a trip over the line and can speak from experience, there is now a heavy passenger traffic over the road.

A BLUE GRASS PENELOPE.

By Bret Harte.

CHAPTER I.

She was barely twenty-three years old. It is probable that up to that age, and the beginning of this episode, her life had been uneventful. Born to the easy mediocrity of such compensating scenes as a small farmhouse and large lands, a good position and no society in that vast grazing district of Kentucky known as the Blue Grass region, all the possibilities of a Western American girl's existence lay before her. A piano in the bare-walled house, the latest patented mower in the limitless meadows, and a silk dress sweeping the rough floor of the unpainted "meeting house," were already the promise of those possibilities. Beautiful she was, but the power of that beauty was limited by being equally shared with her few neighbors. There were small, narrow arched feet besides her own that trod the uncarpeted floors of outlying log cabins with equal grace and dignity; bright, clearly opened eyes that were equally capable of looking unabashed upon princes and potentates—as a few later did—and the heiress of the County Judge read her own beauty without envy in the frank glances and unlowered crest of the blacksmith's daughter. Eventually she had married the male of her species, a young stranger, who, as school master in the nearest town, had utilized to some local extent a scant capital of education. In obedience to the unwritten law of the West, after the marriage was celebrated the doors of the ancestral home cheerfully opened, and bride and bridegroom issued forth without regret and without sentiment to seek the further possibilities of a life beyond these already too familiar voices. With their departure for California as Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Tucker, the parental nest in the Blue Grass meadows knew them no more.

They submitted with equal cheerfulness to the privations and excesses of their new conditions. Within three years the school master developed into a lawyer and capitalist, the Blue Grass bride supplying a grace and ease to these transitions that were all her own. She softened the abruptness of sudden wealth, mitigated the austerities of the newly acquired power, and made the most glaring incongruity picturesque. Only one thing seemed to limit their progress in the region of these possibilities. They were childless. It was as if they had exhausted the future in their own youth, leaving little or nothing for another generation to do.

A southwesterly storm was beating against the dressing-room windows of their new house in one of the hilly suburbs of San Francisco, and threatening the unseasonable frivolity of the stucco ornamentation of cornice and balcony. Mrs. Tucker had been called from the contemplation of the dreary prospect without, by the arrival of a visitor. On entering the drawing-room she found him engaged in a half-admiring, half resentful examination of its new furniture and hangings. Mrs. Tucker at once recognized Mr. Calhoun Weaver, a former Blue Grass neighbor; with swift feminine intuition she also felt that his slight antagonism was likely to be transferred from her furniture to herself. Waiving it with the lazy amiability of Southern indifference she welcomed him by the familiarity of a Christian name.

"I reckoned that mabbee you opined old Blue Grass friends wouldn't naturally hitch on to them fancy doin's," he said, glancing around the apartment to avoid her clear eyes, as if resolutely setting himself against the old charm of her manner as he had against the more recent glory of her surroundings, "but I thought I'd just drop in for the sake of old times."

"Why shouldn't you, Cal?" said Mrs. Tucker with a frank smile.

"Especially as I'm going up to Sacramento to-night with some influential friends," he continued with an ostentation calculated to resist the assumption of her charms and her furniture. "Senator Dyce of Kentucky and his cousin Judge Briggs—perhaps you know 'em, or maybe Spencer—I mean Mr. Tucker—does."

"I reckon," said Mrs. Tucker, smiling; "but tell me something about the boys and girls at Vineville—and about yourself. You're looking well, and right smart, too." She paused to give due emphasis to this latter recognition of a huge gold chain with which her visitor was somewhat ostentatiously trifling.

"I didn't know as you cared to hear anything about Blue Grass," he returned, a little abashed. "I've been away from there some time myself," he added, his uneasy vanity taking fresh alarm at the faint suspicion of patronage on the part of his hostess. "They're doin' well, though—perhaps as well as some others."

"And you're not married yet," continued Mrs. Tucker, oblivious of the inuendo. "Ah, Cal," she added archly. "I am afraid you are as fickle as ever. What poor girl in Vineville have you left pining?"

The simple face of the man before her flushed with foolish gratification at this old-fashioned ambiguous flattery. "Now look yer, Belle," he said chuckling, "if you're talking of old times and you think I bear malice agin Spencer, why——"

But Mrs. Tucker interrupted what might have been an inopportune sentimental retrospect with a finger of arch but languid warning. "That will do! I am dying to know all about it, and you must stay to dinner and tell me. It's right mean you can't see Spencer, too; but he isn't back from Sacramento yet."

Grateful as a tete-a tete with his old neighbor in her more prosperous surroundings would have been—if only for the sake of later gossiping about it—he felt it would be inconsistent with his pride and his assumption of present business. More than that, he was uneasily conscious that in Mrs. Tucker's simple and unaffected manner there was a greater superiority than he had ever noticed during their previous acquaintance. He would have felt kinder to her had she shown any "airs and graces," which he could have commented upon and forgiven. He stammered some vague excuse of preoccupation, yet lingered in the hope of saying something which, if not aggressively unpleasant, might at least transfer to her indolent serenity some of his own irritation. "I reckon," he said, as he moved hesitatingly toward the door, "that Spencer has made himself easy and secure in them business risks he's taking. That 'ere Alameda ditch affair they're talking so much about is a mighty big thing—rather too big if it ever got to falling back on him. But I suppose he's accustomed to take risks!"

"Of course he is," said Mrs. Tucker gayly. "He married me."

The visitor smiled feebly, but was not equal to the opportunity offered for gallant repudiation. "But suppose you ain't accustomed to take risks?"

"Why not? I married him," said Mrs. Tucker.

Mr. Calhoun Weaver was human, and succumbed to this last charming audacity. He broke into a noisy but genuine laugh, shook Mrs. Tucker's hand with effusion said, "Now that's genuine Blue Grass and no mistake!" and retreated under cover of his hilarity. In the hall he made a rallying stand to repeat confidentially to the servant, who had overheard them: "Blue Grass all over, you can bet your life;" and opening the door was apparently swallowed up in the tempest.

Mrs. Tucker's smile kept her lips until she had returned to her room, and even then languidly shone in her eyes for some minutes after, as she gazed abstractly from her window on the storm-tossed bay in the distance. Perhaps some girlish vision of the peaceful Blue Grass plain momentarily usurped the prospect; but it is to be doubted if there was much romance in that retrospect, or that it was more interesting to her than the positive and sharply cut outlines of the practical life she now held. Howbeit she soon forgot this fancy in lazily watching a boat that, in the teeth of the gale, was beating round Alcatraz Island. Although at times a mere black speck on the gray waste of foam, a closer scrutiny showed it to be one of those lateen-rigged Italian fishing boats that so often flecked the distant bay. Lost in the sudden darkening of rain, or reappearing beneath the lifted curtain of the squall, she watched it weather the island, and then turn its laboring, but persistent course toward the open channel. A rent in the Indian-inky sky, that showed the narrowing portals of the Golden Gate beyond, revealed, as unexpectedly, the destination of the small craft—a tall ship that hitherto lay hidden in the mist of the Saucelito shore. As the distance lessened between boat and ship they were again lost in the downward swoop of another squall. When it lifted the ship was creeping under the headland toward the open sea, but the boat was gone. Mrs. Tucker in vain rubbed the pane with her handkerchief—it had vanished. Meanwhile the ship, as she neared the Gate, drew out from the protecting headland, stood outlined for a moment with spars and canvas hearsed in black against the lurid rent in the horizon, and then seemed to sink slowly into the heaving obscurity beyond. A sudden onset of rain against the windows obliterated the remaining prospect; the entrance of a servant completed the diversion.

"Capt. Poindexter, ma'am!"

Mrs. Tucker lifted her pretty eyebrows interrogatively. Capt. Poindexter was a legal friend of her husband, and had dined there frequently; nevertheless she asked, "Did you tell him Mr. Tucker was not at home?"

"Yes, 'm."

"Did he ask for me?"

"Yes,'m."

"Tell him I'll be down directly."

Mrs. Tucker's quiet face did not betray the fact that this second visitor was even less interesting than the first. In her heart she did not like Capt. Poindexter. With a clever woman's instinct, she had early detected the fact that he had a superior nature, stronger than her husband's; as a loyal wife, she secretly resented the occasional unconscious exhibition of this fact on the part of his intimate friend in their familiar intercourse. Added to this slight jealousy, there was a certain moral antagonism between herself and the Captain which none but themselves knew. They were both philosophers, but Mrs. Tucker's serene and languid optimism would not tolerate the compassionate and kind-hearted pessimisms of the lawyer. "Knowing what Jack Poindexter does of human nature," her husband had once said, "it's mighty fine in him to be so kind and forgiving. You ought to like him better, Belle." "And qualify myself to be forgiven" said the lady pertly. "I don't see what you're driving at, Belle; I give it up," had responded the puzzled husband. Mrs. Tucker kissed his high but foolish forehead tenderly, and said, "I'm glad you don't, dear."

Meanwhile her second visitor had like the first, employed the interval in a critical survey of the glories of the new furniture, but with apparently more compassion than resentment in his manner. Only once had his expression changed. Over the fireplace hung a large photograph of Mr. Spencer Tucker. It was retouched, refined, and idealized in the highest style of that polite and diplomatic art. As Capt. Poindexter looked upon the fringed hazel eyes, the drooping raven mustache, the clustering ringlets, and the Byronic full throat and turned down collar of his friend a smile of exhausted humorous tolerance and affectionate impatience curved his lips. "Well, you are a d——d fool, aren't you?" he apostrophized it, half audibly.

He was standing before the picture as she entered. Even in the trying contiguity of that peerless work he would have been called a fine-looking man. As he advanced to greet her, it was evident that his military title was not one of the mere fanciful sobriquets of the locality. In his erect figure and the disciplined composure of limb there were still traces of the refined academic rigors of West Point. The pliant adaptability of Western civilization which enabled him, three years before, to leave the army and transfer his executive ability to the more profitable profession of the law, had loosed sash and shoulder strap, but had not entirely removed the restraint of the one or the bearing of the other.

"Spencer is in Sacramento," began Mrs. Tucker in languid explanation, after the first greetings were over.

"I knew he was not here," replied Capt. Poindexter gently, as he drew the proffered chair toward her, "but this is business that concerns you both." He stopped and glanced upward at the picture. "I suppose you know nothing of his business? Of course not," he added reassuringly, "nothing, absolutely nothing, certainly." He said this so kindly, and yet so positively—as if to positively—as if to promptly dispose of that question before going further—that she assented mechanically. "Well, then, he's taken some big risks in the way of business and—well—things have gone bad with him, you know. Very bad! Really, they couldn't be worse! Of course it was dreadful rash and all that," he went on as if commenting upon the amusing waywardness of a child: "but the result is the usual smashup of everything, money, credit, and all!" He laughed, and added, "Yes, he's got out off—regularly routed and dispersed! I'm in earnest." He raised his eyebrows and frowned slightly, as if to deprecate any corresponding hilarity on the part of Mrs. Tucker, or any attempt to make too light of the subject, and then rising, placed his hands behind his back, beamed half humorously upon her from behind her husband's picture, and repeated, "That's so."

Mrs. Tucker knew instinctively that he spoke the truth, and that it was impossible for him to convey it in any other than his natural manner, but between the shock and the singular influence of that manner she could at first only say, "You don't mean it!" fully conscious of the utter inanity of the remark, and that it seemed scarcely less cold-blooded than his own.

Poindexter, still smiling, nodded.

"Where is he," she asked.

"At sea, and I hope by this time where he cannot be found—or followed."

Was her momentary glimpse of the outgoing ship a coincidence, or only a vision? She was confused and giddy, but, mastering her weakness, she managed to continue in a lower voice: "You have no message for me from him? He told you nothing to tell me?"

"Nothing, absolutely nothing," replied Poindexter. "It was as much as he could do, I reckon, to get away before the crash came."

"Then you did not see him go?"

"Well, no," said Poindexter, "I'd hardly have managed things in that way." He checked himself, and added, with a forgiving smile, "but he was the best judge of what he needed, of course."

"I suppose I will hear from him," she said quietly, "as soon as he is safe. He must have had enough else to think about, poor fellow."

She said this so naturally and quietly that Poindexter was deceived. He had no idea that the collected woman in front of him was thinking only of solitude and darkness, of her own room, and madly longing to be there. He said, "Yes, I dare say," in quite another voice, and glanced at the picture. But, as she remained standing, he continued more earnestly: "I didn't come here to tell you what you might read in the newspapers to morrow morning, and what everybody might tell you. Before that time I want you to do something to save a fragment of your property from the ruin—do you understand? I want you to make a rally and bring off something in good order."

"For him," said Mrs. Tucker with brightening eyes.

"Well—yes—of course—if you like—but as if for yourself. Do you know the Rancho de los Cuervos?"

"I do."

"It's almost the only bit of real property your husband hasn't sold, mortgaged or pledged. Why it was exempt—or whether only forgotten—I cannot say."

"I'll tell you why," said Mrs. Tucker, with a slight return of color. "It was the first land we ever bought, and Spencer always said it should be mine, and he would build a new house on it."

Capt. Poindexter smiled and nodded at the picture. "Oh, he did say that, did he? Well, that's evidence. But you see he never gave you the deed, and by sunrise to morrow his creditors will attach it — unless——."

"Unless——?" repeated Mrs. Tucker, with kindling eyes.

"Unless," continued Capt. Poindexter, "they happen to find you in possession."

"I'll go," said Mrs. Tucker.

"Of course you will," returned Poindexter pleasantly. "Only as it's a big contract to take suppose we see how you can fill it. It's forty miles to Los Cuervos, and you can't trust yourself to steamboat or stage-coach. The steamboat left an hour ago."

"If I had only known this then," ejaculated Mrs. Tucker.

"I knew it, but you had company then," said Poindexter, with ironical gallantry, "and I wouldn't disturb you." Without saying how he knew it, he continued: "In the stage coach you might be recognized. You must go in a private conveyance and alone—even I cannot go with you, for I must go on before and meet you there. Can you drive forty miles?"

Mrs. Tucker lifted up her abstracted pretty lids. "I once drove fifty—at home," she returned, simply.

"Good! and I dare say you did it then for fun. Do it now for something real and personal—as we lawyers say. You will have relays and a plan of the road. It's rough weather for a pasear, but all the better for that. You'll have less company on the road."

"How soon can I go?" she asked.

"The sooner the better. I've arranged everything for you already," he continued with a laugh. "Come now—that's a compliment to you, isn't it?" He smiled a moment in her steadfast, earnest face, and then said more gravely: "You'll do. Now listen."

He then carefully detailed his plan. There was so little of excitement or mystery in their manner that the servant, who had returned to light the gas, never knew that the ruin and bankruptcy of the house was being told before her, or that it's mistress was planning her secret flight.

"Good afternoon, I will see you to-morrow then," said Poindexter, raising his eyes to hers as the servant opened the door for him.

"Good afternoon," repeated Mrs. Tucker, quietly answering his look. "You need not light the gas in my room, Mary," she continued in the same tone of voice as the door closed upon him; "I shall lay down for a few moments, and then I may run over to the Robinsons for the evening."

She regained her room composedly. The longing desire to bury her head in her pillow and "think out" her position had gone. She did not apostrophize her fate, she did not weep; few real women do in the access of calamity, or when there is anything else to be done. She felt that she knew it all; she believed that she had sounded the profoundest depths of the disaster, and seemed already so old in her experience that she almost fancied she had been prepared for it. Perhaps she did not fully appreciate it; to a life like hers it was only an incident, the mere turning of a page of the illimitable book of youth; the breaking up of what she now felt had become a monotony. In fact, she was not quite sure she had ever been satisfied with their present success. Had it brought her all she expected? She wanted to say this to her husband, not only to comfort him, poor fellow, but that they might come to a better understanding of life in the future. She was not perhaps different from other loving women, who, believing in this unattainable goal of matrimony, have sought it in the various episodes of fortune or reverses, in the bearing of children or the loss of friends. In her childless experience there was no other life that had taken root in her circumstances and might suffer transplantation; only she and her husband could loose or profit by the change. The perfect understanding would come under other conditions than these.

She would have gone superstitiously to the window to gaze in the direction of the vanished ship, but another instinct restrained her. She would put aside all yearning for him until she had done something to help him, and earned the confidence he seemed to have witheld. Perhaps it was pride—perhaps she never believed his exodus was distant or complete.

With a full knowledge that to-morrow the various ornaments and pretty trifles around would be in the hands of the law, she gathered only a few necessaries for her flight and some familiar personal trinkets. I am constrained to say that this self-abnegation was more fastidious than moral. She had no more idea of the ethics of bankruptcy than any other charming woman: she simply did not like to take with her any contagious memory of the chapter of the life just closing. She glanced around the home she was leaving without a lingering regret; there was no sentiment of tradition or custom that might be destroyed; her roots lay too near the surface to suffer from dislocation: the happiness of her childless union had depended upon no domestic centre, nor was its flame sacred to any local hearthstone. It was without a sigh that, when night had fully fallen, she slipped unnoticed down the staircase. At the door of the drawing-room she paused and then entered with the first guilty feeling of shame she had known that evening. Locking stealthily around she mounted on a chair before her husband's picture, kissed the irreproachable mustache hurriedly, said, "You foolish darling, you!" and slipped out again. With this touching endorsement of the views of a philosopher, she closed the door softly and left her home forever.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Rattlesnakes.

The special peculiarity of the group of America's venomous serpents called rattlesnakes is that they make a sharp rattling noise by vibration of the tail. Hence the family name is Crotalidæ, from crotalia, jingling ear-rings of pearls worn by the Roman girls, or crotalum, a castanet. The fat-bodied, sluggish, terrestrial serpents bear their castanets at the extremity of the tail, in the shape of a varying number of hollow, and somewhat rounded segments, terminating in one of a more globular form called "the button." These are hinged loosely together, giving them considerable play, and the number of pieces, as well as their shape, varies greatly in different snakes and different ages; while two species—the copperhead and the massassauga—have none at all, but can boast only a horny tip to their tails. There are records of forty-five, thirty-two and twenty-one rattles; but three to fourteen is the usual number in full-grown crotali of the largest-sized species. They show no accurate index of age, notwithstanding the contrary has been so long the popular belief. But though it is possible that, by playing upon the curiosity or even by deceiving through mimicry, the crepitating tail might now and then become useful, we do not think that as an aid in food getting it is ever of more than accidental service. As a matter of sober fact, the rattle is not heard when the crotalis is seeking its prey, which is procured by stealthily crawling and by lying ambushed, patient and rigid, in the accustomed haunts of small animals until chance favors. That the rattling of the crotali answers the purpose of a call we know from the fact (recorded in many places) that other rattlesnakes quickly respond and hasten toward the one ringing the alarm. Moreover, in the latter part of the summer, the snakes sometimes make the sound loudly and long when they have no apparent reason to be alarmed, but, by the argument from analogy, can reasonably be supposed to be calling the opposite sex. That the rattling of one serpent in captivity has an immediate effect upon other crotali within hearing is constantly observed, and in many cases where the young have been seen to run into the mouth of the old one for protection they appear to have been summoned and informed of their danger by this signal. The instant the snake suspects danger it throws itself into the coil of vantage and sounds its long roll, varying the swiftness of the vibration, and the consequent loudness of its note, as its apprehensions increase or diminish.

"Dead Man's Gulch."

The following incident occurred during the early days of the Californian gold fields. A miner had died in a mountain digging, and as he was much respected, his acquaintances resolved to give him a "square funeral," instead of putting the body in the usual way into a roughly made hole, and saying, by way of funeral service, "Thar goes another bully boy under!" They sought the services of a miner who bore the reputation of having, at one time in his career, been "a powerful preacher in the States." And then, Far Western fashion, they all knelt down while the extemporized pastor delivered a prodigiously long prayer. The miners, tired of this unaccustomed opiate, to while away the time, began, digger fashion, fingering the earth that had been taken from the grave. Gradually looks were exchanged, whispering commenced and increased, until it became loud enough to attract the attention of their parson. He opened his eyes and stared at the whispering miners. "What is it, boys?" Then, as suddenly his eyes lighted on sparkling scales of gold he shouted, "Gold, by jingo! And the richest kind o' diggin'! The congregation is dismissed!" Instantly every man began to prospect the new digging, the parson not being the least active of the number. The body had to be burried elsewhere; but the memory of the incident lived from the name given to the locality, for "Dead Man's Gulch" became one of the richest goldfields in all California.

"Molly, I wish you would be a better little girl," said an Austin father to his little daughter. "You have no idea how sorry I am, that mama has to scold you all the time." "Don't worry about it, pa," was the reply of the little angel; "I am not one of those sensitive children. Half the time I don't hear what she says."—Texas Siftings.

A MODERN MONTE CHRISTO.

Remarkable Case of Punished [illegible]

The Victim Living Only for Revenge.

An Erie (Pa.) despatch says: Three [illegible] ago a well-dressed, finely formed, [illegible] cased gentleman knocked at the door [illegible] the humble cottage occupied by [illegible] Gates, who lives in the back country, [illegible] twenty miles south of this city, and [illegible] ed concering the widow's son, who had [illegible] home ten years ago. In a short time [illegible] stranger's identity was revealed and [illegible] widow's long-lost son was in her arms. [illegible] name of the gentleman is Charles Stafford. Ten years ago he was a rough, uncultured backwoods lad. His life since then [illegible] been passed, until Wednesday, in the [illegible] tentiary at Alleghany, and the story of [illegible] transition from a boorish to a refined [illegible] dition discounts the fiction which was [illegible] primary cause of the change. Last Wednesday Gov. Pattison signed Stafford's pardon and liberated him, after serving [illegible] of the fifteen years to which he had [illegible] sentenced for a crime that had shocked [illegible] part of the State. The victim of the [illegible] is now a young matron, living in the [illegible] ity, and morbialy sensitive on the subject. Stafford, the ignorant, uncultured [illegible] cutter, was arrested, and was convicted upon strong circumstantial evidence. [illegible] strongest link in the chain was the fact [illegible] when arrested he wore the red vest [illegible] the victim of the crime noticed upon [illegible] masked assailand in the woods. The [illegible] assertion that he had been induced to [illegible] vests with a man named McGahan, who [illegible] he was going west, was uncorroborated, [illegible] when a number of other links were supplied by some witnesses named Rockwell and [illegible] Reeder Moore, there was no doubt in [illegible] minds of the jury, and they convicted [illegible] in less than ten minutes. Four years [illegible] the man named by Stafford as the [illegible] who swapped vests with him died in [illegible] charcoal woods of Michigan, and [illegible] dying confessed to the truth of the [illegible] er's story. He denied being the [illegible] perpetrator, but said Stafford was as [illegible] cent as an unborn babe. The [illegible] was duly attested and sent on here, but [illegible] considered too obscure by the authorities. Two years later Reeder Moore, the [illegible] who gave the most damaging testimony committed suicide, and while in the [illegible] of death he confessed and exonerated Stafford. The community began to [illegible] that an innocent lad was languishing in prison. Lawyers of eminence [illegible] citizens of prominence proffered their [illegible] vices, and by degrees a mass of evidence [illegible] obtained that conclusively established [illegible] ford's innocence. Through the [illegible] process of the State Pardon Board his [illegible] lease was finally effected on Wednesday.

Being interviewed by our correspondent he stated that when he arrived at the [illegible] tentiary and reflected upon the fifteen [illegible] to be passed there he almost went [illegible] His ignorance he saw was against [illegible] The Judge who sentenced him had [illegible] to his unintellectual condition as being [illegible] harmony with the brutish nature of [illegible] crime, and he had seen the approving [illegible] of the jury. He felt that he could [illegible] help himself or prove his innocence [illegible] out education, and so he resolved to [illegible] the power which knowledge [illegible] Through the kindness of the officials [illegible] learned how to read and write, and [illegible] launched into the study of mankind as [illegible] flected in the daily press. The newspapers furnished to the convicts were devoured [illegible] him with avidity, and soon he knew [illegible] of the world and its doings than those [illegible] outside the prison walls. One day he [illegible] cured Dumas's "Count of Monte Cristo" and upon that work of fiction his [illegible] life was shaped.

Stafford, after reading this book, [illegible] more than ever determined to acquire [illegible] knowledge which gives power. There [illegible] no learned abbe in the penitentiary to [illegible] into his cell, but for cell companions [illegible] once had a minister who had gone [illegible] and a lawyer who had not done [illegible] From these he had obtained some [illegible] information. He lived now for revenge. Upon his knees he swore by the eternal [illegible] that each of the wretches who had [illegible] away his liberty should be made to suffer [illegible] he was suffering. By the force of his [illegible] acquired intelligence he reasoned out a [illegible] ry which plainly indicated the guilty [illegible] and laid bare the cunning plot of the [illegible] spirators. What was dark to him when [illegible] ignorant lad was now clear as day. The perspicuity of the letters he sent [illegible] lawyers was remarkable and materially aided them in their search for the [illegible] United States Detective Benson [illegible] up the clues thus furnished and succeeded [illegible] arresting four of the alleged perjurers.

Stafford's plan for revenge is to [illegible] the law his instrument in crushing [illegible] Some of them have grown wealthy in [illegible] meantime, one being a rich banker, [illegible] proposes to devote the remainder of his [illegible] to the purpose of establishing their [illegible] The wife of the man whom he charges [illegible] being the actual porpetrator of the [illegible] has made damagiug admissions, which [illegible] ford was engaged in copying when the [illegible] porter found him. When he read of [illegible] death of the man in Michigan and the [illegible] cide of Reeder Moore, he says he cried [illegible] passion and railed against the king of [illegible] for robbing him of his prey. The [illegible] the Judge who sentenced him was regarded by him as the fulfilment of the curse [illegible] his old mother hurled at the Court after [illegible] son's sentence was pronounced. Taken together it is one of the most remarkable [illegible] kindred cases.

Worthy of Respect.

To be worthy of respect demands [illegible] honor, truth, and sincerity. It demands that a man be a good son and brother [illegible] good husband and father, an industrious and faithful workman, a just and [illegible] master, a loyal and trustworthy citizen. [illegible] he be these he is respectable, for he [illegible] claims upon the respect of all who [illegible] him. He may wear homespun or [illegible] cloth, may live in an attic or palace, [illegible] work with his hands or his brain, may [illegible] but few friends or be the centre of an [illegible] ing crowd, may be dependent upon his [illegible] labor for support, or possess the wealth [illegible] a Rothschild—his true respectability [illegible] neither heightened by the one or lowered [illegible] the other. It inheres in this character, [illegible] in its belongings. It is dependent [illegible] what he is, not upon what he has.

Looking on the Bright Side.

"Dear me, Janet! you've spilt water over my play-house," complained sister [illegible] "Oh, but never mind," said J[illegible] "We'll play it rains so fewly in their [illegible] try the dolls will be glad."

OUR YOUNG FOL[KS]

A Hero on Crutches.

The Tay Bridge disaster! Who [illegible] got that most sudden and awful [illegible] phe? The dark night, the howli[ng] [illegible] the hurrying train, the broken bri[dge] [illegible] then that last horrible plunge of th[e] [illegible] carriages and their human freight [illegible] The story is like a nightmare in [illegible] ghastliness; we cannot escape from [illegible] Naturally enough, the details of i[t] [illegible] ed in all the papers of the day, and [illegible] farther than our own island, drew [illegible] thetic cries of pity and horror from [illegible] tinental neighbors.

The Germans, especially, had a [illegible] their own to say on the subject, [illegible] the name of "Carl Springel" rose fr[om] [illegible] to their lips.

Who was Carl Springel, and [illegible] way did the Tay Bridge accident [illegible] story?

I will tell you, and I am sure you [illegible] will swell with a proud joy in the r[illegible] my tale, for Englishmen can welcom[e] [illegible] of whatever nation he may be.

Carl Springel, then, was the lame [illegible] railway official in South Germany. Springle, the father, among other [illegible] performed that of keeping watch o[n] [illegible] nights over the great bridge known [illegible] Devil's Gulch Bridge, which spanne[d] [illegible] rible cleft in the rocks, two hund[red] [illegible] wide and a hundred and fifty deep. [illegible] ravine below a mountain stream [illegible] and fought its way into the valley [illegible] deep down it seemed to lie at [illegible] times, but in winter weather the str[eam] [illegible] came a torrent of tremendous force, [illegible] to a terrific height.

Such a sudden swell took place on [illegible] of November, 1857, after twenty [illegible] heavy and continued rain. Wilhelm [illegible] el was, of course, on duty all day, a[nd] [illegible] coming home towards evening, Carl [illegible] to pay him a visit at his post, carryi[ng] [illegible] him his father's supper.

The night was one of black darkn[ess] [illegible] the lame lad struggled along on his c[rutches] [illegible] the breath half blown out of his feeb[le] [illegible] his ears dinned by the fury of the st[orm].

He was within a hundred yards [illegible] bridge—renowned in the neighborho[od] [illegible] triumph of engineering skill—when a [illegible] er blast than usual made him totter [illegible] crutches, while at the same moment [illegible] ful crash made itself heard above the [illegible] of the storm.

It was—it could be nothing else [illegible] bridge giving way, Carl felt sure. [illegible] agony of haste and terror he pushed [illegible] ward the spot, calling frantically [illegible] father's name. But how could he h[ear] [illegible] through the tumult?

The lad pressed on still further. [illegible] on the railroad track now, and the f[illegible] ject he stumbled against was his [illegible] hand-truck, the red light yet burnin[g] [illegible] but no father near.

And beyond that—ten yards furth[er] [illegible] the sight was too awful, the dim gla[re] [illegible] lantern showing a cruel gap where th[e] [illegible] had been—a fearful chaos of shatter[ed] [illegible] onry and timber, and boiling [illegible] "Father! Father!" cried Carl again [illegible] horror, but no voice answered. "[illegible] gone down with the bridge!" shrie[ked] [illegible] poor fellow.

For a second or two he lingered as [illegible] lyzed by the sight of the fearful [illegible] holding tightly the useless supper-ca[n] [illegible] a sudden thought filled his soul [illegible] flowing, and gave him new strength [illegible] and dare.

The night train—that was due. [illegible] lay below in that awful gulf, who [illegible] warn it of its danger? Who would [illegible] back from that leap into nothingness [illegible] it must inevitably take if left to pu[rsue] [illegible] course unchecked?

"I must do it," said Carl with c[lenched] teeth.

Up above no danger signal was [illegible] there was only one lame boy and [illegible] moments of time to save a train full of [illegible] beings.

The boy threw away his crutches [illegible] on to his fathers's truck, and wo[rked] [illegible] steadily back toward the great city. [illegible] mattered it that he steered straig[ht] [illegible] the jaws of death? He should s[top the] train; he would make the driver s[ee] [illegible] and learn the danger ahead.

It was all as Carl knew it wo[uld.] Round the curve of the mountain, [illegible] glittering serpent, came the nigh[t] [illegible] speeding on—ever nearer, nearer, till [illegible] trembled under its weight.

Then Carl stood up as well as he [illegible] on his truck, and raised the red ligh[t] [illegible] about his head, waving it backward [illegible] ward to attract the notice of the engine[er.] He lost all sense of personal danger; [illegible] only bent on saving the train.

"The bridge—the bridge is down!" [illegible] ed the boy.

Only just in time came the warnin[g.] [illegible] engine-driver, always on his guard [illegible] spot, turned off the steam, and the tr[ain] [illegible] its crowd of living beings, was arre[sted] [illegible] the brink of the abyss.

But where was Carl the while? [illegible] the truck?

Hurled fifty feet into the air by [illegible] coming train, the boy was never aga[in] [illegible] recognized as the living Carl Sprin[gel.] [illegible] was found afterward, a lifeless and [illegible] corpse, among the rocks.

A tombstone stands in a grave[yard in] South Germany on which in glittering [illegible] of gold is this inscription:

CARL SPRINGEL.

AGED 14.

"He died the death of a hero and a[illegible] and saved two hundred lives."

The memorial was erected by thos[e] [illegible] by the lad's heroism, the only rec[illegible] they could make of a brave and [illegible] deed.

Success and Prosperity.

People who are fond of complai[ning of] the injustice of circumstances, declar[e] [illegible] the good are often unsuccessful and [illegible] are often prosperous, would do well [illegible] lyse carefully their estimate of succ[ess and] prosperity. If they include in it rich[es] [illegible] and position, and exclude from it [illegible] mind, a contented spirit, a good co[illegible] a noble character, and the luxury [illegible] good, they are right, according [illegible] standard. But, if these latter po[illegible] are preferable, then are the good pr[illegible] blessed with a prosperity that no mi[illegible] can touch and no loss can remove, [illegible] evil are truly unsuccessful, thou[gh they] may have wealth and station and po[illegible] case.

A MODERN MONTE CHRISTO.

Remarkable Case of Punished Innocence. The Victim Living Only for Revenge.

An Erie (Pa.) despatch says: Three days ago a well-dressed, finely formed, self-possessed gentleman knocked at the door of the humble cottage occupied by widow Gates, who lives in the back country, some twenty miles south of this city, and inquired concering the widow's son, who had left home ten years ago. In a short time the stranger's identity was revealed and the widow's long lost son was in her arms. The name of the gentleman is Charles Stafford. Ten years ago he was a rough, uncultured backwoods lad. His life since then has been passed, until Wednesday, in the Penitentiary at Alleghany, and the story of the transition from a boorish to a refined condition discounts the fiction which was the primary cause of the change. Last Wednesday Gov. Pattison signed Stafford's pardon and liberated him, after serving ten of the fifteen years to which he had been sentenced for a crime that had shocked the part of the State. The victim of the crime is now a young matron, living in the vicinity, and morbialy sensitive on the subject. Stafford, the ignorant, uncultured woodsutter, was arrested, and was convicted upon strong circumstantial evidence. The strongest link in the chain was the fact that when arrested he wore the red vest which the victim of the crime noticed upon his masked assailand in the woods. The latter assertion that he had been induced to swap vests with a man named McGahan, who said he was going west, was uncorroborated, and when a number of other links were supplied by some witnesses named Rockwell and Reeder Moore, there was no doubt in the minds of the jury, and they convicted him in less than ten minutes. Four years after the man named by Stafford as the person who swapped vests with him died in the charcoal woods of Michigan, and before dying confessed to the truth of the prisoner's story. He denied being the actual perpetrator, but said Stafford was an innocent babe. The confession was duly attested and sent on here, but was considered too obscure by the authorities. Two years later Reeder Moore, the witness who gave the most damaging testimony committed suicide, and while in the throes of death he confessed and exonerated Stafford. The community began to think that an innocent lad was languishing in prison. Lawyers of eminence and citizens of prominence proffered their services, and by degrees a mass of evidence was obtained that conclusively established Stafford's innocence. Through the tedious process of the State Pardon Board his release was finally effected on Wednesday. Being interviewed by our correspondent he stated that when he arrived at the penitentiary and reflected upon the fifteen years he must be passed there he almost went mad. His ignorance he saw was against him. The Judge who sentenced him had adversely his unintellectual condition as being in harmony with the brutish nature of the crime, and he had seen the approving nod of the jury. He felt that he could never help himself or prove his innocence without education, and so he resolved to possess the power which knowledge gives. Through the kindness of the officials he learned how to read and write, and then crunched into the study of mankind as depicted in the daily press. The newspaper was furnished to the convicts were devoured by him with avidity, and soon he knew more of the world and its doings than thousands outside the prison walls. One day he procured Dumas's "Count of Monte Cristo," upon that work of fiction his future was shaped.

Stafford, after reading this book, was more than ever determined to acquire the knowledge which gives power. There was a learned abbe in the penitentiary to whom his cell, but for cell companions he had a minister who had gone wrong, a lawyer who had not done right. From these he had obtained some useful information. He lived now for revenge. On his knees he swore by the eternal God that each of the wretches who had sworn away his liberty should be made to suffer as he was suffering. By the force of his newly acquired intelligence he reasoned out a theory which plainly indicated the guilty parties, laid bare the cunning plot of the conspirators. What was dark to him when a tyrant lad was now clear as daylight. The perspicuity of the letters he sent to his lawyers was remarkable and materially aided them in their search for the facts. United States Detective Benson followed the clues thus furnished and succeeded in getting four of the alleged perjurers. Stafford's plan for revenge is to make the law his instrument in crushing those of them have grown wealthy in the meantime, one being a rich banker, but proposes to devote the remainder of his life to the purpose of establishing their guilt. The wife of the man whom he charges with being the actual perpetrator of the crime has made damagiug admissions, which Stafford was engaged in copying when the officer found him. When he read of the death of the man in Michigan and the confession of Reeder Moore, he says he cried with joy and railed against the king of terrors for robbing him of his prey. The death of the judge who sentenced him was regarded by him as the fulfilment of the curse which the mother hurled at the Court after the sentence was pronounced. Taken together it is one of the most remarkable cases.

Worthy of Respect.

To be worthy of respect demands virtue, truth, and sincerity. It demands that a man be a good son and brother, a good husband and father, an industrious and faithful workman, a just and kind neighbor, a loyal and trustworthy citizen. Only in these he is respectable, for he has a right upon the respect of all who know him. He may wear homespun or broadcloth, he may live in an attic or palace, may be rich with his hands or his brain, may have few friends or be the centre of an admiring crowd, may be dependent upon his daily labor for support, or possess the wealth of Rothschild—his true respectability will be neither heightened by the one or lowered by the other. It inheres in this character, and not in his belongings. It is dependent upon what he is, not upon what he has.

Looking on the Bright Side.

"Dear me, Janet! you've spilt water on my play-house," complained sister. "Never mind," said Janet, "but never mind," said Janet, "I'll play it rains so fewly in their cots the dolls will be glad."

OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

A Hero on Crutches.

The Tay Bridge disaster! Who can forget that most sudden and awful catastrophe! The dark night, the howling wind, the hurrying train, the broken bridge, and then that last horrible plunge of the doomed carriages and their human freight!

The story is like a nightmare in its swift ghastliness; we cannot escape from it.

Naturally enough, the details of it appeared in all the papers of the day, and travelling farther than our own island, drew sympathetic cries of pity and horror from our continental neighbors.

The Germans, especially, had a word of their own to say on the subject, in which the name of "Carl Springel" rose frequently to their lips.

Who was Carl Springel, and in what way did the Tay Bridge accident recall his story?

I will tell you, and I am sure your hearts will swell with a proud joy in the reading of my tale, for Englishmen can welcome a hero, of whatever nation he may be.

Carl Springel, then, was the lame son of a railway official in South Germany. Wilhelm Springle, the father, among other duties, performed that of keeping watch on stormy nights over the great bridge known as the Devil's Gulch Bridge, which spanned a terrible cleft in the rocks, two hundred feet wide and a hundred and fifty deep. In the ravine below a mountain stream struggled and fought its way into the valley—deep, deep down it seemed to lie at ordinary times, but in winter weather the stream became a torrent of tremendous force, and rose to a terrific height.

Such a sudden swell took place on the 19th of November, 1857, after twenty hours of heavy and continued rain. Wilhelm Springel was, of course, on duty all day, and, not coming home towards evening, Carl set out to pay him a visit at his post, carrying with him his father's supper.

The night was one of black darkness, but the lame lad struggled along on his crutches, the breath half blown out of his feeble body, his ears dinned by the fury of the storm.

He was within a hundred yards of the bridge—renowned in the neighborhood as a triumph of engineering skill—when a stronger blast than usual made him totter on his crutches, while at the same moment an awful crash made itself heard above the raging of the storm.

It was—it could be nothing else but the bridge giving way, Carl felt sure. In an agony of haste and terror he pushed on toward the spot, calling frantically on his father's name. But how could he hear him through the tumult?

The lad pressed on still further. He was on the railroad track now, and the first object he stumbled against was his father's hand-truck, the red light yet burning on it, but no father near.

And beyond that—ten yards further! Ah! the sight was too awful, the dim glare of the lantern showing a cruel gap where the bridge had been—a fearful chaos of shattered masonry and timber, and boiling waters! "Father! Father!" cried Carl again in his horror, but no voice answered. "He has gone down with the bridge!" shrieked the poor fellow.

For a second or two he lingered as if paralyzed by the sight of the fearful chasm, holding tightly the useless supper-can; then a sudden thought filled his soul to overflowing, and gave him new strength to do and dare.

The night train—that was due. If father lay below in that awful gulf, who would warn it of its danger? Who would hold it back from that leap into nothingness, which it must inevitably take if left to pursue its course unchecked?

"I must do it," said Carl with clenched teeth.

Up above no danger signal was shining; there was only one lame boy and a few moments of time to save a train full of human beings.

The boy threw away his crutches jumped on to his fathers's truck, and worked it steadily back toward the great city. What mattered it that he steered straight into the jaws of death? He should stop the train; he would make the driver see him, and learn the danger ahead.

It was all as Carl knew it would be. Round the curve of the mountain, like a glittering serpent, came the night train speeding on—ever nearer, nearer, till the line trembled under its weight.

Then Carl stood up as well as he was able on his truck, and raised the red light wildly about his head, waving it backward and forward to attract the notice of the engine driver. He lost all sense of personal danger; he was only bent on saving the train.

"The bridge—the bridge is down!" shrieked the boy.

Only just in time came the warning. The engine-driver, always on his guard at this spot, turned off the steam, and the train with its crowd of living beings, was arrested on the brink of the abyss.

But where was Carl the while? Carl and the truck?

Hurled fifty feet into the air by the oncoming train, the boy was never again to be recognized as the living Carl Springel, but was found afterward, a lifeless and mangled corpse, among the rocks.

A tombstone stands in a graveyard in South Germany on which in glittering letters of gold is this inscription:

CARL SPRINGEL.
AGED 14.
"He died the death of a hero and a martyr, and saved two hundred lives."

The memorial was erected by those saved by the lad's heroism, the only recognition they could make of a brave and unselfish deed.

Success and Prosperity.

People who are fond of complaining of the injustice of circumstances, declaring that the good are often unsuccessful and the evil are often prosperous, would do well to analyse carefully their estimate of success and prosperity. If they include in it riches, fame and position, and exclude from it peace of mind, a contented spirit, a good conscience, a noble character, and the luxury of doing good, they are right, according to their standard. But, if these latter possessions are preferable, then are the good prosperous indeed with a prosperity that no misfortune can touch and no loss can remove, and the evil are truly unsuccessful, though they may have wealth and station and power and ease.

FOUR DAYS ON A RAFT.

Terrible Sufferings of Four Sailors on the Lake.

A Muskegon, Mich., special says that the crew of the wrecked schooner W. W. Brigham were picked up in mid-lake recently by the schooner Walter Smith, and landed there. The unfortunte men tell a terrible story of their experience. The names of the men are Jas. O'Leary, Patrick Powers, Richard Bird and Edwin Anderson. The Brigham left last Saturday for Chicago, loaded with lumber. When she reached mid-lake a violent storm arose, and the schooner nearly swamped. The men stood at the pumps nearly all night, during which time the storm increased. At about 10 o'clock on Monday the Brigham capsized, turning completely bottom up. The men clampered upon the floating lumber, and with the aid of a piece of rope, make a temporary raft. Every sea swept over them, and their sufferings cannot be told. Hunger and sleep pressed upon them at times, but the men were fighting for life and thought only of clinging to the raft. Tuesday dawned without succor, and it passed so slowly that it seemed like an eternity to the half-famished men tossed about on the waves. A vessel was seen, but the only signal they had, an old oil cloth coat, failed to attract attention. Another weary night and Wednesday dawned upon the third day on the raft without any better prospects. On Thursday morning the schooner Walter Smith, bound from Muskegon to Highland Park, rescued the shipwrecked crew. Captain Smith noticed some objects on the water which he took to be human beings and bore down on them. Aid came in the nick of time, for the suffering sailors could not have held out much longer.

A Harvest of Feathers.

A correspondent of the Newark Advertiser writes as follows from Mexico: "The industry of ostrich farming is about to be attempted in this country by Mr. William Zimmerman, an American who has experimented successfully in Southern California with ostriches imported from Cape Colony, South Africa. He tells me he has been very successful there, that his birds thrive, propagate well, the climate suits them and that their feathers are of fine quality and fetch a high price. Mr. Zimmerman has just obtained a concession from the Mexican government, allotting him certain public lands and exempting the same from taxation for a long period of years, to encourage him in forming a company whose object shall be ostrich farming in this country.

"The vast plain described above, covering many millions of acres, is peculiarly suited to ostrich farming, because it is level, and ostriches need level grazing land, as they are liable to fracture their long, bony legs when clambering over rough country or up hillsides; because of the great quantities of cactus, of many varieties, growing wild all over that tract, and cactus leaves, after being trimmed of their thorns, form one of the items of food most longed for by the ostrich, and because the temperature of that section of Mexico is most favourable to the ostrich, since it never varies more than 15 degrees throughout the year; is never colder than the climate of Cape Colony, South Africa, where these birds thrive so well.

"By irrigation, the whole of this vast plain can be made to produce all the grain needed as food for as many ostriches as can be brought there, and leaves a large surplus for sale. Irrigation can easily be accomplished by boring arteaian wells. No doubt a great future in this direction lies before the Mexicans. Labor is so phenomenally cheap here—farm laborers being paid only 25 cents to 31½ cents per day—the cost of living in the country towns and on farms so trifling, the climate so favourable, and never cold enough in the section above described to injure ostriches, the cactus, of many species, growing wild in such quantities that it would seem as if nature had contrived to arrange this spot as the natural home on this side of the Atlantic for the huge birds who furnish the most beautiful feathers known to man, lay the biggest egg, kick the hardest of all birds, are both monogamists or polygamists as it suits their fancy to be, have the most extraordinary appetite, drink the most water, have the tenderest stomachs (in spite of, or, perhaps, because of all the stones, broken bottles, old clothes, hoopskirts, sardine boxes and other like dainties they freely partake of on occasion,) the most violent passions and are the most terrible fighters of of all birds.

The Theory of Color.

The theory of color is as yet unknown, and we are but on the threshold of a delightful science. Though there are many to whom the study would offer no attractions, yet these would scarcely out-number those who have "no ear" for music, and who, notwithstanding that fact, attend concerts, are taught to "play the piano," and are even given instruction in singing until the tortured ears of the teacher end of the martyrized household lead to their own release from pain. But to those gifted with the capacity it will be an immense boon to have the science of color recognized as such, and laid open to the willing student. The characterisation of colors has yet to be studied. A French writer says, "You may laugh in a sky-blue bonnet, but you must not weep in a rose-colored one." In the same way no one would willingly put on a yellow gown if she felt dull or in a peevish mood. There is a cheerful good-nature about the color, as seen in pansies, in laburnum, or in buttercups, that unsuits it for darker moods. Violet is sentimental, but the paler mauve laughs with good nature and lightness of heart. There is something solemn about the splendour of the more brilliant tints of red, and much of pretentiousness in the decided shades of blue. musicians recognize similar qualities in the various keys in which they write. Some are chosen for interpreting a querulous ditty, and others for words of a melancholy drift. All these possibilities are to be found in colors, as in sounds, in tints as in tones. Many of us now seize these harmonies by a sort of intuition, but our interpretation of them must be as lame and inadequate as was Jubal's harp to render the music of the spheres, perhaps more audible to mortals in those early days of the world's youth. Will no one accomplish for sight what musicians have done for sound? We have not even words wherewith to write of colors, but have to borrow from the language of music. Should any hereafter make the rough places smmoth and the crooked ways straight, it will be matter of gratitude, not only to the possessor of artistic perceptions, but to the world at large, since the science of dress must thereby become greatly simplified, and an infinite variety be rendered possible without further resources than those we now possess.

Photographing Motion.

Interesting experiments in instantaneous photography are being made by Edward Maybridge at the university of Pennsylvania. A space on the college grounds has been set apart with a high board fence surrounding three sides of the enclosure; the fence has been painted a bright white. On the fourth side there is a shed covered with black material, while the ground is covered with an inch of coal dust. This is the background and directly opposite is a little structure, with an open front, containing twelve cameras. On Saturday a splendidly developed young student, a member of the University Crew, stripped to the skin, was photographed in various attitudes. He took his position in front of the row of cameras. At a signal he seized a bucket of water, raised it in the air and tossed away the contents. The instant he moved Mr. Maybridge touched an electric button. A series of sharp clicks sounded as in rapid succession the shutters of each camera were freed. As the last click sounded the water was falling to the ground, and twelve photographs had been taken of the young man, representing twelve phases of the movements through which his body went while lifting the pail and emptying it of water. Even the water itself was photographed as just leaving the pail, again as falling, and again as reaching the ground.

The young athlete was also photographed pulling a rowing machine, climbing a ladder, striking a ball, and other movements designed to bring his muscles into full play.

The Stingiest Man in the World.

The old man who drives the stage over here is the stingiest man in the world, says a Rye Beach correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean. He always collects his money at the start, because several years ago a passenger from New York or somewhere died on the way over, and the old man never got his fare. He doesn't propose to lose another fifty cents in that way. Passengers can do whatever they like, for all he cares, but he proposes to get his money before they do it. They say he used to keep a livery and feed stable, where farmers who came to town put up their horses and fed them. A shoe factory failed at Haverhill, and the old man went over there when they sold the assets at auction. He bought a waggon-load of shoe pegs, brought them home, and put them in an oat bin. When a farmer put up his horse the old man would give the animal four quarts of shoe pegs and charge fifty cents for them. It was a dark barn and the owner couldn't tell them from oats. Of course the horses wouldn't eat any, and the farmer would get scared because they had lost their appetites. The old man had a mixture which he recommended in such cases and which he sold at fifty cents a bottle. It was harmless stuff and was made by stirring up thistle tops or something of that sort, but it had a great reputation, for the horses would be given a dose before they started, and another when they got home, and, having nothing but shoepegs all day, they were hungry enough to eat their own heads off by the time they got the taste of oats. The credit of the appetite was given to the medicine, of course, and the old man got a big reputation as a horse doctor, and made a mint of money out of his thistletop soup soup until the shoepeg business was discovered, when he quit the livery business and went to driving stage.

The Age of the Soldier.

When we hear of veteran soldiers there are few probably who realise how few years of active warfare justify the employment of the term. Two or three years of service in the field are sufficient to convert into trustworthy soldiers the most hastily raised levies. Double that experience would justify the application to any troops of the term veterns. War is in every sense a wasteful occupation, and a few year's experience under an active general will reduce to smallest limits the number of those who have accompanied him through his successive campaigns. As a rule, fighting is done by boys, and the period of adventure, so far as the private soldier is concerned, coincides with that of the pursuit of war. These reflections are suggested to me by a curious mistake, as I regard it, in the picture of "The Morning of Agincourt," which constitutes the solitary contribution of Sir John Gilbert to this year's Academy Exhibition. Buy the description of Grandpre in "King Henry V." quoted in the catalogue, by the words of Chorus depicting the English with "gesture sad," with "lank-lean cheeks and war-worn coats," and by the answer of King Henry to the French herald—

"There's not a feather in our host.
. . . . . .
And time hath worn us into slovenry."

we know how wretched was the appearance of the English soldiers. This is faithfully presented by Sir John Gilbert in a picture worthy of his reputation. To the other misfortunes of the English host, however, he has added old age. Scarcely a man is there whose years can number less than fifty, and not a few may claim another decade. This is, of course, wholly erroneous. In the case of combats waged against foreign ascendency such as were fought by the Swiss, or on behalf of liberty of conscience, like the wars of the Covenanters, middle-aged men may be numbered among the combatants. The armies sent to France under successive kings, however consisted of the personal followers of the great nobles or peasants hastily impressed in Kent or Essex. Youth alone could face such privations as attended the victors at Agincourt.

A Methodist minister once started a church in a young western town, but for want of pecuniary support was soon obliged to abandon it. His farewell sermon to the lukewarm brethren was characterized by more heat than elegance. He ended thus:—"At the last day the Lord will say to St. Peter, 'Where is your flock?' and St. Peter will answer, 'Here, Lord,' He will say to Calvin, 'And where are your sheep?' and Calvin will reply, 'Here, Lord;' and so all of the shepherds can answer. But when he asks me, 'Where are your sheep?' how will you feel when I am compelled to reply, 'Lord, I haven't any; mine were all hogs?'"

A Gorilla Study from Life.

Nature says of the young gorilla of the Jardin des Plantes: It had been imported from the Gaboon, and it was the first living specimen of this great anthropomorphic ape which had been brought to France. Its study would have presented many points of interest, not alone from the natural history point of view, but also from the opportunity it would have afforded for studying the development of its intellectual faculties. This young specimen was about three years of age; he had already his full complement of milk-teeth, and the long and sharp canines were decidedly longer than the molars. In disposition he appeared to be very different from either the ourang-outang or the chimpanzee. While these in a state of captivity are most gentle and sociable, this young gorilla on the other hand was savage, morose and brutal; he never gave his keeper the least mark of affection; he never allowed himself to be touched without evidencing the greatest aversion, and for the most part he returned caresses by snappings. He never took the least part in the games of the other apes, and he most reluctantly tolerated having them near him. He was not very active and most generally he kept himself crouched up in the corner of the cage, or sitting on a branch with his back up against the wall, and scarcely ever moved but to look about for something to eat. He used his hands with much readiness, and they were extremly well developed. His lips were less mobile than in the chimpanzee, especially the lower lip, which was never pouted out when drinking into a spoon shaped form. His eyes were extremely mobile, and were crowned with immense superciliary ridges; his nose was flat, with excessively large nostrils, giving him a quite peculiar physiognomy. Since the above note was presented by Alph Milne-Edwards to the Paris Academy of Sciences, the young gorilla died at Jardin des Plantes.

The First Meerschaum Pipe.

In 1723 there lived in Pesth, the capital of Hungary, Karol Kowates, a shoemaker whose ingenuity in cutting and carving on wood, etc., brought him into contact with Count Andrassy, with whom he became a favorite. The Count, on his return from a mission to Turkey, brought with him a piece of whitish clay, which had been presented to him as a curiosity on account of its extraordinary light specific gravity. It struck the shoemaker that, being porous, it must be well adapted for pipes, as it would absorb the nicotine. The experiment was tried, and Karol cut a pipe for the Count and one for himself. But in the pursuit of his trade he could not keep his hands clean, and many a piece of shoemaker's wax became attached to the pipe. The clay, however, instead of assuming a dirty appearance when Karol wiped it off, received wherever the wax adhered to it a clear brown polish instead of the dull white it previously had. Attributing this change in the tint to its proper source, he waxed the whole surface, and polishing the pipe again, smoked it, and noticed how admirably and beautifully it colored, also how much more sweetly the pipe smoked after being waxed. Other noblemen, hearing of the wonderful properties of this singular species of clay, imported it in considerable quantities for the manufacture of pipes. The natural scarcity of this much esteemed article and the great cost of importation in those days of limited facilities for transportation rendered its use exclusively confined to the richest European noblemen until 1840, when it became a more general article of trade. The first meerschaum pipe made by Karol Kowates has been preserved in the museum of Pesth.—Armagh Guardian.

Prince Leopold as a Host.

Mr. James Payn says in his "Literary Recollections" in the Cornhill: "As a host Prince Leopold was almost faultless. He never forgot, however great might be the interval between their visits, the little peculiarities of his friends. In royal residences the early hours which are essential to my private comfort are not usual, nor is it customary to retire before the master of the house. But long before it grew late he would make some pleasant observation about the habits of those who were not night birds which left me free to go to roost. He was not a student in the ordinary sense of the word, though his knowledge of science and philosophy was probably much superior to mine, but he was well acquainted with the lighter branches of literature, and took great pleasure in them. I had the satisfaction of introducing him to the works of Lefanu, and his admiration of that author (so strangely neglected by the general public, notwithstanding the popularity of some of his imitators) vied with my own. He was fond of humor, though not of the boisterous kind (which perhaps requires physical health for its appreciation), and his favorite modern author was Thackeray. In Scott, too, he took a great delight and pointed out to me with pride a memento which had been given him by his hostess at Abbotsford, the hog oak walking stick which Sir Walter brought away with him from Ireland, and of which he made such constant use. He had had his choice of richer relics, but had the good taste and sense to know what to choose."

The Coming American.

If we could only learn that there are but twenty-four hours in a day. But it is a national fault with us to try to crowd about thirty-six hours into every day. We want to make up ten columns of matter in a nine column paper. When a hen refuses to sit before she is ready, thus teaching humanity a lesson of patience and the eternal fitness of things, we do not yield to the hen; we construct artificial hatchers, and hatch out twelve dozen chicks in forty-eight hours. If plants and vegetables refuse to grow for us as rapidly as we think they should, we force them into hot beds, and make them keep step with the times. We fly past the wind and outstrip the birds with our railway trains; we make water run up hill; we light our streets without oil, gas, or candle; we take the sting out of lightning with platinum tips; when we can't fly we run; and if we have to walk we don't, we simply sit still and telephone. We go up-stairs in an elevator; and we call a messenger boy or policeman or a hack with an electric bell. We won't even make the physical exertion to shout "fire;" we press a button or pull down a hook, and a machine gives the alarm for us. We are going to be physically lazy. If it be true, as the scientists say, that unused members and organs disappear, in so many generations the American people will be a race of men without legs.—Hawkeye.

VAGARIES OF SLEEPLESSNESS.

Queer Ways by Which Victims of Insomnia Soothe Themselves to Slumber.

"The various eccentricities and whimsical fancies of the men and women who suffer from wakefulness defy all rule, and would be amusing if they were not so dangerous to the patient and so discouraging to the doctor. There are many persons who cannot sleep on the left side, others who must have their heads point to some pet quarter of the compass, patients who demand noise, like the ticking of a clock, and others who require perfect silence to enable them to fall asleep. What, for instance, do you think of a woman who cannot, or will not sleep in a room carpeted with anything except straw matting and who cannot sleep in the same room more than ten consecutive nights? I am assured and believe that she has faithfully tried, again and again, to exceed this ten-night limit; that the eleventh night is invariably sleepless, the twelfth excited, hysterical perhaps, the next worse, and so on, until, on two occasions when I have been called, I can assure you that her condition was too critical to admit of a suspicion of malingering."

"Are women more subject to it than men?"

"Not in my experience, nor is it confined to the physically or mentally weak among men. A well known athlete has assured me that, after training for some important event, he used often to be thrown out of condition by sleeplessness for several nights preceding the trial of strength, until he discovered that he could always sleep if the closet door in his chamber were set wide open. Even now, in travelling, if he occupies a room without a closet, he is certain to lose his night's sleep.

"A grave and self-contained judge," continued the physician, "every night ties a black thread tightly round the big toe of his left foot—the right won't do at all—and, with judicial gravity, claims this as a certain cure for what he used to call his "night fits;" while a classmate of mine at college, now an eminent and eloquent clergyman, once confided to me with much self-reproach and perturbation of mind, when he ever had an attack of sleeplessness he became at once possessed by an irresistible temptation to say 'damn,' and that cabalistic word once uttered, his unrest vanished, and sleep came at once. 'Think,' said he to me, solemnly, but with a twinkle in his eye, 'of a minister of the Gospel becoming irresponsibly profane for want of something to put him to sleep, when he has a desk full of old sermons in the house.'"

"Irresponsibly profane?" we repeated.

"Quite so. Maudsley declares insomnia to be a frequent cause of insanity, and I am inclined to regard it as one of the most obscure of mental diseases."

"And the cure?"

"Well, there is a grim humor about giving a restless man the 'active principle of hops' to put him to sleep, but as for the permanent cure, the most satisfactory cures are those queer fancies of the patients themselves. They may be absurd and irrational, but they are lasting, and taste better than most medicines."—N. Y. Sun.

A Bird's Intelligence.

A correspondent of Nature writes: "The following instance of animal intelligence may interest some of your readers. While walking through the forest here the other day, I found a young jay on the ground scarcely able to fly. As I stooped down to examine it I was somewhat startled at a swoop made at my head by the old birds, their wings actually touching my hat. Determined not to be driven away, I remained by the young bird, whereupon a succession of like swoops were made at my head; these I easily succeeded in parrying with my stick, although the old birds frequently came in different directions. After about a couple of minutes the old birds seemed to have come to the conclusion that nothing could be achieved in this fashion, and one of them, flying to some little distance, kept calling to the younger one, who half hopped half flew after her. I, of course, followed; and now occurred what seemed to me a striking instance of animal sagacity. The pines here are covered with lichen and a long hairy kind of moss, which easily crumbled into dust. The cock bird perched himself on the tree over my head, and began pecking with wonderful rapidity at this lichen and moss so that, the moment I looked up a shower of fine dust fell on my face. As I followed the young bird, the old one followed me, got on a branch as close to my head as he could, and sent a shower of dust down upon me. I can scarcely doubt that the dust, like the previous swoops, was intended rather to blind me than to distract my attention. Have instances of like sagacity—i. e., the apparent knowledge of the organ of vision, and the means of injuring it—been noticed in jays before?"

An Illuminated Bouquet.

The latest novelties in bouquets, newer even than pink water lilies or blue hydrangeas, was carried by the Princess of Wales at a ball after the races at Goodwood. It was of roses, and in the middle of it was concealed a miniature electric lamp, the light from which could be turned on at will, by means of a little switch in the form of a lady's brooch. Gentlemen's boutonniers, are also so arranged as to contain an electric light. These, if they come generally into use, will deal a death blow to flirtations in dark places, as a passing friend has but to turn on his battery, and lo! forms and features are revealed with uncompromising distinctness. Paterfamilias will probably be a willing patron of the electric boutonniere, as he can thus not only follow up and drive away ineligibles and detrimentals, but can collect his scattered forces as the small hours approach, and gather them under his wings preparatory to departure.

Madman and Murderer.

A terrible affair is reported from the town of Grulich, in Moravia. A madman killed his son twenty-six years old, with an axe and then cut the body to pieces, declaring that he intended to cure the remains for food. The crime was committed in the presence of the young man's mother, who was crippled with gout and powerless to interfere. The murderer then looked the door of the cottage, which is in an isolated position. On the second day after the occurrence of the crime the mother succeeded in communicating with a passing neighbor, who informed the police. On the arrival of the gendarmes the madman defended himself vigorously with his axe, but was eventually captured.

The Standard.

MARKDALE SEPT. 18, 1884.

CANADA'S GREAT FAIR.

Everything has proved favorable for the success of Toronto Industrial Exhibition. The weather has been simply delightful and the attendance as well as the number of enteries have been in excess of any former year. A greater number left this district this year than any former one, many of whom have not yet returned.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the Standard.

Dayton, Ohio Aug. 30th 1884.

DEAR SIR.—Knowing as I do that your are always pleased to receive news from every avalable source is my plea for writing this letter.

Early last spring I passed from under the British Lion "that braved for a thousand years the battle and the breeze" into the Dominions of that proud bird of liberty the American Eagle, that flaps his protecting wings screeching defiance of all possible enemies, I am now quietly settled down under the proudly flapping folds of the stars and stripes.

I am now duly iniliated into the mysterias of commercial travelling, having visited in business capacity over one hundered of the chief towns and cities of Ohio. This is a fine farming country. The cultivated land is almost free from stone, notwithstanding this, good building stone can easily be obtained from the numerous quarries along the banks of rivers. Crops are good this season, wheat will average 25 bushels per acre; hay 2 to 4 tons and corn 50 bushels; sugar cane, tobacco, sweet potato and and fruit are abundant, harvest is over here generally in July,

Very little snow in this country only 3 to 5 inches in Jan. and Feb. The contest for the presidential chair is waxing warm. In consequence of this there is a little stagnation in business, but as soon as this political campaign is settled an energetic reaction is onticipated. In the course of my peregrinations I came to Dayton nearly two weeks ago, Dayton is a good manufacturing city population 60,000. One of the most stupendieous monuments of human industry exhibited to our eager gaze here is the world famed soldiers' home encercling 750 acres of land cultivated into a "Garden of Eden" by 4,400 heroes of the abolished slavery of the South. This is the largest home in the United States, 2nd is Milwankee 3rd Hampton in Virginia 4th in New York State. The Dayton home was established in 1865 for the disabled Volunteer Soldiers of the Union Army. The dining hall consists of two floors each seating 1,100 persons it requires over 100 waiters to attend to the wants of their comrades. Everything is conducted in a systematic and satisfactory manner. There is a chain of artificial lakes dotted with Islands, they are well stocked with fish an equipment of row boats are in readiness, A well drilled band entertains the visitors with choice operatic airs. The deer park comprising bears, monkeys, allegators, turtles, buffaloes, elks, wolves, birds of various kinds and other animals this is quite an attraction, the beauty of the garden is indescribable. Surmounted by cliffs, terraces and lakes; bordered by grottos, cascadey and murmuring fountains; blessed with living springs of pure water, and enlivened by the music of birds, which give to it an air of fairy land.

Swans drift idly by on the bosom of the lake. Mounted guns, pointing their grim visages over the peaceful water, are unheaded by the approaching flock of water fowl, there are 200 flower beds, laid out and stocked with about 200,000 plants, flowers and shrubs all the products of the home propagating houses and conservatories, the products of the home farm are valued at $20,000 a year; the soldiers consume each day the following.—6,300 lbs. of bread, cakes and biscuit, 4,900 lbs. of beef, poark and fish; 500 lbs. of butter 500 lbs. of cheese; 600 lbs. of tea 1,200 gals. of coffee, 150 gals. of milk; 240 lbs. of sugar; 300 doz. of eggs; 600 lbs. of beans; 45 bushels of onions; 50 bushels of potatoes 650 lbs. of dried apples; 240 gals. of oysters on Christmas Day; 2,600 lbs. of turkey on Thanksgiving Day; 240 doz. of oranges on each holiday, there are 2,600 noble heroes deposed in the cemetery, and seldom a day passes but the roll of the muffled drum and the farewell volley informs the survivors that another of them has gone to join the ranks of the dead. The Soldiers Monument near the cemetry is 48 feet high surmounted by a statue of colossal size, of a private soldier at parade rest. One on the four corners stand life like representations of the four branches of the servises. All the statutes are of pure white marble and are carved in the highest style of art coming from Italy, this monument was erected at a cost of $20,000. I leave here to-day for Cincinnati thence to Kentuckey about end of Sept. Be pleased to insert the above notes and oblige.

Yours Faithfully,
P. J. McCASEY.

Walters Falls.

From our own Correspondent.

DEAR SIR.—After a nap, Rip Van Winkle like, of about a quarter of a Century, this place is rousing itself and begining to show remarkable signs of activity. Refreshed, doubtless, by the long slumber, the probability is, that this village will advance with astonishing rapidity, to be sure, it may not be able in the long run, to rival Chicago or New York; however, when once fairly started on the progressive road, no one can predict with certainty when or where the final stop will be made.

To drop Metaphor and Hyperbole and desend to plain, common sense, practical, affairs, the village has undoubtedly made greater advance this last year than in any previous one within the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

First and foromost, comes the new Roller Flouring Mill, fitted up with the latest improved machinery; a handsome structure, which would do credit to any Town or village in the Dominion, the conception of which, and successful completion, being mainly due to the praiseworthy enterprise and perseverance of our respected townsmen Messrs. Richard Olmstead and Clarke. Early insummer a fine new barn overlooking the village was put up on his place by Mr. Robt. Walters, then came Dr. McClelland's new Grocery and Drugstore, there is now also in course of erection three building's, one for the sale of Agricultural Implements by Mr. Jas. Delerce Mail carrier. one for a general Store by Mr. George King, and the other a dwelling House by Mr. Wm. Mc Quaker. This Limstone Ridge is considered to be a very healthy site, the creek that flows briskly through and turns the Mills, is a natural drain, by carrying off all superfluous water, no stagnent pools ever form, and Misma and Malaria are unknown. From the village can be seen to the west, a fine tract of clear land which for Agricultural capabilities might compare favorably with any in the Province. Then we have the famous Falls, although not quite so grand as Niagara, they present attractions, to tourists and visitors, by the romantic beauty of the surrounding scenery. Cheering accounts come from all quarters around here of the magnificent crops, and favorable Harvest, which will make the farmer's heart war glad and many others besides.

There is very little discussion of the Scott Act in this place at present, public attention is probably directed, to the great contest about to take place in Halton, and which will be decided in a few days. with regard to the argument so much dwelt upon by the opponents of the Act, viz., "The infringement of personal liberty," I would merely say, that there exists, compulsory Vaccination compulsory education, compulsory Sanitary regulations all for the public weal, and I can see no good reason why there should not also be, enforced sobriety.

BARRY LYNDON.

Mr. John Pepper, father of the Rev. Mr. Pepper, Methodist Minister of this place, died on Tuesday evening aged 78 years.

Prominent among the greatest medical discoveries, by the many cures it has effected, McGregor's Speedy Cure leads the van. Subjected to the minutest chemical analysis, it has been found to contain none of those injurious ingredients characterizing the worthless specifics daily offered to the public. Every ingredient possesses a peculiar adaptability to the various complaints for which it has been compounded, and its efficacy is being established by testimonials hourly received. We are therefore confident that we have a preparation which we can offer to the public with the assurance that it will be found not only a relief but an absolute cure for Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Constipation and Impure Blood. Free trial bottles at Hill Bro's. A. & S. 4

Dundalk.

From our own correspondent.

Sabbath last was an exciting day. The swamp near the village was found covered to be on fire about noon, the high wind blowing in the direction of the village made it very dangerous. At one time it was feared the village could not be saved. While men were watching the school house, it was discovered that the yeard of McGregor's mill was on fire. The fire had caught underneath a very large pile of lumber. Fortunately steam had been got up and the pump was set to work. Willing hands had been summoned at the first outbrake by the bell, and whistle, and by means of desparate work the lumber was removed, and the fire extinguished. It was feared that they would have to abandon it at times, but persevernance was rewarded, and the mill saved, very fortunately too, for there was no insurance.

During the removal of the lumber, a heavy hardwood plank was thrown on Mr. Morgan, inflicting a terrible wound on the top of his head. He was assisted home, and is now doing well.

Toward evening it was deemed advisable to light the part of the swamp, and long grass near the village, as the wind had changed to a more favorable direction. and a number of men with torches did so, but again the wind changed and the village was than in greater danger. The firebell and whistle summoned aid to the workers, and at once emptied the churches shortly after the commencement of the sermons. The danger was then very great, as the wind was driving the brands and coals in every direction, but just then a welcome thunder storm passed over, of which we received sufficient to very considerably lessen of not remove danger.

The question of the seperation of Proton from the county of Grey and its annexation to Dufferin is now being agitated. From what has been said, it appears the township would have everything to gain, and nothing to lose by the step.

AN ANSWER WANTED.

Can any one bring us a case of kidney or liver complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure? We say they can not, as thousands of cases already permanently cured and who are daily recommending Electric Bitters, will prove. Bright's disease, diabetes, weak back, or any urinary complaint quickly cured. They purify the Blood regulate the bowels, and act directly on the diseased parts. Every bottle guaranteed. For sale at 50 cents a bottle by A. Turner & Co., Markdale. 1

IN THE WOODS AND CHATTELS.

IN THE ESTATE OF

JOHN MANAREY,

(DECEASED.)

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Pursuant to Section 34 of Chapter 107, R. S. O. the creditors of John Manarey, late of the Township of Euphrasia, County Grey, deceased, who died on or about the 30th May 1884, and all parties having claims upon his estate are, on or before the 1st DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1884 to send by post, prepaid, to Joseph Manarey, giving P. O., in the County of Grey, administrator of the personal estate and effects of deceased, their christian and surnames, addresses and description, the full particulars of their claims a statement of their accounts and nature of the securities (if any) held by them, and in default thereof the assets of said deceased will be distributed, having regard only to the claims then received, or those of them which the administrator then have notice.

JOS. MANAREY,
Administrator

Date September 4th 1884.

FARM FOR SALE.

A valuable property of 75 acres, comprising Lot 40, and west half of 42, 1st East T. & S. Road, Holland one mile from Williamsford Station, the place is in good shape, fit to run a reaper and mower, good orchard, well fenced, picket fence around orchard and front of lot with maple trees planted inside, good dwelling house, also good barn and out houses. Title good, no transfers from the crown. For further particulars apply on the premises to owner ROBERT CLARK Williamsford Station P. O. 209—211. Pd.

HEAP'S PATENT

Dry Earth or Ashes Closet Factory

UNION STREET, (B. Allans Old Stand,)
OWEN SOUND.

By this system you can have a closet inside your house (if desired) and yet have no smell from it.

By their use you ensure Health, Comfort and Cleanliness.

CALL AND SEE THEM WORKING.

Wm. Heap, SANITARY ENGINEER.

Agent for Markdale; W. Cornwall.

Notice of Dessolution of Partnership.

Notice is hereby given, that the partnership lately subsisting between W. H. Rutledge and John Trelford of Markdale, under the name of Rutledge & Trelford. butchers, was dissolved on the 13th day of September 1884, by Mutual consent, The business will be carried on by W. H. Rutledge who will collect all accounts, and pay all liabilities of the late firm.

Signed { W. H. RUTLEDGE,
JOHN TRELFORD.

—:o Toronto House, o:—

We are now showing special drives in New, Stylish and Fashionable

Dress Goods, Laces, Trimmings. Mantle Cloths, Buttons, Hosiery,

LADIES & GENTS UNDERCLOTHING ETC.

—:o:—

TWEEDS, CANADIAN, SCOTCH and WEST of ENGLAND for Men's and Boys' Suits, Overcoats and Garments—Cheap, Fashionable and Stylish.

BOOTS AND SHOES

For all ages and conditions from the heavy Stoga to the finest Kid. These goods are unsurpassed—price, value and quality considered.

We invite special attention to our

BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED TEA SETS,

Suitable for Wedding Gifts or Birthday Presents.

TEAS A Spesialty from 15c to 60c per lb. Every grade. Splendid value. TEAS

Give us a call. Examine & compare goods & prices

Markdale, Sept. 1, 1884. 190-tf WM. BROWN.

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

BIRTHS.

MCLEOD—At Manitoulin, on the [illegible] the wife of W. A. McLeod, of a [illegible]

MARRIAGES.

DOUGHERAN—WOOD—By the Rev. Grandy at the Methodist Parsonage dale, on the 11th inst., Mr. Jacob head to Miss Eliza Wood all of Eup

DEATHS.

GOULD—In Euphrasia, on the 1st infant child of Mr. James Gold.

BOWLER—In Artemesia, on the 26th William Roy. son of Mr. Wesley aged 1, month and 15 days.

MANN—In Markdale on the 9th Reignald C. I. son of Mr. Thos. aged 4, months 3 days.

COOPER—In Euphrasia, on the 14th Rachel wife of Mr. Wm. Cooper, years.

VISITORS TO OWEN SO

DON'T FAIL TO CALL AT

THE "BON MARCH

THEY HAVE THE

LARGEST, BEST and CHEAPE

ASSORTMENT OF

CROCKER

AND WILL SELL

Lower than the Tor Houses.

Look at Thi

A GOOD ENGLISH-MA

SERGE SU

(This is no Shoddy.)

BOYS' - - - FROM
YOUTHS' - - - "
MENS' - - - "

Everybody should loo at the

Bon March

They sell everything

ROCK BOTTOM PRIC

B. ALLEN'S old s

OWEN SOU

TO SCHOOL TRUST

The undersigned is manufacturing cellent assortment of

School Furnitu

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of design and most approved pattern. recommended by School Trustees and ers, for cheapness, comfort and wherever tried. An assortment of School Bells kept always on hand. catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW M

STEER ASTRA

LOT 90, Con. 2, West of Tor Sydenham Road, Glenel white spotted steer, with horns tur year old. Any person giving satisf formation will be suitably rewarded.

MARSHALL BA

205-207 Markd

New Butcher Sh

The best meats the country can kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PART

THE TOWN WHERE ORDE

A share of public patronage re solicited.

Remember the stand in McNe

RUTLEDGE & TRELF

181

EUCENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath

Having made extensive improv my Grist Mill I feel confident I good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON

Chopping Done Every

Custom Sawing and Bills Fille shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH A ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Log

69ly. M. AKITT.

WALTHAM, ELGIN. SWISS WATCHES.

LARGE STOCK OF CLO
Quadruple Plated War
Wedding Rings, 18
RINGS, CHAINS, SEAL
Lazzarus & Morris and Specks, good Violin Str Musical Instruments.

Careful and accurate re ing personally attended to fully warranted.

Square Dealing. - Fair Pr

W. A. BROWN
MARKDALE

Local and Other Item

NOTICES in these columns intended to b any individual or Society will be charge cents a line for the first insertion an cents a line each subsequent insertion.

School Books — And Statio at the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

GLENELG Council meets on the at the town hall.

Dye Stuffs at the Medical Hall Turner & Co.

A MAN who smokes is said to third class male (mail) matter.

National Pills the favorite purgative anti-bilious medicine, they are mild thorough.

HOLLAND Council will meet Williamsford on Monday the 22n

HAMILTON the Markdale photog her is turning out magnificent tures.

WHY is maple molasses like f because they work best in hot weat

What makes me laugh when others
It is because I always buy
McFarland's Tea.

THE last Markdale cattle fair fairly attended and prices somew improved.

MOTTO. PHOTO, and picture fra selling out at a great discount for month at the photo gallery, Mark

THE Weekly Mail to the en 1885 for $1, subscription taken at STANDARD office.

What is it makes me hale and stout
And all my friends can't make it
McFarland's Tea.

THE Weekly Globe for $1, to end of 1885 leave your name subscription at this office.

WHY buy shody boots when can get genuine leather ones at Farland's.

MR. ALEX. WEBSTER, formerly Priceville has opened a general s in Cookstown.

Single copies of the ST DARD five cents each.

MR. F. MACRAE has leased an o in Dunlop's building two doors S of the City Hotel, where he will att to conveyancing &c.

WHY buy old trashy auction go when McFarland sells nice, cle fresh goods. Imported direct.

THE Royal Templars in this vil had an addition of eight members their last regular meeting.

PAIN from indigestion or sick h ache is instantly relieved by one d of Rejuvinator Bitters, made f roots and herbs. Sold by Smith, barber.

MR. D. S. MONROE, now teach at Dungannon has been engaged head teacher in Flesherton School.

The magical power over pain that Hagya Yellow Oil possesses, outrivals the mar of ancient times. It acts in a natural man to subdue inflammation; cures Rheumati Croup, Deafness, Sore Throat, and pai injuries.

LARGE stock of Rejuvinator Bitt at Smith the barber's this week. T best preventative from Cholera.

ANOTHER lot of that famo Japan tea, 50 cents per l worth 70, at R. J. Sproule Flesherton.

THE Scott Act will be voated on the united counties of stormont, Du das and Glengarry on the 16 October.

WALTHAM,

ELGIN. SWISS

WATCHES.

LARGE STOCK OF CLOCKS,
Quadruple Plated Ware,

Wedding Rings, 18 k.,

RINGS,
CHAINS,
SEALS,

Lazzarus & Morris and Boss Specks, good Violin Strings, Musical Instruments.

Careful and accurate repairing personally attended to and fully warranted.

Square Dealing. - Fair Prices.

W. A. BROWN.
MARKDALE.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

School Books—And Stationary at the Medical Hall. A. Turner & Co.

Glenelg Council meets on the 29th at the town hall.

Dye Stuffs at the Medical Hall. A Turner & Co.

A man who smokes is said to be third class male (mail) matter.

National Pills the favorite purgative and anti-bilious medicine, they are mild and thorough.

Holland Council will meet at Williamsford on Monday the 22nd.

Hamilton the Markdale photographher is turning out magnificent pictures.

Why is maple molasses like flies; because they work best in hot weather.

What makes me laugh when others sigh
It is because I always buy
McFarland's Tea.

The last Markdale cattle fair was fairly attended and prices somewhat improved.

Motto. Photo, and picture frames selling out at a great discount for one month at the photo gallery, Markdale.

The Weekly Mail to the end of 1885 for $1, subscription taken at the Standard office.

What is it makes me hale and stout
And all my friends can't make it out
McFarland's Tea.

The Weekly Globe for $1, to the end of 1885 leave your name and subscription at this office.

Why buy shody boots when you can get genuine leather ones at McFarland's.

Mr. Alex. Webster, formerly of Priceville has opened a general store in Cookstown.

Single copies of the Standard five cents each.

Mr. F. MacRae has leased an office in Dunlop's building two doors South of the City Hotel, where he will attend to conveyancing &c.

Why buy old trashy auction goods when McFarland sells nice, clean, fresh goods. Imported direct.

The Royal Templars in this village had an addition of eight members at their last regular meeting.

Pain from indigestion or sick headache is instantly relieved by one dose of Rejuvinator Bitters, made from roots and herbs. Sold by Smith, the barber.

Mr. D. S. Monroe, now teaching at Dungannon has been engaged as head teacher in Flesherton School.

The magical power over pain that Hagyard's Yellow Oil possesses, outrivals the marvels of ancient times. It acts in a natural manner to subdue inflammation; cures Rheumatism, Croup, Deafness, Sore Throat, and painful injuries.

Large stock of Rejuvinator Bitters at Smith the barber's this week. The best preventative from Cholera.

Another lot of that famous Japan tea, 50 cents per lb., worth 70, at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

The Scott Act will be voated on in the united counties of stormont, Dundas and Glengarry on the 16th October.

Mr. Bar is going to have the most handsome shop front in town, besides being the first and only plate glass front in Markdale.

Why Jennie.—Would you believe it! You can get Factory Cotton for 4 cents a yard at the "Bon Marche," Owen Sound. They sell everything at rock bottom prices.

Are you a subscriber to the Standard and would like to send the paper to a friend, if so we will forward it the balance of the year to any address free of postage for 25 cents.

Large stock of hair oil to hand splendid preparation keeps the head free from dandruff makes the hair soft and glossy. Sold by Smith the barber.

The Shelburne Free Press is to be enlarged this week, this paper has been materially improved during the year, and is now about to take an important "forward march."

The Weekly Globe.—We are now prepared to take subscriptions for the Weekly Globe for balance of this year and all of 1885 for $1. The cash must accompany the order. Hand them in to this office at once and get three months free.

If you should be so unfortunate as to Burn Scald or Wound yourself in any way the proper thing to keep clean and heal it is McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Insist on having, and be sure you get, McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Price 25 cents. Hill Bro's. has the genuine. J. & J. 2

A change has been made in the railway time table, trains now run about on the old time. We cannot say how long this arrangement may last, as changes come often and sudden lately. A number from Euphrasia on their way to the Industerial Exhibition last week got left owing to the unexpected change.

For Sale.—Fire Insurance agency in the village of Markdale. Apply to W. L. Young.

A cattle yard has been provided by the Railway Company at Berkely station, which is a great convenience to the farming community.

Mr. J. R. Trimble of this village has four horses at the Toronto exhibition this week.

Mr. M. L. Hawken of the 11th line Euphrasia, had a cow which got her leg broken by getting fast between two roots of a tree recently.

The highest price paid for skins at Walker Bro's. store and tin depot, Markdale.

Plewes' new mill is up and being pushed forward with all possible speed, Mr. Plewes, the mill-wright is determined to make a model roller mill of it.

Light.—The greatest invention of the age is the electric lamp. It will produce as much light as six ordinary lamps. See it; buy it. John Richards agent for Markdale.

Sheep.—Mr. Wm. Shepherdson of Euphrasia will exibit this fall at the various local fairs two large load of sheep, in Cotswool, Leicester and Shropshire Downs, all of which he will offer for sale.

One car load stoves just arrived which will be sold at the lowest living prices, an inspection invited. Walker Bro's. Markdale.

Omitted.—The Glenelg Agricultural Society will give a premium of $1 & 50 for first and second prize factory made cheese, 40 lbs. this being accidentaly omited in the prize list, those interested will take notice.

A large assortment of tinware, granite ware, lamps, brushes, brackets &c., at bottom prices at Walker Bro's. Markdale.

The Montreal Star will be sent to new subscribers from the 1st October 84 to the 1st January 1886 for $1. Now is your time to secure the best family paper published 15 months for $1. Subscribe at this office,

Oh Mary.—Call and get me a Spool of Cotton from the "Bon Marche," Owen Sound. It is only 3 cents. They keep all makes. The cheapest store in town. Needles 2 cents a packet.

Geo. Grant & Co., are doing a good seasons business in the planing factory line, having turned out a great amount of dressed lumber, sash, doors, &c., &c., and have given general satisfaction. They also keep a good stock of furniture.

A big discount off the balance of wheel rigs at Shanahan's Carriage Works, we have not many left and are bound to clear them all out to make room for our winter work which is now in the way. Call at once and get a bargain in a waggon, carriage or buggy, all guaranteed for four years.

New fashioned.—A few days ago a lady was shopping at McFarland's; after making somewhat extensive purchases wound up by asking the clerk for twenty-five cents worth of new fashioned rice, she was promptly helped to Tapioca which proved to be the desired article.

Well Mother.—I am sure no one need be afraid to by at the "Bon Marche," Owen Sound. "Just listed. They will refund the money for any article not approved of if returned within seven days, neither soiled nor worn. No credit.

Our Little Ones for September is as bright and attractive as ever. For beauty and variety of illustrations and interesting and attractive reading matter, it stands unsurpassed as a magazine for children. $1.50 a year. Russell Publishing Co., Boston, Mass.

Miss Ford continues to improve and is now considered out of all danger. The bullet still remains in her face, but causes no inconvenience or pain. She attended church last Sunday and will probably soon resume her place in school.

Accident.—Last Friday Mr. Isaac Plewes Mill-wright received a stroke from a stick of scantling while working on Plewes' new mill, the stick struck him accross the eyes and it was thought he was fatally wounded but we are glad to state he is fast recovering.

Markets.—Every farmer is now anxious to know the state of the market and the prospects for prices of farm produce. Everything at present indicates low prices, wheat especially is very cheap and likely to rule low.—Following are Markdale markets as we go to press. Fall Wheat per bushel 65 to 70: Spring 60 to 70; Oats 25: Barley 45 to 55: Grass Seed 1.50 to 1.75: Potatoes 30. Butter 17. Eggs 15.

Did'nt come.—C. P. Sherman's New York Comedy advertised for an exhibition in Markdale last week but failed to put in an appearance.

Their advance agent left several small unpaid bills here as also in other places in the district where his show was announced to take place.

Tea meeting.—A tea meeting will be held in Hannah's School House, 10th line Holland on Friday the 26th inst., the entertainment to consist of addresses by several reverend gentlemen and readings, recitations, songs, and music &c., by well known amateurs. The Markdale M. church are choir also announced to be present. Admission 25 cents, tea served at 6.30 p. m. See posters for full particulars.

The Dundalk Herald has entered on its fourth year and the proprietor, Mr. T. Hall, is sparing no pains to make it a success, the people of Dundalk should give it a liberal support which it richly deserves. The Herald is the best paper for its size in the county, and it is large enough for any country paper.

Pick Pockets.—On Monday evening last Mr. Wm. McNally, a neighboring farmer, got "full" while in this village, and in his anxiety to let his associates know he was not "strapped" exhibited a number of bills; later in the evening he was relieved of his wealth by some unknown person or persons. The next morning however he found his pocket-book minus some $22. Strong suspicion rests on two youths of the town who left for the exhibition by first train.

A base-ball match was played on Tuesday between Dundalk and Flesherton, club's resulting in a victory for the former by five runs, the score standing thus, Dundalk 25, Flesherton 18. The "Pastimes" of Dundalk, have come out victorious in every match they have played this year. Success to the Professionals.

Balance of '84 free.—We will send the Standard to new subscribers from the 1st October to the end of 1885 for $1, to any address, or we will put in the Toronto Weekly News with the Standard for the same period for $1.50 Now is the time to secure cheap reading matter, send in the dimes with your name and address at once to this office.

The Markdale Standard is nine years old. Under four years of Mr. Rutledge's care the Standard has been greatly improved, and the circulation has largely increased. We hope the sun of prosperity will never cease to shine on friend Rutledge. He proposes shortly to purchase a power press on account of his increasing circulation.—Dundalk Herald.

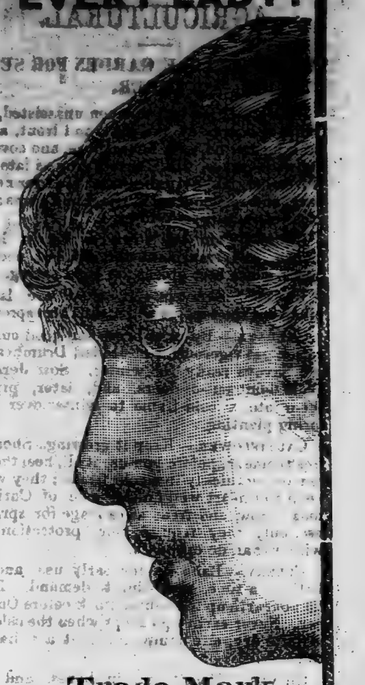
It is costomary for country papers to suspend publication one week in the year. We did so last week; it was however the first week in which the Standard was not published for two years.

We trust our correspondents will now cause the columns of Standard to sparkle with interesting items from throughout the district.



Serious Fire.—Mr. Donald O'Hanly's barn and out buildings 8th con. Glenelg were destroyed by fire together with his entire crop Tuesday last. The fire originated from bush fires which are raging in that vicinity. Mr. O'Hanly's loss will be keenly felt as he had no Insurance. He is an honest industrious man, and cannot well bear such a loss. We trust the public may come to his assistance in a practical manner.

Destroy the worms or they may destroy the children. Use Freeman's Worm Powders, they expel all kinds of worms.

INVALUABLE TO EVERY LADY!

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms, and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun burn, Tan, Ringworm, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness; imparting a perfectly healthy, natural and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price, $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Address all letters to the MAY DEW AGENCY, 167 Church Street, Toronto, Ont. Parlor and Reception Room for Ladies.

Trade Mark.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble

And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

ROBT. S. RAE, Sydenham St., Markdale. TAILOR,

SAW MILL AND TIMBER LAND FOR SALE OR TO LET

In the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, 4 miles from Flesherton Station, on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The mill is situated at Little Falls, in a block of about 400 acres timber lnd, with other timber land surrounding. The building is substantially built on stone foundation. The machinery is all good and driven with great power by a 23 inch Leffell wheel, under 36 ft. head of water. There are one large circular saw for cutting logs, 2 small circulars for sawing lath and broom handles, 1 guage lathe for turning broom handles, etc., 1 shingle machine with jointer and packer complete. The water power is excellent, the stream being very regular. There are several other good mill sites on the proverty. The land in the valley is considered the best in the country. The place would make an excellent stock farm when the timber is taken off.

This offers a good opportunity for a practical, energetic man to go into this kind of business, as the place will be sold or let on liberal terms.

The bush is so convenient to the mill logs can be trucked in summer time. Immediate possession given.

Apply to the proprietor, WM. HOGG,
FLESHERTON STATION P. O., ONT.

—Good Work Guaranteed—
—AT—
Bulmers Photograph Gallery
FLESHERTON.

Call at once and see samples of work which we are not ashamed to show.

All kinds of Framing done cheap at

JAS. BULMER'S. FLESHERTON.

AGRICULTURAL.

THE VEGETABLE GARDEN FOR SEPTEMBER.

BEANS.—If too late to ripen unassisted, a frame of boards at the back and front, and banking around with hot manure, and covering with sashes, will secure a crop as late as November. Save ripe beans for seed for next year, and remember that ripe Lima beans are excellent eating in Winter.

BEETS.—Thin out sowings put in last month, and transplant thinnings if necessary; if not beet greens are good eating.

BRUSSEL SPROUTS.—If they are late, pinch out the tops; it will make them sprout.

CABBAGE.—By cleanliness and good cultivation get vigorous, firm headed Drumheads and Savoys ready for winter. Sow Jersey Wakefield out-of-doors, and, later, prick them into a cold-frame to winter over for spring planting.

CAULIFLOWER.—Keep it growing. Should frost come on before you use it all, heel those remaining thickly in a cold frame; they will keep and heart well on this side of Christmas. Sow and treat as cabbage for spring use, only they require more protection in winter than do cabbages.

CELERY.—Bank up for early use, and a little at a time, according to demand. But do not earth up the winter stock before October. Never earth up except when the celery is quite dry, else damp and rust are liable to occur.

CHIVES.—Plant some in boxes, and by keeping them warm, you can have green chives all through the winter.

CORN SALAD.—Sow some on light, sheltered ground. It is perfectly hardy, and will afford you greens in early spring.

CUCUMBERS.—Sow some seeds or set out some young plants in a frame; as cold weather comes on, line the frame with hot manure.

ENDIVE.—Tie up a few at a time of that which is nearly full grown. Plant out thickly that which you intend wintering over, and before hard frost sets in, put a frame, well banked, around it, and keep the endive dry overhead.

GERMAN GREENS.—Sow about the middle of the month in rows a foot apart. In winter cover with a tin mulching, which remove early in spring.

LEEKS.—Cultivate and keep clean. For winter use, mulch among them with dry leaves, or lift and heel them in thickly in a cold-frame, pit, or cellar.

LETTUCE.—Before frost comes, get all your hearting lettuces together, so that you can protect them with a frame if necessary. Sow Curled Silesia and Tennis Ball in the third week of the month, and, later, prick them thicky into a cold-frame to winter over for planting in hot-beds in early spring.

MUSTARD makes a capital salad. Cut it for use when it is only four or six days old.

ONIONS.—Plant out sets in rows a foot apart, three to four inches asunder, and four inches deep. Examine the ripe onions occasionally, remove the spoiling ones, and break the sprouts from others.

OYSTER PLANTS AND PARSNIPS need no care for a few weeks yet.

PARSLEY.—Lift and plant some in a cold-frame for winter and early spring use. Thin those sown last month.

RADISHES.—Sow a few out-of-doors, and after this in a gentle hot-bed.

SPINACH.—Put in a goodly sowing of the prickly-seeded for next spring's use. In winter a thin mulching of clean sedge or thatch helps it; but do not put it on thick, as it is apt to harbor field mice. Round spinach put in now will give a good crop before winter sets in. If you have New Zealand Spinach, put a box frame over it to keep it from frost. It keeps in good condition as long as you keep frost from it.

SAVING SEEDS.—Save what seeds you can conveniently. Your own saved seeds are just as good as what you can buy. Peppers, cucumbers, melons, tomatoes, beans, and many other things may be saved with very little trouble. But if your time and space for gardening are limited, it may not pay you to save onions, carrots, parsley, turnips and other biennials. Seeds are so cheap that it does not pay to go to much bother in saving our own if our demand is small.

ONIONS.—In the last week of last September, I planted a lot of yellow Danvers Onion sets in rich ground, in rows a foot apart, three to four inches between the sets, and four inches deep. They grew a little in the fall; I did not cover them at all in winter, and I did not lose one bulb, and in spring they grew first rate. Many of them threw up flower-heads, but these were removed every week. By the end of June they had made splendid bulbs, and showed an inclination to ripen. On the 9th of July I had them all pulled up, and laid on their sides in rows to ripen; on the 15th I topped them all, and brought them inside. Potato onion sets I treated in the same way and with equal results, except that they do not throw up any flower-heads. Another thing about potato onions is, that the large sets do not bear large onions, but, instead, a bunch of small ones; it is the small sets that bear the large onions. Onions from sets, if need be, can be harvested about the first of July, and sold at a profit you cannot realize for seed onions, and you have the ground for early strawberry planting, late peas, snap beans, beets, turnips, cauliflowers or early celery. Onions from sets are poor keepers in winter; they are apt to sprout, hence should be disposed of or used up early. Let seed and potato onions be the mainstay for winter.—Rural New Yorker.

He Had Tried It.

Two Hamilton citizens were toddling up street the other day, and the close and earnest manner with which they were seen to be in conversation clearly betokened that they were exchanging their experience with dispepsia.

"And did you ever try the hot water cure?" asked the thin man, as they paused at the melancholy man's gate.

"Did I?" repeated the melancholy man in a tone of sarcasm; "Well, I should say I did! Why, I've been married fourteen years."

It is impossible to be a hero in anything unless one is first a hero in faith.

In the literary as well as military world, most powerful ability will often be found concealed under a rustic garb.

The Net of Marriage.

Some people, especially if they marry young and on the impulse of some taking fancy, without a due consideration of the very grave nature of the state they are entering, discover afterward that his or her mate does not come up to the expectations which had been formed. The light and laughing love of the marriage and the early periods of married life are succeeded by a sense of disappointment. Then comes domestic indifference, perhaps recrimination. Both man and wife are deceived and undeceived. Unintentionally perhaps, but really. Both feel, as it were, entangled. They have married in haste, and repent too often, not at leisure, but with mutual bitterness and ill-concealed unconcern for one another. Each generally thinks the other most to blame. And I do not believe that I am overstepping the limits of appropriate language when I say that the idea of being caught in a net represents their secret convictions. Here is a disastrous state of affairs. In this country such a net cannot be easily broken. The pair have married for worse, in a more serious sense than these words are intended to bear in the marriage vows. What is to be done? I should very imperfectly express my advice if I simply said, "Make the best of it." For though this is a rude rendering of the advice needed, much might be said to show how this can be done after a Christian way. It is a great Christian rule that, to be loved, we must show kindness and consideration, and not expect to receive what we do not grant ourselves. "Give," says Christ, "and it shall be given unto you. Judge not, and you shall not be judged. Condemn not, and you shall not be condemned." And if this applies anywhere, it applies most in the case of those who are in the close relationship of husband and wife. Clouds sometimes come over the married life because too much consideration is expected. Show it, I would say rather than demand it, if it has seemed to come short. Do not think to mend matters by a half-grudging endurance, but ask God to give His sacred help to the keeping of the rule, "Bear and forbear." So may a hasty marriage, the beauty of which has been spoiled by some misunderstandings, ripen into the true affection which should mark this holy estate, and the cloud of disappointment give place to a love which rests upon no passing fancy, but upon an honest Christian observance between man and wife of the vow between them made. So may the miserable afterthought of having been entangled in a relationship be blotted out and succeeded, as years go on, by a love cemented with the desire to do right before God, in whose presence and with prayer for whose blessing the relationship was begun. —Sunday at Home.

Satisfactory Evidence

Among the many indications of a marked advance in temperance sentiment, there is none more satisfactory and assuring than the demand of the public for sound speech from the platform, and of logic and practical common sense, rather than sentimentalism and twaddle. The time was, when to be a successful temperance advocate it was only necessary to have a fund of comic stories, and be able to mimic in word and act the drunkard's reelings and gibberings, and possibly picture the sufferings of his family, and shed a few tears over the "scene" just before the curtain fell. The audience then went home feeling that the entertainment had been quite agreeable; that intemperance was indeed an evil, but with not the remotest idea that any effort could or should be made to contest the evil.

But the advocate of this work to-day must come before the people having his mouth filled with the soundest arguments, and his mind stored with statistics, facts and law, in short, possessed of the ability to educate and lead the people. So effective has been the results of the agitation upon this question that the great mass of the people have themselves become fully awake to the demands of the hour, and the call is for something substantial and tangible—not the froth and foam of that agitation which only weakens and enervates public sentiment. And all over the land such men, and women too, are coming to the front. No reform ever had more ardent or able advocates. The greatest minds of the country are giving thoughtful consideration to this problem, which to-day, despite the efforts of politicians to smother it, is the most important, and only really prominent issue before the nation. With singularly few exceptions the old anti-slavery leaders are among the hosts of freemen in the present movement against the iniquity which curses the nation, the state and the individual. Unlike the movement against slavery, however, the good people of every section are united. There might be slight difference as to methods, but these differences only lead to agitation and to thought which profit both the individual and the cause itself. There never was a time in the history of this great national, moral reform when sentiment was growing so rapidly, and in the right direction, as at the present. Again we say, the most assuring evidence is in the character of public address required to satisfy the people.

JOHNNIE'S KITE.

Narrow Escape of a Boy From a Terrible Fate.

A recent New York telegram says: Johnnie MacIntover, 7 years of age, went on the roof of his father's house, in Hester street, to-day to fly his big kite. It flew so well that he did not realize that he was approaching the edge of the roof, so intently was the little fellow watching the huge toy. Suddenly a strong gust of wind caught the kite and literally lifted him from his feet, suspending him fully 65 feet above the pavement. The lad swung against a telephone wire about on a level with the top of the building, when, loosing his hold upon his spool of string, he grasped the wire and hung directly above the street. There was great excitement in the street, when Franz Newman, a lad of fourteen, darted up the stairway and went upon the roof. He made his way to the edge, and, leaning over, caught young MacIntover by his coat collar, and lifting him off the wire, swung him to a place of safety.

Billy Clark the town crier at Nantucket, is credited with a recent sharp answer. A young lady who had made some remarks about him which he did not like asked him where he got his bell. "I got my bell, young lady, where you got your manners—at the brass foundry,"

Coming down the first Cataract of the Nile.

At first we went very well, and were beautifully steered first from one rock, then from another, until we came to the Gate. The crew raised their oars, and the dahabeah pitched straight down. The rush and power of the water was awful; the only sound, for every one held his breath for a moment. All would have been well had the cataract folk stuck to their oars and rowed on the left to get the better of the water the instant the boat regained its level, for there is only just enough to clear Scylla and Charybdis and all depends upon the work of a minute. But the pilot steered badly, the crew saw it, lost their presence of mind, and dropped their oars, and scampered like monkeys up the rigging as the water dashed over us, and bump we went against one rock, then bump against another; despairing shrieks re-echoed through the boat, and all flew to the bows, the gentlemen, both passengers and visitors from another dahabeah who had come to see the fun all helping to bale. We womankind, thinking this was a temporary delay, an ordinary bumping, took our pains and began sketching the wreck of the "Sultana," as it lay before us. I had just scrawled "7.30. We have bumped," under mine, when up came one of the gentlemen, with gun-case in hand saying, "Get anything you really care for, we may have to leave the boat." A few seconds after up rushed the gentleman, crying, "The water is gaining rapidly; come instantly!" We shall never forget the scene. Oh! the yells, the screams, the confusion! The one thought of our crew proper was to save themselves and their goods. The dragoman turned out the sailors from the felucca (small boats) to make room for us, and in we scrambled, and in a few moments we were all landed, and the gentlemen returned to the Bessie Camuc for the crew, and then went to and fro as salvage corps. They worked splendidly, in and out of water, under a very hot sun, and with everything against them. No one was in command. The dragoman had completely lost his head, the dahabeah was rapidly tilting over, natives swarmed the feluccas and crowded the cabins, the water rushed in, and but for individual efforts, none of our things would have been saved. It was really distracting to see the gilt cornices, pillows, soap-dishes, and curtains being handed out instead of our precious lares and penates. However, two of our salvage corps climbed in up the windows, and handed or threw out our treasures just as they had caught the swimming mattresses which were blocking up the way. The Arabs were worse than useless, and the dragoman beside himself, poor fellow, shrieked all over and doing nothing.—Lady Sophia Palmer in the Quiver.

Visit to a Jossmaker.

"Me no wantee you come lound hea. Stay away," and a Celestial frown was bestowed upon the unheeding reporter from a square aperture in the door of a dirty and rickety building on Jackson street.

"It's all right, John; I want to buy a joss."

"Come in," said the Chinamen, in modified tones.

The rough door was pushed open and the jossmaker—for such the man was—plied his peculiar vocation. Here were seen unsubstantial idols of all descriptions, ranged around the room in a promiscuous fashion and with what seemed a lack of reverence on the part of the manufacturer. Then there was the raw material—gilded and colored paper, rough frame work and other accessories—strewn about the place, odds and ends, dirt and disorder being everywhere visible.

"You paintee man?" asked the joss-maker, as he picked up a scrap of blue paper, probably intended for the robe of a god, and which the reporter had sacrilegiously trodden upon. "Some paintee man buy joss: makee pictua."

"No, I'm not an artist but I wish to price the goods. What is this one worth?" and a blue, yellow and red idol, with a staring countenance and with the conventional Chinese head dress, together with paper robes, stuffed with cotton, was pointed out.

"Twent-fi dolla," was the reply.

Assuming that the price was satisfactory, and pending an imaginary transfer of the property, it was found by putting a few questions to the Mongolian that quite a trade in these idols is carried on the city, though of course the chief buyers are worshippers of joss. When finished, the joss, if it is one which has been made to order for a wealthy Celestial, or which is to take its place in a temple, must first be consecrated by a high priest, who with his acolytes goes through a prolonged and apparently recondite ceremonial, winding it up by daubing a little red paint in each of the black eyes of the joss, who is then enabled to see into the mysteries of this world and the hereafter. It is the dying wish of every Chinaman who can afford it that a joss may be burned for him after his death, and this proceeding forms a part of all well-regulated funeral ceremonies—another cause for the great demand on the effigy manufacturer and a constant source of revenue to him. The head being of wood or pliable cardboard and the body of cheap though gaudy material, there is nothing about one of these images which may be considered of value; the ingenious workmanship, in which such a display of detail is made, may be noted as of far more consequence than the useful or extraneous stuff which goes to make up the potent and mystic joss. Even the paper finger-nails, of extraordinary length are finely curved, and the thick-soled shoes and fan are not omitted. A half-completed joss is one of the queerest looking sights to be seen in the Chinese quarter, work being commenced from the feet, and the inside portion of the body being plainly visible.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The fact must be learned sooner or later, that it is an utter impossibility to oblige everyone. No matter how a person chooses to conduct himself he will find that his conduct will not meet the approbation of all who are cognizant of his actions. The temperaments of men are so variously constructed that no particular disposition will be acceptable to all. The practice of a certain set of virtues will find admirers in a portion of mankind, while another and large portion will be antagonistic or indifferent. More than half of the world cannot be pleased with a particular line of conduct, for all experience has indisputably demonstrated and confirmed the fact.

ODDS AND ENDS.

It is the many lesser men, growing slowly but steadily, in thought and strength, that make the advent of every great man possible.

Lord Brougham once facetiously defined a lawyer as "a learned gentlemen who rescues your estate from your enemies and keeps it himself."

To prevent patent leather from cracking, always warm the leather before inserting the foot in the shoe. Heat renders patent leather soft and pliable.

Whatever be its inspiriting motive, tact is in its outward features a sort of charity; it is impossible to be tactful, however selfishly, without making life pass mere pleasantly for our neighbor.

The Indians in Oregon hold that it is a violation of their religion to deal in land; that the Great Chief made them from the dust of the earth, and, after they wander on its surface for a certan length of time, they return to its bosom, and again become part of the elements of the earth. Dealing in land they regard as dealing in their own flesh and blood.

The height and velocity of clouds have been determined by means of photography. Two cameras, placed about six hundred feet apart, are provided with instantaneous shutters simultaneously released by electricity. The observer measures the angle of inclination of the cameras and the position of the cloud as photographed on the two plates, and from these data a trigonometric calculation gives great accuracy.

Keep up in spirit and earnestness. Hope, believe, try—it need be, struggle. Never let things drift. It is ruinous when a young man begins to allow the world to move without his having a common share in its progress. Sometimes we who have had longer experience in life wonder how the new-comers in the arena can evince so much enthusiam as they do. We forget what we ourselves once felt, and, looking on with dimmed eyes—more far-sighted perhaps, but not half so keen and bright as those of younger men—marvel to observe the energy of our juniors. Let nothing be said or done to discourage them. It is cruelty to check their ardour. By so doing we shall not only detract from their power, but increase the toil and difficulty of the task which lies before them. Let us urge them to "keep up" rather than sink into an apathetic mood and mode of action. It is well for the interests of progress that the prominent places in the working world are occupied by young men.

A New Gas-Light.

For the past three weeks the York departure platform at Euston Station has been lighted upon a novel principle—namely, with an incandescent gas-light. The light was invented by Mr. Lewis some two years since, but the present is its first public application on a commercial scale. Before, however, it was applied at Euston the system underwent careful trial at the company's works at Crewe, and it it answers expectation at Euston—which so far it has—it will no doubt be widley adopted by the London and Northwestern Company. The principle of the burner is the mixing of air under pressure with common gas, the light being produced by the incandescence of a platinum-wire gauze cap which forms the apex of the burner. The air and gas are mingled at the burner in such proportions that perfect combustion takes place, so that it is impossible for any unconsumed carbon to escape. The power used at Euston for compressing the air is simply that of a Bishop gas-engine of two-man power, which is sufficient to supply the air to a much greater number of burners than are at present in use there. The platform is 900 feet long, and it is very effectively lighted by 20 Lewis burners, which have taken the place of 50 ordinary burners previously in use.

No lanterns or gasses are used, and the light is perfectly steady, there being no flame. It is, moreover, quite unaffected by wind or rain. The burners are constructed to consume 18 feet of gas per hour, but they are actually consuming only 12½ feet, so that if necessary a very much more briliant light could be given than this. It is stated that the quantity of gas consumed is 17 per cent. less than with the ordinary system, but that fully double the candle power is obtained.

Then, again the expense of the glass lanterns is obviated, as well as the labor of keeping them in order. An arrangement of this system has also been perfected for house-lighting which gives the same results without the necessity of using power to compress the air. On the whole, the invention seems to be a practical success, and in view of its value as avoiding the formation of noxious vapors by combustion, and not less of its apparent economy, it would seem to have a good future before it now that it has been practically started.—London Times.

The Office Boy's Conceits About Women.

Woman is said to be a mere delusion, but the Office Boy has heard that it is a pretty thing to have delusions.

The loveliest lining for a bonnet, according to the Office Boy, is a pretty face.

When lovely woman makes you a pair of slippers, the Office Boy says you have "put your foot in it."

Blushes, says the Office Boy, are colours which maidens carry becomingly.

Marriage always begins, and sometimes ends in a "Union."

In love the heart is the pupil of the eye.

The heart that beats for no woman, the Office Boy compares to a niche without a statue.

Don't reckon too much on the honeymoon; it may turn out all moonshine!

Girls who "fly into a passion," ought to have their wings clipped.—Judy.

A Strange Indian Habit.

It is a fact not generally known, says the St. Thomas Times, that the Indians on the Thames River reserves chew the leaves of the ivy as a remedy and protection against the poisonous effects of the plant. We have the authority of an old resident in corroboration of the statement that the poison ivy leaf can be chewed and eaten with impunity. He heard of its efficacy as a cure for the troublesome cutaneous disease resulting from contact with the vine, and saw it eaten in proof of its harmless qualities. He also ate it himself without suffering any inconvenience. It may be as well to know that the plant is not poisonous when taken into the stomach, and that there may be some truth in the opinion that it furnishes an antidote for its own poison.

A Parson's Experience of Weddings.

Generally speaking, marriages pass off very smoothly, and frequently with very pretty effects. The brides are credited with careful study and perusal of the service for many days beforehand. Sometimes there has been a rehearsal. I have known brides when the grooms have failed to take up proper responses, prompt them immediately and with the greatest facility. The most common mistake of the bride is to take off only one of her gloves, whereas both hands are brought into requisition in the service. As for the men they commit all kinds of blunders and bunglings. I have known a man at that very nervous and trying moment, follow a clergyman within the communion-raile, and prepare to take place opposite him. I have known a man when the minister stretched out his hand to unite those of the couple, take it vigorously in his own and give it a hearty shake. Many times more serious difficulties occur. Some ladies have had an almost unconquerable reluctance to use the word "obey;" and two, if their own statements are to be accepted, have ingeniously constructed a word "nobey." The word, however, is still to be formally admitted into the language. There was one girl, who was married by a very kindly old clergyman who absolutely refused to utter the word "obey." The minister suggested that if she were unwilling to utter the word aloud she should whisper it to him; but the young lady refused to accept even this kind of compromise. Further, however, than this the clergyman refused to accommodate her, but when he was forced to dismiss the matter without proceeding any further, the recalcitrant young person consented to "say it."

The difficulty, however is not always made on the side of the lady. On one occasion the bridegroom wished to deliver a little oration qualifying his vow and describing in what sense and to what extent he was using the words of the formula. This was, of course, given to understand that nothing of this kind could be permitted. There was one man who accompanied the formula with sotto voice remarks, which would have been exceedingly disagreeable to the officiating minister. He interpolated remarks after the fashion of Bassanio: "Fudge!" "With this ring I thee wed;" "that's superstition." "With my body I thee worship; that's idolatry." "With all my worldly goods I thee endow; that's papistry." It is a wonder that such a being was not conducted out of church by the beadle. The story puts one in mind of an anecdote that is told of a man who in his time was a Colonial Minister. There was a great discussion as to the question whether a man can marry more than three hundred a year. "All I can say," said the great man, "is that when I say, 'With all thy worldly goods I thee endow,' I am so far from having three hundred pounds a year, the question whether, when all my debts are paid, I had three hundred pence." "Ah, my love," said his wife: "but then you had your splendid intellect." "I didn't endow you with that, ma'am," sharply retorted the right honorable husband.

Ghostly Apparition.

In a recent Fortnightly Review there is an article on Ghosts, in which a remarkable story of the appearance of a reporter to a judge at the time of his death is told. A gentleman at Rawdon who read the story informs us that a similar occurrence came under his own observation some years ago. He says:—

"In 1859, when I was a young man, I was employed in an office in Montreal. One night I retired early to bed, but in the course of the night I suddenly awoke, and lay quietly musing on bed. While engaged in the delightful time of building castles in the air, the door which I had securely locked and fastened suddenly opened, and one of our clerks, Mr.——, who lived several miles out, stepped in, dressed exactly as I had left him leave the office on the previous evening, apparently in perfect health and strength. He advanced to a large mirror that hung over the washstand near my bedside, looked into it despondingly, took up a brush, combed down his long side whiskers and twisted his moustache, as was his custom, to do, adjusted his coat collar, wiped the dust off his hat, gazed steadily for a moment into my face, and suddenly vanished from my sight without uttering a word. I was thoroughly surprised, although I was not frightened in the least. Of the reality of the apparition there was not the slightest doubt, as I was fully awake at the time. After thinking over it for some time I arose, looked at my watch, and found that it was 3 o'clock. The rest of the night passed without further disturbance. When I arrived at the office next morning the first news I heard was that my fellow clerk was dead. Enquiry elicited the fact that he had dropped dead from heart disease at 3 o'clock on the previous night—about the very time that I had had my nocturnal visitor. Why he appeared to me I cannot tell, unless it was from the fact that on the previous evening in the wash room.

An Aboriginal Dwelling!

A short time ago there was discovered in a marsh at Schussenried, in Wurtemburg, a well-preserved hut of the age of stone. The flooring and a part of the walls were perfect, and, as appeared from a careful scientific examination, had formed when complete, a rectangle, 10 metres long and 7 metres wide. The hut was divided into two compartments communicating with each other by a wooden bridge, made of three girders. The principal door, looking towards the south, is 1 metre wide, and opening into a room 4 metres long and 4 metres wide. In a corner lay a heap of stones which had evidently formed the fireplace. This room was the kitchen, "the living room," and probably the night refuge for cattle in cold weather. The second room, which had no opening except the door, measured 6·50 metres long and 4 metres wide, and was no doubt used as the family bedchamber. The floors of both rooms were formed of round logs and walls of split logs. This, be it remembered, was a hut of the Stone Age. It may be safely presumed that the lake dwellings of the Bronze Age were larger in size and less primitive in their arrangements. At both periods they were supporting the houses communicated with the shore by means of a bridge (generally removeable at pleasure) and with the water by ladders. These ladders, as appears from an example found at Chavannes, were made of a single stang with holes for the steps, which protruded on either side.

Parson's Experience of Weddings.

enerally speaking, marriages pass o smoothly, and frequently with very ty effects. The brides are credited wit ful study and perusal of the service fo y days beforehand. Sometimes ther been a rehearsal. I have known bride n the grooms have failed to take th per responses, prompt them immediately with the greatest facility. The mos mon mistake of the bride is to take o one of her gloves, whereat both hand brought into requisition in the servic for the men they commit all kinds nders and bunglings. I have known at that very nervous and tryi nent, follow a clergyman within th munion rails, and prepare to take e opposite him. I have known a ma n the minister stretched out his hand e those of the couple, take it vigorous is own and give it a hearty shake. S s more serious difficulties occur. S es have had an almost unconquerable ance to use the word "obey;" one if their own statements are to be ed, have ingeniously constructed d "nobey." The word, however, h to be formally admitted into the la ge. There was one girl, who was bei ried by a very kindly old clergyman absolutely refused to utter the w bey." The minister suggested that, were unwilling to utter the word alo should whisper it to him; but the yo refused to accept even this kind promise. Further, however, than clergyman refused to accommodate h when he was forced to dismiss them hout proceeding any further, the re nt young person consented to "ob e difficulty, however is not alw e on the side of the lady. On one on the bridegroom wished to deliv e oration qualifying his vow and ing in what sense and to what extent uning the words of the formula.
of course, given to understand ing of this kind could be permitt re was one man who accompanied ula with sotto voice remarks, which n been exceedingly disagreeable to ating minister. He interpolated ss after the fashion of Burch dge!" "With this ring I thee w s superstition." "With my body I ship; that's idolatry." "With all dly goods I thee endow; that's a a wonder that such a being was not ed out of church by the beadle.
one in mind of an anecdote that i man who in his time was a Cab ster. There was a great discussion uestion whether a man can marry hundred a year. "All I can s the great man, "is that when I th all thy worldly goods I thee end from having three hundred pound tion whether, when all my debts
I had three hundred pence." " ove," said his wife: "but then your splendid intellect." "I didn' you with that, ma'am," sharply
d the right honorable husband.

Ghostly Apparition.

a recent Fortnightly Review there e on Ghosts, in which a remark of the appearance of a reporter
e at the time of his death is told man at Rawdon who read the ac ms us that a similar occurrence his own observation some years ys:—
n 1859, when I was a young s employed in an office in
One night I retired early to but in the course of the night I suf oke, and lay quietly musing on While engaged in the delightful of building castles in the air, the
I had securely locked and faste nly opened, and one of our cl —, who lived several miles a ed in, dressed exactly as I had eave the office on the previous eve ently in perfect health and stre vanced to a large mirror that the washstand near my bed side, lo despondingly, took up a brush, wn his long side whiskers and as was his custom, to do, adjust ol'ar, wiped the dust off his cl steadily for a moment into my ddenly vanished from my sight ttering a word. I was thoroughly
, although I was not frightened
Of the reality of the apparition ot the slightest doubt, as I was e at the time. After thinking o me time I arose, looked at my found that it was est of the night passed without r disturbance. When I arrived next morning the first news was that my fellow clerk was ry elicited the fact that h d dead from heart disease on the previous night—abo time that I had had my noc
Why he appeared to me I nless it was from the fact that h some unpleasant words on th evening in the wash room.

An Aboriginal Dwelling.

hort time ago there was discove
h at Schussenried, in Wurtemb reserved hut of the age of stone g and a part of the walls were s appeared from a careful adm had formed when complete,
, 10 metres long and 7 metres
t was divided into two compar nnicating with each other by made of three girders. The looking towards the south, wide, and opening into a roo long and 4 metres wide. In o y a heap of stones which had ap ned the fireplace. This room w n, "the living room," and prob refuge for cattle in cold weather room, which had no opening red 6:50 metres long and 5 and was no doubt used as the amber. The floors of both room d of round logs and walls of w be it remembered, was a hut
Age. It may be safely presum e dwellings of the Bronze Ag in size and less primitive in th ments. At both periods the p rting the houses communicate ore by means of a bridge (p eable at pleasure) and with the ders. These ladders, as appea mple found at Chavannes, were ngle stang with holes for the protruded on either side.

INTERESTING ITEMS.

Post Cards in China—Magic Mirrors—English Co-operationists — Another Ship Canal, Etc., Etc.,

China proposes to adopt postal cards on and after Jan. 1, 1885.

More visitors from the provinces have sojourned in Paris this summer than during any season since the siege. Many were refugees.

Lord Byron sold his manor of Rochdale in Lancashire at a ludicrously low sum in 1824 in order to get money for the Greek cause. It is now of immense value.

Notwithstanding the enormous attendance at the Health Exhibition in London, the receipts have, up to the present, only just covered the cost. Profit may now be looked for.

South of Long Island, beneath the Atlantic, are the remnants of a vast marsh. In clear water roots of trees can be seen from a boat, and in stormy weather masses of decayed wood and peat are thrown upon the shore.

A Parisian marchioness has taken service in a Marseilles hospital as a nurse for the cholera victims; she is pretty and young, dresses in plain calico, and has been very useful. She is fulfilling a vow made during the illness of one of her children.

A successful attempt has been made to introduce fresh springbok meat from South Africa into England. "It was the most delicious meat" writes a correspondent, "that any of us had ever tasted, being very far superior to English venison." But that is say very high praise.

A lemonade man on a Hudson River excursion boat is said to have sold ten thousand glasses of lemonade on one excursion not long ago, and he had half the lemon left for the next day's trip up the river. Fortunes are rapidly made in the United States.

Japanese magic mirrors are in the market. They are made of fine burnished metal, and when lightly breathed upon disclose geometrical patterns, landscapes, or faces. Their manufacture is a secret, but is believed to consist in welding the pattern in one kind, of steel or iron upon a plate of a different kind. One which reproduced faces, sold at Philadelphia for $110.

Wood pavement is to be given up in London, and the old McAdam system restored. The former is said to have not only failed to realize the expected advantages, but has led according to Prof. Tyndall's report, to serious affections of the eyes and lungs; that is, by continual watering, the wood became saturated with street filth, and then, under the influence of the hot sun gave forth a pernicious species of dust.

A census was recently taken of the swans on the Thames between Southwark bridge and Henley. The total number of swans was 267, and cygnets 53. Of these the Queen claims 176 swans and 46 cygnets, the Vintners' Company 48 swans and 12 cygnets and the Dyers' Company 43 swans and 5 cygnets. The mandibles of the royal birds were marked with a diamond, the Vintners' with two "nicks" and a couple of "V's" and the Dyers' with a single nick and other distinguishing emblems.

A suit to recover $50,000 damages has been commenced in the Brooklyn courts. The defendant is a New York firm and the plaintiff a young lady of Brooklyn, who alleges that she ate of canned tomatoes sold by the defendant to a Brooklyn grocer, and through the eating was poisoned so that at one time her life was despaired of, and that her health is permanently injured. Her plaint alleges the tomatoes were poisoned by the solder used in the canning.

A local paper of Dakota is responsible for the following; A Dakota farmer in 1881 planted a single grain of spring wheat and from it grew twenty-two stalks, each bearing a full head of wheat, yielding in all 860 grains of wheat; 760 of these were planted the next year, producing one fifth of a bushel of spendia wheat. This was planted last spring, yielding seventeen bushels, making 1 020 pounds of wheat from one grain in three years.

The project of cutting a ship canal across the province of Holstein, connecting the North Sea with the Baltic, is now being taken up by the German authorities in earnest. The canal is to run from near the mouth of the Elbe to the harbor of Kiel, Germany's chief naval port on the "Ostsee." It is to be constructed of such dimensions as to permit the largest ironclads in the German navy steaming from the Baltic to the German Ocean, or vice versa, thus avoiding the necessity of making, as at present, the long voyage round the peninsula of Jutland. Detailed drawings on the subject are to be submitted to the new Reichstag.

At Cocket, in Wales, a poor man was knocked down, dragged by the train; and his skull was taken off. The guard of the train ran to his assistance, and was himself injured in so doing. Some time afterwards a traveller who had witnessed the accident, asked the guard whether he had quite recovered; he showed his arm, the bruise of which was still visible, and told him he had been three weeks an invalid; and on asking him what compensation the Company had given him, he replied that his pay was stopped on the following day.

Paris tradesmen begin to utilize science for advertising purposes. A late notice reads: "Tea and coffee contain tannic acid, the essential part of oak and hemlock; milk contains albumen and fibrin in the same manner as flesh and skin. Add milk to coffee and a turbidity ensues, of which each particle is a tannate of fibrin, i. e., an atom of leather. In a life time a man thus consumes a hundred pair of boots, but no man could thus consume the elegant and scientific foot wear only to be found at 5 Rue de —."

A Fiji correspondent writes to an English paper: "Often, while sailing among the South Sea Islands, I have passed flocks of birds, principally terns and whale birds, resting in vast numbers on the sea. It is remarkable that, however rough the sea may be at the time, yet where the birds rest there is not a ripple to disturb them. This must be caused by oil, but whether it is purposely deposited by the birds with the intention of quieting the water, or whether they do so from natural cause is a question the answer to which I think would interest many of our readers."

A truly singular method of preserving historical ruins, says the London Truth, has been discovered in Ireland. On the Cas Hill, near Belfast, there was a short time ago an ancient castle. In order to protect its ruins from the ravages of time and of passing vandals, some local antiquarians determined to surround it with a wall, and employed a contractor to execute the work. The wall was finished in due course but when the antiquarians came to admire the castle it was gone. The contractor had used the ruins for building material, and not a stone of the castle remained!

At the sixteenth annual Congress of English Co-operationists, held at Warwick, Derby, last June, 1,242 societies were represented, with a membership of 668 000. Their sales during 1883 aggregated £27,865,054. Many societies were unrepresented. The growth of co operation in England is well illustrated by the figures in a table prepared by H. R. Bailey, Secretary of the Co-operative Board. In 1869 there were 450 societies, 91,500 members, £2,300,000 sales; in 1865 these had increased to 867,148,580, and £3,370 000; in 1874 to 1 026, 411,250, and £16,350,000; and in 1883 to 1,242,668,000 and £27,865,000.

Were Mr. Under Secretary Burke, who was with Lord Frederick Cavendish, murdered in the Phœnix Park, now living, to him would belong the baronetcy of the Burkes of Glynsk, which has just descended to his brother, Col. Burke, by the death of Sir. John Burke, the last of the direct line. The family, which is the oldest of the name in Galway, succumbed to circumstances some time since, and the Glynsk estate became the property of strangers. The late Under Secretary had a good estate, however, in his own right, the revenues of which he never touched, but applied wholly to his mother and sisters.

The Lancet calls attention to the fact—in speaking of beer drinking and heart disease—that statements are made to the effect that the average weight of the heart in men is greater in Munich than elsewhere. The result of 1,000 autopsies appears to have created a belief among the observers that "the habitual consumption of beer in large quantities tends to enlarge the heart by the direct action of alcohol on its tissues, by the increase of the amount of fluids in the body and by the belief that the nutritive ingredients of the beer are easily assimilated." It is stated as an interesting fact that in 1882 the average amount of beer consumed by each person in Germany ranged in different districts from 54 to 186 litres. In Bavaria it reached 233 litres, and in Munich it reached 432. The litre is a little less than an English quart.

So many vague statements have been made concerning Prof. Koch's views relating to Cholera that the Berlin correspondent of the British Medical Journal (Aug. 2) thinks it wise to give his ideas as printed in the official report. The spread of cholera, it recites, is caused by personal contact, and not by goods and other objects, except damp infected linen. The infection is not in the air, but in the ejections of the patient; it is only dangerous in a moist state, and dies very speedily when dry; air cannot transfer the disease. The bacilli do not, as in small-pox, produce spores, which may dry up only to reappear alive. Drying will positively kill them in three hours. The disease is confined wholly to the digestive organs. Contact with the patient is without danger if no contamination from the digestive organs is received. The following convey infection; infected drinking and washing water, infected moist and liquid food especially milk. The Berlin Hospital inspector stated there was no need to be especially afraid of cholera, it was much less dangerous than indigenous plagues.

The Ladies' Waist.

The more closely a woman can get her bust to approximate to the shape of a peg-top the prouder and happier she usually is. Why the peg-top has attained to the high distinction of serving as a model for woman is one of the many puzzles connected with dress. The Greeks—who certainly knew something about the human form—assigned to their ideal waist dimensions quite intolerable to an American woman of to-day. Moreover, they made it oval, whereas the modern waist is round. It is a physiological fact that there is about an oval waist a delightful suppleness and elasticity, while the round waist so common at the present day is hard, rigid, and unsympathetic. The fact is that some women are blessed with waists naturally small and oval, as every waist naturally is, while other women less favored by nature, are determined to outdo the smallness at no matter what cost. But no discriminating critic can can ever fail to perceive the difference between natural and artificial smallness. Perhaps if this were better understood women would cease to ruin their health and weaken the muscles of their back by going out in a tight fitting cuiras, even at the risk of appearing to depart conspicuously from woman's dress. They would then find that some other problems, such as distribution of weight, would settle themselves without much difficulty.

A Chinese Shave.

The customer seats himself erect on a stool or bench, with the knowledge that an hour must pass before he is released. The barber begins operations by carefully washing the victim's face, ears and head with very warm water, wiping off the dripping parts with a wet towel. He then begins shaving the head, or rather around the crown where the cue begins, commencing over the right ear and moving along until the forehead and the lower part of the backhead are cleaned. He next passes to the face and afterward to the neck. The ears are shaved and carefully brushed out and cleaned with delicate brushes and ingenious instruments. The face, neck and arms are then washed and rubbed until the skin assumes a healthy pink. The second part is somewhat like the "Swedish movement cure." The barber begins to turn and manipulate the head and neck until every cord and muscle has been stretched, pinched and pulled. The shoulders, arms and back are also scientifically pounded and pulled until the victim expresses a desire to have the manipulation stop. The cue is then unbraided, combed and cleaned, and again braided up and put in place. Occasionally, when a barber desires to show great attention to a distinguished customer, he rubs and pulls his fingers, and even his toes, until the joints crack.

Not another Pill shall go down my throat again, said a citizen "when I can get such a prompt and pleasant cure for my Bilious attacks, such as Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It renders the Blood Pure and Cool and makes a splendid Spring Medicine. Large bottles 50 cents"

USEFUL RECEIPTS.

CONVENIENT PICK-ME-UP.—One of the most nourishing of quickly-prepared dishes is a cup of consomme with egg. To prepare this you need not go to market for stock. A small can of Johnston's fluid beef and a fresh egg are the ingredients. A spoonful of the beef, boiled for ten minutes, in a half pint of boiling water, is seasoned and placed in a dainty bowl; into this drop a raw egg. The heat of the soup cooks the egg sufficiently, and it looks something like a poached egg, except that the white is clearer. If you do not like—and some delicate appetites do not—to see the egg, beat it up first, white and yolk together, before putting it in. It adds much smoothness to the rather sharp taste of all prepared beef-essence, and is a very good dish for a hasty luncheon or when a nourishing "pick-me-up" is needed.

SOUP, A NO. 1.—Take a knuckle of veal, cover it with water and let it boil until you can shred. Add to it, one dessert spoonful of allspice, one of cloves, cayenne pepper and salt to taste, three eggs boiled hard and chopped up fine, one pint of port wine, the juice of two lemons, and one wineglassful of Lee & Perrins' Worcestershire Sauce, or mushroom ketchup, and enough browned flour to thicken.

BAKED OYSTERS.—Grate some day-old Vienna bread into fine crumbs and season them with salt, white pepper and a little grated nutmeg. Drain the oysters and dry them between the folds of a cloth, being careful not to press them. Now dip them into beaten egg and roll them in the seasoned crumbs until well covered. Then place them in their lower shells with a piece of butter on the top of each oyster and bake a few minutes in a hot oven. Arrange them still in their shells, on a plate, and, before sending to table, squeeze over them a little of the juice of a lemon.

TO BROIL OYSTERS IN THEIR SHELLS.—After opening the oysters let them remain in the deep shell with their juice, placing a small piece of butter upon the top of each and seasoning them with a little salt and cayenne pepper. Have a good clear fire; place the shells on a gridiron, squeeze a little lemon juice over the oysters, and broil until done. Two or three minutes will suffice to cook them.

DEVILED EGGS.—Put a dozen fresh eggs into a pan of cold water, set the pan on the fire, and after the water comes to the boil, let them remain boiling for fifteen minutes. Then take them out and put them in a bowl of cold water to stand for a minute or two, that the shells may be the more readily removed. Take off the shells, cut the eggs into halves and carefully remove the yolks without bruising or breaking the whites. Make a thick paste by mixing the yolks smoothly with a tablespoonful of anchovy sauce, seasoning it with salt and cayenne pepper. Fill the white halves of the eggs with this paste, and after slicing a little off the point of each, stand them upon a dish in any desired form and fill the intervening spaces with finely chopped lettuce.

TO BROIL A FRESH MACKEREL.—Select a large fish, cut it down the back, cleanse and dry it well, and then rub over the inside with a mixture containing a little salt, cayenne pepper and Lucca Cream oil. Now take a sheet of white paper thickly buttered fold it over the fish, and fasten each end loosely together with a pin. Have your fire clear, place the enwrapped fish between a folding wire broiler and cook for twenty-five minutes, turning the broiler frequently.

STUFFED TOMATOES.—Take a dozen, smooth, solid tomatoes, slice off the part where the stem joins the fruit, take out the centre with the seeds, and fill the cavities with a mixture made as fellows: Put into a stew-pan a quarter of a pound of fat bacon, a dozen mushrooms, an onion, a bunch of parsley, and a little thyme; (the above ingredients to be minced very fine,) Season the mixture with salt, pepper, and a pinch of cayenne; stir over the fire for a few minutes, and then add the yolks of five eggs well beaten, to bind it together. After the tomatoes are filled with the mixture, put them in a baking pan, pour around them Lucca Cream oil just sufficient to cover the bottom of the pan, strew over their tops some fine bread crumbs, and bake in a quick oven.

Oh! how tired and weak I feel, I don't believe I will ever get through this Spring house-cleaning! Oh yes you will if you take a bottle or two of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters to purify your blood and tone up the system. In large bottles 50 cents

The judicious planting eucalyptus trees has been recommended by Baron Von Muiler as a means of increasing and maintaining the water-supply of Australia. These trees—known also as the "blue gum" trees—are credited with remarkable power of collecting and absorbing water, and of condensing into water the moisture in the air.

Failure Impossible

When Polson's Nerviline is used for pain. It matters not of how long standit may be, or how often other remedies have failed to afford relief, Nerviline, the great pain cure does its work promptly. Buy a 10 cent sample bottle, and try it for internal or external pains. You will be convinced of its extraordinary power in relieving pain. Ten cent bottles and large bottles 25 cents, at all druggists. Take no substitute.

The Ghetto at Rome has been doomed by an improving but impecunious municipality, and visitors who used to wander through the intricate maze in pursuit of old lace or of old bronzes, or in quest of fragment of pillars and inscribed slabs built into the doorposts, will find their occupation gone. Intimately associated as the quarter is with memories of the Jews, it was not always their home in Rome, and Paul IV. was the first Pope who removed them across the river from the Trastevere into the shadow of the sombre Tower of Marcellus. The same Pontiff was notorious for his cruel treatment of the aliens, and rigorously enforced attendance at the annual sermon on Holy Cross Day, when such miraculous conversions were made, for reasons which may be found in Mr. Browning's familiar stanzas.

Young Men! Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated Electro-Volatic Belt and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of Catarrh. Out of 2,643 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star.

Astronomers tell us in their own simple, intelligible way that the gradual lengthening of the days is due to the "obliquity of the ecliptic to the terrestrial horizon." This ought to set at rest the foolish idea that the days are longer because the sun rises earlier and sets later.

Nothing Hunts out Corns

Like tight boots. Corns are very small affairs, but apply to them a pair of tight boots and all other concerns of life sink into insignificance. Tight boots and Putnam's Corn Extractor (the great and only sure cure for corns) may go together, and comfort will be their partner; but don't fail to use Putnam's Corn Extractor. Frauds, cheap, poisonous and dangerous substitutes are in the market. Beware of them. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

As the train pulled out of Kansas City recently, bound West, a fine-looking old gentleman, who occupied a seat in the smoking-car was accosted by a rank looking specimen of Western humanity. "Goin' far West, stranger?" he asked. "Yes, sir," replied the old gentlemen, politely; "I am going to Denver." "Business or pleasure?" "Chiefly for my health." "Ah, yes, I see. from the East ain't yer?" "Yes, I am President of the Twenty-fifth National Bank of New York." "You don't say so!" exclaimed the Westerner. Then he added in a whisper: 'Giv us your hand, old pard, I'm a Missouri train robber.".

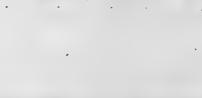
Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

A growth forming a scum upon a pond near Campbellton, New South Wales, has been noticed to have a rich green color in the mornings, turning into deep red in the afternoons.

There are lots of people going around grumbling, and half sick at the Stomach all the time; who might be well and happy, if they only used Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters occasionally. It is a splendid Blood Purifier All Druggists 50 cents.

A. P. 194.

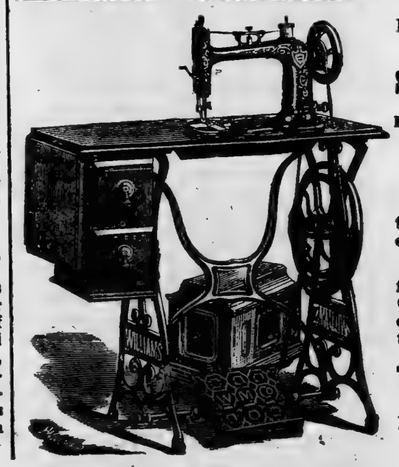


PHRENOLOGY. EXAMINATIONS GIVEN AT WALLACE MASON, 12 Queen St. W., Toronto.

THOS. GALLOWAY & CO., Cotton, Woollen, Silk, Carpet, and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas, On

SAW MILL PROPERTIES FOR SALE—STAVE machinery included if desired. Send for circular H. J. LEACOCK, Brigden.

H. WILLIAMS,
SLATE AND FELT ROOFER.
Manufacturer and Dealer in
Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building Paper, Carpet Felt, &c., at lowest Prices.
4 ADELAIDE ST. EAST, - - TORONTO



MUTUAL MARRIAGE ENDOWMENT ASS'N Incorporated, Head Office, London, Ont. Issues Certificates from $125 to $3,000, payable on marriage, at following rates. For $500, or half certificate, $4; quarterly dues in advance, $0.75. For $1,000 Certificate, $6; quarterly dues in advance, $1.00. For $2,000 Certificate, $10; quarterly dues in advance, $2.00. For $3,000 Certificate, $15; quarterly dues in advance, $3.00. The only cash payments. Assessments on marriages $1.60 on each $1000. First years quarterly assessments are promptly paid, on presenting membership at end of year. Endowment reserve account will amount to $10,000, providing for a large number of endowments, which places this association in a sound financial position. No connection with any similar institution. A good savings society for young people. Send for By-Laws, &c. W. J. IMLACH, Secretary, London, Ont.

THE MODEL
Washer
AND BLEACHER

Weighs but 6 pounds. Can be carried in a small valise. Illustration shows Machine in boiler. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded within 30 days
$1000.00 REWARD FOR ITS SUPERIOR.
Washing made light and easy. The clothes have that pure whiteness which no other mode of washing can produce. No rubbing required, no friction to injure the fabric. A 10 year old girl can do the washing as well as an older person.
To place it in every household THE PRICE HAS BEEN REDUCED to $2.50, and if not found satisfactory, money refunded. See what the "Canada Presbyterian," says about it—The Model Washer and Bleacher which Mr. C. W. Dennis offers to the public has many and valuable advantages. It is a time and labor saving machine, substantial and enduring, and is very cheap. From trial in the household we can testify to its excellence. Delivered to any express office in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Charges paid $2.00. Send for circulars.
AGENTS WANTED.
C. W. DENNIS,
TORONTO BARGAIN HOUSE.
213 YONGE STREET, TORONTO, ONT

THE NEW WILLIAMS

High Arm Machine is now recognized as the
Sewing Machine of the Period.
It is Light and Easy to run.
Silent and Rapid in movement
Plain and Simple to Learn.
It is strong, durable, and well built, of the very best material that money can buy or skill produce.
It was awarded five medals and three first prizes at the Dominion Exhibition last October. It is rapidly superseding all the old fashioned makes everywhere. See it, try it, buy it, and make sure that you get it.
THE WILLIAMS' MFG CO.
1783 Notre Dame St., Montreal, and 59 King St. West, Toronto.

OVER 200 FARMS IN MICHIGAN FOR SALE Description and price list furnished free to al applicants. GEO. W. SNOVER, 103 Griswold street Detroit, Mich.

PARTY WANTED TO PURCHASE CARRIAGE shops 24 x 128 feet; double stoop, with office 24 x 60; blacksmith's shop, 30 x 42; lumber, barn, and shed horse barn, two acres of land with dwelling-house suitable for two small families; two cisterns, cellar, and well; situated at Rose' Corners, four miles from Belleville, on main gravelled road; good locality, where a business from $8,000 to $10,000 per annum is done. The premises are now in full blast, and will be sold to good live man at a bargain. HARFORD ASHLEY, Belleville.

MEN WA
Active pushing men wanted to wholesale my famous teas to consumers. Salary from $600 to $2000 per year Send stamp for particulars. JAMES LAUT, Importer, Toronto.

F. E. DIXON & CO.,
Manufacturers of Star Rivet
Leather Belting!
70 King Street, East, Toronto
Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts.

W. & F. P. CURRIE & Co.
100 Grey Nun Street, Montreal.
Importers of
Drain Pipes, Portland Cement,
Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings,
Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting,
Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay,
Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay
Manufacturers of
Bessemer Steel Sofa, Chair & Bed Springs

SMOKED SAUSAGES.
The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for price to W. CLARK, P. O. Box 342 Montreal.

HOUSE CLEANING TIME.
If you want your houses to be attractive, use
Ramsay's Improved Calsomine Colors
for tinting Walls.—Can be used without the aid of a Painter and do not rub off. Made in fifteen different tints. Apply to your local dealers for them.
MANUFACTURED BY
A. RAMSAY & SON, MONTREAL.

MACHINERY. For sale 1 Westinghouse Traction Farm Engine. 1 Able Triumph do. 1 C. O. Morrison do. 18 h. p. Portable Engine and Boiler on Skids. 1 35 h. p. Horsontal by Northy. 1 do. by Wereus with cut off valve, and 20 engines an boilers of smaller sizes, all thoroughly refitted before leaving shop. 2 24-inch Planers and Matchers. 1 20-inch Pony Planer. 1 Iron Frame Tenoning machine. 1 Blind Slat Tenoner. 1 Buggy Plainer or jointer. 2 band saws. 10 Saw Tables. 1 Fire-Proof Safe. 1 Jeweler's Rocks Steel. 1 Book-Binder's Screw Press. 1 42-inch French Burr Portable Grist Mill. 1 62-inch inserted Tooth Saw &c., &c. Send for new list, No. 9, containing full description of machinery in stock. Address,
H. W. PETRIE, Brantford, Ont.

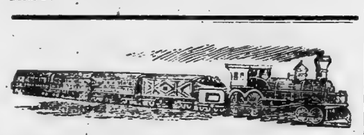
Dominion Line of Steamships.
Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from
QUEBEC TO LIVERPOOL.

Brooklyn,	Aug. 23	Montreal,	Sept, 13
Toronto,	Aug. 30	*Vancouver,	Sept, 20
*Oregon	Sept, 6

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $50, $60 $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $35, Steerage at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to
DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.
Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter between Portland and Glasgow, and Boston and Glasgow alternately; and during summer between Quebec and Glasgow and Boston and Glasgow every week.
For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B. Allan & Co., Chicago; Leve & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal

GURNEYS & WARE,



STANDARD SCALES.
THE BEST,
THE STRONGEST,
THE MOST RELIABLE.
Unrivalled in material, construction and finish, perfect in accuracy and unequalled in durability. Guaranteed to give entire satisfaction.
THEY EXCEL ALL OTHERS.
RAILROAD, WAREHOUSE AND MILL TRUCKS.
Mills' Alarm Money Drawers.
SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST.
GURNEYS & WARE,
HAMILTON, ONT

Over the Falls in a Rubber Ball.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Oliver Wormald, a Buffalo fresco printer, will go to Niagara Falls to-day to perfect arrangements for going over the cataract in a rubber ball. fifteen feet in diameter, for a purse of $1,000. W. S. Graham of Cleveland, and Peter S. Grant, a Buffalo business man, are managing the affair. Wormald's ball will be of rubber, three-quarters of an inch thick, covered with closely braded tarred rope and filled with compressed air. He expects the ball will receive sufficient momentum to hurl it a considerable distance beyond the Falls and he will be picked up by one of the ferry boats plying at the Prospect park inclined railway.

A Michigan Thunderstorm.

ALPENA, Mich., Sept. 11.—There was a voilent thunder squall here yesterday. Rain fell over an inch in eight minutes. Thos. Scarfe was killed on the street. Another man's arm was broken. A horse and mill were blown down. Forty thousand feet of lumber were blown into the lake.

Canadian Pacific Railway

(ONTARIO DIVISION.)

Change of Time.

COM'CING TUESDAY SEP. 9, '84.

Toronto, Grey and Bruce Division.

TORONTO—Depart 7:20 a. m., 4:40 p. m.
" Arrive 10:45 a. m., 3:10 "

D. McNICOL, Gen. Pass. Agt. W. WHYTE. General Manager.

MARKDALE STATION.

TRAINS LEAVE AS FOLLOWS:

GOING SOUTH.—Express 6:30 a. m.
" " Mixed 8:48 "
" " Mail 4:20 p. m.

GOING NORTH.—Mail 11:50 a. m.
" " Mixed 5:00 p. m.
" " Express 9:09 "

J. CÆSAR, Agent.

HAGYARDS YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

JOHN NOBLE,
MARKDALE
GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING
SPECIALTY.
Also agent for the celebrated
CHATHAM WAGONS.

HAGYARDS PECTORAL BALSAM

Has proved one of the most successful cures of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

☞ Every bottle warranted to give satisfaction.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY CURES CHOLERA CHOLERA INFANTUM DIARRHŒA AND ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS SOLD BY ALL DEALERS.

Osprey Council.

This Council met at Feversham on the 19th Aug. Members all present.

Communication from A. R. Fawcett, bill $48.94, printing Minutes, 100 Road Lists and advertising Court of Revision. C. W. Rutledge, account $30 05, printing and advertising. Voter's List and 100 notices of appointment to office. D. C. McFarlane, account $5, postage stamps for Clerk. T. Freethy, account $3.50, mending scraper. J. A. Bannerman, account $1.60, plank for pathmaster. G. Moore and 23 other petition re deviation road on Con. 14. James Elliott, application for collectorship, County Clerk rates for 1884. Estimates and requisitions for T. S. Moneys from trustees of sections 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10.

Orders were issued to pay above accounts.

Taylor, McIntyre, That the Clerk be instructed to notify the Council of Collingwood Tp. that the Council intends expending $10 on the town-line east of Sykes saw mill, provided that they garnt an equivalent. Carried.

Speers, McIntyre' That D. Buie get $8 in full to January 1885, being an indigent. Carried.

Speers, McIntyre, That by-law 227 to assess and levy rates for county township and school purposes for the year 1884, be introduced and read the first time. Carried.

This by-law was carried through the several stages and passed

Johnston. McIntyre. That George Scutt receive $17.60 for work done on 50th side road2nd north, and that the Reeve issue his order for the same, and that said amount may be retained out of the appropriation for division 1 and 5 next year. Carried.

Johnston. Taylor. That Robert Morrison be paid $9, John Winter $8, W. Davidson $8, John Speers $13, A. McIntyre$12.50, W. Milne, $26.75 and Thos. Gamey $35, being expenses re appeal to county judge against the equalization and valuation of the Municipality by the County Council. Carried.

Speers. Johnston That the Clerk communicate with the Council of Collingwood concerning a on hill the town-line opposite Lot 1, Con. 9, Collingwood and Lot 13, Con. 14, Osprey. Carried, Speers. Taylor. That this Council adjourn to meet on the 15th October at McIntyre. Carried.

W. MILNE, Clerk.

Fall Show Fairs.

Osprey, at McIntyre October 9th.

Provincial at Ottawa Sept. 22nd to 27th,

Western Fair, London, Sept. 22nd to 26th.

Proton, at Dundalk October 7th and 8th.

Melancthon, at Shelburne October 7th and 8th.

Glenelg, at Markdale, on the 2nd and 3rd October.

East Grey, at Flesherton, the 23rd and 24th September.

Dominion Exhibition at Montreal September 5th to 13th.

South Grey, at Durham, the 30th September and 1st October.

Collingwood township, at Clarksburg, on the 25th and 26th September.

Normanby, in Ayton on Sept. 24th.

Sydenham, at Annan, Tuesday, Oct. 7th.

Holland, at Chatsworth, Thursday, Oct., 9th.

Derby, at Kilsyth, Thursday, Oct. 9th.

Sullivan, at Desboro, Tuesday, Oct. 7th.

North Grey, at Owen Sound, Thursday and Friday, 2nd and 3rd Oct.

Artemesia, in Priceville Oct. 7th.

St. Vincent in Meaford the 8th and 9th October.

Horticultural, at Owen Sound, Wednesday and Thursday, 24th and 25th Sept.

Holland Centre, at Williamsford on the 8th October.

PATENTS

MUNN & CO., of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, for the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, etc. Hand Book about Patents sent free. Thirty-seven years' experience.

Patents obtained through MUNN & CO. are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, the largest, best, and most widely circulated scientific paper. $3.20 a year. Weekly. Splendid engravings and interesting information. Specimen copy of the Scientific American sent free. Address MUNN & CO., SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Office, 24 Broadway, New York.

AN EX-ALDERMAN TRIED IT.

Ex-Alderman Taylor of Toronto, tried Hagyard's Yellow Oil for rheumatism. It cured him after all other remedies had failed.

Shelburne Foresters had a successful excursion to Galt recently.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best Salve in the world for cuts, bruises sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by A. Turner & Co.

The Meaford Mirror says that the editor of the Dundalk Herald is a gentleman and a scholar. So say we.

A SAD NEGLECT.

Neglecting a constipated condition of the bowels is sure to bring ill-health and great suffering. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate the bowels in a natural manner, purifying the blood and promote a healthy action of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

November 6th has been proclaimed by the Governor-general as Thanksgiving Day throughtcut the Dominion.

A CURE FOR CHOLERA MORBUS.

A positive cure for this dangerous complaint, and for all acute or chronic forms of Bowel Complaint incident to summer and fall, is found in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry; to be procured from any druggist.

The Owen Sound Fall Races takes place on the course October 7th and 8th. Prizes will be offered to the amount of $1,000.

RESPECT AGE.

Age should always command respect, in the case of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry it certainly does. for 25 years that has been the standard remedy with the people, for Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colic and all bowel complaints.

The Fifth Division Court of the County of Grey will hold its regular sittings in the Town Hall, Flesherton, on Thursday, October the 30th next.

A STRONG ENDORSEMENT.

The Clergy, the Medical Faculty, the press and the people all endorse Burdock Blood Bitters as the best system renovating blood purifying tonic known. Its work bears out their best recommend.

"SUCCESS.—We congratulate the Markdale Standard on its safely reaching its ninth birthday. It has missed the calamities usually fatal to youngsters, and is in a fair was to success. Friend Rutledge is a pushing man and deserves to succeed."—Shelburne Free Press.

A RARE PLANT.

The Wild Strawberry Plant possesses rare virtue as a cleansing, cooling, astringent, anteseptic and healing medicine, and when combined with other valuable vegetable extracts, as in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, it is an unfailing remedy in all bowel complaints.

The Canadian Farmer has entered upon its seventh year. It has greatly improved during the present year and now comes out in a new dress and otherwise improved. It is an excellent weekly agricultural journal, published at Welland, Ont., Only $1, per year.

McGREGOR'S SPEEDY CURE.

Every purchaser of common sense business capacity, when requiring an article for a certain purpose, purchases only that which has been tried or is allowed first to test before buying. You are allowed a free trial bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure, the great remedy for Dyspepsia, Impure Blood and Liver Disorders at Hill Bro's. Sold at 50 cents and $1 per bottle. See testimonials from persons in your own town. 'A. & S. 6

DON'T DO IT.—Don't box your child's ears. Numerous incidents are recorded with serious results, often permanent injury have followed such treatment. Nature has provided every child with a place where corporal chastisement may be safely administered and that place is not on the head.

A LIFE SAVING PRESENT.

Mr. M. E. Allison, Hutchinson, Kan.: Saved his life by a simple Trial Bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, for Consumption, which caused him to procure a large bottle, that completely cured him, when Doctors, change of climate and everything else had failed. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Severe Coughs, and all Throat and Lung diseases, it is guaranteed to cure. Trial bottles free at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store. Large size $1.00. 1

There has been much talk of late about India becoming a rival of Canada in the production of wheat, but a Bombay dispatch says that the crops are almost a complete failure in the interior owing to the drought, and that the distress is so great that many women are killing themselves because they cannot find food for their children.

The following is from J. W. Ptolemy, of Winnipeg, formerly grain buyer for William Gillesby, of Hamilton and Grimsby: "I was for many years much afflicted with Costiveness, Biliousness, and ultimately Dyspepsia. I suffered very much and tried many different medicines, which gave me only temporary relief and then I was as bad as ever again. I was recommended by a friend, who had been restored to health by it, to try McGregor's Speedy Cure. I did so, and it was not long before I felt like a new man, and I have enjoyed excellent health ever since. I first commenced taking it February 7th, 1879. Sold by Hill Bro's. A. & S. 5

Earl Dufferin has been appointed viceroy of India. He is probably the best man that England could put in the place. He was the most popular governor-general that Canada ever had, and he has since shown himself to be an accomplished diplomatist.

National Pills purifies the blood, regulate stomach, Liver and bowels.

We are pleased to notice that Mr. W. H. Hearst, of J. Masson's office, secured 3rd scholarship ($40) at the 1st Intermediate Examinations at Osgoode Hall lately held there. We understand this is the first scholarship ever obtained by any of our law students from town, but now that Mr. Hearst has succeded in breaking the ice, we hope to chronicle many more. —U. S. Times.

For Nettle Rash, Itching Piles, Ringworm Eruptions, and all skin diseases, use Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap.

The names of over 100 ladies appear on the Owen Sound voters list this year; The Advertiser says the man who stays out late at night won't be Mayor next year.

Dr. Low's Worm Syrup will remove worms and cause, quicker than any other medicine.

GEN. WOLSELEY left London Sunday for Egypt. He was greeted by a large crowd at the railway station, and was enthusiastically cheered as the train left.

A CERTAIN very humorous editor was once asked what made him so mirthful and witty; He said 1st he took nine hours sleep every night, 2nd he ate three hearty meals per day and 3rd he had a good salary; but the greatest of these is salary.

GOSSIP.—What is the cure for gossip? Simply culture and education. There is a great deal of gossip that has no malignity in it. Good-natured people talk about their neighbors because—and only because—they have nothing else to talk about. Gossip is always a personal confession to either malice or imbecility, and the young should not only shun it, but should with the greatest watchfulness guard themselves against every temptation to indulge in it. It is low and frivolous. There are country neighoorhoods in which it rages like a pest. Churches are split in pieces by it; neighbors made enemies for life by it. In many persons it degenerates into a chronic disease practically incurable.

School Report.

S. S. No. 6, Holland, for month of August 1884.

First—1, Louis Haslip; 2, Robert Sanderson; 3, Willie Smith; 4, Jennie Martin.

Second Part Jr.—1, Annie Smith; 2, Minnie David; 3, Nellie Rowe; 4, Willie McKay.

Sr.—1, Gerty Allen; Robbie We' h.

Second Class Jr.—1, Minnie Welsh; 2, Emma Ewart; 3, Lizzie Ritchie; 4, Sarah Brown.

Second Class Sr.—1, Sadie Rowe; 2, Bella Gillespie; 3, Thomas Bradley; 4, John Sargent.

Third Class Jr.—1, Latetia Sanderson; 2, Albert Allen; 3, James Blaney.

Third Sr.—1, John Sargent; 2, Maggie Walker 3, Lizzie Sanderson.

Fourth—1, Mattie Gillaspie; 2, Addie Allen.

E. J. BAILEY, Teacher.

Seventy Thousand Lives.

THE NUMBER LOST IN A JAPANESE INUNDATION.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 15.—Advices from Yokohama, Aug. 30, say that information has reached Canton of a frightful inundation in Kiang Lai province. The news is dated from King Tak, chief center of the pottery manufacture, and one of the four great markets of the empire. The floods lasted four days, and the entire country is submerged to a depth of sixty feet. Whole towns have been swept away. It is believed that seventy thousand persons have perished. It was feared that a pestilence would follow. Cholera has broken out in the army.

MARKDALE POST OFFICE.

Mails at Markdale are closed as follows, commencing Monday August 11th, closed bag for Toronto 8, a. m. General Mail South 3:45 p. m., General Mail North 11:30 p. m. close bag for Owen Sound 7. p. m.

AN ACROSTIC.

Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a man
It's true, Lardine's the best Oil
Nothing its equal, cast's aside toil
External its use, on every soil.

Use Lardine Machine Oil unexcelled for machinery, sold manufacturer, McColl Bros. Toronto.

Franco - Chinese War.

Nothwithstanding the desolating war now raging in China it will not increase the price of Teas at the

Belfast House, Markdale

Having imported prior to the opening of hostilities, a sufficient quantity to supply 20,000 MEN for a period of 12 months. In other departments of the Grocery trade the BELFAST HOUSE has KILLED BY THOUSAND those who assume to transact business by purchasing of small dealers exorbitant rates of interest on long credit. Our imports of

PRESERVED MEATS, SALMON LOBSTERS, SARDINES, HAMS, BACON, ASSORTED PICKELS

and every articles in the grocery trade

LIQUORS

Of the best brands and quality. Wine for Sacramental purposes warranted pure. Brandies direct from the manufacturer and all other kinds of liquors.

Coffees, Teas and Tobaccoes cannot fail to give satisfaction. Oranges, Lemons, &c. Family Flour supplied at Lowest Rates.

THOS. McNEA.
BELFAST HOUSE, - MARKDALE

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH
Plewes' Flour and Feed Store.

Having just received a
Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF
Teas, Sugars, Tobacco, &c.
Which will be sold VERY CHEAP
I respectfully solicit the public patronage.
193 J. PLEWES.

CHATSWORTH HOUSE
(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)
CHATSWORTH, Ont.
TUCK & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.
The best brand of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meals and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler. 11

HENRY GILL,
HOUSE PAINTER
GRAINER, GLAZIER AND PAPER HANGER, CALCIMINING AND WALL TINTING.
Residence opposite Planing Factory
MARKDALE.
ORDERS SOLICITED. ESTIMATES GIVEN

P. DUCOLON'S
LIVERY,
IN HULL'S OLD STAND,
MILL - STREET
Good Horses and comfortable Rigs at moderate charges.
195

ROOKE'S BAKERY
BREAD, the staff of life and PASTRY that will please your wife, always on hand, to supply the demand.
So when your stock is low
Step in and let us know,
And we'll your wants supply
Or you'll know the reason why.
E. ROOKE, Markdale.

J. G. IRVING
MARKDALE,
Manufacturer of all Kinds of
PUMPS
Drop Valve, Cylinder, Force, and Chain Pumps.
All kinds of
IRON - PUMP
SUPPLIED.

The Markdale Sta

Is issued evesy Thursday, at the Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards space and under, per year, $4.

	1 yr.	6
Whole column	$50 00	$27
Half column	27 00	15
Quarter column	15 00	10
Two inch space	7 00
Three inch space	10 00	5

Casual advertisements 8 cents per insertion, 3 cents per line each insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices under 10 cents per line first insertion each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised $1, the advertisement not to exceed lines.

No paper discontinued until arrears are paid except at the option of the

JOB PRINTING

THE STANDARD office has a specialment of poster as well as fine job cial attention to orders by mail filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR

Legal.

HANDS & PERRY
(SUCCESSORS TO HARPER & HANDS)
BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Loan at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East
199-251

Frost & Frost.
BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS Law, Solicitors in Chancery, &c., Owen Sound, have removed to Flesherton, Office open every Tuesday heretofore.
ALFRED FROST, J. W. FROST
County Crown Attorney.

J. MASSON.
BARRISTER, MASTER AND REFEREE in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Victoria Chambers, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, at McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

Creasor & Morrison
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.
OFFICES in Owen Sound, Duffer Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE:
Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Tuesday and Friday of each week.
☞ Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
JOHN CREASOR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORRISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882.

Alexander Brown.
ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Commissioner for Life Insurance Agent, Conveyancer in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Merchants, and Land Sales. Promptly attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880.

Wm. Brown.
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancing in all its branches attended to and carefully executed. N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate Security.

MANSION HOUSE
MARKDALE
Jas. Bryan, Propr.

CITY HOTEL
MARKDALE
John McAleer, - Prop.
This house is fitted up in good style and situated on Mill street, where the traveling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains.

MARKDALE HOUSE
MARKDALE,
MRS. RUTLEDGE, PROPR.

A. HILL
Fashionable Tailor
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE
A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED

anco - Chinese War.
otwithstanding the fluctuating now raging in China it will not ease the price of Teas at the East House, Markdale
aving imported prior to the open-
of hostilities, a sufficient quantity
pply 20,000 MEN for a period of onths. In other departments of
Grocery trade the BELFAST
SE has KILLED BY THOU-
D those who assume to transact
ess by purchasing of small deal-xorbitant rates of interest on long
t. Our imports of
SERVED MEATS, SALMON
BSTERS, SARDINES, HAMS,
ACON, ASSORTED PICKELS
very articles in the grocery trade
LIQUORS
e best brands and quality. Wines
acramental purposes warranted.
Brandies direct from the man-
urer and all other kinds of liquors.
fees, Teas and Tobaccoes cannot
to give satisfaction. Oranges,
ns, &c. Family Flour supplied
west Rates.
THOS. McNEA.
AST HOUSE, - MARKDALE
W GROCERY STORE
IN CONNECTION WITH
es' Flour and Feed Store.
aving just received a cee, Fresh and Select
STOCK OF
s.
Sugars,
Tobacco, &c.
will be sold VERY CHEAP
espectfully solicit the public
age.
J. PLEWES.
ATSWORTH HOUSE
(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)
HATSWORTH, Ont.
CK & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.
best brand of liquors and cigars
stock. Good meals and comfortable uaranteed. Good stabling and hostler. 114
ENRY GILL,
USE PAINTER
NER, GLAZIER AND PAPE
NGER, CALCIMINING
AND WALL TINTING.
nce opposite Planing Factory
ARKDALE.
SOLICITED. ESTIMATES GIVE 192-2
DUCOLON'S
IVERY,
IN HULL'S OLD STAND,
LL - STREET
ood Horses comfortable Rigs
oderate charges.
KE'S BAKERY
EAD, the staff of life
STRY that will plea ie, always on hand, to supp
the demand.
hen your stock is low
p in and let us know,
e'll your wants supp
you'll know the reas
hy.
E. ROOKE,
Markdale.
IRVING
MARKDALE,
Manufacturer of all Kinds of
UMPS
Valve, Cylinder, Force, and Cis
All kinds of
ON - PUMP
SUPPLIED.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 4.--No. 211. MARKDALE, ONT., SEPT. 25, 1884. {COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH.}

The Markdale Standard

Is issued evesy Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1, the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

—JOB PRINTING.—

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS & PERRY,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
199-251 TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Flesherton, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.
ALFRED FROST, J. W. FROST, LL. B.
County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCES, &c. &c.
OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
Over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.
Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
JOHN CREASOR, Q. C., DUNCAN MORISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Merchants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Jas. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.
This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
MRS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
A PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

25 Doses, 25 Cents.
TAKE
Flint's Mandrake Pills
If you have Sick Headache, Liver is Torpid, Are Bilious, Appetite is Poor, Bowels are Costive, Have a Bad Breath, Want your Stomach thoroughly Cleansed, they are the medicine to use. Work like a charm. Are purely Vegetable.
Mildest Pill ever taken.
TRY THEM.
Sold by Medicine Dealers.
J. T. FLINT & CO., Pharmacists, Prop'rs, Rock Island, P. Q., and Derby Line, Vt.

Medical.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O.
Physician and Surgeon, Priceville,
Graduate of University. Vict. College.
" " New York, and
Hon. Graduate, of the same,
" " Ayleth Medical Institute.
" " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y.
Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at Rutledge's Hotel, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.
122-47.

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT,—Residence on Mill Street, Markdale.
124ly

HAMILTON'S
PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY
MARKDALE.
OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.

Fine work executed in all the latest sizes and shapes, fully equal to city work. Special attention given to

FRAMING

A large stock of moulding to choose from.
Call and leave your measure for a picture.
Jas. Hamilton.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.

Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.

Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

Dr. Hixon,
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, AND ACCOUCHER,
PRICEVILLE.
All calls promptly attended to.

ISAAC STINSON,
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

SAMUEL WARDELL,

WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

ALEX KAY
BOOT & SHOE
MAKER,
Mill Street, - Markdale

Osprey.

From our own correspondent.

Harvest is over and fall ploughing and threshing is now the order of the day.

The Salvation Army stil "hold the fort" in Feversham, where they are going to build a barracks 30 x 50 feet.

Rev. J. Chisholm returned from Europe last week looking none the worse for his extended trip. Mr. De Argent, who filled his place while absent, will leave for "Queen's College," Kingston, next week.

Bush fires are numerous owing to the continued drought, causing considerable damage in some cases.

R. T. McGirr is exhibiting his Clydesdale Stallion at the Industerial Fair this week.

There is a new shoemaker at Maxwell.

Capt. Ned is in Toronto this week.

Williamsford.

From our own correspondent.

Mr. Jas. Ireton has opened out business, after his late scorching, in the premises recently occupied by Jas. Foster.

Mr. Young, tailor, has also opened in Handly's building, opposite the Queen's Hotel.

Mr. Thos. Spears has purchased a lot, where he will erect a large stone blacksmith shop.

D. C. McLogan, our station agent, has left, and Charlie ——— takes his place. The latter is very popular, especially with the gentler sex.

Mr. C. Price has his new store up and closed in and is pushing it towards completion.

Mr. H. Foster has commenced buying grain, which makes things more lively.

Our fall show which takes place here on the 8th October is likely to be the best yet held; entries are now already coming in and a large exhibit is expected. The directors are highly pleased with the posters, which were printed at the STANDARD office.

Priceville.

From our own correspondent.

Priceville fair, held on Monday, 15th inst., was a success in both quantity and quality. The number of cattle brought out was large and quite an improvement in flesh was noticeable. The sales were numerous, over one hundred head changed hands. Prices were low. 3 year-old steers and heifers selling from $25 to $35 per head. Several horses were offered but no sales reported. Proceeds of fair leaving between $2,500 and $3,000 in the hands of the farmers in this vicinity.

Miss R. Nicholl, dressmaker in this place, is about leaving for the North-West. "We shall meet and we shall miss her" in the Sunday School and elsewhere.

Mr. John McLeod is building himself a new house. It has been said "New stoves mean new cooks." Tell me whether this holds good in houses (Batchelors I mean).

Dr. Hixon is working into a good practice. His success with the various cases with which he has had to deal, shows him to have a thorough knowledge of his profession. This, with his upright, manly principles, pronounce him a man in whom his patients may feel the utmost confidence.

The Priceville Public School is quite a busy place this session. The two departments, under the instruction of Mr. Dixon, Principal, and Miss M. Nicholl of the junior, are making rapid improvements. We understand two of our citizens have offered a special prize to be given in each department to the pupils making the best progress during the year; and we are having an active, live school right along.

The farmers have commenced threshing. All agree that the grain is turning out well, is of good quality and will compare favorably with other Counties.

Dr. Low's Worm Syrup will remove worms and cause, quicker than any other medicine.

Traverston.

From a Correspondent.

Times are lively here at present.

Cliff and son is doing an extensive business in the woollen mill. We understand they have lost one of their best knitters in the person of Miss Martha Banks, who is gone to Amaron to visit friends. We expect her to return this week if some lucky young man does not make her his own, Miss Esther Pearth has also gone, to Hamilton. We wish them a pleasant trip.

Harvest is over and threshing commenced.

There was a fine shower here Tuesday.

There is talk here of a grand wedding shortly.

Personals.

Mrs. Eaton has been visiting friends in Markdale and Flesherton recently.

Rev. J. and Mrs. Galloway called off at Markdale on their way home to Port Elgin from a visit to Markham.

Blackburn Galbraith, of Michigan, has been in this district on business lately.

We had a friendly call from our esteemed friend John McDuffie, who has had the past year a situation on the C. P. R. North of Lake Superior. He is now on his way north of Bracebridge to oversee men on the building of that portion of the C. P. Railway.

Miss Boomer has returned from Halton. She looks well after her holidays and is enthusiastic for the Scott Act.

MR. HICKS, Principal of Invermay Public School, while visiting friends in this village, paid our school a short visit on Monday forenoon.

Rev. J. F. Parke and wife of Blythe have been the guests of Mr. Wm. Lucas for the past ten days.

Mr. Wm. Lucas left for Brigden and London Fair on Monday, he returned on Wednesday.

Messrs. G. M. Haskett and E. S. Mabee, left for London Fair on Monday.

Mr. Jas. Hume of Watford, brother-in-law to Mr. Lucas visited Markdale last week.

New Conveyancing and Loan Office.

It gives us much pleasure to announce to our readers the fact that our late esteemed Reeve, F. MacRae, Esq., has opened a conveyancing office and money loan agency in Dunlop's buildings, adjoining McAlear's ity Hotel. Mr. MacRae represents the most popular Loan Societies in the Dominion—low rates of interest and easy terms.—Let old friends give him a call. His thorough knowledge of the intricacies of conveyancing renders him equal to the best professionals.

Monthly Fairs.

Markdale—Saturday before Flesherton.

Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.

Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.

Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.

Mount Forest—Third Wednesday in each month.

Priceville—Monday before Durham.

Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.

Hanover—Monday before Durham.

Walkerton—Last Wednesday in every month.

A CURE FOR CHOLERA MORBUS.

A positive cure for this dangerous complaint, and for all acute or chronic forms of Bowel Complaint incident to summer and fall, is found in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry; to be procured from any druggist.

Fall Show Fairs.

Osprey, at McIntyre October 9th.

Proton, at Dundalk October 7th and 8th.

Melancthon, at Shelburne October 7th and 8th.

Glenelg, at Markdale, on the 2nd and 3rd October.

South Grey, at Durham, the 30th September and 1st October.

Normanby, in Ayton on Sept. 24th.

Sydenham, at Annan, Tuesday, Oct. 7th.

Holland, at Chatsworth, Thursday, Oct., 9th.

Derby, at Kilsyth, Thursday, Oct. 9th.

Sullivan, at Desboro, Tuesday, Oct. 7th.

North Grey, at Owen Sound, Thursday and Friday, 2nd and 3rd Oct.

Artemesia, in Priceville Oct. 7th.

St. Vincent in Meaford the 8th and 9th October.

MARKDALE POST OFFICE.

Mails at Markdale are closed as follows, commencing Monday August 11th, closed bag for Toronto 8, a. m. General Mail South 3:45 p. m., General Mail North 11:30 p. m. close bag for Owen Sound 7, p. m.

East Grey Fall Show.

Notwithstauding the threatning aspect of the weather, and the down pour of rain on the evening of the second day the exhibition was a success both as regards the number of entries quality of exhibit and attendance at the fair. As we cannot obtain the prize list for this week's paper we will leave our comments for next week when a full account and prize list will be given.

VISIT OF BISHOP BALDWIN.—The first visit of the new Bishop of Huron, which will take place on Sunday next, is looked forward to with much interest, and there will no doubt be crowded congregations at St. George's Church, where he will preach both morning and evening. At the evening service he will administer the rite of Confirmation to a large number of candidates. The warm interest he takes in the temperance cause is well known throughout the Province, and at the request of the W. C. T. U. he will give a temperance address in the Town Hall on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. His other appointments in the county will be as follows:—

Sept. 22.—St. Thomas Church, St. Vincent

Sept. 23.—Christ Church, Meaford.

Sept. 24.—St George's Church, Clarksburg, and Trinity Church, Collingwood township.

Sept. 25.—St. Augustine Church, Heathcote and St. James Church, Euphrasia.

Sept. 26.—St. Philip's Church, Walter's Falls, and St. Matthew's Church, Sydenham.

Sept. 27.—St. Mark's Church, Holland.

Sept. 28.—St. Paul's Church, Chatsworth, and St. John's Church, Sullivan.

Sept. 29.—St. Luke's Church, Williamsford, and Christ Church, Markdale.

Sept. 30.—St. Mary's Church, Maxwell, and Eugenia.

Oct. 1.—St. John's Church, Dundalk, and St. Paul's Church, Shelburne.

Oct. 2.—Trinity Church, Durham,

Oct. 3.—Christ Church, Allen Park, and Christ Church, Hanover.—C. S. Times.

A RARE PLANT.

The Wild Strawberry Plant possesses rare virtue as a cleansing, cooling, astringent, antiseptic and healing medicine, and when combined with other valuable vegetable extracts, as in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, it is an unfailing remedy in all bowel complaints.

A BLUE GRASS PENELOPE.

YE BRET HARTE.

CHAPTER II, CONTINUED.

"Well, I don't know anyone who has a better right to know than Spence Tucker's wife," said another with a coarse laugh. The laugh was echoed by the others. Mrs. Tucker saw the pit innto which she had deliberately walked, but did not flinch.

"Is there any one to serve here?" she asked, turning her clear eyes full upon the bystanders.

"You'd better ask the sheriff. He was the last one to serve here. He sarved an attachment," replied the inevitable humorist of all Californian assemblages.

"Is he here?" asked Mrs. Tucker, disregarding the renewed laughter which fol'owed this subtle witticism.

The loungers at the door mads way for one of their party, who was half dragged, half pushed into the shop. "Here he is," said half a dozen eager voices, in the fond belief that his presence might impart additional humor to the situation. He cast a deprecating glance at Mrs. Tucker and said: "It's so, madam! This yer place is attached; but if there's anything you're wanting, why, I reckon, boys"—he turned half appealingly to the crowd—" we could oblige a lady." There was a vague sound of angry opposition and remonstrance from the back door o the shop, but the majority, partly overcome by Mrs. Tucker's beauty, assented. "Only,' continued the officer explanatorily, "ez these yer goods are in the hands of the creditors, they ought to be represented by an equivalent in money. If you're expecting they should be charged——"

"But I wish to pay for them," interrupted Mrs. Tucker with a slight flush of indignation. "I have the money."

"Oh, I bet you have!" screamed a voice, as, overturning all opposition, the malcontent at the back door, in the shape of an infuriated woman, forced her way into the shop. "I'll bet you have the money. Look at her, boys. Look at the wife of a thief with the stolen money in diamonds in her ears and rings on her fingers. She's got money if we've got none. She can pay for what she fancies, if we haven't a cent to redeem the beds that's stole from under us. Oh, yes, buy it all, Mrs. Spencer Tucker! buy the whole shop, Mrs. Spencer Tucker! do you hear? And if you ain't satisfied then buy my clothes, my wedding ring, the only things your husband hasn't sto'en."

"I don't understand you," said Mrs. Tucker coldly, turning towards the door. But with a flying leap across the counter her relentless adversary stood between her and retreat.

"You don't understand! Perhaps you don't understand that your husband not only stole the hard labor of these men, but even the little money they brought here and trusted to his thieving hands. Perhaps you don't know that he stole my husband's hard earnings, mortgaged these very goods you want to buy, and he is to day a convicted thief, a forger, and a runaway coward. Perhaps, if you can't understand me you can read the newspaper. Look!" She exultingly opened the paper the Sheriff had been reading aloud and pointed to the displayed head lines. "Look! there are the very words. 'Forgery, Swindle, Embezzlment!' Do you see? And p'raps you can't understand this. Look! 'Shameful flight. Abandons his wife. Runs off with a Notorious——"

"Easy old gal, easy now. D—n it! Will you dry up? I say. Stop!"

It was too late! The Sheriff had dashed the paper from the woman's hand, but not until Mrs. Tucker had read a single line, a line such as she had sometimes turned from with weary scorn in her careless perusal of the daily shameful chronicle of domestic infelicity. Then she had wondered if there could be any such men and women: and now! The crowd fell back before her; even the virago was silenced as she looked at her face. The humorist's face was as white, but not as immobile, as he gasped. 'Christ!—if I don't believe she knew nothin' of it!'

For a moment the full force of such a supposition, with all its poignancy, its dramatic intensity, and its pathos, possessed the crowd. In the momentary clairvoyance of enthusiasm they caught a glimpse of the truth, and by one of the strange reactions of human passion they only waited for a word of appeal or explanation from her lips to throw themselves at her feet. Had she simply told her story they would have believed her; had she cried, fainted, or gone into hysterics, they would have pitied her. She did neither. Perhaps she thought of neither—or indeed of anything that was then before her eyes. She walked erect to the door and turned on the threshold. "I mean what I say," she said calmly." I don't understand you. But whatever just claim you have upon my husband will be paid by me—or by his lawyer, Captain Poindexter."

She had lost the sympathy but not the respect of her hearers. They made way for her with sullen deference as she passed out on the platform. But her adversary, profiting by the last opportunity, burst into an ironical laugh.

"Capt. Poindexter, is it? Well, perhaps he's safe to pay your bill—but as for your husband's——"

"That's another matter," interrupted a familiar voice with the greatest cheerfulness—"that's what you were going to say, wasn't it? Ha! ha! Well, Mrs. Patterson," continued Poindexter, stepping from his buggy, "you never spoke a truer word in your life. One moment, Mrs. Tucker. Let me send your back in the buggy. Don't mind me. I can get a fresh horse of the sheriff. I'm quite at home here. I say, Patterson, step a few paces this way, will you? A little further from your wife, please. That'll do. You've got a claim of $5,000 against the property, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, that woman just driving away is your one solitary chance of getting a cent of it. If your wife insults her again—that chance is gone. And if you do——"

"Well?"

"As sure as there is a God in Israel and a Supreme Court of the state of California, I'll kill you in your tracks! * * * Stay!"

Patterson turned. The irrepressible look of humorous tolerance of all human frailty had suffused Poindexter's black eyes with mischievous moisture. "If you think it quite safe to confide to your wife in this prospect of her improvement by widowhood—you may!"

CHAPTER III.

Mr. Patterson did not inform his wife of the lawyer's personal threat to himself. But he managed, after Poindexter had left, to make her conscious that Mrs. Tucker might be a power to be placated and feared. "You've shot off your mouth at her," he said, argumentatively "and whether you've hit the mark or not you've had your say. If you think its worth a possible $5,000 and interest to keep on, heave ahead. If you rather have the chance of getting the rest in cash, you'll let up on her." "You don't suppose," returned Mrs. Patterson contemptuously, "that she's got anything but what that man of hers—Poindexter—let's her have?" "The Sheriff says," retorted Patterson surl ly, "that she's notified him that she claims the rancho as a gift from her husband three years ago—and she's in possession now, and was so when the execution was out. It don't make no matter," he added, with gloomy philosophy, "whose got a full hand as long as we ain't got the cards to chip in. I wouldn't hev minded it," he continued meditatively, "ef Spencer Tucker had dropped a hint to me afora he put out. "And I suppose," said Mrs Patterson angrily, "you'd have put out too?" "I reckon," said Mrs. Patterson simply.

Twice or thrice during the evening he referred, more or less directly, to this lack of confidence shown by his late debtor and employer, and seemed to feel it more keenly than the loss of property. He confided his sentiments quite openly to the Sheriff in possession, over the whiskey and euchre with which these gentlemen avoided the difficulties of their delicate relations. He brooded over it as he handed the keys of the shop to the Sheriff when they parted for the night, and was still thinking of it when the house was closed, everybody gone to bed, and he was fetching a fresh jug of water from the well. The moon was at times obscured by flying clouds—the avant couriers of the regular evening shower. He was stooping over the well, when he sprang suddenly to his feet again. Who's there?" he demanded sharply.

"Hush!" said a voice, so low and faint it might have been a whisper of the wind in the palisades of the corral. But, indistinct as it was, it was the voice of the man he was thinking of as far away, and it sent a thrill of alternate awe and pleasure through his pulses.

He glanced quickly around. The moon was hidden by a passing cloud, and only the faint outlines of the house he had just quitted were visible "Is that you, Spence?" he said, tremulously.

"Yes," replied the voice and a figure dimly emerged from the corner of the corral.

'Lay low, lay low—for God's sake," said Patterson, hurriedly throwing himself upon the apparition. "The Sheriff and his posse are in there."

'But I must speak to you a moment," said the figure.

"Wait," said Patterson, glancing toward the building. Its blank shutterless windows revealed no inner light—a profound silence encompassed it. "Come quick," he whispered. Letting his grasp slip down to the unresisting hand of the stranger, he half dragged, half led him, brushing against the wall, into the open door of the deserted barroom he had just quitted, locked the inner door, poured a glass of whiskey from a decanter, gave it to him, and then watched him drain it at a single draught. The moon came out, and, falling through the bare windows full upon the stranger's face, revealed the artistic but slightly dishevelled curls and moustache of the fugitive, Spencer Tucker,

Whatever may have been the real influence of this unfortunate man upon his fellows, it seemed to find expression in a singular unanimity of criticism. Patterson looked at him with a half-dismal, half welcome smile. "Well, you are a h—ll of a fellow, ain't you?"

Spencer Tucker passed his hand through his hair and lifted it from his forehead, with a gesture at once emotional and theatrical

'I am a man with a price on me!" he said bitterly. "Give me up to the Sheriff, and you'll get five thousand dollars. Help me, and you'll get nothing. That's my d—d luck, and yours too, I suppose."

'I reckon you'r right there," said Patterson gloomily. "But I thought you got clean away. Went off on a ship——"

"Went off in a boat to a ship," interrupted Tucker savagely; "went off to a ship, that had all my things on board—everything. The cursed boat capsized in a squall just off the heads. The ship, d—n her, sailed away, the men thinking I was drowned, likely, and that they'd make a good thing of my goods—I reckon."

"But the girl, Inez, who was with you, didn't she make a row?"

"Quien sabe," returned Tucker, with a reckless laugh. "Well, I hung on like grim death to that boat's keel until one of these Chinese fishermen, in a 'dug out,' hauled me in opposite Sancelito I chartered him and his dug out to bring me down here."

"Why here?" asked Patterson with a certain ostentatious caution that ill concealed pensive satisfaction.

"You may well ask," returned Tucker, with equal ostentation of bitterness, as he slightly waved his companion away. "But I reckoned that I could trust a white man that I'd been kind to, and wouldn't go back on me. No, no, let me go! Hand me over to the Sheriff!"

Patterson had suddenly grasped both the hands of the picturesque scamp before him, with an affection that for an instant almost shamed the man who had ruined him. But Tucker's egotism whispered that his affection was only a recognition of his own superiority, and felt flattered. He was beginning to believe that he was really the injured party.

"What I have and what I have had is yours, Spence," returned Patterson, with a sad and simple directness that made any further discussion a gratuitous insult. "I only wanted to know what you reckoned to do here."

"I want to get over across the coast range to Monterey," said Tucker. "Once there, one of those coasting schooners will bring me down to Acapulco, where the ship will put in."

Patterson remained silent for a moment, "There is a mustang in the coral you can take—leastways, I shan't know that its gone—until to-morrow afternoon. In an hour rom now," he added, looking from the window, "these clouds will settle down to business. It will rain; there will be light enough for you to find your way over the mountain, but not enough for any one to know you. If you can't push through to-night, you can lie over on the Posada on the summit. Them Greasers that keep it won't know you, and if they did they wont go back on you. And if they did go back on you nobody would believe them. It's mighty curious," he added with gloomy philosophy, "but I reckon its the reason why Providence allows this kind of cattle to live among white men and others made in His image. Take a piece of pie, won't you?" he continued, abandoning this abstract reflection and producing half a flat pumpkin pie from the bar. Spencer Tucker grasped the pie with one hand and his friend's fingers with the other, and for a few moments was silent from the hurried deglutition of viand and sentiment. "You're a white man, Patterson, anyway," he resumed. "I'll take your horse, and put it down in our account, at your own figure. As soon as this cursed thing is blown over, I'll be back and see you, though, you bet. I don't desert my friends, however rough things go with me."

"I see you don't," returned Patterson, with an unconscious and serious simplicity that had the effect of the most exquisite irony. "I was only just saying to the Sheriff that if there was anything I could have done for you, you wouldn't have out away without letting me know." Tucker glanced uneasily at Patterson, who continued. "Ye ain't wanting anything else?" Then observing that his former friend and patron was roughly but newly clothed, and betrayed no trace of his last escapade, he added. "I see you've got a fresh harness."

"That d——d Chinaman bought me there at the landing; they're not much in style or fit," he continued, trying to get a moonlight view of himself in the mirror behind the bar, "but that don't matter here." He filled another glass of spirits, jauntily settled himself back in his chair, and added. "I don't suppose there are any girls around anyway."

"'Cept your wife; she was down here this afternoon," said Patterson meditatively.

Mr. Tucker paused with the pie in his hand. "Ah, yes!" He essayed a reckless laugh, but that evident simulation failed before Patterson's melancholy. With an assumption of falling in with his friend's manner, rather than from any personal anxiety, he continued.

"Well?"

"That man Poindexter was down here with her. Put her in the hacienda to hold possession before the news came out."

"Impossible!" said Tucker, rising hastily. "It don't belong—that is——" he hesitated.

"Yer thinking the creditors 'll get it, mebbe," returned Patterson, gazing at the floor. "Not as long as she's in it; no, sir! Whether its really hers, or she's only keeping house for Poindexter, she's a fixture, you bet. They're a team when they pull together, they are!"

The smile slowly faded from Tucker's face, that now looked quite rigid in the moonlight. He put down his glass and walked to the window as Patterson gloomily continued. "But that's nothing to you. You've got ahead of 'em both, and had your revenge by going off with the gal. That's what I said all along. When folks—specially women folks—wondered how you could leave a woman like your wife, and go off with a scalliwag like that gal, I allers said they'd find out there was a reason. And when your wife came flaunting down here with Poindexter before she'd quite got rid of you, I reckon they began to see the whole little game. No, sir! I knew it wasn't on account of the gal! Why, when you came here to night, and told me quite natural like and easy how she went off in the ship, and then calmly ate your pie and drank your whiskey after it, I knew you didn't care for her. There's my hand, Spence; you're a trump, even if you are a little looney, eh? Why, what's up?"

Shallow and selfish as Tucker was, Patterson's words seemed like a revelation that shocked him as profoundly as it might have shocked a nobler nature. The simple vanity and selfishness that made him unable to conceive any higher reason for his wife's loyalty than his own personal popularity and success, now that he no longer possessed that eclat, made him equally capable of the lowest suspicions. He was a dishonored fugitive, broken in fortune and reputation—why should she not desert him? He had been unfaithful to her from wildness, from caprice, from the effect of those fascinating qualities; it seemed to him natural that she should be disloyal from more deliberate motives, and he hugged himself with that belief. Yet there was enough doubt, enough of haunting suspicion that he had lost or alienated a powerful affection to make him thoroughly miserable. He returned his friend's grasp convulsively and buried his face upon his shoulder. But he was not above feeling a certain exultation in the effect of his misery upon the dog-like, unreasoning affection of Patterson, nor could he entirely refrain from slightly posing his affliction before that sympathetic but melancholy man. Suddenly he raised his head, drew back, and thrust his hand into his bosom with a theatrical gesture.

"What's to keep me from killing Poindexter in his tracks?" he said wildly.

"Nothin' but his shooting first," returned Patterson, with dismal practicality. "He's mighty quick, like all them army men. It's about even, I reckon, that he don't get me first," he added in an ominous voice.

"No!" returned Tucker, grasping his hand again. "This is not your affair, Patterson: leave him to me when I come back."

"If he ever gets the drop on me, I reckon he won't wait, continued Patterson lugubriously. "He seems to object to my passin' criticism on your wife, as if she was a queen or an angel."

The blood came to Spencer's cheek, and he turned uneasily to the window. "It's dark enough now for a start," he said hurriedly, "and if I could get across the mountain without lying over at the summit, it would be a day gained."

Patterson arose without a word, filled a flask of spirit, handed it to his friend, and silently led the way through the slowly falling rain and the now settled darkness. The mustang was quickly secured and saddled; a heavy poncho afforded Tucker a disguise as well as a protection from the rain. With a few hurried disconnected words, and an abstracted air, he once more shook his friend's hand and issued cautiously from the corral. When out of earshot from the house, he put spurs to the mustang and dashed into a gallop.

To intercept the mountain road he was obliged to traverse part of the highway his wife had to walk that afternoon, and to pass within a mile of the casa where she was. Long before he reached that point his eyes were straining the darkness in that direction for some indication of the house which was to him familiar. Becoming now accustomed to the even obscurity, less trying to the vision than the alternate light and shadow of cloud or the full glare of moonlight, he fancied he could distinguish its low walls over the monotonous level. One of those impulses which had so often taken the place of resolution in his character, suddenly possessed him to diverge from his course and approach the house. Why, he could not have explained. It was not from any feeling of jealousy suspicion or contemplated revenge—that had passed with the presence of Patterson; it was not from any vague lingering sentiment for the woman he had wronged—he would have shrunk from meeting her at that moment. But it was full of these and more possibilities by which he might or might not be guided, and was at least a movement toward some vague end, and a distraction from certain thoughts he dared not entertain and could not entirely dismiss. Inconceivable and inexplicable to human reason, it might have been acceptable to the Divine omniscience for its predestined result.

He left the road at a point where the marsh encroached upon the meadow, familiar to him already as near the spot where he had debarked from the Chinaman's boat the day before. He remembered that the walls of the hacienda were distinctly visible from the tules where he had hidden all day, and he now knew that the figures he had observed near the building, which had deterred his first attempts at landing, must have been his wife and his friend. He knew that a long tongue of the slough filled by the rising tide followed the marsh, and lay between him and the hacienda. The sinking of his horse's hoofs in the spongy soil determined its proximity, and he made a detour to the right to avoid it. In doing so a light suddenly rose above the distant horizon ahead of him, trembling faintly, and then burned with a steady lustre. It was a light at the hacienda. Guiding his horse half abstractedly in this direction, his progress was presently checked by the splashing of the animal's hoofs in the water. But the turf was firm, and a salt drop that had spattered to his lips told him that it was only the encroaching of the tide in the meadow. With his eyes on the light, he again urged his horse forward. The rain lulled, the clouds began to break, the landscape alternately lightened and grew dark; the outlines of the crumbling hacienda walls that enshrined the light grew more visible. A strange and dreamy resemblence to the long blue brass plain before his wife's paternal house, as seen by him during his evening rides to courtship, pressed itself upon him. He remembered, too, that she used to put a light in the window to indicate her presence. Following this retrospect, the moon came boldly out, sparkled upon the overflow of silver at his feet, seemed to show the dark, opaque meadow beyond for a moment, and then disappeared. It was dark now, but the lesser earthly star still shone before him as a guide, and pushing towards it, he passed into the all-embracing shadow.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

THE STAGE-DRIVER'S STORY.

How General Scott's Life was Saved and How His Driver Twice Escaped Death.

The traveller of the present day, as he is hurried along by the lightning express, in its buffet cars and palace sleepers, seldom reverts in thought to the time when the stage coach and packet were the only means of communication between distant points. It is rare that one of the real old-time stage drivers is met with nowadays, and when the writer recently ran across Fayette Haskell, of Lockport N. Y., he felt like a bibliographer over the discovery of some rare volume of "forgotten lore." Mr. Haskell, although one of the pioneers in stage driving (he formerly ran from Lewiston to Niagara Falls and Buffalo), is hale and hearty and bids fair to live for many years. The strange stories of his early adventures would fill a volume. At one time when going down a mountain near Lewiston with no less a personage than General Scott as a passenger, the brakes gave way and the coach came on the heels of the wheel horses. The only remedy was to whip the leaders to a gallop. Gaining additional momentum with each revolution of the wheels the coach swayed and pitched down the mountain side into the streets of Lewiston. Straight ahead at the foot of the steep hill flowed the Niagara river, towards which the four horses dashed, apparently to certain death. Yet the firm hand never relaxed its hold nor the clear brain its conception of what must be done in the emergency. On dashed the horses until the narrow deck was reached on the river bank, when by a masterly exhibition of nerve and daring, the coach was turned in scarce its own length and the horses brought to a stand-still before the pale lookers-on could realize what had occurred. A purse was raised by General Scott and presented to Mr. Haskell with high compliments for his skill and bravery.

Notwithstanding all his strength and robust constitution the strain of continuous work and exposure proved too much for Mr. Haskell's constitution. The constant jolting of the coach and the necessarily cramped position in which he was obliged to sit, contributed to this end, and at times he was obliged to abandon driving altogether.

Speaking of this period he said:

"I found it almost impossible to sleep at night; my appetite left me entirely and I had a tired feeling which I never knew before and could not account for."

"Did you give up driving entirely?"

"No. I tried to keep up but it was only with the greatest effort. This state of things continued for nearly twenty years until last October when I went all to pieces."

"In what way?"

"Oh, I doubled all up, could not walk without a cane and was incapable of any effort or exertion. I had a constant desire to urinate both day and night, and although I felt like passing a gallon every ten minutes only a few drops could escape and they thick with sediment. Finally it ceased to flow entirely and I thought death was very near."

"What did you do then?"

"What I should have done long before; listen to my wife. Under her advice I began a new treatment."

"And with what result?"

"Wonderful. It unstopped the closed passages, and what was still more wonderful regulated the flow. The sediment vanished; my appetite returned, and I am now well and good for twenty more years, wholly through the aid of Warner's Safe Cure that has done wonders for me as well as for many others."

Mr. Haskell's experience is repeated every day in the lives of thousands of American men and women. An unknown evil is undermining the existence of an innumerable number who do not realize the danger they are in until health has entirely departed and death perhaps stares them in the face. To neglect such important matters is like drifting in the current of Niagara above the Falls.

Speaking of matrimonial yokes, a New York woman has just run away with Mr. Egge.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars. $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

"Called back"—The man that forgot to pay his check.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure. the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star

Mr. Winks—"Jane, have you fed the dog this morning?"

Mrs. Winks—"No; he doesn't need anything."

"Why, I have not given him any meat since yesterday morning; have you?"

"No, but one of Mariar's fellers called last night."

Not another Pill shall go down my throat again, said a citizen, "when I can get such a prompt and pleasant cure for my Bilious attacks, such as Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It renders the Blood Pure and Cool and makes a splendid Spring Medicine. Large bottles 25 cents.

An Unknown Monster.

For the past seven or eight years different stories have been told concerning a dreadful monster that inhabited a body of water known as Crater Lake, situated about fifty-five miles west of North Linkville. John Shallook, with others, has just seen the monster. Mr. Shallook says it looked to be as large as a man's body, and was swimming with about two or three feet out of water, and going at a rapid rate, as fast as a man could row a skiff, leaving a similar wave behind it. Its face, or head, looked white, and, although it was a long way off, they could plainly see that it was of an immense size. Several shots were fired at it, but it was so far off that they could not see where their bullets struck the water. Charles Moore says the bluffs around the lake are from 1,500 to 3,000 feet above the water, and almost perpedicular.—Klamath, Ore., Star.

The Fashionable Color.

Bank cashier to tailor:

"You may take my measure for a suit of clothes."

"Exactly. What color do you prefer?"

"What is the go this fall?"

"Well, for bank cashiers, Canada gray seems to be the favorite."

SAVED BY THE ENGI

A Thrilling Experien

The westbound express of th
Pacific due at Helena at 8 o'clo evening, met with a severe acci
Yellowstone, about twenty-two Miles City. We got the follow ars from I. S. G. Van Wart, of was a passenger on the train.
train was running along under a hain close to the Yellowst about 2 o'clock Saturday mor thirteen coaches express, bag grant, mail and Pulman cars, wi man discovered a huge pile of r down the mountain about th ahead, and cried out to the engi them come—jump for your lif same time jumping himself an safely on the side next the river.
ment the engineer instead of j
save his own life, thought of a hu angers whose lives were in his h

REVERSED THE ENGINE

and put on the air breaks, but heavy train moved on apparently destruction against the huge pil that had piled up on the track a head. The collision came, and t ive was forced high upon the under tel- scooped into the first exp about half its length. A huge rock ed by Chief Engineer Anderson, board the train, to weight fifty t
the track in front of the engine, way the head-light and smoke-s anding so close on the other sid part of it had to be cut away to rain to pass, which took forty m ours at hard work. It was a gr that the rock came down in front triking the train in the middle, w life by drowning in the river w ccurred that would have been ap late. It was a mercy, too, that ngineer was in charge of the tr
as daring enough to ply the brak considered his own safety. It at the mountain was over a

COAL MINE THAT WAS ON FIR

ed that the combustion loosened
the side of the hill. The passeng ed felt the concussion, being assu was only a forward car off the tr
ck to bed and slept till morning resence of what came very near b
the most dreadful accidents eve the history of railway smash-up nductor had to walk eight miles graph station before he could ca re. He summoned wrecking tra e east and west, and both ca large force of men, who worked b ear the track and take back the w at the train, which was about urs behind time, could move o mately no one was injured, an ngratulations next morning amo ssengers upon their deliverance eadful fate they did not forget t erintd Engineer Gleason, whom th timented by a series of resolution ndsome purse, which they forwar adquarters, with the signature and every passenger on the train. B eason, was the recipient of a gold a former occasion, when by his p mind and brave action he saved th another train load of passengers.
ch brave deeds that men become on a more exalted field than that o

Effects of Temperature.

The effects of temperature on men pend so much on the mean for th nth, or year, as on the extremes, a days are hot and the nights compa cool the energy of the system be rtially restored, so that a residence sea, or in the vicinity of high mou hot climates is, other things being e enervating than in the plains, ht air is generally cooler. It is co believed that hot climates are nece rious to Europeans, by causing fre
r derangements and diseases, dyse lera, and fevers. This, however, ertain extent, a mistake, as the dical statistical returns of our ar lis show that in the new barracks, re careful supervision as regards di thing, the sickness and death rat ch reduced. Planters and others
e about a good deal, as a rule k ly good health; but the children ropeans certainly degenerate, and o or three generations die out, unles rmarry with natives and make fre its to colder climates. This fact t hot climates, probably by inter
th the due performance of the v ocesses concerned in the formatio struction of the bodily tissues, even the foundations of life among Euro how far this result has been caus habits as regards food, exercise
-indulgence I cannot say. Rapid ch mperature in this country are ofte rious to the young, and old, ca rt ca and derangements of the liver at heat occurs, and inflammatory di the lungs, colds, etc., when the a es suddenly colder, even in summ ers.

The Mouse-Eating Spider.

About three years ago I succeeded i a live specimen at last, or rather them, all together, in a nice box fr
h wire netting. I bought them fr ve, who sells cigars and walking the market wharf in Bahia, a tow coast of Brazil.

or some time after they comm
r voyage they ate nothing, though and cockroaches into their cage.
fered them bits of fresh-killed raw ch they seemed to suck; and then had whetted its appetite, to my gest one killed the other two and s n till only the dry shells were l n, bloating itself visibly in the pr
When it began to get cold I filled u with hay, under which it retire t to sleep, and in that condition arded by rail from Southampton logical Gardens in London, where it in a splendid glass cage, la h a latin name several inches in le composed expressly for it.
hey call it the "mouse-eating" s ause it seemed to prefer the bod ng mice to anything else. At fi d to drain them of blood as vigorou d served its late companions, but it get to know there were more i r, and that it could have as many ted, so it would cut out the top o with its sharp nippers, suck the leaves that road.

TAGE-DRIVER'S STORY.

ral Scott's Life was Saved and Driver Twice Escaped Death.

veller of the present day, as he along by the lightning express, ot cars and palace sleepers, sel- ts in thought to the time when coach and packet were the only communication between distant t is rare that one of the real tage drivers is met with nowa- when the writer recently ran yette Haskell, of Lockport N. t like a bibliographer over the of some rare volume of "sor- s." Mr. Haskell, although one neers in stage driving (he form- rom Lewiston to Niagara Falls lo), is hale and hearty and bids e for many years. The strange his early adventures would fill At one time when going down n near Lewiston with no less a than General Scott as a pas- he brakes gave way and the e on the heels of the wheel The only remedy was to whip rs to a gallop. Gaining addi- nentum with each revolution of s the coach swayed and pitched mountain side into the streets n. Straight ahead at the foot p hill flowed the Niagara river, hich the four horses dashed, sp- certain death. Yet the firm r relaxed its hold nor the clear nception of what must be done rgency. On dashed the horses arrow deck was reached on the , when by a masterly exhibi- ve and daring, the coach was scarce its own length and the ght to a stand-still before the s-on could realize what had oc- purse was raised by General resented to Mr. Haskell with ments for his skill and bravery. tanding all his strength and titution the strain of continu- nd exposure proved too much kell's constitution. The con- g of the coach and the neces- ed position in which he was bit, contributed to this end, s he was obliged to abandon gether.

of this period he said: it almost impossible to sleep y appetite left me entirely and d feeling which I never knew ould not account for." give up driving en irely?" tried to keep up but it was e greatest effort. This state ntinued for nearly twenty ast October when I went all way!" oubled all up, could not walk ne and was incapable of any rtion. I had a constant de- e both day and night, and felt like passing a gallon nutes only a few drops could they thick with sediment. ased to flow entirely and I h was very near." you do then?" should have done long be- o my wife. Under her ad- a new treatment." what result?" l. It unstopped the closed what was still more wonder the flow. The sediment appetite returned, and I am d good for twenty more through the aid of Warner's t has done wonders for me many others." ll's experience is repeated the lives of thousands of n and women. An un- undermining the existence rable number who do not anger they are in until tirely departed and death s them in the face. To important matters is like current of Niagara above matrimonial yokes, a New as just run away with Mr.

Important.
or leave New York City, save sage and Carriage Hire, and AND UNION HOTEL, opposite Depot. 600 elegant rooms cost of one million dollars, per day. European plan. Ele- ant supplied with the best. ges and elevated railroads Families can live better the Grand Union Hotel than -class hotel in the city.

"—The man that forgot to

—A New Treatment.
st extraordinary success that d in modern science has been Dixon Treatment of catarrh. ents treated during the past ninety per cent. have been bborn malady. This is none when it is remembered that . of the patients presenting he regular practitioner are the patent medicines and cures never record a cure at n the claim now generally be- most scientific men that due to the presence of in the tissues, Mr. Dix- lapted his cure to catarrh his accomplished the catarrh d, and the permanency is un- es effected by him four years l. No one else has ever at- tarrh in this manner, and no as ever cured catarrh. The remedy is simple and can be d the present season of the favorable for a speedy and the majority of cases being tment. Sufferers should ors. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 Toronto, Canada, and enclose eatise on catarrh.—Montreal

Jane, have you fed the dog

' No; he doesn't need any-e not given him any meat horning; have you?" of Mariar's fellers called ll go down my throat again, 'cause get such a prompt and pleasant acks, such as Dr. Carson's Stom- e the Blood Pure and Cool and ring Medicine. Large bottles 50

SAVED BY THE ENGINEER.

A Thrilling Experience.

The westbound express of the Northern Pacific due at Helena at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, met with a severe accident on the Yellowstone, about twenty-two miles from Miles City. We got the following particulars from I. S. G. Van Wart, of Helena, who was a passenger on the train. He says the train was running along under a steep mountain close to the Yellowstone River, about 2 o'clock Saturday morning, with thirteen coaches express, baggage, emigrant, mail and Pulman cars, when the fireman discovered a huge pile of rock moving down the mountain about thirty yards ahead, and cried out to the engineer! "See them come—jump for your life?" at the same time jumping himself and lighting safely on the side next the river. In a moment the engineer instead of jumping to save his own life, thought of a hundred passengers whose lives were in his hands,

REVERSED THE ENGINE

And put on the air breaks, but still the heavy train moved on apparently to utter destruction against the huge pile of rocks that had piled up on the track a few feet ahead. The collision came, and the locomotive was forced high upon the rocks, the tender telescoped into the first express car for about half its length. A huge rock, estimated by Chief Engineer Anderson, who was aboard the train, to weight fifty tons, jumped the track in front of the engine, carrying away the head-light and smoke-stack, and landing so close on the other side that a part of it had to be cut away to allow the train to pass, which took forty men twelve hours at hard work. It was a great mercy that the rock came down in front instead of striking the train in the middle, when a loss of life by drowning in the river would have occurred that would have been appalling to relate. It was a mercy, too, that a brave engineer was in charge of the train, who was daring enough to ply the brakes before he considered his own safety. It appears that the mountain was over a

COAL MINE THAT WAS ON FIRE,

and that the combustion loosened the rocks on the side of the hill. The passengers, who had felt the concussion, being assured that it was only a forward car off the track went back to bed and slept till morning, in the presence of what came very near being one of the most dreadful accidents ever known in the history of railway smash-ups. The conductor had to walk eight miles to a telegraph station before he could call assistance. He summoned wrecking trains from the east and west, and both came with a large force of men, who worked bravely to clear the track and take back the wreck, so that the train, which was about fifteen hours behind time, could move on. Fortunately no one was injured, and amid congratulations next morning among the passengers upon their deliverance from a dreadful fate they did not forget stout-hearted Engineer Gleason, whom they commented by a series of resolutions and a handsome purse, which they forwarded to headquarters, with the signature and thanks of every passenger on the train. Engineer Gleason, was the recipient of a gold watch on a former occasion, when by his presence of mind and brave action he saved the lives of another train load of passengers. It is by such brave deeds that men become heroes upon a more exalted field than that of battle.

Effects of Temperature.

The effects of temperature on men do not depend so much on the mean for the day, month, or year, as on the extremes, as when the days are hot and the nights comparatively cool the energy of the system becomes partially restored, so that a residence near the sea, or in the vicinity of high mountains, in hot climates is, other things being equal, less enervating than in the plains, as the night air is generally cooler. It is commonly believed that hot climates are necessarily dangerous to Europeans, by causing frequent disorderangements and diseases, dysentery, cholera, and fevers. This, however, is, to a certain extent, a mistake, as the recent medical statistical returns of our army in India show that in the new barracks, with more careful supervision as regards diet and clothing, the sickness and death rates are much reduced. Planters and others, who live about a good deal, as a rule keep in pretty good health; but the children of the Europeans certainly degenerate, and after two or three generations die out, unless they intermarry with natives and make frequent visits to colder climates. This fact shows that hot climates, probably by interfering with the due performance of the various processes concerned in the formation and destruction of the bodily tissues, eventually sap the foundations of life among Europeans; but how far this result has been caused by their habits as regards food, exercise, and self-indulgence I cannot say. Rapid changes of temperature in this country are often very injurious to the young, and old, causing diarrhœa and derangements of the liver when great heat occurs, and inflammatory diseases of the lungs, colds, etc., when the air becomes suddenly colder, even in summer.—Exchange.

The Mouse-Eating Spider.

About three years ago I succeeded in getting a live specimen at last, or rather three of them, all together, in a nice box fronted with wire netting. I bought them from a native, who sells cigars and walking sticks on the market wharf in Bahia, a town on the coast of Brazil.

For some time after they commenced their voyage they ate nothing, though I put in flies and cockroaches into their cage. Then I offered them bits of fresh-killed raw beef which they seemed to suck; and then, as if they had whetted its appetite, to my great delight one killed the other two and sucked them till only the dry shells were left of them, bloating itself visibly in the process. When it began to get cold I filled up the jar with hay, under which it retired and went to sleep, and in that condition was safely boarded by rail from Southampton to the Zoological Gardens in London, where I next saw it in a splendid glass cage, labelled with a latin name several inches in length, and composed expressly for it.

They call it the "mouse-eating" spider, because it seemed to prefer the bodies of young mice to anything else. At first it used to drain them of blood as vigorously as it had served its late companions, but after a bit it got to know there were more in the larder, and that it could have as many as it wanted, so it would cut out the top of the mouse with its sharp nippers, suck the brains and leave the rest.

The Gunpowder Plot.

The Gunpowder Plot involved an attack on the nine foot thick foundation walls of the ancient palace on the river side, just below the chamber occupied by the House of Lords. The conspirators were all gentlemen and they bloodied their delicate fingers at that point to an end. Their object was to put between thirty and forty barrels of gunpowder into the mine, and to blow the king and the Prince of Wales, the lords, and the bishops, to atoms. They shortly found a cellar which answered their purpose better. Here they banked up their barrels under a suspicious quantity of coal and other fuel. When the train was laid, it led, however to themselves, and when the explosion came, it was under their own feet. They were scattered to the four winds. When the fated members of the conspiracy were sought and found, a number were slain in the arrest, a few escaped, but the remainder were put to the torture and tried. Guy Fawkes and seven others were arraigned before a special commission in Westminster Hall, and Coke, the Attorney-General, managed the proceedings against them. The result was, of course, an immediate and horrible execution in the rear of the Hall, and close to the scene of their labors. With very natural injustice this infamous attempt was attributed to the Catholic party.

The consequence of all this was the immediate formation as an imaginary explosive compound, that went by another name than gunpowder—a threefold mixture of this popular rumor, some actual Catholic discontent, and some latent treason, the fright of which lasts, in form at least, to this day. Parliament always looks under the bed at the opening of every new session, the Prayer book turns pale on the 5th of November, and Guy Fawkes is dishonored with a mock procession. But there was a period, and a good long one, when the memory of it revived in some more fiery form than this now fossil ceremonial. In the nervous imagination of the people the explosive compound was always underneath the government. The mere spark of suggestion was enough to set the whole train fizzing. This, for the most part, was after the Rebellion, at which time the throne was undermined and overturned by the Puritan party without exciting nearly so much scandal. The people were only afraid when the papists were at it. So when Titus Oates, seventy-four years after the Gunpowder Plot, told his enormous lie, they rushed, metaphorically speaking, to the cellars again to find the "popish plot" which had no existence, to seize and drag to judgment about as many supposed conspirators with supposed dark lanterns and supposed explosive materials concealed as Guy Fawkes had ever actually to do with, and again Westminster Hall had even more bloody work on its hands over this fiction of a malicious brain and this credulity of a suspicious people than it had over the veritable plot itself. It was a petard which, nevertheless, worked so undesignedly well at it nearly hoisted Charles the Second out of his throne because he had the best reason for not believing it, which did hoist all the papists out of Parliament so high that they never came down till George the Fourth's day, and the ring of the detonation was so loud that Jame the Second had afterward to put his hands to his ears and leave the kingdom to the Protestant triumph which has prevailed ever since. The extraordinary peculiarity of this gaseous version of the Gunpowder Plot was that it blew up the royal family after all, and with the nation's joyous consent.—Harper's Monthly.

Electricity as an Aid to Lion Tamers.

The latest application of electricity is an invention made in the interests of lion tamers, which consist of an apparatus of great power, shaped like a stick, about three and a half feet in length. M. Ranspach, the inventor is a lion tamer himself, who has been "a good deal worried" during a long and successful professional career. He has already experimented with it upon the denizens of the cages in his menagerie, and relates the different effects upon the brutes. Three of his lions receiving the shock immediately showed signs of the greatest terror. They were seized with trembling and growled fitfully. The tiger was more quickly subdued, became stupefied, and crouched in a corner of the cage. Bruin was more refractory to electricity, which seemed scarcely to effect him He would growl and show his teeth, and was subdued after repeated discharges.

The most astonishing effects, however, were perceptible in the boa constrictor. On receiving the discharge, the specimen from Cayenne, nearly twenty feet in length, became at once paralysed and remained motionless for six hours afterward. When he recovered, he showed signs of numbness for three whole days. Finally, the elephant on being electrified by a touch of the stick upon the tip of his trunk set up a series of wild cries, and became so strange that the tamer feared the brute would break its heavy iron chain. M. Rauspach is said to intend addressing a paper upon the experiments to the Academy of Sicences.

The Oldest Author.

Rev. W. K. Gleig, of England, was one of the warmest friends of the second duke of Wellington, recently deceased. Mr. Gleig is almost an nonagenarian, and is the oldest living author who still wields a pen. "He was present at the battle of New Orleans in 1815," says Labouchere in Truth, "and saw Gen. Pakenham killed and some of the picked regiments of the British army defeated by Gen. Andrew Jackson and a few American backwoodsmen. Mr. Gleig, who subsequently took orders and became chaplain general, wrote a spirited description in his 'Subaltern' of the engagement at New Orleans, and, having started as an author in 1815, has quite lately contributed an article to Blackwood's Magazine. His mind and memory are still entirely unshaken. He was a great favorite with the Iron Duke."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Curiosity of the Electrical Exhibition.

Among the curiosities in operation at the exhibition of electrical inventions in Philadelphia is a magnetic table. It is a small, unpretentious stand, with a plain innocent looking surface, but beneath it is an electro-magnet. A handful of nails lay upon it yesterday. Suddenly and without any perceptible cause, each arose and silently stood upon its head, much to the delight and mystification of the small boys. A moment they remained motionless and then suddenly tumbled in a heap, when the unseen current was shut off by the operator. At his will they would rise, bow and courtesy like a dancing master, or stand up their heads like circus tumblers.

The Gulf of Mexico and its Stream

At the American Science association in Philadelphia, Prof. J. E Hilgard read a paper on the "Relative Level of the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico." He exhibited a relief model, showing the western part of the North Atlantic ocean, the Gulf of Mexico, and the United States east of the Mississippi river. The principal features to which he directed attention were the fact that the actual continental outline does not correspond to the present accidental limits of land and water, but to the one hundred fathom curve, so that the continental limit is far out under the sea. Florida and Yucatan have more than twice their geographical limits, while the West Indies and the Antilles appear as a vast submarine continuation of the Florida peninsula, the mountain summits of which only appear above the sea. This submarine plateau, extending to the southeast, forms, with the coast line of the United States, a great bight nearly as large again as the Gulf of Mexico, which Prof. Hilgard designated the Great Bay of North America. Whatever the causes which produced the gulf stream, they must give rise to an elevation of the gulf above the Atlantic in order to occasion the stream—a physical fact demonstrated by the most accurate measurements. The explanation of the stream was that the North Atlantic trade winds set the water of the Caribean sea against the "Spanish main" (Central America), deflected northward along the coast of Yucatan, where the flow is through the straits between Yucatan and Cuba, and thence through the Bemini channel into the Atlantic ocean, thus forming what is known as the "Gulf Stream." The part which the Gulf of Mexico has in this is mainly that of a reservoir or "accumulator," maintaining the outflow at a more uniform rate than the assigned cause would admit of without such a reservoir.

GRAINS OF GOLD.

Love and reason seldom go together.

The tree of knowledge is not the tree of life.

If youth only knew and age only could!

Let us encourage the beautiful, for the useful encourages itself.

Nothing is rarer in literary history than a scholar who confesses that he has been refuted in anything.

Sober thought about one's own sober soul and its destiny is by no means a favorite occupation with men.

Liberty is a privilege which carries with it high duties and grave responsibilities. The right to say what is false implies the duty of declaring that which is true. Liberty is a glorious light, but it demands duties and sacrifices greater than any which tyranny exacts, and more is required from freemen than from slaves.

English Schools.

The following were recently among the written answers in examinations on Scripture by her majesty's inspectors of schools:

"Who was Moses?" "He was an Egyptian. He lived in a hark maid of bullrushes, and he kept a golden carf and worshipt braizen snakes and he het nothin' but qwales and manner for forty years. He was kort by the air of his 'ed while ridin' under the bow of a tree, and he was killed by his son Absolom as he was hanging from the bow. His end was peace."

"What do you know of the patriarch Abraham?" "He was the father of Lot and had tew wives. One was called Hismale and the other Haygur. He kept wun at home and he hurried the other into the desert, where she became a pillow of salt in the daytime and a pillow of fire at nite."

"Write an account of the Good Samaritan." "A certain man went down from Jerslam to Jeriker and he fell among thawns and the thawns sprank up and choked him. Whereupon he gave tuppins to the hoast and said tak care on him and put him on his hone hass. And he past bye on the hother side."—London Times.

A Young Mother.

Recently there occurred four miles west of Alexandria, Ky., a case of maternity the most remarkable in the history of American obstetrics. The mother, a young colored girl named Rena Freeman, was born March 5, 1873, and is therefore 11 years and 6 months old. She is small of stature, being about 4 feet 8 inches in height, and weighing but 90 pounds, and is a child in everything but experience.

After her confinement she acknowledged that she had been seduced by her brother-in-law, Ross Johnson, a burly negro, aged 30, and the father of two children. When taxed with the seduction of his sister-in-law he did not deny the charge. Her accoucher, Dr. T. S. Orr, says the case is without a parallel in the medical history of this country. He had considerable difficulty with the patient, the infant's size and weight, ten pounds, necessitating the operation of craniotomy.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

A Town Where Neither Coal nor Wood Is Wanted.

Not a pound of wood or coal is consumed at Creighton, twenty miles from Pittsburgh, where the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company have their plant. Glass factory and residences are heated and lighted by natural gas. Gas was struck at 1,200 feet in a five inch bore. A torrent of what the owners describe as "pure nitrogen gas" burst out with a force of 250 pounds to the square inch, and after three years is flowing with as much energy as ever. The visitor sees no coal, no wood, no cinders, no ashes, no smoke. In the furnaces is a lurid, steady heat regulated by clock-work. No grimy stoker sweats his life away at furnace doors, but instead a calm person with a stained glass shield invites you to look at the glass through the open furnace doors, where glares a heat sufficient to deter a modern Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego. Overhead gas burners are ablaze in broad day, because it is not worth while to take time to turn the burners off and on, as there is plenty of gas and to spare. In the residences a thumb screw regulates the temperature to absolute perfection.

Little Dot's mamma had been ill with a severe attack of neuralgia. A visitor called, and while waiting in the parlor, asked Dot how her mother was. She replied, "she is sick, she's got the morality."

ALL SORTS.

'Tis the last roast of summer.

A trade scenter—The drummer.

The death rate—the undertaker's bill.

A tie game—popping the question.

A waist of time—an old maid's.

A Chinese want—Celestial music.

The heated spell—h-e-a-t-e-d.

False hair does not antedate false pride.

Spitting on the hands doesn't dig the potatoes.

The question of the hour—What time o' day is it?

Maid of hall work—the hotel corridor sweeper.

A supposititious case—The prima donna's jewel casket.

A screaming farce—The performance of an amateur opera singer.

Should a mustard plaster be classed among drawing materials?

A justice's pantaloons can hardly be called breaches of the peace.

The emigration of bank cashiers to Canada looks like an ex-owed us.

The Czar of Russia may be Warsaw off than if he had staid at home.

It is the successful trapeze performer who generally reaches the climb-acts.

The last rows of summer—Those taken on the lake just before leaving for town.

The cream of a joke would be lost upon a milkman—he wouldn't know what it was.

Life is short—only four letters in it. Three-quarters of it is a "lie" and a half of it is an "if." Put this on "file" if you would as "lief."

In China Foo Chow means "Happy City."—Detroit Free Press. We thought it meant something good to eat.—Chicago Sun. Well, something good to eat makes a happy city.

"Truth lies at the bottom of a well," but in this enlightened century men are able to carry on the same business very successfully on top of the ground.

A Bewitched Wedding Dress.

A very singular case has come out recently in regard to a young girl who was engaged to be married. She was poor and her intended husband bought her a wedding dress at an expense of $50. Before the wedding day the intended bridegroom was taken sick and died. The bride-elect mourned his loss, and finally imagined that he was present about her, and that she would still be married to him. She told her parents how she felt, and they told her that she must get rid of the wedding dress. She sold it for $10 to an acquaintance and soon recovered her spirits. The girl who bought the dress after she got it imagined that she would lead a bad life, and was so affected that she was out of her head, and her parents sent the dress back when she recovered. No. 1 was soon affected as before, and so much so that she sent the dress back to No. 2 again, and then she recovered. No 2 was again affected, and an attempt was made to return the dress again to No. 1, but her family declined to receive it. A police officer was sent to take the dress back, after consultation with counsel, but neither party would receive it, and now the friends of the officer are looking to see him go off his base on account of the dress. It would seem as though the old Salem witches possessed the dress, and it is barely possible that the garment may be burned.—Boston Globe.

SOME SMILES.

"Heigh-ho!" said Mrs. Sprigg'ns, "I see that poor old Mr. Wilkins has died intestate, I allus said high living would ruin his innards."

A little fellow with a tall, stalwart wife was asked by a friend if the contrast between them didn't often expose him to mortifying remarks. 'O, I don't mind that," he said cheerfully; "but since Sarah's grown near sighted I have to look sharp for fear she'll step on me."

Little Freddie was talking to his grandma who was something of a skeptic. "Grandma, do you be'ong to the Presbyterian church?' "No." "To the Paptist?" "No." "To any church?" "No." "Well, grandma, don't you think it's about time to get in somewhere?"

Two sides to a question.—"Say, Smith, are you coming down town to-night?" "No." "Why not?" "Well, my hired girl left this morning, and Mary will be lonesome by herself." "My hired girl left this morning, too, and that's why I'm coming down. I'd be awful lonesome with Maggie."

Facts About the Cholera.

Remarkable revelations are reported at a recent meeting of the medical committee at Marseilles. Experience has shown that the cholera will rage during two consecutive years in the same place. It has been ascertained that cholera made its appearance at Marseilles last year, a case followed by death having occurred at the hospital in a room containing numerous other patients. The disease made a good many victims. The mayor, who was immediately advised of the fact, proceeded to the hospital. Energetic measures were taken to prevent further contagion, and in order to avoid a panic in the town, the mayor solicited and secured the silence of all persons aware of the facts. The chief surgeon, two house surgeons, a warder, and two Sisters of Mercy took an oath to divulge nothing, which oath was strictly kept till the whole proceeding was made known to the medical committee.

The Mouth of the Congo.

Unlike most other great rivers, the Congo has no delta. It discharges into the sea by a single, unbroken estuary, seven and a half miles across, in which a sounding line of two hundred fathoms does not everywhere touch bottom, and a current runs of five to seven knots an hour. This enormous volume exceeds that of every other known stream except the Amazon. A conservative estimate of the amount of water discharged by it is 2,000 000 cubic feet per second. The Mississippi, when at flood height, carries down no more than 1,500,000 cubic feet and sinks in the dry season to 228,000. Moreover the Congo never runs low. It swells and sinks, as the rainy and dry seasons succeed each other, but within a relatively narrow range of oscillation.

The Duke of Wellington's Experiment.

In a ground-floor room in one of the large public buildings of London a man sat writing at a table covered with papers. He was a short, strongly built figure, with a prominent nose, and a face hard and massive as a granite statue, wearing the set look peculiar to men who have surmounted great difficulties and confronted great perils. Few, indeed, had had more practice in both than this man, for he was no other than the Duke of Wellington, and his crowning victory at Waterloo was still but a few years old.

There was the tinkle of a bell outside, and then a murmur of voices in the anteroom; but the Duke never raised his head from his writing, even when his secretary entered and said:

"If it please your Grace, that man with the bullet-proof breastplate has called again, and wishes very much to see your Grace for a moment."

The Duke's face darkened, as well it might, for the man in question was the most pertinacious bore whom he had ever encountered. The bullet-proof cuirass was his own invention, and he never lost a chance of declaring that the safety of the whole British army depended upon its instant adoption of this "unparalleled discovery," which he carried about with him, and exhibited at all times and in all places.

Had this been all, he would soon have been disposed of; but unluckily, he had contrived to interest in his invention one or two of the Duke's personal friends, and to get from them letters of recommendation which even Wellington could not easily disregard. Something must clearly be done, however; for although the fellow had hitherto been kept at bay, he was evidently determined to give the Duke no peace till the matter had been fully gone into

For a moment Wellington looked so grim that the secretary began to hope for the order which he would gladly have obeyed, viz., to kick the inventor into the street forthwith. But the next instant the iron face cleared again, and over it played the very ghost of a smile, like a gleam of winter sunshine upon a precipice.

"Show him in," said he, briefly.

The observant secretary noted both the tone and the smile that accompanied it; and he inwardly decided that it would have been better for that inventor if he had not insisted on seeing the Duke.

In came the great discoverer—a tall, slouching, shabby, slightly red nosed man, with a would-be jaunty air, which gave way a little, however, before the "Iron Duke's" penetrating glance.

"I am glad to think that your Grace appreciates the merits of my invention," said he, in a patronizing tone. "They are, indeed, too important to be undervalued by any great commander. Your Grace cannot fail to remember the havoc made by your gallant troops at Waterloo among the French cuirassiers; whose breastplates were not bullet-proof; whereas, if—"

"Have you got the thing with you?" interrupted Wellington.

The inventor unwrapped a very showy looking cuirass of polished steel, and was just beginning a long lecture upon its merits when the Duke cut him short by asking,

"Are you quite sure it is bullet-proof?"

"Quite sure, your Grace."

"Put it on, then, and go and stand in that corner."

The other wonderingly obeyed.

"Mr. Temple," shouted Wellington to his secretary, "tell the sentry outside to load with ball-cartridge, and come in here to test this cuirass. Quick, now!"

But quick though the secretary was, the inventor was quicker still. The moment he realized that he had been set up there on purpose to be fired at, and to be shot dead on the spot if his cuirass turned out to be not bullet proof after all, he leaped headlong through the open window with a yell worthy of a Blackfoot Indian, and darting like a rocket across the courtyard, vanished through the outer gateway; nor did the Duke of Wellington, from that day forth, ever see or hear of him again.—DAVID KER, in EDITOR'S DRAWER, Harper's Magazine for October.

The Chinese War and Tea.

The war in China has visibly affected the tea market. Recently 30,000 chests of black tea, including Foo Chow, Among, and Formosa, were sold here at an advance of three cents per pound. In London the prices of tea have gone up five cents. From the island of Formosa this country receives annually 250,000 chests of tea, and if the French, who have already seized Keelung, an important tea exporting point, should close up Tamsui, brokers say there will be a big advance in the price of black teas. About 59,000 packages of teas annually have usually come to this country from Foo Chow.—Albany Express.

Life's Burdens.

A large part of life's burdens are self-imposed and wholly needless. Fears of calamities which never happen, a doleful habit of looking at the worst, a suspicious disposition, a jealous turn of mind—these are the tyrants that load us with burdens heavy to bear and needless to carry. If we should honestly examine the various burdens of our lives, we would be surprised to find how many of them are of this character. Not only may we drop them if we will, but justice to others demands that we should. A man or woman habitually unhappy is essentially selfish, and is always a thorn in the community. There are enough crosses and trials in life which must be borne, without manufacturing artificial and needless ones; and the more thoroughly we rid ourselves of the latter, the more energy and spirit we can bring to bear upon the former.

"The Curse of Guiteau."

Washington special Chicago Tribune: The murder of Police Officer Fowler by a negro rough in the chaingang has reminded some superstitious people of the curse of Guiteau. Police Officer Fowler was one of the three mounted men who guarded the assassin's van in his trips from the jail to the court-house throughout the trial. Guiteau, the night the verdict was brought in, in the dark court room dimly lighted by candles, glaring like a wild beast, invoked a curse upon all who had been connected with the trial. There have been a number of deaths of persons who were so connected, including in their number jurors, doctors, detectives, jailers, policemen and attorneys. Within two weeks two covered by Guiteau's curse have died — Dr. Wood, of the army, one of Garfield's surgeons, and now Officer Fowler.

MARKDALE JEWELLRY STORE.

EXTENSIVE NEW FALL STOCK.

WATCHES.

Fall stock complete in following lines: Waltham movements, four grades; Elgin movements, three grades. Large stock Swiss watches in Silver and Nickle Cases. Ladies Gold Watches, 10 and 14 k., Elgin and Swiss movements. Highly finished Gents Gold and Deuber filled cases, with fine movements, close time keepers. Waltham, Fahay's & Crigley coin cases, in 3, 4 and 5 ozs., to fit all 18 size American movements.

CLOCKS.

Large lines of Clocks to chose from, $1 to $12, 4 makes of American and Canadian Clocks, with walnut, veneered and nickle cases.

Ladies Chains in 10 k., and Roll Plate. Gentlemen's Chains in fine American Roll Plate and Fire-gild, $1 to $11.

Ladies Necklets, Lockets, Cuff Buttons, Ear Rings, Brooches, Sets Bar-Pins. Gents Chain-Charms, Seals, Lockets, Scarf Pins, Collar Buttons, and latest makes of Lever Cuff Buttons.

To the Public:

—:o:—

I feel thankful to my numerous customers for their confidence and patronage during the eleven months past, and can assure them that my aim will be, to give a good article in my line for a fair price. I will keep a better class of goods than is usually found outside of large places, as I find the demand is for such goods in this locality. Get a good article, pay a right price, and you will have satisfaction. I sell retail, and tell my customers just what the article is as to quality, in Gold, Roll Plate or Gilt. My 18 k. Wedding Rings will assay as stamped.

W. A. Brown,

PRACTICAL WATCHMAKER,

MARKDALE.

EXTRA LINE

Of Silver Plated, Hollow and Flat Ware for Presentations, Casters, Pickle Cruetts, Butter Dishes, Fruit Dishes, Cake Baskets, Tea Sets, etc. Knives, Spoons, Forks, Napkin Rings, etc. Agent for Meridon Silver Plate Co. New goods and warranted Quadruple Plate.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

Violins from $1 50 to $10, Bows 50c to $3. Full lines in first-class Strings and Violin fittings, Concertinas, Fifes, Richter Mouth Organs.

OPTICAL GOODS.

Lazzarus & Morris Specks, also the Boss Speck, and other makes, to suit all eyes in need of improved Specks.

REPAIRING.

I shall endeavor to practically and carefully repair all work trusted to my care, and hope there will be lots of it. Fair prices, with usual warrants. I respectfully ask a continuation of your confidence and patronage.

W. A. BROWN.

TORE.

CK.

LINE

ow and Flat ons, Casters, Dishes, Fruit Tea Sets, etc. ks, Napkin for Meridon w goods and Plate.

RUMENTS

o $10, Bows in first-class ings, Concer- outh Organs.

OODS.

Specks, also ther makes, of improved

NG.

practically work trust- e there will s, with usual y ask a con- fidence and

OWN.

TOWN HALL.

about a town hall? The numerous public enter- is before us, and we have for such; will some one It is not yet too late to have one completed A joint stock com- perhaps the best means of desired, and much needed, We will take ten shares of and we have no doubt, that a sufficient amount readily subscribed should be offered. Don't all but let some one or matter in hand without Euphrasia Council.

Council met pursuant to ad- on the 5th of Sept., 1884. all present; minutes of last council read and confirmed was instructed to obtain Gilleland, P.L.S., plan of deviation road, and 7, con. 4, for the pur- establishing said deviation. and Mr. Boyd were ap- committee for the purpose a bridge over Saugeen side-line 3 and 4, con. 10. was authorized to call to assist him in ascer- cost of cutting down the 11th line, so as to make road at this place. was ordered to remit P.L.S., the sum of $8, for surveying and plan. was ordered to remit of Artemesia the sum being the amount for which is liable on account of ad law concerning town-line and Euphrasia, as Arte- paid the full amount was ordered to remit Delaree, Walter's Falls, $1.50, repairing road scraper. orders were issued on to pay as follows: McMorris, $35, land taken purposes; to Chas. Fawcett, John Clugston, $8.60, Samuel Wiley, $3.30, roads; Robt. Johnston, work; Thos. Howard, $60, Geo. Julian, $2.01, road Howe, $60, road work; $9.50, road work; Andrew special services school Samuel Gilmour, $20.50, adjourned until the first October next.

ROBERT DUNLOP,
Tp. Clerk.

This and the Other.

railway station at Owen [illegible]

[illegible] sever its con- [illegible] and join Dufferin

[illegible] Dundalk, has [illegible] business at Wood- [illegible]

[illegible] Sr., of Euphrasia, [illegible] the 16th, aged 82 [illegible] resident of Euphrasia

[illegible] died in Hamilton [illegible] belonged to the [illegible] the United States, [illegible] to fail in arrear [illegible] lapsed and thus [illegible] of $2,000 which [illegible] received had he kept [illegible] paid up.

[illegible] the Mowat procession numbered 13,000, while independent papers say there from 3,000 to 4,000.

correspondent to the Dundalk denies any truth being in the recently published in the News in reference to a certain having been made drunk and ravished by unknown rowdies.

crops of the district have been in excellent condition. The about the average, and the is uniformly excellent.

BURNT.—A fire barn belonging Lawrence and situated on the of Glenelg was destroyed by Monday, together with the about 70 acres of land. The supposed to have originated a spark blown from a burning about 25 rods off. The total is about $1,600 and the utmost sympathy is felt for Mr. Lawrence, only carried a slight insurance. Durham Chronicle.

AN EX-ALDERMAN TRIED IT. Alderman Taylor of Toronto, tried Yellow Oil for rheumatism. It him after all other remedies had failed.

An Astonished American.

There have been a large number of American visitors at our great Industrial Exhibition, and they have been not a little surprised at the vastness of the display and its general excellence. "Well, I'll be struck dumb," exclaimed one of these astonished gentlemen yesterday, after inspecting several of the departments, "if ever I saw anything like this on the other side, and all for 25 cents!" In reply to an inquiry he added—"You can't get into any kind of a show over there for less than fifty cents, and ten to one you will find more than half of the exhibition made up of side shows and fakirs. I have never seen an agricultural show to equal this in the whole United States."

The Wife's Commandments.

1. Thou shalt have no other wife but me. 2. Thou shalt not take into my house any beautiful brazen image of a servant girl, to bow down to her face and serve her; for I am a jealous wife, visiting, etc. 3. Thou shalt not take the name of thy wife in vain. 4. Remember thy wife and keep her respectable. 5. Honor thy wife's father and mother. 6. Thou shalt not fret. 7. Thou shalt not find fault with thy dinner. 8. Thou shalt not chew tobacco. 9. Thou shalt not be behind thy neighbor. 10. Thou shalt not visit the rum tavern; thou shalt not covet the tavern keeper's rum, nor his brandy, nor his wine, nor anything that is behind the bar of the rumseller. 11. Thou shalt not visit the billiard hall. And the 12th commandment, thou shalt not stay out later than 9 o'clock at night.

Prominent among the greatest medical discoveries, by the many cures it has effected, McGregor's Speedy Cure leads the van. Subjected to the minutest chemical analysis, it has been found to contain none of those injurious ingredients characterizing the worthless specifics daily offered to the public. Every ingredient possesses a peculiar adaptability to the various complaints for which it has been compounded, and its efficacy is being established by testimonials hourly received. We are therefore confident that we have a preparation which we can offer to the public with the assurance that it will be found not only a relief but an absolute cure for Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Constipation and Impure Blood. Free trial bottles at Hill Bro's. A. & S. 4

Fire in Williamsford.

On Sunday morning, 14th inst., about 4, o'clock, the premises occupied by Mr. Jas. Ireton was discovered to be on fire by a neighbor, and the alarm given when Mr. Ireton and family barely escaped, not having time to save anything; not even their clothing. The building being wooden, burnt rapidly and it was with great difficulty the adjoining building (which is occupied by S. Watson) was saved being but four feet from the burning one. Mr. Ireton (who is a shoemaker) loses his fall stock of leather, together with all his household furniture, bedding, clothing, &c. Mr. Young, tailor, who occupied one side of the shop, saved the contents of his apartment. The building was owned by Arthur Shute and was insured for $300. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. Mr. Ireton's loss will be severe. still we understand he will commence business again at once; and the public ought to show their sympathy by a liberal patronage.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday last, as Mrs. Frost, (wife of A. Frost, Esq., County Attorney,) was starting for a picnic with several children, the horse took fright at a boiler on the roadside near Kennedy's foundry, and ran away, throwing them all out of the buggy. Mrs. Frost received very serious injuries, having three of her ribs broken; while her daughter Hattie, who was caught in the wheel and whirled around several times, received a very severe wound in the head, though fortunately the skull was not fractured. The other children luckily escaped without injury. We are glad to learn that both Mrs. Frost and the little girl are doing well, and in a fair way of recovery.—O. S. Times.

On Monday 8th inst. while Mr. Blyth M. P. P. was out hunting for for smaller fry at Dodd's mill dam he shot and killed a beaver weighing 46½ lbs. The animal was the largest ever seen in this section, it had lost a fore leg, the stump of which was completely grown over.—Mt. Forest Advocate.

For Nettle Rash, Itching Piles, Ringworm Eruptions, and all skin diseases, use Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap.

The Canadian Mutual Aid Association.

INCORPORATED AUGUST 20TH, 1880.

HEAD OFFICE, - - TORONTO.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

Wm. Rennie, Esq., Toronto, President; A. Gifford, Esq., Meaford, Vice-President; E. H. Hilborn, Esq., Uxbridge, Treasurer; W. Pemberton Page, Esq., Toronto, Sec'y; G. H. Watson, L.L.B., Toronto, Solicitor; R. H. Robertson, M.D., Toronto, Med. D'tr; C. H. Mackintosh, M.P., Ottawa; Lewis Wigle, M.P.P., Leamington; Thos. Menzies, Peterboro; J. P. Bull, Downsview; Peter Graham, M.P.P., Warwick; S. W. Hill, Esq., Ridgeville, Memb. Supt.

The Directors have filed with the Hon. S. C. Wood, (Ex-Provincial Treasurer of Ontario) Trustee for the Association, Bonds to the amount of $60,000.00, as a guarantee for the honest carrying out of the terms of Certificates issued to members.

Reliable Aid to Families of Deceased Members at Small Cost.

The Association will do business on the following plan:

Applications.

All Applications for Membership shall be made upon printed forms furnished by the Association, (and applicants must pass a satisfactory medical examination). If accepted, a certificate will be issued within thirty days from date of such acceptance.

Membership.

The payment of TWELVE DOLLARS admits any of sound body and mind between the age of 18 and 60 years, to all the benefits of the Association. If the application is not accepted the money is promptly returned to the applicant.

Plan of Business.

The following table shows the amount for which Certificates of Membership will be issued by the Association, according to age:

AGE.	Amount at Death	AGE.	Amount at Death
From 18 to 30	$3 000	From 45 to 46	$2 200
30 to 31	2 950	46 to 47	2 150
1 to 32	2 900	47 to 48	2 100
32 to 33	2 850	48 to 49	2 050
33 to 34	2 800	49 to 50	2 000
34 to 35	2 750	50 to 51	1 900
35 to 36	2 700	51 to 52	1 800
36 to 37	2 650	52 to 53	1 700
37 to 38	2 600	53 to 54	1 600
38 to 39	2 550	54 to 55	1 500
39 to 40	2 500	55 to 56	1 400
40 to 41	2 450	56 to 57	1 300
41 to 42	2 400	57 to 58	1 200
42 to 43	2 350	58 to 59	1 100
43 to 44	2 300	59 to 60	1 000
44 to 45	2 250

HALF RATE PLAN.

Certificates will be issued for half the above amounts should the applicant so desire,

Assessments.

An Assessment of One Dollar upon each member will be made in case of death or total disability of a member, except when there is money enough in surplus funds to pay said claim.

Special Features.

1—Great inducements to provide for families in case of death, at small cost.
2—Equal benefits to both sexes.
3—Uniform assessments of one dollar only.
4—Careful medical examination required.
5—No annual dues or extra charges.
6—No large salaries or expenses.
7—Two hundred dollars advanced for funeral expenses when necessary.
8—Benefits secured at actual cost.
9—Members becoming totally disabled, may draw half of their claims, the balance being payable at death.
10—Ladies accepted in this Association as well as men.

For particulars apply to S. W. HILL, Membership Superintendent, Ridgeville, or to W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Secretary, 87 King Street West, Toronto.

AGENT FOR MARKDALE, THOS. MANN.

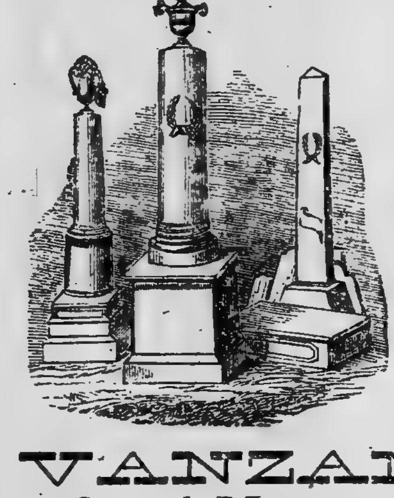
Also Agent for Dominion Grange Mutual Fire Insurance Association.

INVALUABLE TO EVERY LADY!

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.

It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworm, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness; imparting a perfectly healthy, natural and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price, $1. When ordering mention this paper.



Address all letters to the MAY DEW AGENCY, 167 Church Street, Toronto, Ont. Parlor and Reception Room for Ladies.

Trade Mark.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble

And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satistaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

ROBT. S. RAE, Sydenham St., Markdale. TAILOR,

SAW MILL AND TIMBER LAND FOR SALE OR TO LET

In the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, 4 miles from Flesherton Station, on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The mill is situated at Little Falls, in a block of about 400 acres timber lnd, with other timber land surrounding. The building is substantially built on stone foundation. The machinery is all good and driven with great power by a 23 inch Leffell wheel, under 36 ft. head of water. There are one large circular saw for cutting logs, 2 small circulars for sawing lath and broom handles, 1 guage lathe for turning broom handles, etc., 1 shingle machine with jointer and packer complete. The water power is excellent, the stream being very regular. There are several other good mill sites on the proyerty. The land in the valley is considered the best in the country. The place would make an excellent stock farm when the timber is taken off.

This offers a good opportunity for a practical, energetic man to go into this kind of business, as the place will be sold or let on liberal terms.

The bush is so convenient to the mill logs can be trucked in summer time. Immediate possession given.

Apply to the proprietor, WM. HOGG,
FLESHERTON STATION P. O., ONT.

—Good Work Guaranteed—
AT

Bulmers Photograph Gallery

FLESHERTON.

Call at once and see samples of work which we ared not ashamed to show.

All kinds of Framing done cheap at

JAS. BULMER'S, FLESHERTON.

A BLUE GRASS PENELOPE.

BY BRET HARTE.

CHAPTER II.

The wind and rain had cleared the unfrequented suburb of any observant lounger, and the darkness, lit only by far-spaced, gusty lamps, hid her hastening figure. She had barely crossed the second street when she heard the quick clatter of hoofs behind her; a buggy drove up to the curbstone, and Poindexter leaped out. She entered quickly, but for a moment he still held the reins of the impatient horse. "He's rather fresh he said eyeing her keenly; "are you sure yo can manage him?"

"Give me the reins," she said simply.

He placed them in the two firm, well-shaped hands that reached from the depths of the vehicle, and was satisfied. Yet he lingered.

"It's rough work for a lone woman," he said, almost curtly. "I can't go with you, but—speak frankly—is there any man you know whom you can trust well enough to take? It's not too late yet; think a moment!"

He paused over the buttoning of the leather apron of the vehicle.

"No, there is none," answered the voice from the interior; "and its better so. Is all ready?"

"One moment more." He had recovered his half bantering manner. "You have a friend and countryman already with you, do you know? Your horse is Blue Grass. Good-night."

With these words ringing in her ears she began her journey. The horse, as if eager to maintain the reputation which his native district had given his race, as well as the race of the pretty woman behind him leaped impatiently forward. But pulled together by the fine and firm fingers that seemed to guide rather than check his exuberance, he presently struck into the long swinging pace of his kind, and kept it througout without "break" or acceleration. Over the paved streets the light buggy rattled, and the slender shafts danced around his smooth barrel, but when they touched the level high road, horse and vehicle slipped forward through the night—a swift and noiseless phantom, Mrs. Tucker could see his graceful back dimly rising and falling before her with tireless rhythm, and could feel the intelligent pressure of his mouth until it seemed the responsive grasp of a powerful but kindly hand. The faint glow of conquest came to her cold cheek; the slight stirrings of pride moved her preoccupied heart. A soft light filled her hazel eyes. A desolate woman, bereft of husband and home, and flying through storm and night—she knew not where—she still leaned forward toward her horse. "Was he Blue Grass, then, dear old boy?" she gently cooed at him in the darkness. He evidently was, and responded by blowing her an ostentatious equine kiss. "And he would be good to his own forsaken Belle," she murmured caressingly, "and wouldn't let any one harm her!" But here, overcome by the lazy witchery of her voice, he shook his head so violently that Mrs. Tucker, after the fashion of her sex, had the double satisfaction of demurely restraining the passion she had evoked.

To avoid the more travelled thoroughfare, while the evening was still early, it had been arranged that she should at first take a less direct but less frequented road. This was a famous pleasure drive from San Francisco—a gravelled and sanded stretch of eight miles to the sea, and an ultimate cocktail in a "stately pleasuredom decreed" among the surf and rocks of the Pacific shore. It was deserted now, and left to the unobstructed sweep of the wind and rain. Mrs. Tucker would not have chosen this road. With the instinctive jealousy of a bucolic inland race born by great rivers, she did not like the sea; and again the dim and dreary waste tended to recall the vision connected with her husband's flight, upon which she had resolutely shut her eyes. But when she had reached it the road suddenly turned, following the trend of the beach, and she was exposed to the full power of its dread fascinations. The combined roar of sea and shore was in her ears; as the direct force of the gale had compelled her to furl the protected hood of the buggy to keep the light vehicle from oversetting or drifting to leeward, she could no longer shut out the heaving chaos on the right from which the pallid ghosts of dead and dying breakers dimly rose and sank as if in awful salutation. At times through darkness a white sheet appeared spread before the path and beneath the wheels of the buggy, which, when withdrawn with a reluctant hiss, seemed striving to drag the exhausted beach seaward with it. But the blind terror of her horse, who swerved at every sweep of the surge, shamed her own half superstitious fears, and with the effort to control his alarm she regained her own self possession—albeit with eyelashes wet, not altogether with the salt spray from the sea. This was followed by a reaction, perhaps stimulated by the victory over the beaten animal, when for a time—she knew not how long—she felt only a mad sense of freedom and power; oblivious of even her sorrows, her lost home and husband; and with intense feminine consciousness she longed to be a man. She was scarcely aware that the track turned again inland until the beat of the horse's hoofs on the firm ground and an acceleration of speed showed her she had left the beach and the mysterious sea behind her, and she remembered that she was near the end of the first stage of her journey. Half an hour later the twinkling lights of the roadside inn where she was to change horses rose out of the darkness.

Happily for her the hostler considered the horse, who had a local reputation of more importance than the unknown muffled figure in the shadow of the unfurled hood, and confined his attention to the animal. After a careful examination of his feet and a few comments addressed solely to the superior creation, he led him away. Mrs. Tucker would have liked to part more affectionately from her four footed compatriot, and felt a sudden sense of loneliness at the loss of her new friend, but a recollection of certain cautions of Captain Poindexter's kept her mute. Nevertheless, the ostler's ostentations adjuration of "Now, then, aren't you going to bring out that mustang for the Senora?" puzzled her. It was not until the fresh horse was put to, and she had flung a piece of gold into the attendant's hand, that the "Gracias" of his unmistakable Saxon speech revealed to her the reason of the lawyer's caution. Poindexter had evidently represented her to these people as a native Californian who did not speak English. In her inconsistency her blood took fire at this first suggestion of deceit, and burned in her face. Why should he try to pass her off as somebody else? Why should she not use her own—her husband's name? She stopped and bit her lip.

It was but the beginning of an uneasy train of thought. She suddenly found herself thinking of her visitor, Calhoun Weaver—and not pleasantly. He would hear of their ruin to-morrow, perhaps of her own flight. He would remember his visit, and what would he think of her deceitful frivolity? Would he believe that she was then ignorant of the failure? It was her first sense of any accountability to others than herself, but even then it was rather owing to an uneasy consciousness of what her husband must feel if he were subjected to the criticisms of men like Calhoun. She wondered if others knew that he had kept her in ignorance of his flight. Did Poindexter know it—or had he only entrapped her into the admission? Why had she not been clever enough to make him think that she knew it already? For the moment she hated Poindexter for sharing that secret. Yet this was again followed by a new impatience of her husband's want of insight into her ability to help him. Of course the poor fellow could not bear to worry her—could not bear to face such men as Calhoun—or even Poindexter—(she added exultingly to herself) but he might have sent her line as he fled, only to prepare her to meet and combat the shame alone. It did not occur to her unsophisticated singleness of nature that she was accepting as an error of feeling what the world would call cowardly selfishness.

At midnight the storm lulled and a few stars trembled through the rent clouds. Her eyes had become accustomed to the darkness, and her country instincts, a little overlaid by the urban experiences of the last few years, came again to the surface. She felt the fresh cool radiation from outlying upturned fields, the faint, sad odors from dim stretches of pricking grain, and quickening leaf, and wondered if at Los Cuervos it might be possible to reproduce the peculiar verdure of her native district. She beguiled her fancy by an ambitious plan of retrieving their fortunes by farming; her comfortable tastes had lately rebelled against the homeless mechanical cultivation of these desolate but teeming Californian acres, and for a moment indulged in a vision of a vine-clad cottage home that in any other woman would have been sentimental. Her cramped limbs aching, she took advantage of the security of the darkness and the familiar contiguity of the fields to get down from the vehicle, gather her skirts together, and run at the head of the mustang, until her chill blood was thawed, night drawing a modest veil over this charming revelation of the nymph and woman. But the sudden shadow of a coyote checked the scouring feet of this swift Camilla, and sent her back precipitately to the buggy. Nevertheless she was refreshed and able to pursue her journey, until the cold grey of early morning found her at the end of her second stage.

Her route was changed again from the main highway, rendered dangerous by the approach of day and the contiguity of the neighboring rancheros. The road was rough and hilly, her new horse and vehicle in keeping with the rudeness of the route—by far the most difficult of her whole journey. The rare waggon tracks that indicated her road were often scarcely discernible; at times they led her through openings in the half cleared woods, skirted suspicious morasses, painfully climbed the smooth dome-like hills, or wound along perilous slopes at a dangerous angle. Twice she had to alight and cling to the sliding wheels on one of these treacherous inclines, or drag them from impending ruts or immovable mire. In the growing light she could distinguish the distant low lying marshes eaten by encroaching sloughs and insidious channels, and beyond them the faint gray waste of the Lower Bay. A darker peninsula in the marsh she knew to be the extreme boundary of her future home—the Rancho de los Cuervos. In another hour she began to descend to the plain, and to once more approach the main road, which now ran nearly parallel with her track. She scanned it cautiously for any early traveller; it stretched north and south in apparent unerring solitude. She struck into it boldly, and urged her horse to the top of his speed, until she reached the cross road that led to the rancho. But here she paused and allowed the reins to drop idly on the mustang's back. A singular and unaccountable irresolution seized her. The difficulties of her journey were over, the rancho lay scarcely two miles away; she had achieved the most important part of her task in the appointed time, but she hesitated. What had she come for? She tried to recall Poindexter's words, even her own enthusiasm, but in vain, She was going to take possession of her husband's property, she knew—that was all. But the means she had taken seemed now so exaggerated and mysterious for that simple end that she began to dread an impending something or some vague danger she had not considered, that she was rushing blindly to meet. Full of this strange feeling. she almost mechanically stopped her horse as she entered the cross road.

From this momentary hesitation a singular sound aroused her. It seemed at first like the swift hurrying by of some viewless courier of air, the vague alarm of some invisible flying herald, or like the inarticulate cry that precedes a storm. It seemed to rise and fall around her as if with some changing urgency or purpose. Raising her eyes she suddenly recognized the two far stretched lines of telegraph wire above her head, and knew the æolian cry of the morning wind along its vibrating chords. But it brought another and more practical fear to her active brain. Perhaps even now the telegraph might be anticipating her! Had Poindexter thought of that? She hesitated no longer, but laying the whip on the back of her jaded mustang again hurried forward.

As the level horizon grew more distinct her attention was attracted by the white sail of a small boat lazily threading the sinuous channel of the slough. It might be Poindexter arriving by the more direct route from the steamboat that occasionally laid off the ancient embarcadero of the Los Cuervos Rancho. But even while watching it her quick ear caugh the sound of galloping hoofs behind her. She turned quickly and saw that she was followed by a horseman. But her momentary alarm was succeeded by a feeling of relief as she recognized the erect figure and square shoulders of Poindexter. Yet she could not help thinking that he looked more like a militant scout and less like a cautious legal adviser than ever.

With unaffected womanliness she rearranged her slightly disordered hair as he drew up beside her. "I thought you were in yonder boat," she said.

"Not I," he laughed; "I distanced you by the high road two hours, and have been reconnoitering, until I saw you hesitate at the cross roads.

"But who is in the boat?" asked Mrs. Tucker, partly to hide her embarrassment.

"Only some early Chinese market gardener, I dare say. But you are safe now. You are on your own land. You passed the boundary monument of the rancho five minutes ago. Look! All you see before you is yours, from the embacardero to yonder Coast range."

The tone of half railery did not, however, cheer Mrs. Tucker. She shuddered slightly and cast her eyes over the monotonous sea of tule and meadow.

"It doesn't look pretty perhaps," continued Poindexter, "but it's the richest land in the State, and the embarcadero will some day be a town. I suppose you'll call it Blue Grassville. But you seem tired!" he said, suddenly dropping his voice to a tone of half humorous sympathy.

Mrs. Tucker managed to get rid of an impending tear under the pretence of clearing her eyes. "Are we nearly there?" she asked.

"Nearly. You know," he added, with the same half-mischevious, half sympathizing gayety, "it's not exactly a palace you're coming to. Hardly. It's the old casa that has been deserted for years, but I thought it better you should go into possession there than take up your abode at the shanty where your husband's farm hands are. No one will know when you take possession of the casa, while the very hour of your arrival at the shanty would be known—and if they should make any trouble——"

"If they should make any trouble?" repeated Mrs. Tucker, lifting her frank inquiring eyes to Poindexter.

His horse suddenly reared from an apparently accidental prick of the spur, it was a minute or two before he was able to explain. "I mean if this ever comes up as a matter of evidence you know. But here we are!"

What had seemed to be an overgrown mound rising like an island out of the dead level of the grassy sea now resolved itself into a collection of adobe walls, eaten and encrusted with shrubs and vines that bore some resemblance to the usual uninhabited looking exterior of a Spanish American dwelling. Apertures that might have been lance shaped windows or only cracks and fissures in the walls were choked up with weeds and grass, and gave no passing glimpse of the interior. Entering a ruinous corral they came to a second entrance, which proved to be the patio or courtyard. The deserted wooden corridor, with beams, rafters, and floors whitened by the eternal sun and wind, containing a few withered leaves, dryly rotting skins and thongs of leather, as if undisturbed by human care. But among these scattered debris of former life and habitation there was no noisome or unclean suggestion of decay. A faint spiced odor of dessication filled the bare walls. There was no slime on stone or sun-dried brick. In place of fungus or discolored moisture. the dust of efflorescence whitened in the obscured corners. The elements had picked clean the bones of the crumbling tenement ere they should finally absorb it.

A withered old peon woman, who in dress, complexion, fibrous hair might have been an animated fragment of the debris, rustled out of a low vaulted passage and welcomed them with a feeble crepitation. Following her into the dim interior, Mrs. Tucker was surprised to find some slight attempt at comfort and even adornment, in two or three habitable apartments. They were scrupulously clean and dry—two qualities which in her feminine eyes, atoned for poverty of material.

"I could not send anything from San Bruno, the nearest village, without attracting attention," explained Poindexter; "but if you can manage to picnic here for a day longer I'll get one of our Chinese friends here," he pointed to the slough, "to bring over, for his return cargo from across the bay, any necessaries you may want. There is no danger of his betraying you," he added with an ironical smile; "Chinamen and Indians are, by an ingenious provision of the statute of California, incapable of giving evidence against a white person. You can trust your hondmaiden perfectly—even if she can't trust you. That is your sacred privilege under the constitution. And now, as I expect to catch the up boat ten miles from here, I must say "good-by" until to-morrow night. I hope to bring you then some more definite plans for the future. The worst is over." He held her hand for a moment, and with a graver voice continued: "You have done it very well—do you know—very well!"

In the slight embarrasment produced by his sudden change of manner, she felt that her thanks seemed awkwark and restrained. "Don't thank me," he laughed with a prompt return of his former levity, "that's my trade. I only advised. You have saved yourself like a plucky woman—shall I say like Blue Grass? Good-by!" He mounted his horse, but, as if struck by an after thought, wheeled and drew up by her side again. "If I were you I wouldn't see many strangers for a day or two, and listen to as little news as a woman possibly can." He laughed again, waved her a half-gallant, half-military salute and was gone. The question she had been trying to frame, regarding the probability of communication with her husband, remained unasked. At least she had saved her pride before him.

Addressing herself to the care of her narrow household, she mechanically put away the few things she had brought with her, and began to readjust the scant furniture. She was a little discomposed first by the absence of bolts, locks, and even window fastenings, until assured by Concha's evident inability to comprehend her concern that they were quite unknown at Los Cuervos. Her slight knowledge of Spanish was barely sufficient to make her wants known, so that the relief of conversation with her only companion was debarred her, and she was obliged to content herself with the sapless, crackling smiles and withered genuflections that the old woman dropped like dead leaves in her path. It was staring noon when, the house singing like an empty shell in the monotonous wind, she felt she could stand the solitude no longer, and, crossing the glaring patio and whistling corridor, made her way to the open gateway.

But the view without seemed to intensify her desolation. The broad expanse of the shadowless plain reached apparently to the Coast range, trackless and unbroken save by one or two clusters of dwarfed oaks, which at that distance were but mossy excrescences on the surface, barely raised above the dead level. On the other side the marsh took up the monotony and carried it, scarcely interrupted by undefined water courses, to the faintly marked-out horizon line of the remote bay. Scattered and apparently motionless black spots on the meadows, that gave a dreary significance to the title of "The Crows," which the rancho bore, and sudden gray clouds of sand pipers on the marshes, that rose and vanished down the wind, were the only signs of life. Even the white sail of the early morning was gone.

She stood there until the aching of her straining eyes, and the stiffening of her limbs in the cold wind, compelled her to seek the sheltered warmth of the courtyard. Here she endeavored to make friends with a bright-eyed lizard who was sunning himself in the corridor—a graceful little creature in blue and gold, from whom she felt at other times she might have fled, but whose beauty and harmlessness solitude had made known to her. With misplaced kindness she tempted it with bread crumbs, with no other effect than to stiffen it into stony astonishment. She wondered if she should become like the prisoners she had read of in books, who poured out their solitary affections on noisome creatures, and she even regretted the mustang, which with the buggy had disappeared under the charge of some unknown retainer on her arrival. Was she not a prisoner? The shutterless windows, yawning doors, and open gate refuted the suggestion; but the encompassing solitude and trackless waste still held her captive. Poindexter had told her it was four miles to the shanty; she might walk there. Why had she given her word that she would remain at the rancho until he returned?

The long day crept monotonsly away, and she welcomed the night which shut out the dreary prospect. But it brought no cessation of the harassing wind without, nor surcease of the nervous irritation its perpetual and even activity wrought upon her. It haunted her pillow even in her exhausted sleep and seemed to impatiently beckon her to rise and follow it. It brought her feverish dreams of her husband, footsore and weary, staggering forward under its pitiless lash and clamorous outcry; she would have gone to his assistance, but when she reached his side and held out her arms to him, it hurried her past with merciless power, and bearing her away, left him hopelessly behind. It was broad day when she awoke. The usual night showers of the waning riany season had left no trace in sky or meadow; the fervid morning sun had already dried the patio; only the restless harrying wind remained.

Mrs. Tucker arose with a resolve. She had learned from Concha on the previous evening that a part of the shanty was used as a tienda, or shop for the laborers and rancheros. Under the necessity of purchasing some articles, she would go there and for a moment mingle with those people who would not recognize her Even if they did, her instinct told her it would be less to be feared than the hopeless uncertainty of another day. As she left the house the wind seemed to seized her, as in her dream, and hurry her along with it, until in a few minutes the walls of the low casa sank into the earth again and she was alone, but for the breeze on the solitary plain. The level distance glittered in the sharp light, a few crows with slant wings dipped and ran down the wind before her, and a passing gleam on the marsh was explained by the far-off cry of a curlew.

She had walked for an hour, upheld by the stimulus of light and morning air, when the cluster of scrub caks, which was her distinction, opened enough to show two rambling sheds, before one of which was a wooden platform containing a few barrels and bones. As she approached nearer she could see that one or two horses were tethered under the trees, that their riders were longing by a horse trough, and that over an open door the word Tienda was rudely painted on a board, and as rudely illustrated by the wares displayed at door and window. Accustomed as she was to the poverty of frontier architecture, even the crumbling walls of the old hacienda she had just left seemed picturesque to the rigid angles of the thin, blank, unpainted shell before her. One of the loungers, who was reading a newspaper aloud as she advanced, put it aside and stared at her; there was an evident commotion in the shop as she stepped upon the platform, and when she entered, with breathless lips and beating heart, she found herself the object of a dozen curious eyes. Her quick pride resented the scrutnly and recalled her courage, and it was with a slight coldness in her usual lazy indifference that she leaned over the counter and asked for the article she wanted.

The request was followed by a dead silence. Mrs. Tucker repeated it with some hauteur.

"I reckon you don't seem to know this store is in the hands of the Sheriff," said one of the loungers.

Mrs. Tucker was not aware of it.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Sea Atmosphere for the Sick Room.

The solution to be used and diffused as spray consisted of a solution of peroxide of hydrogen(10 volumes strength) containing 1 per cent of ozonic ether, iodine to saturation, and 2 50 per cent of sea salt. The solution placed in a steam or hand spray diffuser can be distributed in the finest spray in the sick room at the rate of two fluid ounces in a quarter of an hour. It comunicates a pleasant sea odor, and is the best purifier of the air of the sick room I have ever used. It is a powerful disinfectant as well as deodorizer. acting briskly on ozonized tests solutions and papers. Mr. Carl R. Schomberg has recently invented a large spray producer, which will diffuse the artificial sea air through a hospital ward.—B. W. Richardson, M.D.

Time the Great Healer.

There is nothing more strange in all the experinces of humanity than the manner in which a great convulsion either in nature or in human history ceases after a while to affect the world. Grass grows and flowers wave over the soil which an earthquake has rent asunder; and the lives of men are similarly torn in twain without leaving a much more permanent result. The people whom we see one year crushed by some great blow, when the next has come have begun to pursue their usual course again. This means no infidelity of nature, no forgetting; but only the inevitable progress by which the world keeps going. There is no trouble, however terrible, that does not yield to the touch of time.

A Woman As She Is.

At the theatre the other evening I ... the pleasure of sitting near a young ... whose dress shot up at the shoulders ... the ears of a rabbit, and I was ... reminded of the masculine freaks ... female fashions now take to with ... marked degree. Why should the ... a lady's dress extend two inches above ... shoulders? For no other reason than ... men in the military wear epaulettes ... do ladies wear tailor-made suits? ... men do. Why should a lady wear the ... heavy shoes which they do? Because ... do. Why do women wear ulsters? ... cause men do. Why do women wear ... white collars about their necks? ... men do. Have you thought of the ... approach towards man's dress that ... women have made in the last ten ... The old female dress reformers started ... They wanted to put bloomers on the ... That would not do. Neither would ... ers, such as Dr. Mary Walker wears ... modest woman could jump out of ... into a pair of trousers and preserve her ... respect, and the respect of her ... admirers. The approach to the male ... tume was by a more circuitous route ... the result reached is pleasing and ... Feminine attire is not so feminine as it ... to be, and it is altogether sensible ... proper that it should not be. Take ... now dressed in an ulster that reaches ... heels, that has lappels in front and ... buttons, that is made of good, heavy ... cloth, and if she has a cap and ... shoes she looks when walking away ... you on a cold day in winter very much ... the gentleman at her side. You may ... sensible, and so she is, but how far has ... departed from the style of her grandmother ... when everything was silk, and lace ... feathery finery! It is coming to be ... nized that a woman is not a kitten to ... kept in a satin bag at home and dressed ... blue ribbon when she goes out, but that ... has muscles to be developed, and a skin ... may surely come in contact with the ... ing breezes and the light of heaven ... other words, women are becoming ... sturdy and robust than they used to ... Croquet is not the game now, but it ... be lawn-tennis, which requires more ... tion. more strength, and more activity ... The girl of the future will be an ... She will have strong arms and a ruddy ... plexion. She will ride horseback and ... boats. She will dig the juicy clam at ... seaside and feast like a king as the ... her honest toil. And she will be all ... better for it—all the stronger and ... physically, mentally, and sentimentally ... She will be a better specimen in every ... than her puny sisters of a generation ... Above all, she will make a better wife ... better mother. All this she can be and ... retain every real and essential woman ... character.

Women at Breakfast.

Perhaps there is no better test of a ... man's health and beauty than her appear... ance at an early breakfast table. She is ... more as nature made her than at any ... period of the day, when art has been ... in with a view of heightening her ... If she has slept well, it argues, to some ... tent, a sound nervous system, and the ... is seen in the brightness of her eyes and ... tone possessed by the muscles of the ... and neck. Her movements are full of ... for her limbs have been refreshed ... strengthened by repose, and her ... clear and bright, for it also has rested ... there have been no bad dreams to ... her nervous system and make her ... haggard. Her intelligence is then ... maximum, and she feels the mental ... lessness that is so generally the result ... sound, healthy sleep, and that is only ... tural elation of the emotions, ... doubtless, for her to exhibit, but ... pleasant to those to whom it is manifest...

If, on the contrary, she has slept ... or has suffered from nightmare, in ... ence of a feeble digestive system, her ... are weak, dim and watery, her face is ... her head appears to be held unsteady ... shoulders, for it drops on her chest, or ... helplessly from side to side, her complexion ... is dull and blotchy, red where it ought ... to be red, and pale where it ought not ... pale. Her expression is indicative of ... discomfort she has undergone during ... night, her movements are either ... slow, or aggravatingly brusque, her ... ect shows stupidity, her emotions are ... her perceptions dull.

While the woman that is in good ... health exhibits all the beauty in the ... morning that her features are capable ... pressing, the one whose organic life ... ranged is at this period of the day at ... worst. There is no better test of a ... health than her ability to eat a ... breakfast, and it might almost be said ... her physical beauty is in direct proportion ... the amount of beefsteak or mutton ... she can put into herself at this meal ... tainly, pretty women can always ... hearty breakfast.

Queer Advertisements.

The second column of the first page of ... London Times is known as the "agony ... umn." In it are inserted such sad ... as, "information wanted" of some ... man who disappeared, one, five or ... years ago, and has never been heard ... since. There too are to be found the ... etic notices intended for one pair of ... only, entreating "S P." or "T. L. M." ... turn, "and all will be forgotten." But ... are other advertisements which ... laugh more than these can make us ... Punctuation, or want of it, is responsible ... many of the strange advertisements ... these, for instance:

WANTED—A woman able and willing ... wash iron and milk three cows.

WANTED—By a German girl just ... in a private family a situation with or ... out children.

WANTED—A comfortable room for a ... man four feet by ten.

WANTED—Boy to milk and mow ...

A rather singular announcement ... in one of our city papers.

A large blue gentleman's overcoat ... the vicinity of the market.

TO RENT—An elegantly furnished ... to gentlemen already heated.

Among the artistic advertising ... declaring that, "Two young women ... washing," and another cheerful ... ment says:

Try our coffins. You will never ... other.

PIE PHILOSOPHY.

... for Palatable Pastry—Th... of a Noted Pie Shop.

In this sublunary existence it is ... enough simply to live, to pull thro... a tired horse pulls a load up-hill ... best thing we've got, and it beh... make the best of it in the few y... allotted to us. How are we to ... this? "Eat pie" is the ... monition that comes back to us like ... from some far beyond, and in the ... words we may find all that is neede... ... inhumanity those tender qu... ... in demand, because so scarce ... They, that pie means indigestio... "They?" A dyspeptic does no... to any great extent, and wher... grumbler who likes pie? Mirthful i... motive that should qualify our ex... in the jolly compound of fat ... laughter do we find the sunniest ... that many choose to call a hard an... world.

A MIRTHFUL MAN LOVES PIE

... lover of pie loves mirth, and the ... man goes through life to get all th... of it he can. Life is not a seriou... that we should hang our heads and ... We are not to blame for existing. ... put ourselves here, and we ne... bother our brains about getting ... that will be all attended to at the ... time. All that is expected of us is t... thank the Lord for giving us the cha... glorify him in her happiness. Bu... has this to do with pie? Pie is th... stratum of our average sweetness of c... ... and if you were as great a phila... just as you should be, if you really h... good of the nation at heart, it wo... your self-instituted task to establish ... pies in every city in the land, an... would sell pies by retail at wholesale ... men, women and babies; in fa... would give them away—that is if ... couldn't buy them; anyway, they ... eat pie. Who knows of a city tha... be better than New York, unless it ... There we are told they have p... breakfast, pie for dinner, pie for supp...

SIT UP NIGHTS TO EAT PIE.

Both are good cities, in their way. ... some chronic pessimists in each, ... investigation proves that they do not e... No pie eater can be truly wicked ... position. Show us a city that eats pi... we will show you a city with a ... population.

Away down on the eastern end of ... island forty years ago, a boy was dro... potatoes for his uncle. He got tir... dropping potatoes, and one mornin... found himself at Catharine Street ... with one cent in his pocket. The ... master took the one cent and truste... boy for the rest of his fare across the ... River. He found a job with a baker f... board and clothes before night, and ... boy has been baking ever since. He ... by the president of a New York Pie ... Company and claims the distincti... having baked and

SOLD MORE PIES.

than any man in America. He has ed... the people up to their present fon... pies, and therein he has built for ... a monument. He sold pies to Mr... Niblo, when the 'Garden' was a... lot surrounded by a high board f... the simple couple stood day after ... their caps and white aprons and r... them at a big profit.

When P. T. Barnum was his own t... seller and doorkeeper at his museum, ... situated where the Herald building ... stands, his dinner every day was on... Thompson's pies and a piece of cheese. ... Company sell now 20,000 pies ever... and its business is rapidly increasing ... the appetite of the community. It use... barrels of flour a week, and every day w... into pie 25 barrels of apples, other fruit ... proportion, 6,000 pounds of sugar, 840 d... eggs, 2,640 pounds of lard, 1,400 quart... milk, and 100 bushels of berries. The ... pie plates alone is $5,000 a year. ... business is established on a straight ... basis, and under no circumstances are ... principles departed from.

In the face of such facts as these, ... dares to say that it is not good to eat ... When a man reaches that point where ... turns up his nose at sweet things, ... pretty far gone.—New York Confection...

GERMAN SOLDIERS.

A System that Teaches Self-respec... Rank and File Alike.

The proudest soldiers in Europe ar... Germany. Whipping the French has ... them vain and self-sufficient. Like t... master, Bismarck, they really have a ... and contempt for France. "Every ma... Germany must serve from one to three y... in the army," said the Mayor of Dresd... conversation I had with him.

"Don't you think it hurts German... keep 500,000 young men in the army in ... of peace?" I asked.

"No. You do not understand the Ger... army. It is a school. The stupidest d... ... in the army is transformed in... man."

"Has a Prussian officer a right to ma... servant of a private, as he has in Amer...

"Never, sir. Making a menial of a so... will ruin any army. A Prussian officer ... would compel a soldier to do the work ... servant would be cashiered. Why, son... our rich German private soldiers keep ... vants of their own. A soldier do serv... work! Your question astonishes me."

"But the officer of a cavalry regimen... he were riding on the Unter den Lin... would have a private behind him, woul... not?" I asked.

"No, sir. If he had a servant he w... be dressed like a groom. No soldier w... hold an officer's horse. Why, many o... rich privates keep a groom themselves."

I thought of the many times I had ... our American officers using soldiers for ... vants, and how different it is here, wh... private will not even tie or hold an offi... horse; in fact, where he will do no m... work. I noticed this morning, when of... were riding in the park, that they took ... own servants, dressed like grooms, bu... soldier uniform was thus degraded. ... this one thing that makes the Prussian s... the best in the world. It was this one t... Gen. Sheridan thought that made the ... tory at Sedan. Gen. Sheridan, stop th... of our soldiers as servants, and our ... will be a different army.

A Woman As She is.

At the theatre the other evening I ha
e pleasure of sitting near a young lad hose dress shot up at the shoulders lik e ears of a rabbit, and I was once mo minded of the masculine freaks of male fashions now take to with ma arked degree. Why should the sleeves dy's dress extend two inches above th oulders? For no other reason than th en in the military wear epaulettes. Wh ladies wear tailor-made suits? Becaus n do. Why should a lady wear the hea avy shoes which they do? Because m
. Why do women wear ulsters? B ite collars about their necks? Becau n do. Have you thought of the gradu proach towards man's dress that th men have made in the last ten years
e old female dress reformers started wron ey wanoed to put bloomers on the women at would not do. Neither would trou
, such as Dr. Mary Walker wears. N dest woman could jump out of dress
o a pair of trousers and preserve her es pect, and the respect of her masculi mirers. The approach to the male co me was by a more circuitous route, a e result reached is pleasing and endurable minine attire is not so feminine as it us be, and it is altogether more sensible a per than it should not be. Take a g w dressed in an ulster that reaches ls, that has lappels in front and b tons, that is made of good, heavy, wa
th, and if she has a cap and st es she looks when walking away fr on a cold day in winter very much li gentleman at her side. You say she sible, and so she is, but how far has s arted from the style of her grandmoth en everything was silk, and lace, a hery fiery! It is coming to be rec d that a woman is not a kittten to t in a satin bag at home and dressed i e ribbon when she goes out, but that muscles to be developed, and a skin th surely come in contact with the da breezes and the light of heaven.
er words, women are becoming m dy and robust than they used to quet is not the game now, but it m awn-tennis, which requires more ex more strength, und more activi girl of the future will be an athle will have strong arms and a ruddy co
ion. She will ride horseback and r
s. She will dig the juicy clam at ide and feast like a king as the result honest toil. And she will be all er for it—all the stronger and health sically, mentally, and sentimentall will be a better specimen in every w her puny sisters of a generation ba ve all, she will make a better wife an er mother. All this she can be and s n every real and essential woman acter.

Women at Breakfast.

rhaps there is no better test of a s health and beauty than her appe at an early breakfast table. She is t as nature made her than at any ot d of the day, when art has been brou th a view of heightening her char e has slept well, it argues, to some a sound nervous system, and the ef n in the brightness of her eyes and possessed by the muscles of the f
eck. Her movements are full of gr her limbs have been refreshed gthened by repose, and her mind and bright, for it also has rested, have been no bad dreams to exha ervous system and make her limp ard. Her intelligence is then at mum, and she feels the mental re ss that is so generally the result , healthy sleep, and that is only a elation of the emotions, pleas less, for her to exhibit, but far m ant to those to whom it is manifeste on the contrary, she has slept bad suffered from nightmare, in connec f a feeble digestive system, her c eak, dim and watery, her face is flat ad appears to be held unsteady on lers, for it drops on her chest, or b ssly from side to side, her complex and blotchy, red where it ought red, and pale where it ought not t
Her expression is indicative of nfort she has undergone during her movements are either pair or aggravatingly brusque, her in ows stupidity, her emotions are rceptions dull.
ile the woman that is in good phys exhibits all the beauty in the e ng that her features are capable of ng, the one whose organic life is l is at this period of the day at
There is no better test of a wom than her ability to eat a hea ast, and it might almost be said ysical beauty is in direct proporti ount of beefsteak or mutton ch
n put into herself at this meal.
pretty women can always ea
breakfast.

Queer Advertisements.

second column of the first page of n Times is known as the "agony
In it are inserted such sad inqu nformation wanted" of some yo ho disappeared, one, five or two go, and has never been heard f
There too are to be found the p tices intended for one pair of ntreating "S P." or "T. L. M." t
'and all will be forgotten." But t ner advertisements which make more than these can make us w ation, or want of it, is responsible f the strange advertisements. T for instance:

TED—A woman able and willin
on and milk three cows.

TED—By a German girl just la ivate family a situation with or w ildren.

TED—A comfortable room for a y r feet by ten.

TED—Boy to milk and mow lawn ther singular announcement appe of our city papers.

ge blue gentleman's overcoat lo
inity of the market.

ENT—An elegantly furnished r
lemen already heated.

ng the artistic advertising was ng that, "Two young women w g," and another cheerful adver
ays:
our coffins. You will never mo

PIE PHILOSOPHY.

A Plea for Palatable Pastry—The Origin of a Noted Pie Shop.

In this sublunary existence it is not good enough simply to live, to pull through life as a jured horse pulls a load up-hill. Life is the best thing we've got, and it behooves us to make the best of it in the few years that are allotted to us. How are we to go about doing this? "Eat pie" is the quiet admonition that comes back to us like an echo from some far beyond, and in those two words we may find all that is needed to produce inhumanity those tender qualities so much in demand, because so scarce. They say, They, that pie means indigestion. Who are "They?" A dyspeptic does not enjoy life to any great extent, and where is the grumbler who likes pie? Mirthful is the adjective that should qualify our existence, for in the jolly compound of fat men and laughter do we find the sunniest side of what many choose to call a hard and cruel world.

A MIRTHFUL MAN LOVES PIE,

a lover of pie loves mirth, and the mirthful man goes through life to get all the good out of it he can. Life is not a serious thing that we should hang our heads and mope. We are not to blame for existing. We did not put ourselves here, and we need not bother our brains about getting away. That will be all attended to at the proper time. All that is expected of us is that we thank the Lord for giving us the chance to glorify him in her happiness. But what has this to do with pie? Pie is the substratum of our average sweetness of disposition, and if you were as great a philanthropist as you should be, if you really had the good of the nation at heart, it would be your self-instituted task to establish pie factories in every city in the land, and you would sell pies by retail at wholesale prices to men, women and babies; in fact you would give them away—that is if people couldn't buy them; anyway, they should all eat pie. Who knows of a city that loves pie better than New York, unless it is Boston? There we are told they have pie for breakfast, pie for dinner, pie for supper, and

SIT UP NIGHTS TO EAT PIE.

Both are good cities, in their way. There are some chronic pessimists in each, but investigation proves that they do not eat pie. No pie eater can be truly wicked in disposition. Show us a city that eats piee and we will show you a city with a happy population.

Away down on the eastern end of Long Island forty years ago, a boy was dropping potatoes for his uncle. He got tired of dropping potatoes, and one morning he found himself at Catharine Street Ferry with one cent in his pocket. The ferry master took the one cent and trusted the boy for the rest of his fare across the East River. He found a job with a baker for his board and clothes before night, and that boy has been baking ever since. He is today the president of a New York Pie Baking Company and claims the distinction of having baked and than any man in America. He has educated the people up to their present fondness for pies, and therein he has built for himself a monument. He sold pies to Mr. and Mrs. Niblo, when the 'Garden" was a vacant lot surrounded by a high board fence, and the simple couple stood day after day in their caps and white aprons and resold them at a big profit.

SOLD MORE PIES,

When P. T. Barnum was his own ticket seller and doorkeeper at his museum, then situated where the Herald building now stands, his dinner every day was one of Thompson's pies and a piece of cheese. This Company sell now 20,000 pies ever day, and its business is rapidly increasing with the appetite of the community. It uses 300 barrels of flour a week, and every day works into pie 25 barrels of apples, other fruits in proportion, 6,000 pounds of sugar, 840 dozen eggs, 2 640 pounds of lard, 1,400 quarts of milk, and 100 bushels of berries. The loss in pie plates alone is $5,000 a year. The business is established on a straight cash basis, and under no circumstances are its principles departed from.

In the face of such facts as these, who dares to say that it is not good to eat pie? When a man reaches that point where he turns up his nose at sweet things, he is pretty far gone.—New York Confectioner.

GERMAN SOLDIERS.

A System that Teaches Self-respect to Rank and File Alike.

The proudest soldiers in Europe are in Germany. Whipping the French has made them vain and self-sufficient. Like their master, Bismarck, they really have a pity and contempt for France. "Every man in Germany must serve from one to three years in the army," said the Mayor of Dresden in a conversation I had with him.

"Don't you think it hurts Germany to keep 500 000 young men in the army in time of peace?" I asked.

"No. You do not understand the German army. It is a school. The stupidest dunce once in the army is transformed into a man."

"Has a Prussian officer a right to make a servant of a private, as he has in America?"

"Never, sir. Making a menial of a soldier will ruin any army. A Prussian officer who would compel a soldier to do the work of a servant would be cashiered. Why, some of our rich German private soldiers keep servants of their own. A soldier do servant's work! Your question astonishes me."

"But the officer of a cavalry regiment, if he were riding on the Unter den Linden, would have a private behind him, would he not?" I asked.

"No, sir. If he had a servant he would be dressed like a groom. No soldier would hold an officer's horse. Why, many of our rich privates keep a groom themselves."

I thought of the many times I had seen our American officers using soldiers for servants, and how different it is here, where a private will not even tie or hold an officer's horse; in fact, where he will do no menial work. I noticed this morning, when officers were riding in the park, that they took their own servants, dressed like grooms, but no soldier uniform was thus degraded. It is this one thing that makes the Prussian army the best in the world. It was this one thing Gen. Sheridan thought that made the victory at Sedan. Gen. Sheridan, stop the use of our soldiers as servants, and our army will be a different army.

A Leap to Safety.

Johnny Mackintover is a sturdy little fellow of 7 years, who lives with his parents at No. 144 Hester street, New York. Adjoining the house is a six-story factory on the south-east corner of Hester and Elizabeth streets. The factory has a flat roof, which on Sundays is a resort for the people of the neighboring houses, being easily accessible by ladder from their own roofs.

Sunday morning, about 9 o'clock, Johnny Mackintover was flying a kite on the roof of the factory. Beginning at one end of the long building he ran with his kite the entire length. Most of the way he ran backward, pulling the kite after him. So absorbed was he that he ran too far, and striking his heels on the low guard that bounds the roof he fell over the edge on the Elizabeth street side, turning over and over in the air as he fell.

Luckily for Johnny the telegraph wires at this point are very high above the street, and the boy after falling about ten feet, by a good fortune that was hardly less than a miracle, caught one of the lower wires in his hands and hung there, about fifty feet above the ground. There was no other wire within his reach.

A few persons had seen the little fellow fall, and in a moment a crowd had gathered. Unable to render the slightest help the people stood paralyzed with horror, gazing up at the boy dangling between Heaven and earth. Not a cry escaped the lad's lips.

"Hold on tight and I'll save you!" cried Frank Neumann, a youth of 18 years, who lives in the same house with Johnny. He had been lying on the top of the house, and, attracted by the noise, he ran to the edge of the roof. Young Neumann took in the situation at a glance, noting that Johnny hung nearly opposite the fire escape. But the fire escape extended only to the fifth story, and not to the roof. Without losing a moment, Neumann clambered over the edge of the roof, and, supporting himself by his fingers on the narrow line of brick outside the guard, hung directly over the fire escape.

"Oh, Frank," cried the lad, "do hurry up if you're going to do anything. I can't stand this any more. I'm going to drop."

"Hold on tight a minute longer and I'll be there!" shouted Neumann.

Swinging his body backward and forward like a pendulum he cleared the wall and let go his hold. Like an arrow he shot down through the trap in the fire-escape at the fifth floor, and caught with his hands the iron rounds of the ladder between the fourth and fifth stories.

A loud cheer went up from the crowd in the street. It was a fearful leap, but a successful one.

"You'll have to move lively, Frank," said the boy. "I must let go."

"Just one moment yet," said the young man. He got a precarious hold on the ladder with his feet and one arm, and leaned far out so that he could just grasp the boy's wrist. Then he drew him in amid the cheers of the crowd. Taking the boy in his arms they descended the ladder until they reached the third floor, when his strength failed him and he let go his hold, dropping with the boy to the ground. Neither was hurt. Then the crowd shouted itself hoarse.

The little fellow's face was white. "Frank I wouldn't try that again, if I was you," was all he said. Then he ran away and hid himself in a cellar, where he remained two hours, fearing the paternal wrath.

A Domestic Scene.

"There!" exclaimed Mrs. Prittie. "you eft the ink-stand on the table and I have turned it over and ruined the carpet."

"Well," replied the husband, "why didn't you leave the ink-stand on the table and not turn it over?"

"None of your foul puns, William. I'll crack your head with this duster. I'd just as leave do it as not. Here I have to scrub, scrub, scrub, all the time and we never have anything fit to look at."

"When you have completed your tirade I'd like to say—

"Tirade!" she snapped. "It's enough to make anybody swear. I do think that you are the most careless and good-for-nothing man I ever saw."

"I'd like to say, in case a convenient season should roll around, that I have been unjustly assailed.

"Unjustly assailed!" she howled. "I ought to drive you off the place. Just look at that carpet. Ruined all on account of your foolishness."

"If you are ready, madame, I will make a casual observation. This morning, you asked for my ink. I told you that it was on my desk. You put it on the table and wrote the note which you have just sent down town. So you see, I had nothing to do with the performance."

"Well, I don't care," exclaimed the poor woman, bursting into tears, "it was just like you to leave it there. You are always leaving things where they don't belong. I have a great mind to declare that I won't live with you another day."

"What have I done?"

"What is it you haven't done?"

Unable longer to bear her burden of grief, she went into the adjoining room and sobbed. An hour later while her husband sat reading his paper, soft arms stole around his neck, tender lips pressed his forehead, and a sweet voice said:

"Am I so very bad?"—Arkansas Traveller.

THE WORLD'S FOOD SUPPLY.

A Year of Superabundance.

The Department of Agriculture at Washington reports the condition of cotton on the first of September lower than on August the first, by reason of the drought. The general average is 82½, against 87 in August. The product of winter wheat is above the average, and generally of good quality. The rate of yield is not far from an average of 13 bushels to the acre. The results of the harvest of spring wheat are not yet complete. It is probable from the reported condition of the crop already harvested and thrashed that the aggregate will vary little from a hundred million bushels. The general average condition when harvested is 98, against 83 last year. The corn crop is in better condition than in any September since 1880; the general average is 94. It promises to produce an average yield of 26 bushels for the entire breadth, or not less than eighteen hundred million bushels. It will make the largest aggregate of quantity ever reported in the history of the crop. In oats the average yield per acre is about the same as corn, and makes an aggregate exceeding 2½ hundred million bushels. The condition when harvested was 96, which is lower than the two previous years. Barley averages 97; it will average about 22 bushels per acre. The general average for rye is 96; for buckwheat 94; which indicates a medium crop of about 12 bushels per acre. The condition of potatoes averages 91; it will be an abundant crop but not so large as last year. The condition of tobacco is higher than in September of any year since 1877; it averages 94.

THE CROPS IN EUROPE.

The London agent of the department cables to-day as the result of a statistical investigation that the year will be one of superabundance, that European wheat, although above the average in product will be less than the aggregate of 1882. European importing countries need two hundred and sixty million bushels above the production. European countries exporting can supply eight million bushels, leaving one hundred and eighty million bushels to be obtained from other continents. Stocks are not excessive. There is an increased consumption of wheat, and it is the general opinion that the lowest prices have been reached. Potatoes and rye are less abundant than last year. The average yield of northern and central Italy is abundant, but it is short in the south, including Sicily and Sardinia. Corn is looking unusually well, and promises an abundant yield. The same is true of rice. As for fruit, the excessively hot, dry weather in Italy is said to have damaged it.

A FEW SMILES.

A shallow-brained fop remarked, with the air of an instructor, "People should never laugh at their own jokes. I never think of laugning at mine." "Does anyone else?" slyly asked a young lady.

Because a Chicago girl leaves her shoes outside of the door of her room in a hotel to be polished, it does not excuse the porter for knocking, and asking if she wants "those valises taken down to the office to be checked."

"I hear that you are to marry a wealthy American girl," said one British nobleman to another. "Ya'as," replied his lordship. "Are there any encumbrances on the property?" "Ya'as, the lady."

A wealthy bank officer being applied to for aid by a needy Irishman, answered petulantly, "No, no; I can't help you. I have 50 such applicants as you every day." "Sure and ye might have a hundred without costing you much," was the response.

A full bearded grandfather recently had his beard shaved off, showing a clean face for the first time in a number of years. At the dinner-table his three year old granddaughter noticed it, gazed along with wondering eyes, and finally she ejaculated: "Grandfather, whose head you got on?"

"Inquirer." No, an intelligence office is not a place to look for intelligence. The name is entirely irrelevant. But if you want a green house-girl, whom you will have to teach all she will ever know, that is the place where they have them on draught. Titles do not signify anything in America.

"And what's the big fellow with the red face doing now?" asked an unsophisticated country visitor at the opera. "Great goodness, man, shut up," whispered the other; "that's Picklehomy, the celebrated tenor, and he's trilling." "Oh, I thought he was gargling his throat. It sounds like it."

A young negro bootblack observed a neighbour poring wisely over a newspaper, whereupon he addressed thus: "Julius, what are you looking at that paper for? You can't read.' "Go away," retorted the other indignantly; "guess I can read; I's big enuff for that." "Big enuff!" retorted the other scornfully; "dat ain't nuffin. A cow's big enuff to catch mice; but she can't."

Overrated Rome.

Rome, proud mistress of the world, who sat in grandeur on her seven hills, was undonbtedly a much overrated institution; only great in comparison with the littleness with which she was surrounded, only strong because she had the opportunity to measure her strength with weakness; and only civilized in contrast with barbarism. Her hills, the famous seven, the Aventine, Capitoline, Cœltan, Esquiline, Palatine, Quirinal and Viminal, are only about 150 feet in height, and not at all comparable to our seven hills of San Francisco—Telegraph, Clay street, Russian, Pacific heights, Rincona, Strawberry and Leone mountain. The famous Appian way is a narrow and unserviceable road of unshapely bowlders. The wall which Romulus built, Remus jumped over, and there has never been a wall around Rome since which would for a moment resist a modern siege. The Tiber is a muddy rivulet; the campagna an unhealthy morass; the Castle St. Angela is an exaggerated cheesebox; St. Peter's, her famous basilica, is but the monument of a fading superstition which succeeded the pantheon and coliseum ruins of a defunct paganism. A cardinal, with his purple mantle, is a burlesque pantomime of the Roman senator in his toga The "states of the church," under the civil dominion of the Pope, was in extent of country a cabbage garden, in point of government a sort of cross between an Irish wake and a Methodist camp meeting. The city of Rome under the government of Italy, and as Italy's capital, is undergoing transformation is being improved and modernized; is well governed and is prospering. The malignant shadow of the cross crawls slowly in as the sun of the new day rises above the horizon. Oldd superstitions disappear, giving to new Italy a new and better Rome, with liberty and religious freedom.

The Funny Furnishing of a Gothenburg Bedroom.

The hotel we choose in Gothenburg was the Gota-Koilare. I had to study Swedish customs at once, for my bed had no pillows, and an enormous lump, like a camel's, in the centre. I remonstrated gently but firmly with the maid, and told her that to sleep on such a hemifphere would bring on curvature of the spine. She uncovered the lump and showed me the pillows architecturally disposed in the centre. That night I found all these pillows and more at the head of the bed, the chambermaid having evidently taken the notion that I desired to sleep standing, or very nearly so. My room was not cheerful. It had a tall reservoir of a water picture near my head, which looked like a tombstone, and a vast tile stove some ten feet high which resembled a monument. So I naturally dreamed of sleeping in a Swedish cemetery and read, "Sacred to the memory of." etc., on the tile stove.

Khartoum.

Khartoum is a name that is known among the wildest savages of equatorial Africa who never heard of Paris or of London; to them it is the centre of all that is great, and it is the capital of everything. The abandonment of Khartoum would, in their estimation, be the disruption of a central power, which would imply impotence. The slave hunters have been suppressed by the authority from Khartoum, and the force required for that suppression has emanated from that centre of strength and government; if therefore, Khartoum should be abandoned, the protection that was the support of royal tribes of the interior would have been withdrawn, the supporting power would have been overthrown, and the slave hunters would again be in the ascendant. The result would be immediate; those tribes which had been faithful to the Government would become the first victim to those who had been against the Government; a general anarchy would ensue, and the loyal would be sacrificed to the slave gangs, which had been kept in subjection by the imperial forces. The slave trade would be renewed with tenfold vigor, as no power woul remain to curb the atrocities of the traders. This deplorable situation would render impossible all future attempts at government, as the natives would have lost all confidence of support; they would have seen that the loyal had been sacrificed by the abandonment of the Government, upon which they have depended for protection, while those who had openly defied the laws had triumphed by rebellion. All the good results of the last five-and-twenty years of exploration and energetic action against the slave trade would have been entirely dissipated, and the end of the long struggle would have yielded victory to the wrongdoers. The work of 64 years since the conquest of the Soudan by Mehemet Ali Pasha would have been utterly destroyed, and the Soudan would relapse into the frightful barbarism described by Bruce a hundred years ago. It is ridiculous to suppose that any Soudan races are capable of self-government. If we refuse this to Ireland, how can we expect a better result from ignorant barbarians, who would extinguish all progress by a chronic inter-tribal strife? As local autonomy would be impossible should Khartoum be evacuated by the Egyptian forces, the Soudan, deprived of its capital, would resolve into a political chaos, until some superior force should take advantage of the general disruption and restore order by militia conquest. Abyssinia is dangerously situated as a hostile neighbor. From the frontier at Gellabat the march would be a direct descent upon Khartoum by the River Rahad and Blue Nile, through a fertile country teeming with supplies. If Khartoum should be abandoned by the imperative orders of the British Government, Egypt will have abdicted her right, and the country will become an easy prey to the first adventurer. If I were a Frenchman I should not neglect the opportunity. French officers might assist the King of Abyssinia in the organization of his army for the conquest of Khartoum and the fertile Provinces of Senaar, Kadarif, and Taka. Kartoum and the richest portions of Africa would be annexed to Abyssinia. French influence would procure concessions of land to various officers in reward for their militiary services. By degrees, the embryo of a French settlement would be established, and in less time than many people would believe, we should discover a rival colony firmly rooted at Khartoum.

Life in High Altitudes.

The highest spot on the globe inhabited by human beings is the Buddhist cloister of Hanle, Thibet, where twenty-one priests live at an altitude of 16,000 feet. The monks of St. Bernard, whose monastery is 8,177 feet high, are obliged to descend frequently to the valley below in order to obtain relief from the asthma induced by the rarity of the atmosphere about their mountain eyrie. At the end of ten years' service at the monastery they are compelled to change their level. When the brothers Schlaginswell explored the glaciers of the Ibi Gamin, in Thibet, they once encamped at 21,000 feet the highest altitude at which a European ever passed the night. On Mont Blanc, 15,781 feet above the level of the sea Professor Tyndall spent a night, and with less discomfort than his guide, who found it very unpleasant. In July, 1872, Mr. Glaisher and Mr. Coxwell ascended in a baloon to the enormous height of 38,000 feet. Before starting Mr. Glaisher's pulse beat 76 strokes per minute, and Mr. Coxwell's 74. At 28,000 feet Mr. Glaisher's pulse had increased to 84 and Mr. Coxwell's to 100 At 19,000 feet the hands and lips of the aeronauts turned quite blue. At 26,000 feet Mr. Glaishea could hear his heart beat and his breathing became oppressed. At 29,000 he lost all feeling, notwithstanding which he still ascended another 9,000 feet, when his hands were paralyzed, and he had to open the valve of the balloon with his teeth.

The Locomotion of Shells.

The great conch or strombus, has a veritable sword that it thrusts out, sticks into the ground, and by a muscular effort jerks itself along, making a decided leap. The squids, that are the brightest forms of mulluscs, leap entirely clear of the water, often several feet. They are the ink-bearers, and from their ink-bags comes the sepia used by artists, while their bone is the cuttle-fish bone of commerce. Many of the cockles have a method of flying through the water that is quite novel. They are generally beautifully colored, and have long, streaming tentacles, and suddenly, without warning, they dart up from the bottom, and by a violent opening and shutting of their valves rush away with their long, reddish hair streaming after them, presenting a very curious appearance. The shell known as the Lima Nians is particulary remarkable for these flights, and all the scallops are jumpers and leapers. When placed in a boat they have been known to leap out, and the ordinary scallop has been known to jump out of a pot when placed upon a stove. A description of the different methods by which shells move would fill a volume.

The number of cross-ties in a mile of railway track varies largely in different roads. Every first class line has at least 2,640, or one to every two feet, and some exceed 3,200 per mile. Then, again, there is a difference on different parts of the same road. A tie, or grade, must present a clear surface of eight and a thickness of six inches. Sometimes ties below grode are used and the difference balanced by increased numbers.

AN ELECTRIC EEL SIX FEET LONG.

How it was Brought from South America—Indians Killed by it.

A very interesting addition has recently been made to the Zoological Gaudens in the shape of an electric eel—gymnotus electricus. It is said to be nearly six feet in length, and must therefore be one of the largest specimens of its kind. Those who remember the palmy days of the old Polytechnic may recollect a dimunitive electric eel which used to deal out very decided shocks to visitors who had the temerity to touch it, and which used to kill, or at any rate to stun, the live fish which were put into its tank for food. The newcomer is altogether a more formidable fellow, and when he has had time to recruit after a long voyage from South America, during which he was rather cruelly coiled in a vessel in which he could not move without chafing himself raw in many places, it will be anything but wise to venture on any liberties with him.

Humboldt, when in the native home of this fish in and about the Rio Colorado, measured some that were five feet five inches in length, but though the Indians said there were larger he himself saw none. The captive in Regent's Park is no doubt therefore a very big specimen, and there can be little doubt of its power. Humboldt, thought that the Indians of the locality referred to had exaggerated ideas on this subject, but they no doubt had had practical experience, while the illustrious traveller seems to have prudently retained from testing the matter except in the case of an eel in a somewhat exhausted condition. He admits that it would be temerity to expose one's self to first shocks of a large and strongly irritated gymnotus, and though he does not mention any case within his knowledge of any human life being lost by a shock from the fish, the mode of catching them adopted by the Indians seems to render it by no means incredible that, as some have asserted, this fish is capable of killing a man.

The Indians, it seems, are accustomed when they want to catch gymnoti, to scour the country round for wild horses and mules, which they drive into the ponds where the fish are known to be, and so violent are the discharges of the pent-up lightning to which these animals are exposed that, though they are not killed by electricity, they are so stunned and disabled that usually several of them are drowned. Humboldt once imprudently put both his feet on an electric eel just taken out of the water; and, though he does not speak of it as a large one, he says he never experienced from a large Leyden jar a more dreadful discharge than he felt on that occasion. He was affected all day with a violent pain in every joint of his body.

It seems to be generally agreed that the electric force of this fish is closely dependent on its general vitality, and as the new arrival is as yet only in a comparatively poor condition, perhaps no great harm would result from bodily contact with it.

A Shakespearian Discovery.

Rev. W. D. Macray has recently discovered in the Bodleian Library an old letter from a certain William Hall, a Queen's college man, who took his B. A. degree in October, 1694, to Edward Thwaites, of Queen's College, a well known Anglo-Saxon scholar. The interest of the letter is in the light it throws upon the verses cut upon Shakespeare's tombstone. The portion of the letter that refers to Shakespeare is as follows: "Dear Neddy.—I very greedily embrace this occasion of acquainting you with something which I found at Stratford-upon-Avon. That place I came unto on Thursday night, and the next day went to visit the ashes of the great Shakespeare which lye interred in that church. The verses which in his lifetime, he ordered to be cut upon his tombstone, for his monument have others, are these which follow:

Reaper, for Jesus sake forbear
To dig the dust enclosed here;
Blessed be he that spares these stones,
And cursed be he that moves my bones.

The little learning these verses contain would be a very strong argument of the want of it in the author, did they not carry something in them which stands in need of a comment. There is in this church a place which they call the bone house, a repository for all bones they dig up, which are so many that they would load a great many waggons. The Poet, being willing to preserve his bones unmoved, lays a curse upon him that moves them, and having to do with clarks and sextons, for the most part a very ignorant sort of people, he descends to the meanest of their capacitys, and disrobes himself of that art which none of his contemporaries wore in greater perfection. Nor has the design mist of its effect, for, lest they should not only draw this curse upon themselves but also entail it upon their posterity, they have laid him full seventeen foot deep, deep enough to secure him.

A Hatless Poet.

Undue conviviality is said to have compelled Swinburne the poet, to retire from the London Arts Club. His last freak there was the trying on in succession of all the hats that hung in the hallway. On finding that one would not fit he would throw it down and trample it under foot, exclaiming "No, that isn't mine!" until the headgear of all the unsuspicious members inside strewed the passage. "If you please, sir," said the always respectful footman, "what are you looking for?" "My hat! my hat!" said Swinburne, unsteadily. Then came the information: "If you please, sir, I noticed that when you came in you hadn't one on."

Never talk about a child's peculiarities before it. The greatest charm of childhood is its forgetfulness of itself, its utter ignorance of the state of its own attire and its own mind, its capability of forgetting whether it is ill or well clad. Do not tell it that it is studious, or playful, or proud, lest you make it affected; and do not let it hear its beauty or its ugliness alluded to.

A wise Quakeress used to say in her sermons that there were three follies of men which always amused her. The first was their climbing trees to shake fruit down, when, if they only waited a little, it would fall of its own accord: the second was, that they should go to war to kill each other, when if they but waited they would all die naturally, and the third was that they should run after women, which, if they would not do, the women would run after them.

The Standard.

MARKDALE SEPT. 25, 1884.

INCORPORATION.

We believe that nine-tenths of the ratepayers of Markdale are strongly in favor of having the village incorporated; yet the important and much desired step is not taken. The cause of the delay appears a mystery. The place is destined to become a very important business centre, and it becomes our leading business men to encourage or adopt any change or course that will advance the financial interests, or improve the moral and social atmosphere of the place; and we believe the incorporation of the village is the first step in that direction. We are proud of our country as a "land of liberty," but must acknowledge we have too much liberty in Markdale. When sporting characters of the surrounding district feel like having a "jolification," they come to Markdale, where they have an idea they can do about as they please, (and they think about right); but their sport often ends in a drunken broil when the air in the vicinity of such is filled with profanity and noise of a hideous nature, disturbing peaceful citizens, and giving the village an unenviable notoriety for disorder and wickedness. Now, we have no sympathy with this sort of liberty, and are strongly convinced that were our village incorporated, and had a live, enterprising municipal council at the head of affairs, a new era would be ushered in, that would exceed our most sangume expectations.

THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.

Yes! went to the Exhibit of the Arts of Man and Mankind, at Toronto, the other day. Our better half had given our only shirt an extra rub and touch; and it was with a feeling of dignified pride that we took our seat on the morning train, amid the wealth, intelligence, and beauty of our land. Arrived at Toronto, we wended our way to the grounds. Whew! the spectacle was appalling to the view of a back-woods Editor, and caused an expansion of skull that will, in future, compel our hatter to make our pattern a size larger.—To enumerate—it was immense. Our stay was cut short by a telegram from the satanic power that rules our Press-room, announcing that despatches had been received from Right Hon. W. Gladstone, asking our opinion as to the desirability of closer political and commercial relations with our Sister West India Islands. The reader may reasonably presume that the management of the C. P. R. placed a special train at our disposal, and whirled us home at the rate of 67⅜ miles an hour; where, to our chagrin, we found that our "imp" had invented this ingenious ruse to get us home, as he had run out of tobacco, and none of the groceries in town would trust him, except upon our own written Order.

However, we were long enough on the ground to see that the County of Grey was well represented. Our Markdale has reason to feel proud of her worthy representative, Mr. J. R. Trimble. He took first prize in the roadster class with his sorrel mare "Rose," by Clear Grit; second prize by brown stallion, Clear Grit, Jr. The best horsemen on the grounds pronounced the decision unjust—that Grit possessed four times the qualities that make a perfect horse. Prejudice upon one side, and excellence on the other, kept the judges two days, vascillating between Truth and Dishonesty; but, a compromise was made whereby Postmaster Patteson was called in as Umpire. Much better had it been that Mr. Hendrie, of Hamilton, the owner of the competitor, had been chosen referee; for we have reason to believe that that gentleman would have scorned to render the decision referred to, altho' in favor of his own horse. Mr. Trimble's sorrel colt, "Woodbine Chief," altho' not taking a prize, was highly admired. In the general purpose class, Mr. Trimble's "Black Prince" took a third from a host of competitors from all portions of Ontario. The imported horse that took first prize last year, got nothing this year, thus showing the competition "Prince" had to contend with. Of Mr. Trimble's exhibit, the Mail of the 18th inst. says:—

"J. R. Trimble, Markdale, has a lot of fine exhibits. The first one in 131 is Black Prince, a beautiful 4-year-old black, in general purpose, a horse of good promise. Moving up to 216 is found Young Clear Grit, stallion, 5 years, by Old Clear Grit, he by imported Lapidist (thoroughbred), dam a Royal George mare; brown, slightly mottled, with nigh hind heel white; great length and substance; heavy stifles; a model of a neck, head and forequarters. The next is a 2-year-old Grit colt Woodbine Chief, solid chestnut with white markings; fine cantour and remarkable fine limbs; plenty of style and substance, good action and one of the best youngsters on the ground. Following is a Grit filly, 3 years, golden chestnut with nigh hind heel white, stands about 16, dam by Lord Byron (thoroughbred); great power in forequarters, with swan-like neck. Good length and ranging."

Our enterprising townsman, Mr. Angus Plewes, comes in for a fair share of distinction, in as much as he carried off first prize for the best pair of ponnies in harness between 13½ and 14½ hands; while Mr. Morgan Secord, of Meaford, won second in the same class.

Mr. James Myles, an enterprising farmer near Kimberley. 4th line Euphrasia, obtained first for a yearling colt, entire, in the general purpose class.

In former days the North portion of our County "ruled the roost;" now, the Centre of Grey takes the palm. Our veteran horseman, Hannah, of Flesherton Station, in a field of 34 competitors, successfully came off with first laurels. The Mail says of Mr. Hannah's horse:—

"R. J. Hannah, Flesherton Station, shows a beautiful dark chestnut 4-year-old gelding —Chestnut Jim—in roadster class; 15.3, great range, powerful, strong, open action that has carried him to the front in more than one race last winter. Sired by Eden Gold Dust, dam by Clear Grit."

We have not yet done:—It is questionable whether any other County in Ontario has contributed as great a share of first-class horse-flesh to the exhibition as Grey our years of development being considered. To the energy of Dr. Sproule, we are indebted for the first thoroughbred stallion, "Extra;" then came Mr. Brondgest's "Astronomer;" then a better class by Mr. Trimble, so that in a few years the County of Grey will become as famous for its horses as it is to-day for its cattle and sheep, and the superiority of its grain, pasturage and fruit.

Our sister town of Chatsworth was ably represented by Mr. Thos. Tuck, who exhibited a yearling, that, in the sporting phrase, will "take the spots" off some of the roadsters in a few years. The shock we received at the "Gladstone Hoax" prevents further comment on the Industrial Exhibit. Hear what the Mail says of Mr. Tuck's colt;

"Thomas Tuck, Chatsworth, has a yearling, Eddie F., pretty near all chestnut in roadster class. He is by Old Clear Grit, dam a Tippo mare. Stands about 15, good power, with fine action to the halter, and possessed with what would be considered a trotting conformation."

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

What Constitutes Common Sense.

To the Editor of the Standard.

DEAR SIR,—By all authentic philosophic authors, "Common sense" is an indext to that principle upon which the Creator organized the world and the creatures who inhabit it—MAN, the Primary. In all stages of mankind, grouped as they are into various communities, different degrees of development, culture, and modes of government have existed from time immemorial, each with a more or less tendency toward refinement, and the desire to promote to the world the joyous security of

THE MERRY, MERRY HOMES OF ENGLAND.

However, altho' Britain has for centuries been recognized as the "land of the brave, the home of the free"; yet, the baseness of humanity, thro' the Fall of Adam, caused the reprobates who were fostered on this side of the Atlantic by British money, and motherly care, to do, as all villains do, spurn the hand that reared them. Pirates, smugglers, law-breakers, and villains of every description, joined in the unholy League. Britain had all the unholy hord of Europe to contend with at that time, and could not spare troops to fight vagabonds; yet the moral and political development of what is now Yankeedom is just in proportion to the moral tone of the perjurers who organized it. Every participant in that rebellion was, by the law of nations, deserving of death upon the scaffold; their iniquity was inexcusable; but, frauds have genius in the mode of entrapping the unwary, and the "smart young man" who writes you from Dayton, Ohio, U. S., has evidently been one of our Canadian green-horns.

Vagabondism rarely rises above its own level, and seeks companionship accordingly; hence we find the Washingtonian ruffians selecting an emblem in accordance with their own vulturous disposition—the Yankee Eagle. All ornithologists represent that bird as the most unscrupulous ravager of the feathered tribe: but, the brute is a fitting ornament to the heraldry of the nation which was begotten in treachery and fraud.

L. M. L. S.

Age of Improvement.

From a correspondent.

We are happy to inform the inhabitants of Markdale and the surrounding country that the steam saw-mill on the 11th line, Euphrasia, has changed hands, and is now owned by Mr. J. H. Ford, of St. Vincent, and Mr. James Stinson of this place. Messrs. Ford & Stinson are pushing and enterprising men. They have got their new mill now in full blast, and are cutting from eight to ten thousand feet per day. The mill is a model mill, all of the best modern improvements having been purchased from the Waterous Engine Works, Brantford, Ont. Messrs. Ford & Stinson will be pleased to fill all orders of lumber on the shortest notice, and at reasonable terms, and will pay cash for all sound logs brought to their mill. They intend to have a lath and shingle machine in operation by next spring. This is music to the surrounding country, as a mill was much needed here. We wish those enterprising men the best of success in their undertaking. Mr. Ford is a thorough mill-man, having owned a steam mill in St. Vincent.

On the line from No. 1 to 18 there has been over 600 acres of land taken from the state of nature and put under cultivation in the past twenty-four months, and forty-six new buildings have been built on the line during the last three years.

We are pleased to see that Mr. J. Struthers has moved into his new brick residence. This building adds much to the appearance of the line.

We learn that Mr. W. Taylor has refused $70 for a calf fourteen months old.

Mr. John McNeely is now shipping a large quantity of wood over the O. & Q. R. R.

Mr. J. B. McMillan is spending his summer months with Mr. McNeely on the farm. He intended going to Durham to start a law office.

AGRICOLIST.

A SAD NEGLECT.

Neglecting a constipated condition of the bowels is sure to bring ill-health and great suffering. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate the bowels in a natural manner, purifying the blood and promote a healthy action of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

IN THE GOODS AND CHATTELS

OF THE LATE

JOHN MANAREY,

(DECEASED.)

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Pursuant to Section 34, of Chapter 107, R. S. O. the creditors of John Manarey, late of the township of Euphrasia, County Grey, deceased, who died on or about the 30th May 1884, and all parties having claims upon his estate are, on or before the 1st DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1884 to send by post, prepaid, to Joseph Manarey, giving P. O., in the County of Grey, administerator of the personal estate and effects of deceased, their christian and surnames, adresses and description, the full particulars of their claims a statement of their accounts and nature of the securities (if any) held by them, and in default thereof the assets of said deceased will be distributed, having regard only to the claims then received, or those of them which the administerator then have notice.

JOS. MANAREY,
Administerator

Date September 4th 1884.

FARM FOR SALE.

A valuable property of 75 acres, comprising Lot 40, and west half of 42, 1st East T. & S. Road, Holland one mile from Williamsford Station, the place is in good shape, fit to run a reaper and mower, good orchard, well fenced, picket fence around orchard and front of lot with maple trees planted inside, good dwelling house, also good barn and out houses. Title good, no transfers from the crown. For further particulars apply on the premises to owner. ROBERT CLARK-Williamsford Station P. O. 209—211. Pd.

HEAP'S PATENT

Dry Earth or Ashes Closet Factory

UNION STREET, (B. Allans Old Stand,)
OWEN SOUND.

By this system you can have a closet inside your house (if desired) and yet have no smell from it.

By their use you ensure Health, Comfort and Cleanliness.

CALL AND SEE THEM WORKING.

Wm. Heap, SANITARY ENGINEER.

Agent for Markdale; W. Cornwall.

Notice of Dessolution of Partnership.

Notice is hereby given, that the partnership lately subsisting between W. H. Rutledge and John Trelford of Markdale, under the name of Rutledge & Trelford, butchers, was dissolved on the 13th day of September 1884, by Mutual consent. The business will be carried on by W. H. Rutledge who will collect all accounts, and pay all liabilities of the late firm.

Signed { W. H. RUTLEDGE,
JOHN TRELFORD,

AN ACROSTIC.

Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a man
It's true, Lardine's the best Oil
Nothing its equal, cast's aside toil
External its use, on every soil.

Use Lardine Machine Oil unexcelled for machinery, sold manufacturer, McColl Bros. Toronto.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS.

Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

VISITORS TO OWEN SOUND

DON'T FAIL TO CALL AT

THE "BON MARCHE"

THEY HAVE THE

LARGEST,
BEST and CHEAPEST.

ASSORTMENT OF

CROCKERY!

AND WILL SELL

Lower than the Toronto Houses.

Look at This.

A GOOD ENGLISH-MADE

SERGE SUIT

(This is no Shoddy,)

BOYS' - - -	FROM $4 00.
YOUTHS' - -	" 6 00.
MENS' - - -	" 8 00.

Everybody should look in at the

Bon Marche,

They sell everything at

ROCK BOTTOM PRICES,

B. ALLEN'S old stand

OWEN SOUND.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

STEER ASTRAY.

LOT 90, Con. 2, West of Toronto and Sydenham Road, Glenelg, red and white spotted steer, with horns turned up, 2 year old. Any person giving satisfactory information will be suitably rewarded. Address MARSHALL BAIRD, 205-207 Markdale P. O.

New Butcher Shop.

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED.

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNea's block.

RUTLEDGE & TRELFORD.

181

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND.

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash, Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Lumber constantly.

M. AKITT, Eugenia.

Toronto House.

We are now showing special drives in New, Stylish and Fashionable

Dress Goods, Laces, Trimmings. | Mantle Cloths, Buttons, Hosiery,

LADIES & GENTS UNDERCLOTHING ETC.

TWEEDS,

CANADIAN, SCOTCH and WEST of ENGLAND for Men's and Boys' Suits, Overcoats and Garments—Cheap, Fashionable and Stylish.

BOOTS AND SHOES

For all ages and conditions from the heavy Stoga to the finest Kid. These goods are unsurpassed—price, value and quality considered.

We Invite special attention to our

BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED TEA SETS,

Suitable for Wedding Gifts or Birthday Presents.

TEAS A Spesialty from 15c to 60c per lb. Every grade. Splendid value. TEAS

Give us a call. Examine & compare goods & prices

Markdale, Sept. 1, 1884. 190-tf

WM. BROWN.

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

AN ACROSTIC.
ive to a good old age
nd be wise as a sage ead all you can oubt's dispel, like a man
's true, Lardine's the best Oil othing its equal, cast's aside toil xternal its use, on every soil, line Machine Oil unexcelled for sold manufacturer, McColl Bros.

AGYARD'S
LLOW OIL
S RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
M POWDERS.
asant to take. Contain their own
Is a safe, sure, and effectual of worms in Children or Adults.

S TO OWEN SOUND
ON'T FAIL TO CALL AT
"BON MARCHE"
THEY HAVE THE EST,
BEST and
CHEAPEST.
ASSORTMENT OF OCKERY!
AND WILL SELL
r than the Toronto Houses.

ok at This.
OOD ENGLISH-MADE
RGE SUIT
(This is no Shoddy,)
- - - FROM $4 00.
IS' - - " 6 00.
- - - " 8 00.
ybody should look in
at the n Marche,
y sell everything at BOTTOM PRICES,
LEN'S old stand
OWEN SOUND.

CHOOL TRUSTEES.
signed is manufacturing an excellent assortment of ool Furniture.
SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS,
DESKS, etc., of the latest most approved pattern. Highly by School Trustees and Teachers, comfort and compactness, An assortment of Farm and kept always on hand. Send for
P. O.
ANDREW McGILL.

EER ASTRAY.
Con. 2, West of Toronto and Road, Gle lg, red and steer, with horns turned up, t any person giving satisfactory in-rewarded. Address
MARSHALL BAIRD,
Markdale P. O.

Butcher Shop.
meats the country can produce
ed and
ED TO ALL PARTS OF WN WHERE ORDERED.
of public patronage respectfully
the stand in McNea's block.
TLEDGE & TRELFORD.

EUGENIA
Saw and Lath Mills
ade extensive improvements in ill I feel confident I can give ction.
OUR ALWAYS ON HAND
oing Done Every Day.
Sawing and Bills Filled on the ice.
AND LATH ALWAYS
ON HAND.
Cornut, White Ash, Black Ash
Pine and Hemlock Lath wanted
M. AKITT, Eugenia.

l and Other Items.

In these columns intended to benefit Individual or Society will be charged ten cents for the first insertion and five cents each subsequent insertion.

o clearing sale at J. R.
's.

Pills the favorite purgative and ic medicine, they are mild and good brown sugar for 100

J. R. Trimble's.

Grey Agricultural prize list
ven at this office.

—Fire Insurance agency in the Markdale. Apply to W. L. Young.

Weekly Mail to the end of $1. subscription taken at the office.

makes me laugh when others sigh because I always buy rand's Tea.

R. Trimble of this village has four s to Toronto exhibition this week.

highest price paid for skins at Bro's. store and tin depot, et.

Weekly Globe for $1, to the 1885 leave your name and tion at this office.

ases long clear Bacon sweet
, just to hand at J. R.
's.

Grand Trunk car shops at were destroyed by fire rday. Loss about $400,000.

want to get value for your ggs or butter go to J. R.
's.

TO DO.—If you are not a er to the Markdale STANDARD, one dollar and get it 15
from date.

. Trimble has the largest the choicest patterns and ine in Dress Goods of any the County.

Montreal Star will be sent to scribers from the 1st October the 1st January 1885 for $1.
your time to secure the best paper published; 15 months for subscribe at this office.

from indigestion or sick head instantly relieved by one dose vinator Bitters, made from d herbs. Sold by Smith, the directors of Glenelg Agricul-ociety held a meeting last week, final arrangements were made fall show. A good exhibit is ed Thursday and Friday the d 3rd of Oct.

assortment of tinware, granite lamps, brushes, brackets &c., om prices at Walker Bro's.
ale.

you a subscriber to the STAND-
d would like to send the paper friend, if so we will forward balance of the year to any free of postage for 25 cents.

stock of Rejuvinator Bitters the barber's this week. The ventative from Cholera.

ED.—The Glenelg Agricultural will give a premium of $1 & 50 and second prize factory made 40 lbs. this being accidentaly in the prize list, those inter-will take notice.

ical power over pain that Hagyard's possesses, outrivals the marvels times. It acts in a natural manner inflammation; cures Rheumatism,
Deafness, Sore Throat, and painful

G. Ptolemy, of 12th con. Holne 9, has brought in a fine h bull from Hamilton. The arrived on Tuesday evening's

DIES and others in want of fall ter goods should not fail to J. R. Trimble's, he has the you are looking for, and at that will suit you.

largest and best selected stock goods, mantle cloths, ulstering ool shawls to be seen in Mark-at J. R. Trimble's.

ER.—Mr. Wm. Shepherdson of nia will exibit this fall at the local fairs two large load of in Cotswool, Leicester and shire Downs, all of which he ale for sale.

W. Konold, music teacher,
a pleasant call on Tuesday last.
ded this village with the view ning classes for the coming fall inter. He is an expert in piano gan as well as violin and brass aching. We hope our people
Mr. Konold a liberal patron-
He is now teaching Durham band which was organized

Eggs 18 cents per doz. at Brander's, Priceville.

Farms for sale., see advertising columns.

18 lbs. good bright sugar for $1, at Brander's, Priceville.

Minutes of Holland council left over for next week.

Butter 18 cents per lb. at Brander's, Priceville.

Mr. W. G. Moffat of Osprey sold his team of horses recently for $310.

Did you see the new Electric Lamps at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

Ladies.—Be sure and read Hill Bro's. Millinery announcement in this paper.

J. R. Trimble has received a large consignment of sugars cheaper than ever.

Miss Ford continues to improve, and expects to commence teaching again next week.

Another lot of that famous 50c. Tea or 10 lbs. for $4, at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

Ford's new process grist mill is giving splendid satisfaction and drawing customers 15 and 20 miles

Large lot of men's and boys Hats and Caps at less than half price at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

J. R. Trimble has a choice lot of fresh Teas very cheap, by the chest, or in 5 or 10 lbs. lots.

Destroy the worms or they may destroy the children. Use Freeman's Worm Powders, they expel all kinds of worms.

R. J. Sproule's new stock of fall and winter goods is now complete and selling like hot cakes.

Cattle Fair.—Markdale cattle fair has continued to enlarge until it is now considered the best in the district. A number of good buyers will be present at the next fair, Saturday Oct, 4th.

The electric lamp is far ahead of all other lamps or even gasoline, R. J. Sproule, agent for Flesherton.

A good Investment.—The Standard a year for $1. New subscribers now will get three months free. You cannot invest a dollar that will bring you a more satisfactory return: try it.

For sideboards, dressing cases, bedsteads, lounges and cradles, go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

We were shown a piece of oak graining in the hall of the Revere House last Tuesday, done by R. O. Whitby, which is very artistically executed. Friend Whitby is fast gaining a reputation as a painter.

Splendid heavy factory cottons at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton, only 5 cents per yd. and all other goods accordingly.

Mr. R. McGirr and Mr. David Madill of Osprey, offered special prizes for colts from their respective horses, to be awarded at the Osprey fall show, but a mistake was made in the prize list in which they were both omited.

R. J. Sproule, Flesherton, wants one thousand pairs heavy large home made Socks and Mitts to fill a north west order, for which he will pay the highest market price.

The post office authorities have received instructions from the Department not to take small coins having holes punched in them or defaced in any way.

Try the great Importing House of W. J. McFarland's for Silks, Velvets, Mantles, Dress Goods, Flannels and Blankets.

Call at this office and get sample copy of the Toronto Weekly News. We will give it together with the Standard to the end of 1885 for $1.50.

We are pleased to see the smiling and genial face of Miss Boomer, McFarland's popular Milliner, back in her old quarters.

One car load stoves just arrived which will be sold at the lowest living prices, an inspection invited, Walker Bro's. Markdale.

The Secretary of South Grey Agricultural Society will accept thanks for a complimentary to the fall show, to be held in Durham on the 30th Sept. and 1st October, also for copies of prize list.

Bazaar and Concert.—The Ladies of the Presbyterian Church, Markdale, will hold a bazaar in the agricultural grounds on Friday 3rd Oct. the second day of Glenelg fall show. They will also give a dinner on the grounds, and a concert in the evening of which further particulars will be given by posters.

Large stock of hair oil to hand splendid preparation keeps the head free from dandruff makes the hair soft and glossy. Sold by Smith the barber.

The Mount Forest Advocate had a column of items last week headed, "Clippings from our exchanges." He did not however give credit for a single clipping to any exchange. Of course we do not grumble, there were none of them ours.

The crowds of buyers at Richardson's new store Flesherton find that he is making prices interesting. The stock compares favorably with any city store and prices will be found equally low.

There are merchants not 5 miles from Markdale who are continually advertising no shoddy or auction goods kept. As a general rule those are the ones who deal in that class of goods. But J. R. Trimble keeps first-class goods at prices far below shoddy or auction goods.

The Weekly Globe.—We are now prepared to take subscriptions for the Weekly Globe for balance of this year and all of 1885 for $1. The cash must accompany the order. Hand them in to this office at once and get three months free.

We are pleased to learn that Miss Brown is recovering from her late searious illness. She was removed to her home in Woodstock on Tuesday. Stood the journey well and is still improving.

The Misses Jennie and Millie Lyons and Mary E. Benson left Markdale last week for Tara where they will carry on a Millinery and dressmaking business. Their practical and business capabilities can scarcely fail to ensure their success.

Markdale forever, the Queen of the West,
In commerce and trade she excells.
Her goods are the neatest, the cheapest and best,
And handsomely dressed are her belles:
For McFarland's store is a first-class place
For leaders in fashion and fame;
His DryGoods are noted for beauty and grace
And deservedly great is his name.

See here.—If you have lost any cattle, sheep or other stock, or if any such have strayed into your premises, advertise them at once in the Standard. This paper circulates largely through Artemesia, Glenelg, Holland, Euphrasia and Osprey townships.

If you should be so unfortunate as to Burn Scald or Wound yourself in any way the proper thing to keep clean and heal it is McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Insist on having, and be sure you get, McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Price 25 cents. Hill Bro's. has the genuine. J. & J. 2

Balance of '84 free.—We will send the Standard to new subscribers from the 1st October to the end of 1885 for $1, to any address, or we will put in the Toronto Weekly News with the Standard for the same period for $1.50 Now is the time to secure cheap reading matter. Send in the dimes with your name and address at once to this office.

A big discount off the balance of wheel rigs at Shanahan's Carriage Works; we have not many left and are bound to clear them all out to make room for our winter work which is now in the way. Call at once and get a bargain in a waggon, carriage or buggy, all guaranteed for four years.

We have received a copy of Proton Agricultural Society's prize list for 1884. The prizes offered are more numerous and larger than the average township list The list is got out in pamphlet form, and reflects great credit on the Herald office, where it was printed, as it is indeed a neat job. The Society had one thousand copies published this year.

Go to J. R. Trimble's for Ready-made Clothing and ordered Suits, Hats, Caps, Boots and Shoes, the largest stock to select from in the County: no shoddy, but thousands of dollars worth of goods purchased at the auction trade sales at from 30 to 50 per cent less than merchants claiming to be direct Importers can buy them for, and don't you forget it. Come and see for yourself before purchasing a dollar's worth elsewhere.

Markdale Jewellry.—Our esteemed townsman, Mr. W. A. Brown, is now about twelve months doing business in our midst, and has during that period gained the confidence of the public generally. He has handled a high grade of goods, made no mis-representations (a system very rare in the jewellry business) thereby creating a confidence in his customers that they get full value for their money. As a result of this, he has very materially enlarged his stock in every line, and may now be considered the Leading Watchmaker in Grey. He is a thorough mechanic, and personally attends to repairing. Read his advertisement in this paper. Give him a call and be convinced. Hill's block, Markdale.

A GRAND DISPLAY OF

MILLINERY.

OUR OPENING OF

Fall and Winter Millinery

——will take place on the—— 2nd and 3rd of October.

Under the supervision of the peoples' popular Milliner,

MISS M. CAMPBELL.

Miss Campbell has been in the market, selecting and purchasing Goods for the past month. She has secured one of the

FINEST AND BEST SELECTED STOCKS

——Ever brought into——

MARKDALE.

For Variety and Style it cannot be Surpassed.

It consists of the latest novelties in

HATS, BONNETS, FEATHERS, FLOWERS,

And all kinds of TRIMMINGS. Also Mantles and Mantle Trimmings.

We call speeial attention to our opening days.

Come one—Come all & you will be delighted

Hill Bros.

N. B —All other lines are now complete.

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 68	to	$70 00
Spring Wheat	0 70	to	72 00
Barley	48	to	60
Peas	55	to	00
Oat	25	to	00
Butter	17	to	00
Eggs	15	to	00
Apples	30	to	35
Potatoes	30	to	00
Hay	7 00	to	0 00
Pork	7 00	to	7 50
Flour	4 25	to	4 50

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, wethty five cents.

BIRTHS.

Brown—In New Westminster, B. C. on the 9th Sept., the wife of Mr. J. L. Browne, artist, of a son.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best Salve in the world for cuts, bruises sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by A. Turner & Co.

NOTICE.

TO ALL TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

A Chattle Mortgage, made by Joseph Hewitt and Joseph Payne of the township of Glenelg, in the County of Grey, in favor of Alexander McPhee, of the same place, dated 22nd March, A.D. 1884, on certain stock and chattles mentioned in said mortgage, and for which the Mortgagers received no value. The public are hereby cautioned against purchasing said mortgage as no value has been received for the same.

JOSEPH HEWITT,
JOSEPH PAYNE.

Dated Glenelg, 30th Sept., 1884.

ESTRAY.

FROM the premises of John Atkinson, Lot 8, Con. 3, Holland, about the 1st May, 8 head of yearlings—6 heifers and 2 steers, all spotted and grey.—Each one has a nick cut in the left ear, and a hole through same ear, made with hot iron.

Any person giving such information as will lead to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.

JOHN ATKINSON.
Maxie P. O.

Holland, Sept. 18, 1884. 111-113

ROBT. ASKIN,
MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt,
COFFINS,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

MARKDALE
HARNESS EMPORIUM
ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

Thos. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

Farm for Sale or Rent.

LOT 2, Con. 8, Holland. 100 acres, 90 of which is in a good state of cultivation, and fit to run reaper and mower on; well watered with running stream.

Apply for terms and particulars to
WM. NORTON,
111-116. Walter's Falls.

AGRICULTURAL.

Foot Rot in Sheep.

Foot rot is of two kinds, common foot rot, and contagious foot rot, the latter being much more difficult to cure and requiring longer treatment. Mr. Steward in his Manual gives the following mixture as a dressing to be used after paring and washing with carbolic soap and water:

Oxide of Copper	4 ozs.
Arsenic	½ oz.
Acetic Acid	3 ozs.
Honey	8 ozs.

To be applied by dipping tow or lint in the mixture and binding it around the tender parts, especially between the digits.

Another remedy is an ointment made of finely powdered blue vitrol one pound; verdigris, one half pound; linseed oil, one pint, and pine tar, one quart. This will dry on the foot and will not be as easily washed by the wet grass. In a recent number of the American Agriculturist, Dr. Thurber gives a method of treating sheep, which is quite popular in France, both for preventing the spread of foot rot and curing mild cases. Shallow tanks or trays are placed at the doors of the sheep barn, and the animals as they go out and in, bathe their feet in a liquid made by slacking quick lime in water. The tanks are ten feet long, and have slats nailed on the bottoms to prevent the sheep from slipping and falling all over into the caustic solution. The depth should be only enough to well cover the hoofs. Foot rot is much more common on damp soils where the shell of the hoof grows faster than it wears off. Paring must always be attended to in such localities.

Feed Growing Chicks Well.

In midsummer young chickens are growing more rapidly than at any other period in the year. They love the warm weather, if they are of the larger varieties, especially; and if they have roaming room they cannot well be overfed, because they find such a variety of insect and green food in the course of their daily journeys around the farm or country plat.

Their condition is quite different from that of adult or maturely-grown fowls. These may be overfed easily, and will put on fat eternally, to their discomfiture and detriment. But the young stock, in good thrift, convert what they eat into flesh, bone and muscle, and continue to thrive during the heated season upon all they will ordinarily pack away in their craws, particularly if allowed a variety of good provender.

Don't stint them, therefore, in feeding, but give them all they will eat up clean. Thus they will grow in stature and keep generally in good health. It is a mistake to underfeed the growing chickens. They require more solid food from the time they are three to six or seven months of age, in proportion, than at any time before or afterward in their lives. This fact is worth observing and remembering by all who aim to have the "best birds" in the succeeding fall and winter, annually.—Poultry Yard.

Sow Now for Spring Flowers.

While our gardens present a much greater variety than did those of a half century ago, there are some plants in which the old-time gardeners excelled. We do not see such beds of Pansies, or of Rocket Larkspurs, as were then the pride of the gardeners. Success with Pansies is mainly due to sowing the seed in autumn. If the seed is sown in spring, by the time the plants begin to bloom hot weather comes, and the flowers become fewer and smaller. In order to have the flowers in spring, sow the seeds early this month. Make a spot of rich soil fine, and level the surface by pressing it with a board. Sow the seeds, sift a little soil over them, and press down firmly with the board. When the plants are an inch high, transplant them to the place they are to flower The plants are quite hardy, and all the winter protection they need is a little brush to keep the snow from pressing too heavily upon them. The Rocket Larkspurs are, unlike the tall ones, annuals. A bed of them is as showy as one of Hyacinths. Sow in a well enriched bed this autumn, but leave them to flower where they were sown. The bed may be covered with brush during the winter, and if the plants are too much crowded in any part of the bed next spring, thin them by cutting out the surplus. They do not transplant satisfactorily.

Autumn Care of Meadow Land.

Meadows should not be closely grazed at any time, and especially not in the fall. They need to have fertilizing materials added to instead of taken from the soil. Young animals are much more injurious than mature ones, while full-grown stock that are being fattened, and are fed rich grain rations, may by their droppings add materially to the fertility of the soil. Young-growing stock withhold a large share of the potash, phosphoric acid, and nitrogen of the food to build up their bodies, leaving the manure comparatively poor. On the other hand mature fattening animals need very little of these three chief elements of soil fertility. Aside from the loss of plant-food, the close feeding of stock on meadow land does mechanical damage. If the soil is soft, the feet of the animals injure it, and the close grazing pulls much of the grass up by the roots. Meadows, like winter grains, are injured by freezing and thawing, and the plants need to be in a vigorous condition in late fall, with a good growth of of after-math for protection from the frosts, winds, etc. Well-rotted manure applied to the meadows as a top-dressing, will strengthen the plants and insure a fine crop the next season. This application is best when made soon after the hay is removed. Later in the season much of the soluble material is washed out of the soil by the fall rains. Quick acting manures should be used in the growing season, otherwise loss is sustained. Take good care of the meadows, for they suffer greatly if abused. They are easily and often injured by animals in late autumn.—American Agriculturist.

Buckwheat as a Farm Crop.

The albuminoids are less in buckwheat than in wheat; in fact, not much more than half as abundant, while there is a greater amount of starch and fat. Buckwheat is, therefore, shown by analysis to be more fattening and less strengthening than wheat. It makes an excellent feed for pigs and poultry. Many persons believe that buckwheat is not healthful, and causes skin eruptions, Several other members of the buckwheat family produce powerful vegetable principles, and this plant may possess such, though it is probably not harmful.

New York and Pennsylvania produce sixty-eight per cent of the twelve million bushels of buckwheat now grown in the United States. Only twenty per cent is grown outside of New England and the Middle States. The great fertile prairies and the vast South with its warm climate, are not favorable for the growth of this crop. Buckwheat does well in the hilly regions, where the soil is light and thin. It, in short, flourishes at higher altitudes, with a lower temperature, and under a greater rainfall than other grains.

One great merit of buckwheat is its availability as a second crop, thus replacing another that has been destroyed by frost, drouth, insects, or otherwise. It is also valuable as a weed exterminator. The infested land may be tilled until mid-summer and sowed with buckwheat, which by growing rapidly smothers the weeds. Another use is that of a green manure. It grows well on moderately poor land, and makes a large growth of straw, which rots quickly when plowed under, thus adding much vegetable matter to the soil.

Raising Early Lambs for the Butcher.

So far as my experience goes, there is no more trouble in raising an early lamb than a late one. In fact, our earliest lambs are almost invariably our best lambs. I would rather have lambs come in January and February than in April and May, and if I could have them earlier, I should prefer it.

Merino ewes will take the ram earlier in autumn than the English breeds of mutton sheep. For this reason, if for no other, in raising early lambs for the butcher, I should select common Merino ewes, or at any rate ewes having more or less Merino blood in them. There are other reasons why I should select such ewes, There are more of them in the country, and they can be obtained cheap. They are healthy, hardy, thoroughly acclimated, and will stand rougher treatment than the English mutton sheep. They are smaller, eat less. and occupy less room in winter quarters. They will bear crowding better than the large English sheep—or rather, they suffer less, for it is a mistake to keep any sheep in too close quarters. Common Merino ewes, like Jersey cows, when well-fed, give rich milk, and if you want early, fat lambs for the butcher, the mothers, no matter what breed you may select, must have plenty of nutritious food.

I do not say that common Merino ewe, are, in themselves, the best for raising early lambs. They are not. I have had grade ewes, the offspring of a mixed Merino ewes and a Cotswold ram, that would produce larger lambs, give more milk, and the lambs would fatten more rapidly, and mature earlier. But it is not always easy to fine such ewes for sale. Those that you find in market are apt to be culls. The butcher, if he has a chance, gets the best lambs. A good plan is to go to some large market and buy a car load of sheep, or three or four times as many as you want. Bring them home, and pick out the best ewes, and then sell the other ewes and wethers to the butchers.—American Agriculturist.

When young men desire to enter college, they are obliged to pass an examination in grammar, algebra, geography, etc. Those elementary studies are not taught in colleges. The private or public school fits the student for college. In like manner, young men should be constrained to pass an examination in plowing, hoeing, sowing seeds, etc., before entering agricultual colleges, The farm should be to them the public or private school. Why should farmers' sons spend their time in learning in agricultural colleges what they can as well learn at home?

A Complicated Case.

A curious case is before the Tribunal in Paris. A gentleman was getting down from an omnibus in a crowded thoroughfare, when he missed his footing, nearly fell backward, and, to recover his balance, caught hold of another passenger. The latter, taken by surprise, also found himself in danger of falling, and, in his turn, caught hold of a woman with an infant in her arms, the upshot being that all four rolled together into the road. A heavy goods van was coming along behind which, had it not been for the prompt action of the omnibus conductor, who seized the horse's head, would have run over some of the prostrate forms. As it was, the gentleman who was the original cause of the accident escaped with a few trifling bruises; the other male passenger falling on him was not hurt at all, and the infant was equally fortunate; but its mother had her arm broken, and sustained other severe injuries. Which of the two gentleman should pay damages is the question—the one who caught hold of her or the one who caused him to do so by catching hold of him.

Hurt his Good Name.

"Yer mout offer me er $100 ter vote fur yer in de conwention an' it wouldn't hab no 'fluence wid me," said an old negro in reply to a candidate who had asked for his support.

"Oh, I wouldn't offer you money," rejoined the candidate. "I believe in conducting a campaign fairly and squarely. Corruption in office-seeking has cast a dark shadow over our institutions. I wouldn't think of offering you $100. I haven't that amount of money, anyway."

"Yer ain't? Well den dar ain't no use talkin' ter me. How much is yer got, nohow?"

"I've got $5."

"Uh, hum. no useh talkin' ter me. I ain't gwine ter sell myself ter no white man."

"Of course not."

heah, whut yer gwine ter do wid dat $5?"

"I'll make good use of it."

"Heah, lemme hab it. Dem folks thinks dat I'se dun sold out. I 'clare to goodness, white man, it hurts er pusson's good name to be seen er talkin' ter yer."—Arkansaw Traveller.

"Oh, don't propose to me here!" exclaimed a young lady, whose lover was about to pour out his avowal as they were riding by a corn field. "The very corn has ears."

THE SOLEMNITY OF AUTUMN.

By Rev. James Hastie, Cornwall.

The beauty of autumn, the bounty of autumn, the beneficence of autumn, these topics have often been descanted upon, and worthily so; but there is a hundred theme too often overlooked, viz.: The Solemnity of Autumn.

Pre-eminently, autumn is a solom season. Autumn's beauty is the beauty of death. Autumn's plenty can be had only at the price of dissolution. The gorgeous hues of the maple and beach are but the pictorial form of the lament "Ichabod," "the glory (of summer) is departed." From field, and forest, and fruit trees come the solemn reminders: "We all do fade as a leaf." "In the midst of life we are in death."

The change that comes over the face of nature between June and October is not greater than the change that comes over man between youth and old age. In both cases, trials play an important part in the transformation. Sun and wind, and biting frosts have much to do in beautifying the variegated leaf and fruit. And is not character ripened and beautified by providential trials? Happy those whose autumn of life is more conspicuous for the beauty of ripeness than for the deformity of decay; whose character glows with love and meekness and goodness, with faith and hope and charity; who are more humble, more pure, more Christlike as the winter of the graves draws near. But, happily, the solemnity of autumn is not a gloomy solemnity, but a gladsome. It contains the promise and potency of coming seasons. The fruit it matures as it passes away is embryonic fruit, and contains in germ springs and summers and autums yet to be. And has not the Christian the best of ground to be gladsome and hopeful in the autumn of life? "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in their graves shall hear His voice and come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." Yes, precisely so. "As the sowing so the harvest." "Glory, honor, immortality, eternal life"—this fruitage hereafter can only spring from Christ the crucified, believed in here and lived out in daily life. "As is the earthy such are they also that are earthy; and as is the heavenly such are they also that are heavenly. And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." "He that has ears to hear let him hear" to profit this present preacher on its timely topic: "The Solemnity of Autumn."—Presbyterian.

How the Sultan goes to Prayers.

At one end of the main palace is a handsome cream colored mosque with two minarets. Around this, though kept at a respectable distance, were crowds of people. The street leading to the mosque was also lined with an expectant multitude. Men were sweeping the streets clean, and then sprinkling fresh gravel over it, to make the passage of the carriage easier. Presently everything was complete, and soon after the glitter of arms appeared in the distance. The escort of soldiery was an immense one, representing the very flower of the Turkish army. They are well-developed men, elegantly uniformed, and under thorough discipline, as was evidenced by the admirable style of the few evolutions performed incidentally.

When the soldiers had been distributed properly in phalanxes about the door I could get a view of the royal train. There were two carriages filled with favored members of the harem who did not alight. There was one carriage containing the five princes of the royal household, scared looking little fellows, from 10 to perhaps 16 years of age. There was the Sultan's Cabinet and immediate staff on foot, directly in front of the Imperial barouche. There were two other men in the carriage with his Majesty, one of whom—a fine looking man—was Osman Pasha, I was told. The carriage halted, his Majesty alighted, and in company with a few of his intimates, ascended to the mosque, the head priest sweeping off the steps before him. As he did so the muezdin in the minaret balcony above sounded his sonorous call to prayer.

Of course I could not get a good view of the Sick Man owing to the tantalizing movements of the boat. He is apparently of medium height, and, others who were present say, has an expressionless face, indicative of dissipation. Perhaps his sickness is not wholly political. He was dressed after the most approved French style, in a black suit, with frock coat, black tie, and the national fez as a headdress. The lappel of his coat was distinguished by two or three decorations, including, doubtless, the Star and Garter. I am told that his devotions consumed an hour.

A Nevada Fish Story.

It is asserted on the authority of persons who have recently visited Marlette Lake that the prodigious increase of trout in its waters has over stocked the lake. At times they can be seen massing themselves in the small streams which are tributary to the lake, and on these occasions they have been crowded out on the grass growing on the borders of the stream. Thousands could be thrown out with a pitchfork. A piece of bark thrown into the lake will cause a dozen or more of trout to leap for it. The coyotes have caught the knack of fishing and sit by the shore watching for leaves to fall into the water. The instant the leaf touches the water the fish rise, and like a flash the coyote bounds into the thick of the fish, and is certain to bring out one or two in his mouth. The coyotes are shot whenever any of the lumbermen see them, but by stealing up in the underbrush they manage to escape observation.

Origin of a Petticoat.

It was about the same date (1855 56) that our gracious queen set the fashion of wearing a scarlet under petticoat, an idea obtained from the milkmaids at Balmoral. It is said that the late Prince Consort, in admiring the effect of the red petticoat in the landscape, suggested that her majesty should adopt one also. This sealed the fate of white petticoats in England. They had been worn, previously to that, both in summer and winter, and, of course, in order to make sufficient warmth, several had to be put on, thus adding to the weight to be carried at the waist. Since the introduction of the scarlet skirt the fashion of the colored petticoat has been maintained, and the useful skirt lined with leather has also been introduced for walking in the country in muddy weather.

THE SALVATINN ARMY IN INDIA.

A War Between the Army and the Missionaries.

Here in Ahmedabad we from time to time hear of episodes in a comedy which is being played by the Salvation army and the missionaries. When Maj. Tucker with his "army" came up to Ahmedabad, the missionaries received them with open arms as brothers and fellow workers in the good cause. and lent Maj. Tucker their schoolroom to lecture and hold meetings in; and I believe once or twice, when Maj. Tucker preached in the open air, Mr. Beatty translated into Gujarati for him. Things went on thus until the hot weather came, when the missionaries, as is their annual custom, betook themselves to the hills—this year to Pinto's hotel, Matheran. Maj. Tucker, however, stayed in Ahmedabad, spending many of his days under the shade of a tree by the roadside, talking to such as would hear. However, in some mischievous moment, he seems to have remembered that the missionaries had a little community of converts occupying the village of Shahawadi, about three miles south of Ahmedabad, which community was their particular pride and care. Maj. Tucker seems to have thought that these Christians must be in special need of salvation, for he proceeded to invade the village with tambourines, tamtams, banners, etc., and, after a little, succeeded in converting a large portion of the village, including the patel, to the "mukhtifani."

The news reached Mr. Beaty at Matheran that someone was poaching on his preserves, and he hastened to rescue his flock. In a state of holy anger and pious grief he reached Shadhawadi, and encountered Maj Tucker in full possession—banners, tambourines, tam-tams, and all. Mr. Beatty proceeded to expostulate, whereupon Maj. Tucker went down on his knees and prayed audibly for the salvation of Beatty's soul. Soon after the dispute in the village took a practical turn, and the missionary converts would not permit the Salvationists to draw water. Hence a petition to the collector, who had to go down and make enquiries. He found that there were only two wells in the village. One was public property, and was usually used for watering cattle, but was then dry. The other well, on which the village depended for drinking water. was private property, belonging to a native Christian who was not a Salvationist, and who now, in a truly Christian spirit, refused to let the Salvationists draw water from his well. The recriminations on both sides were rather amusing. One old Salvationist lady exclaimed with much warmth: "Oh, I have drawn water from that well all my life. Why should you break my pots if I go there now? You're not Christians!" To this an old man retorted: "Why do you disturb us and frighten our buffaloes by marching through the village with your tam-tams and your banners and your horrid noise?" Maj. Tucker is now poaching on the missionary preserves at Anand and Borsad. The quarrel seems a very pretty one as it stands. We can only hope that the police will not have to interfere.—The Times of India.

AMERICAN FABLES.

THE BOY AND THE BEES.

A Boy who had a great curiosity to know how a Bee-Hive was constructed entered an Apiary and proceeded to upset a Hive, but while feeling in his Hind Pocket for a Two-Foot Rule the Angry Swarm alighted upon him and ran the thermometer up to such a Notch that he cried out in a voice which could be heard a mile away. When the last Bee had got in his Work and there was nothing but boot-heel left to Bite at, an old Snoozer with a Yellow Back and a Squint-Eye flew up on the Gate-Post to Pick the Bones out of his Teeth and said:

MORAL:

"Better wait until the Mule is Dead before picking up a Hind Foot to see how it is glued on. When Curiosity interferes with the Housework next door it is time to throw Flat-Irons."

THE HARE'S REBUKE.

A Hare who was out in the Early Morning to secure her Breakfast began stepping on all the Insects she Encountered, and even went out of her way to roll a Field Mouse on his back and make him feel his inferiority. He was having a Boss time when a Hawk swooped down and bore him away before he could repeat five words of the Prohibition Platform.

"Well, well!" chuckled an old Beetle who had been Hidden under a tuft of grass, "the One-Hare Power may be a big thing while it lasts, but the drop is too sudden for such blood as mine."

MORAL:

Jay Gould is a big boss, but ——.

TWO OF 'EM.

A Sly old Wolf who wanted some Pretext for Attacking the Hares Finally Announced that he had Become a Convert to a New Religion, which Privileged him to Dine on young Rabbit. Armed with this excuse, he was Promenading Around in Search of Meat when a Lion met him and Demanded an Explanation. When the Wolf had Explained his new Religion and his Intentions the Lion replied;

"How odd! While your Religion Privileges you to Eat the Hares the one I have just Tackled Commands me to Paralyze every Wolf I meet! Take that for a Beginning!"

MORAL:

The man who gets a Spavined Horse while Trading Off a Blind One is Rightly Served.

A Potato Crop Destroyed. Lightning.

A flash of lightning struck an entire potato field of several acres belonging to N. J. Wood, of North Sterling, Conn. The vines turned yellow and sprawled over the ground. When Mr. Wood went to dig them a few days ago he found not a potato in the whole piece. It is the first instance on record there in which a growing crop was destroyed by the electric fluid.

AGATES.

Where They Are Found and How Are Worked—The Ingenuity of Agate Workers

Scotland is famed for its agates, known as "Scotch pebbles," which, small compared with those found elsewhere, are yet unequalled in the variety and brilliancy of their colors. Scottish pebbles are found chiefly at Kinoul hill, near Perth, on the shore near Montrose, at Dangins, at Burn Aune, near Galston, Ayrshire, and whether they occur on the shore or in gravels, they have been all previously rolled out of trap rocks. The pebbles, called by Edinburgh lapidaries, are used in the manufacture of Scottish jewellery. The chief seat of the agate industry of the world, however, is at Oberstein, in Rhenish Bavaria, where it has been carried on for centuries. It is there naturally enough, owing to the presence in the volcanic rocks of the neighborhood of an abundance of fine agates; and has continued and extended long after the rocks have ceased to yield, or at least to be mined for, the raw material of the industry. The agate quarries of Oberstein were abandoned owing to the discovery, fully a century ago, of a rich supply of those stones in the river gravels of Uruguay. Some German workers in agate, who had emigrated to that region, noticed the courtyard of a farm-house paved with pebbles that resembled them of the agates of their native district. Specimens were accordingly sent home and cut, and the surmise proved correct. Since that time there has been a regular export of agate nodules from Uruguay to Oberstein, where they have long formed the staple material used in the agate trade. These "Brazilian agates," as they are called when brought to Germany, are arranged in lots and sold by auction, stones of certain quality bringing it is said, not more usually than 15 shillings per hundredweight. "Uruguayan agates" are thus, for the most part, South American stones cut and polished at Oberstein. The extent of the industry has greatly increased with this accession of raw material, and a few years ago there were no fewer than 163 agate mills, working by grindstones, and giving employment together to about three thousand persons. Cheapness of labor and a plentiful supply of water-power has much to do with the continuance of this industry at Oberstein. The labor is both ill paid and severe The worker, says Professor Rudler, who years ago visited the mines and mills, upon a low wooden grinding stool, specially constructed to fit the chest and abdomen, leaving the limbs free; the hands are engaged in holding and grinding the agate while the feet are firmly pressed against short stakes or blocks of wood screwed to the floor, the reaction enabling the grinder to press the agate with much force against the moving millstone. The friction thus produced causes the agate to glow with beautiful phosphorescent light, and radiates under this treatment look, it is said, as if they were red-hot. The mill stones are red sandstone, measure five feet diameter, and generally make three revolutions per second. The finer agates are also ground by means of steel wheels and diamond dust, but the coarser stones are simply chipped into shape and ground, After they are polished on rotating cylinders of wood or lead covered with moistened tripoli.

The ingenuity of the agate worker is not confined merely to cutting, carving and polishing his material into all manner of shapes. He has also succeeded in varying its color by artificial means. The layers composing an agate differ considerably in porosity, those that are transparent, for example, being less porous than opaque layers, which, indeed, seem to be altogether impervious to ordinary temperature and pressure; and agate workers both at Oberstein and in India have availed themselves of this peculiarity in applying their staining processes. A suitable agate, after being thoroughly dried, is immersed in a mixture of honey and water or in olive oil, and is kept thus for at least three days, exposed to a moderate heat, then is then washed, dried, and put into a vessel containing enough sulphuric acid to cover it. The vessel is thereafter exposed to a gentle heat for a varying number of hours, when the porous layers are found to have become much darker in color. The reason of this is that these layers, having become saturated with the syrup or oil, are acted upon by the sulphuric acid, which decomposes the sugary or oily constituent and forms in its place a deposit of carbon. It is in this way that banded agate is converted into the onyx with its black and white layers, used in the production of cameos and intaglios. Exposure to strong sunlight was long ago found to give a reddish tint to gray-colored agates, and this suggested the burning of the stones so as to convert them into carnelian. At Oberstein, likely stones for this purpose are first dried thoroughly, then saturated with sulphuric acid, and afterwards exposed in an earthenware crucible to a red heat. They are allowed to cool slowly, and are then found to be of a bright red color. Not content with imitating the rarer natural varieties of agate, such an onyx and carnelian, German manufacturers have taken to staining agates blue and all sorts of colors unknown in the natural stones. Aniline dyes, unsuitable as they are fugitive, have also been laid aside used for agate staining. It is possible that the stones themselves may yet be artificially produced. Indeed, according to Kunz ("Natural History of Gems"), a Florentine anatomist long ago accomplished this feat, although unfortunately, the secret died with him. He is said to have petrified human viscera into real agates. "In the hospital of San Spirito may be inspected still by the incredulous," says King, "a table top mosaicked up of hearts, lungs, livers, etc., thus agatized into one large slab—meet board for a banquet of vampires!" Organic remains in agates are not unknown, for Bowerbank states that in the moss agates of Oberstein he has found microscopic organisms, and Dr. Heddle says that he has found undoubted organic remains of considerable size in agates from Ayrshire and other localities.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

"What is the price of this axle grease?" asked the new clerk of a grocery dealer. "there is no mark on it." "It depends on your customer. If he asks for axle grease charge him 15 cents a pound; but if he wants butter, make it 38 cents."

While the very young daughter of a country clergymen was playing in the garden one day, a stranger came along and inquired for her father was at home. "No," she replied, "but my mother is in the house, and she will pray with you, you poor miserable sinner."

AGATES.

Where They Are Found, and How They Are Worked—The ... of the Agate Worker.

Scotland is famed for its agates, ... known as "Scotch pebbles," which, alth... small compared with those found elsew... are yet unequalled in the variety and be... of their colors. Scottish pebbles are fo... chiefly at Kinoul hill, near Perth, on ... shore near Montrose, at Dunglass, an... Burn Aune, near Galston, Ayrshire, ... whether they occur on the shore or in ... gravels, they have been all previously w... ed out of trap rocks. The pebbles, cut ... Edinburgh lapidaries, are used in the ma... facture of Scottish jewellery. The chief ... of the agate industry of the world, how... is at Oberstein, in Rhenish Bavaria, w... it has been carried on for centuries. It ... there naturally enough, owing to the ... ence in the volcanic rocks of the neigh... hood of an abundance of fine agates; but ... has continued and extended long after the ... rocks have ceased to yield, or at least to ... mined for, the raw material of the indus... The agate quarries of Oberstein were ab... doned owing to the discovery, fully ha... century ago, of a rich supply of those sto... in the river gravels of Uruguay. Some G... man workers in agate, who had emigr... to that region, noticed the courtyard of ... farm-house paved with pebbles that rem... ed them of the agates of their native O... stein. Specimens were accordingly ... home and cut, and the surmise proved ... rect. Since that time there has been a ... regular export of agate nodules from Urug... to Oberstein, where they have long form... the staple material used in the agate m... These "Brazilian agates," as they are cal... when brought to Germany, are arranged ... lots and sold by auction, stones of ordin... quality bringing it is said, not more than ... than 15 shillings per hundredweight. "... can agates" are thus, for the most p... South American stones cut and polished ... Oberstein. The extent of the industry ... greatly increased with this accession of fr... material, and a few years ago there were ... fewer than 163 agate mills, working ... grindstones, and giving employment ... gether to about three thousand perso... cheapness of labor and a plentiful supply ... water-power has much to do with the ... nance of this industry at Oberstein. ... labor is both ill paid and severe. The ag... worker, says Professor Rudler, who so... years ago visited the mines and mills, "... on a low wooden grinding stool, specia... structed to fit the chest and abdom... leaving the limbs free; the hands are ... ed in holding and grinding the aga... while the feet are firmly pressed agai... stakes or blocks of wood screwed in ... floor, the reaction enabling the grind... to press the agate with much force agai... moving millstone. The friction th... produced causes the agate to glow with ... beautiful phosphorescent light, and red c... stones under this treatment look, it is sa... as if they were red-hot. The mill stones ... red sandstone, measure five feet diam... and generally make three revolutio... second. The finer agates are sliced ... of steel wheels and diamond or eme... powder, but the coarser stones are simp... shaped into shape and ground. Afterwa... are polished on rotating cylinders ... or lead covered with moistened t...

The ingenuity of the agate worker is n... limited merely to cutting, carving and p... his material into all manner of shade... has also succeeded in varying its col... artificial means. The layers compos... agate differ considerably in porosi... those that are transparent, for examp... less porous than opaque layers. Som... seem to be altogether impervious ... ordinary temperature and pressure; and ... workers both at Oberstein and in Ida... availed themselves of this peculiarit... applying their staining processes. A su... agate, after being thoroughly dried, ... soaked in a mixture of honey and wat... olive oil, and is kept thus for at lea... days, exposed to a moderate heat, ... washed, dried, and put into a ves... taining enough sulphuric acid to cover i... vessel is thereafter exposed to a gent... for a varying number of hours, wh... porous layers are found to have becom... darker in color. The reason of this ... these layers, having become saturat... the syrup or oil, are acted upon by th... ric acid, which decomposes the sug... constituent and forms in its place ... of carbon. It is in this way th... agate is converted into the ony... black and white layers, used in th... tion of cameos and intaglios. Expo... strong sunlight was long ago found t... reddish tint to gray-colored agat... was suggested the burning of suc... so as to convert them into carnelian... Oberstein, likely stones for this purpo... dried thoroughly, then saturated i... acid, and afterwards exposed i... earthenware crucible to a red heat. The... allowed to cool slowly, and are then see... a bright red color. Not conte... imitating the rarer natural varieties o... such an onyx and carnelian, Germ... turers have taken to staining agat... all sorts of colors unknown i... natural stones. Aniline dyes, unnatu... they are fugitive, have also been late... agate staining. It is possible th... the themselves may yet be artificia... duced. Indeed, according to Kin... Natural History of Gems"), a Florentin... not long ago accomplished this fea... unfortunately, the secret died with ... who is said to have petrified huma... into real agates. "In the hospita... Pitti may be inspected still by th... ... ns," says King, "a table top made ... hearts, lungs, livers, etc., thus agati... one large slab—meet board for ... of vampires!" Organic remains i... are not unknown, for Bowerbank... that in the moss agates of Oberstein ... found microscopic organisms, and D... says that he has found undoubted ... remains of considerable size in agates ... shire and other localities.—Edin... Scotsman.

... is the price of this axle grease? ... the new clerk of a grocery dealer ... no mark on it." "It depends on ... customer. If he asks for axle grease, ... him 15 cents a pound; but if he wants ... make it 38 cents."

... the very young daughter of a cou... gentlemen was playing in the garden one ... stranger came along and inquired if ... was at home. "No," she replied; ... mother is in the house, and she ... with you, you poor miserable sin...

COUNT ZOWASKI.

One of Old Bony's Soldiers—He is Nearly One Hundred Years Old.

Our sanctum was visited yesterday by a ... personage than a genuine Polish ... nearly a century old. He was a ... fresh man of about five feet four ... in height with a keen clear eye, and ... his faculties seemed to be as bright as if ... only sixty years of age. He speaks ... English but understands every word ... His long flowing almost tanny ... and white beard give him an elfish ... He is hale and hearty, straight ... firm of muscle, and very strong of ... He gave us the following account ... which we know will be perused ... interest by every reader of the Guide: ... I am 93 years old, and my body and ... are still vigorous. I was born in War... in 1791, and took my title from my ... Count Zowaski. When I was born ... country, Poland, was free, but I inherit... the love of freedom and the hatred of ... I felt my blood tingle at the re... of battle scenes when I was a mere ... and when I was 14 I determined to be ... Napoleon (the count, by the way, ... calls him 'Bony,') was already ... Europe with his campaigns. I ... of him, I admired him and when I ... 15 I asked my father to let me join the ... My father said: 'I will give you a ... a sword, a lance, and money. Go and ... yourself.' Overjoyed by the free con... of my parents, I went and reported ... to Prince Poniatowski, who knew ... parents by reputation. Here my hopes ... again. He told me that he was not ... to make me a member of the French ... My request must be forwarded ... through several hands to Bonapart himself. ... waited the reply impatiently for weeks. ... at it came. 'I was too young, it said, ... for active service, but they would take ... into the military school in Paris. So I ... and I was there in 1810, when Bona... was making war with Black Arabia, ... in 1811, while he was whipping Egypt. ... he came back from Egypt and he ... and Paris I joined the army. I was ... captain of the One Hundred and ... Light Artillery. He remained in ... only five days, and started on the ... able march to Moscow. I was twenty ... years old then.

I remember that campaign distinctly? ... should say I did. I shall remember the ... retreat from Moscow as long as I remember ... thing. On our way to the city we had ... marched every day forty-eight miles, but it ... was longer going back. While the army ... dwindling from 500,000 to 300,000 men. ... youth and great powers of endurance ... enabled me to hold my own; but

... SUFFERED HORRIBLY FROM THE COLD

... from the dreadful fare we were obliged ... to put up with. Everything around us was ... destroyed. Napoleon's enemies had made ... last great effort to crush him. We ... were ordered not to touch any meat which ... we might find on the way. We devoured ... horses. We could not complain when ... Bonaparte himself and his officers joined ... us. On our way back we went through ... and I had chance to see my native ... once more.

Then came Austerlitz; I was in that, ... I remember that. It was a terrible ... There was a twenty-five mile field, ... Full of soldiers, full of cannon; ... Prussian, Turk, troops from Saxony ... Wurtemberg, all fighting at once. Na... said, 'I will conquer all!' In fifteen ... it was over. And the appearance of ... battlefield was something which no one ... saw it could forget. After that there ... no more fighting. Everybody was ... Then we met Wellington at Water... Bonaparte is a much slandered man ... don't know him here. Some know too ... some don't enough; hardly anybody ... it right. Everybody was against ... Bonaparte. They did not treat him fair. ... were not fair with him, but he made ... whole of Europe tremble. Ah, he was ... soldier!"

... Waterloo was a misfortune. Na... his wife took hold of his hand before ... battle and said, 'O my dear husband, I ... you in 1815 to go on. But go no ... You have already conquered the ... of Europe.' He kissed his wife and ... 'My dear wife, there is no other man ... me. First Christ. I am second, If ... to be 60 I will conquer the whole ...

... Well, after Napoleon's defeat I had to ... under other leaders. But I kept in ... the time. I was active in the Polish ... independence in 1831, and warmly ... Kossuth, I and my family. Then ... under the hand of the Austrian rulers, ... would have transported me to Siberia, ... got out of their way. My father and ... brothers died in Siberia in 1835. I tell ... it is a bad place. It is next to the ... They worked in the silver mines— ... away down, where it was always ... No one can live there long if they ... iron.

... GLAD WHEN THE CZAR WAS BLOWN UP.

... They'd blow them all up. O, they'd ... been right glad to have got hold of me. ... was away from them, safe. I took up ... for Hungary, and presently found ... a prisoner of war in Turkey in Asia. ... property at Warsaw had been confiscat... The upshot of it all was that I was ... I came to this country in 1851, ... the company was Carl Schurz. ... brought my famous white war horse ... with me. I found he was famous for ... knew him. I went to West Point and ... instructions there for a while. Then ... to Reading, Penn., and when the ... the rebellion broke out I offered my ... I was seventy years old then. I ... with Sigel as captain of a Pennsyl... battery. The most serious loss of ... war was the loss of my horse, who ... shot under me. I complained about it ... General Grant. 'Ah,' said General ... 'I know your horse well. It was ... You will sign your name on a ... and we will give you land in place of ... horse.' I scorned the land and would ... What land could replace my ... companion of the bloody battlefields ... Europe?'

... When the war was over they called me ... I went to San Francisco and was ... captain of the police. Then every... used to say 'the old hero!' It is ... to hear that when one is old and ... days are over for him. Old! But my ... father was 115 years old before he died, ... but 93 the 4th of last July. But ... not be under the rules and regu... to do everything just so in my police ... I gave it up. The newspapers said that the 'old hero,' had better stay; but I had made up my mind. Since then I have tramped about a good deal. All the way newspapers speak of me as I go along, and everybody is kind when they find out who I am. I have walked nearly all the way from Kingston and am on my way to Toronto where I shall call on my fellow-countryman, Col. Gzowski. The old hero started out of our office with a hearty "God bless you" on his lips to some gentlemen present who had relieved his necessities.—Port Hope Guide.

CURIOUS MURDERS IN AFRICA.

How a Magician Killed a Dozen Women at Lagos.

The last arriving mail steamer at Liverpool from Africa brought particulars of the trial and sentence of the native Adeoshun for the murder of numerous women at Lagos, on the West African coast. The killing of at least a dozen females was laid to the account of Adeoshun, but at the trial, which took place on the 9th of July, he was charged with the wilful murder of three women, viz., Mrs. Catherine Clegg, Mrs. Selena Cole, and her sister.

The exact number of skeletons found in the bush was twelve, and of these three were identified as the females named, all of whom were natives, and occupied respectable positions in Lagos, two of them being the wives of native merchants. A large number of witnesses were examined, the testimony of one female showing the modus operandi of the prisoner. This witness, whose name was Idown, had a very narrow escape of being one of Adeoshun's victims. Idown went down to Adeoshun's house. He had numerous "charms" spread on the floor, among them being a small mud idol and several vials filled with powder. Adeoshun had a pistol, which he fired at the idol. He then took something out of the idol, and together with a shilling dropped it into a vessel containing water, making the shilling into two shillings.

This was the great power his "charms" possessed of making articles double their original value. He urged Idown to bring him cloth and beads for that purposo, but she said she was not a trader. After this he wanted her to mask her face, and on her refusing blew some of the powder from the vial to the wind, and Idown became somewhat stupefied. She went home and returned to Adeoshun's house with a sum of £10, together with a quantity of beads and cloth. Adeoshun told her to buy two fowls, two bottles of rum one yard of white Croydon cloth, and two Kola nuts, and meet him at Ikovi road. Ikovi road is near to the place where the skeletons were found. It was 4 o'clock in the morning when the meeting was to take place.

Idown was to tell nobody of the matter, or the charms would not act, and the cloth was to be tied round her face. The appointment fortunately was not kept, and three days afterward the prisoner was arrested. The statement of Idown corroborates, for the most part, the supposed plan which the prisoner adopted in carrying out his fiendish object, viz., to blindfold the women, place a fowl in each hand, get them to kneel down, and then despatch them with some heavy weapon. Adeoshun denied the charge of murder, maintained a dignified demeanor in addressing the jury, and told them he was bold and intrepid, having nothing to fear. The jury, however, brought in a verdict of guilty in all three instances, and asked that the prisoner be executed in public if sentenced to be hanged. The prisoner was sentenced to death.

Adeoshun was a native of Porto Navo, and years ago was sold by the authorities to the King of Dahomey, one of whose executioners he immediately became. The King of that place was, and no doubt is still, a bloodthirsty ruler, having frequent and fearful human sacrifices. Escaping to Lagos, Adeoshun set up as a conjuror, a fetish priest, medicine man, and a worker of charms, in which capacity his victims visited him, and through which they lost their lives.

The Jews of Roumania.

There is once more a crisis in the position of the Jews of Roumania. The effects of the malevolent ingenuity of the authorities are likely far to exceed in ultimate effect the Russian outrages of two years ago, which aroused the indignation of civilized Europe and excited the generous sympathy of England. The Jews of Roumania, are, it is true, not maltreated by misguided peasants. But thousands of them have been deprived of their livelihood by a crafty legislative trick, and have no resource but to become wanderers on the face of the earth. Once more western Jews have to face the problem how to assist these victims of persecution. Already the tide of emigration has begun to flow through Germany. The desired destination of the emigrants is America, but they cannot fulfil the conditions of the immigration laws of the United States, and they find their advance stayed. The experience at Briody in 1882 are likely to be repeated, not in Galicia, but nearer Berlin. The wretched wanderers can neither advance nor retire. The condition of their having obtained emigration passports is that they shall not return to Roumania. Germany and Austria can not and will not retain them. Whither are they to go, and what is to be their fate? Prince Bismarck has given several proofs that he insists upon the Berlin treaty being observed by the contracting powers. Is there any just reason why he should not give a timely hint to Roumania that she must loyally observe to the letter the explicit provisions embodied in the forty-fourth clause of the treaty? Germany has much influence in Roumania. King Charles is a Hohenzollern Roumanian statesmen look to Germany to protect their country from Muscovite designs. The crown prince has shown his abhorrence of the persecution of the Jews. Here are elements which might be judiciously dealt with at once. Every moment is precious. Thousands of Roumanian Jews are being reduced to the condition of beggars. They cannot stay in Roumania and will wander through Austria and Germany, depending in their dire distress upon the charitable assistance of their bretnern-in-faith.—Jewish Chronicle.

Wasn't that funny? A Louisville bank cashier who was supposed to have embezzled $3,000 called for an examination of his books and proved that the bank was $3.75 ahead of him. The officials took off their hats and offered to raise his salary, but he got mad and walked off on his ear.

In Camp at Aldershot.

My friends, stationed at the camp, received me with the frank, generous hospitality of the English officer, and their kind and friendly treatment soon makes me feel thoroughly at home among them, free to come and go as I please, and to make my acquaintance with Tommy Atkins at my leisure. All branches of the service are represented here—engineers, artillery, "horse, foot, and dragoons," and all the varied types of character in the army are to be met with, from the little drummer-boy born in the service to the hardened non-commissioned officer of a dozen campaigns. Magnificent types of the soldier these latter, as they pass through the streets with ringing stride, straight as arrows, neat as soap and water, pipe-clay and brush, can make them, proud of their position and of their protession, and often exercising fully as much authority over the men under them as the best of their officers.

A canteen where the soldier can purchase at moderate rates many of the little luxuries of life, libraries, reading, smoking, and recreation rooms, are attached to the large barracks at Aldershot. Here theatrical performances, often of considerable merit, are frequently given by the men, and the soldiers can always rely upon the generous support of their officers in their amusements. The theatre or music hall at the Royal Artillery Barracks is generally well attended almost any evening, and a good "song and dance" man enjoys no mean degree of popularity among his comrades.

But it is the innate love that all Englishmen bear for athletic sports that "Tommy" comes out in his full glory, and his officers do not disdain to meet him on equal grounds at cricket, foot-ball, and other out-door games. Different branches of the service frequently meet in friendly rivalry, and many a match is played on the grounds of the officer's club between teams of various regiments or corps, selected from among the officers and men, irrespective of their military rank. It is not an unusual sight to see a game among the officers "umpired" by some veteran non-commissioned officers, skilled in all the intricacies of the national game of cricket.

The most interesting of the purely martial sports—if I can use the word in reference to what forms part of the drill of the cavalry and mounted artillery—are the exciting contests of sabre versus sabre, or sabre versus lance, and the like, when some rival "rough-riders" are pitted against one another. One can easily imagine how the tournaments of old appeared, to see these active fellows, mounted on their fine horses, which seem to sympathize with and enter into the spirit of their riders, as clad in stout leather tunics, their heads protected with strong wire masks, they charge down on one another, cutting, thrusting, and parrying, retreating and pursuing. Hard knocks are given and received with apparent good-humor, though I doubt not that long habits of discipline restrain many an honest fellow's temper when his blood is up. It is rough but manly worker, and one does not wonder, on seeing what training they go through that the British horsemen are renowned for their courage and dexterity. Another sport in which the nerve and coolness that go so far toward making a good cavalier are displayed to great advantage is tent-pegging, introduced, I believe into the British Army by the native cavalrymen of the Indian service. The player, armed with a light bamboo lance, puts his horse at full gallop over the course, and strikes with his lance head a tent peg protruding a few inches out of the ground, into which one end has been firmly driven. See how firmly yet lightly the soldier sits his horse, body bent forward, lance couched, thundering forward at the top of his horse's speed. Lower down on his charger's neck, a tighter clasp of the legs, nearer and nearer—the exact moment must be rightly chosen—a slight turn of the wrist of the practiced bridle hand—now! crash!—and he swings back upright into the saddle, waving the light lance triumphantly above his head, with the splintered piece of wood transfixed on its iron point.—R. F. ZOGBAUM, in Harper's Magazine for October.

The Italian Peasant.

Life beneath an Italian sky is popularly imagined to be a pleasant form of existence. Such, however, does not appear to be invariably the case. The account given by Mr. Beauclerk, in a report to the foreign office on the agricultural condition of Italy, of peasant life in Piedmont is not of a glowing character. Day-laborers who possess nothing are, he states, the majority of the inhabitants; they amount in Piedmont to one-fifth of the rural population. The landlords are habitually absentees, taking no interest whatever in their tenants, in return for which they have excluded almost every man of means from the list of councillors at the communal elections. The townspeople deride and despise country folk, and are looked upon by them as proud and selfish. In Novara the farm-laborer is said "to contend with every species of privation from the cradle to the grave." His infancy is passed in the care of strangers or rolling in the mud; at 7 years old he receives a few months per year of elementary schooling, and passes the remainder in tending goats; at 10 he already gains some small wages; at 12 he sleeps away from home, and is regularly employed; and at 15 he undertakes the hardest farm work. The men rise in summer at 2 a.m., in winter at 4 a.m., awakened by beating a stick on an empty box; in the former season they work from twelve to fifteen hours per day. When ill the hospital receives them; when old and unfit for work they are forsaken and uncared for; yet the peasants seldom take to begging, even when deprived of all resources. Girls take part in field work at the age of 14 or 15. At night they catch frogs and fish in the marshes. At 30 they are matured women, old at 40, decrepit at 50, with bent backs and bronzed faces. Many families lead a nomadic life. Every Michaelmas their household goods, worth perhaps a total of £6, are packed on a bullock cart, and a new home or situation is sought. In the hill regions many of the villages are notable for their excessive filth. Throughout the plains masters and workmen live together for years without the change of a syllable of good will. In every hamlet class distinctions are complete down the entire gamut of the social scale. Laborers usually have many children, "and," says the report of the Italian government commission that has been recently inquiring into their condition, "indeed they have nothing else."—St. James's Gazette.

Oh! how tired and weak I feel, I don't believe I will ever get through this Spring house-cleaning! Oh yes you will if you take a bottle or two of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters to purify your blood and tone up the system. In large bottles 50 cents.

The Great Eastern.

It is now regarded as certain that the Great Eastern will be chartered by the Exposition management to bring from London to New Orleans the collective and individual exhibits that have been promised by the governments and by private individuals and firms of Europe. Unless the negotiations fail, the great vessel, the largest in the world, will leave London between the 15th of October and the 1st of November. The great Eastern herself will be no inconsiderable feature of the great show and will be worth going hundreds of miles to see. The management has not decided what use the great ship will be put to after her arrival.

"How will you have your hair cut?" may not be slang, but it is certainly a barberism.

Home Testimony.

Many hundred recommendations similar in character to the one given below have been received, and give proof of the great value of Polson's NERVILINE as a pain remedy. Try it.

ATHOL, Feb. 20.—We hereby certify that we have used Nerviline in our families, and have found it a most reliable remedy for cramps in the stomach, also for headache, and externally for rheumatic pains. No house should be without this invaluable remedy. LUKE COLE. ELISHA COLE, J. P.

The man who discovers the North Pole can knock plenty of persimmons with it.

A Question.

How can we raise more corn to the acher? Why, of course, by using PUTNAM'S CORN EXTRACTOR. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor has given universal satisfaction, for it is sure, safe and painless. Like every article of real merit it has a host of imitators, and we would specially warn the public to guard against those dangerous substitutes offered for the genuine Putnam's Extractor. N. C. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

The girl with bangs generally makes a noise in the world—at least it annoys a good many to look upon her.

Young Men!—Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt and other Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Sleep, "nature's sweet restorer," is the best grindstone we know of to brighten one's ideas.

There are lots of people going around grumbling, and half sick at the Stomach all the time; who might be well and happy, if they only used Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters occasionally. It is a splendid Blood Purifier At Druggists 50 cents

A.P 196.

PHRENOLOGY. EXAMINATIONS GIVEN BY WALLACE MASON, at 362 Yonge st., Toronto.

THOS. GALLOWAY & Co., Cotton, Woollen, Silk Carpet, and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas, Ont

OVER 200 FARMS IN MICHIGAN FOR SALE Description and price list furnished free to all applicants. GEO. W. SNOVER, 103 Griswold St., Detroit, Mich.

PARTY WANTED TO PURCHASE CARRIAGE shops 24 x 118 feet; double stoop, with office 24 x 60 lacksmith's shop, 20 x 42; lumber, barn, and shed, horse barn, two acres of land with dwelling-house suitable for two small families; two cisterns, cellar, and well; situated at Ross' Corners, four miles from Belleville, on main gravelled road; good locality, where a business from $8,000 to $10,000 per annum is done. The premises are now in full blast, and will be sold to good live man at a bargain. HARFORD ASHLEY, Belleville.

E. E. KNOTT'S Speculator's Mart, Adelaide St. East, Toronto. All kinds of real estate sold or exchanged on commission. Money loaned on all kinds of real estate at lowest rates of interest. Application for money from farmers a speciality. Rents collected and estates managed in town or country. N.B.—Best of references on application

WANTED in every City, Town, Village and County in Canada, Lady and Gentleman to sell "Queen Victoria, her girlhood and womanhood," by Grace Greenwood, 490 pages. The cheapest and fastest selling book ever published. Send 75c. for sample copy, and address for terms and territory: The Canadian Subscription Company, 8 Exchange Bank Buildings, Montreal.

DEATH TO POTATO BUGS.

ASK YOUR LOCAL DEALER FOR

RAMSAY'S PURE PARIS GREEN.

Nothing has been found more effective for destroyin Potato Bugs. The purest is the cheapest.

A. Ramsay & Son,

Paint and Color Manufacturers, Montreal.

W. & F. P. Currie & Co.

100 Grey Nun Street, Montreal.

Importers of

Drain Pipes, Portland Cement, Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings. Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting, Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay

Manufacturers of

Bessemer Steel Sofa, Chair & Bed Springs

SMOKED SAUSAGES.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use Sold by grocers through the Dominion. Send for price to W. CLARK, P. O. Box 342 Montreal.

SEND And get a sample copy of TRUTH, free, the best 28-page Weekly Magazine published. See the big list of rewards for answering Bible Problems. S. FRANK WILSON, 33 & 35 Adelaide Street, West, Toronto, Canada.

MEN WANTED.

Active, pushing men wanted to wholesale my famous teas to consumers. Salaries from $600 to $2,000 per year Send stamp for particulars. JAMES LAUT, Importer, Toronto.

H. WILLIAMS,

SLATE AND FELT ROOFER.

Manufacturer and Dealer in

Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building Paper, Carpet Felt, &c., at lowest Prices.

4 ADELAIDE ST. EAST, - - TORONTO

Dominion Line of Steamships.

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from

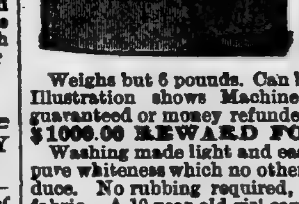
QUEBEC TO LIVERPOOL.

*Brooklyn, Aug 23 | Montreal, Sept. 13
Toronto, Aug 30 | *Vancouver, Sept 20
*Oregon, Sept 6 |

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $50, $60, $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $35, Steerage, at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to

DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal.

MACHINERY. 1 Portcast Westinghouse Fin r givearm Engine. Able Trumph do. 1 G C Merrison do. 18 h p Portable Engine and Boiler on Skids. 1 35 h. p. Horozontal by Northy. 1 do. by Waterous with cut off valve, and 20 engines and boilers of smaller sizes, all thoroughly refitted before leaving shop. 2 24-inch Planers and Matchers. 1 20-inch Pony Planer. 1 Iron frame Tenoning machine, 1 Blind Slat Tenoner, 1 Buggy Plainer or jointer. 2 band saws 10 Saw Tables. 1 Fire-Proof Safe. 1 Jeweler's Rols. Steel. 1 Book-Binder's Screw Press. 1 42-inch French Burr Portable Grist Mill. 1 62-inch inserted Tooth-Saw &c., &c. Send for new list, No. 9 containing full description of machinery in stock. Address,



H. W. PETRIE, Brantford, Ont.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter between Portland and Glasgow, and Boston and Glasgow alternately; and during summer between Quebec and Glasgow and Boston and Glasgow every week.

For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co, St. John's N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B. Allan & Co, Chicago; Leve & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co Quebec; H. A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal.

MUTUAL MARRIAGE ENDOWMENT ASS'N, Incorporated, Head Office, London, Ont. Issues Certificates from $125 to $3,000, payable on marriage, at following rates. For $500, or half certificate, $4; quarterly dues in advance, $0.75. For $1,000 Certificate, $6; quarterly dues in advance, $1.00. For $2,000 Certificate, $10; quarterly dues in advance, $2.00, For $3,000 Certificate, $15; quarterly dues in advance, $3.00. The only cash payments. Assessments on marriages $1.00 on each $1000. First years quarterly assessments are promptly paid, on present membership at end of year. Endowment reserve account will amount to $10.000 providing for a large number of endowments, which places this Association in a sound financial position. No connection with any similar Institution. A good savings society for young people. Send for By-Laws, &c. W. J. IMLACH Secretary, London, Ont.

THE MODEL Washer AND BLEACHER

Weighs but 6 pounds. Can be carried in a small valise. Illustration shows Machine in boiler. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded within 30 days.

$1000.00 REWARD FOR ITS SUPERIOR.

Washing made light and easy. The clothes have that pure whiteness which no other mode of washing can produce. No rubbing required, no friction to injure the fabric. A 10 year old girl can do the washing as well as an older person.

To place it in every household THE PRICE HAS BEEN REDUCED to $2.50, and if not found satisfactory, money refunded. See what the "Canada Presbyterian," says about it—The Model Washer and Bleacher which Mr. C. W. Dennis offers to the public has many and valuable advantages. It is a time and labor saving machine, substantial and enduring, and is very cheap. From trial in the household we can testify to its excellence Delivered to any express office in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Charges paid $3.00 Send for circulars

AGENTS WANTED.

C. W. DENNIS,

TORONTO BARGAIN HOUSE,

213 YONGE STREET, TORONTO, ONT.

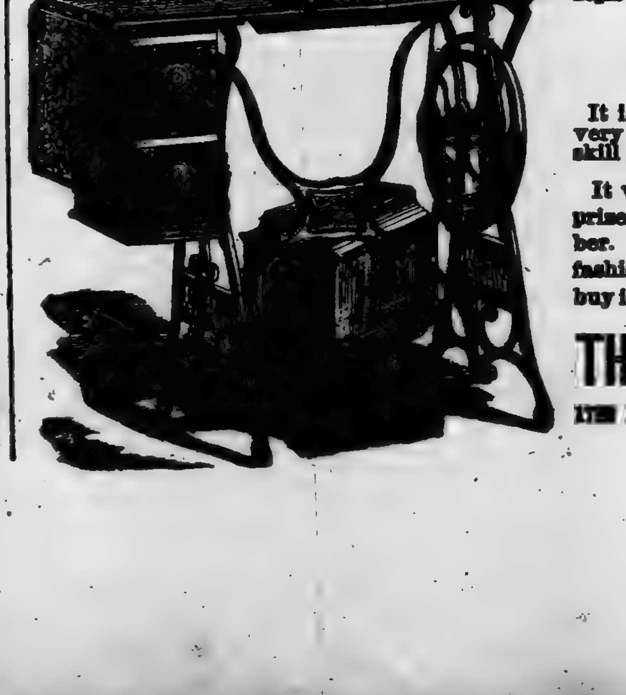
GURNEYS & WARE,

STANDARD SCALES.

THE BEST,
THE STRONGEST,
THE MOST RELIABLE.

Unrivalled in material, construction and finish, perfect in accuracy and unequalled in durability. Guaranteed to give entire satisfaction.

THEY EXCEL ALL OTHERS.



RAILROAD, WAREHOUSE AND MILL TRUCKS

Mills' Alarm Money Drawers.

☞ SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST.

GURNEYS & WARE,
HAMILTON, ONT

The New Williams

High Arm Machine is now recognized as the

Sewing Machine of the Period.

It is Light and Easy to run

Silent and Rapid movement,

Plain and Simple to learn

It is strong, durable, and well built, of the very best material that money can buy or skill produce.

It was awarded five medals and three first prizes at the Dominion Exhibition last October. It is rapidly superseding all the old fashioned makes everywhere. See it, try it, buy it, and make sure that you get it.

THE WILLIAMS' MFG CO.

1733 Notre Dame St., Montreal, and 58 King St., West, Toronto.

SARGENT'S

LOAD-LIFTING MACHINE,

Has stood the test and is without a peer.

Hundreds of them are in use in Ontario and giving the very best satisfaction.

READ THE FOLLOWING.

MR. P. MILNE, York Twp.,

Writes to say—I have used one of Sargent's Patent Load Lifters and for the purpose for which it is intended, beats anything I ever seen or heard of. It has saved me more this season than I paid for it, and I would advise all farmers great or small to have one.

This is to certify that I purchased one of Sargent's Load Lifting Machines from his agent, A. H. Dixon, and that it has exceeded my expectations altogether. I did the mowing myself in loose barley for two teams hauling and did not find it any harder work than with two helpers in the old way. I would not be without it for twice its cost.

JOHN STEWART, Lot 13, con. 2, York Tp.

MR. WM. SARGENT,

This is to certify that I purchased one of your Load Lifting Machines from Thomas Glassford, agent for Markham and Whitchurch, and have used it this harvest, and that I am well pleased with it. I believe it to be one of the best labor saving maching ever invented. One horse can elevate the largest load with the greatest ease to any height your barn may require, enabling you to do with at least one man less, also to fill the barn to the very peak of the roof, with ease. I would not be without it should it cost twice as much. Yours truly,

THOS. WILLIAMSON, Reeve, Markham Tp.

Victoria Square, Aug. 27, 1883.

I have bought and used one of Sargent's Load Lifters which has given unbounded satisfaction. It has already paid for itself in the saving of labor and speed in hauling it, and I consider it a grand invention for farmers.

JOHN BOAN, Lot 26, Con. 4, Markham.

J. S. LEARY & SON,

Toronto township,

We hereby certify that Sargent's Load Lifters are a decided success and cousider them the greatest modern labor-saving machine for the cost. No farmer can afford to be without them. They are especially good in patent barns, where the mows are high, making it easy to fill them to the top. We have two in use and would not be without them for any reasonable consideration.

Brampton, Oct. 24, 1883.

WM. SARGENT:

SIR,—I have tried your Load Lifter and it gives full satisfaction to me, and I feel safe in recommending it to any one. It is a great saving of time and strength. I therefore recommend it to the public.

WM. JAMES.

Sandhill, July 9th, 1884.

This is to certify that I purchased one of Sargent's Load Lifters in 1881, and in 1882 bought two more to put in other barns I have. They give me such satisfaction that if I had any more barns I would have one in each. I would not take $200 each for them if I had to be without them. Without the machine I would have to employ two more men. Besides a great deal of time is saved. Any person disputing this may refer to me.

JOHN DEAN.

WM. SARGENT:

SIR,—I purchased one of your Load Lifters. It saves me one man at the beginning of the season, and two men when the mow is nearly full.

JAMES SHARK, Britannia.

This is to certify that I am using one of Sargent's Load Lifters; and I would not be without it for five times its cost. I recommend it to the public.

J. C. SWITZER, Albion.

A. H DIXON, ESQ., Sand Hill, P.O.

Dear Sir—I have much pleasure in saying that the load lifter, Sargent's Patent, you put up in my new barn this summer, has been most satisfactory, and has done its work even better than I at first expected. It has saved valuable time and labor. My neighbors tell me I have the advantage of them when I can pitch all my loads down even in the top of the mow. I have put in about fifty loads of hay and the same number of grain and can strongly recommend your Patent Load Lifter to my brother farmers; would not do without it myself.

Yours truly, F. A. FLEMING.

This is to certify that I have used one of Sargent's Load Lifting Machines and that it has given me entire satisfaction. I consider it one of the best labor saving machines yet introduced and would most strongly recommend it to all farmers. HENRY D. SANDERS, Sept. 4, '83. Fair Bank P.O., York Tp.

I am well satisfied with your Load Lifter. I consider it a labor saving machine. I would not like to bewithout it for any reasonable cost.

G. STEER.

This is to certify that I have one of Sargent's Load Lifters erected in my barn, and used it last summer, and it gives me full satisfaction. I would not be without it for five times the cost of it.

J. C. SWITZER, Lot 7, Con. 6, Albion.

MR. SARGENT:

SIR,—This is to certify that I have used one of your Load Lifting machines with run way across width of barn, 100 feet wide and 25 feet high, and does the work like a charm. Would not be without it at any reasonable price. It saves a great deal of hard work and time with less help in barn.

This is to certify that I have one of Sargent's Load Lifters in my barn. I would not be without it for $100. I recommend it to the public notice.

STEPHEN CRAIG, Mayfield.

This is to certify that I have one of Sargent's Load Lifting machines, and I am well satisfied with it. I had a one-wheel lifter and I sold it, as I think Sargent's Lifter is better by far.

RICHARD GRAHAME.

The best thing out is Sargent's Load Lifting machine. It works like a charm. I would recommend it to every farmer.

CHAS. UPSHALL, Toronto Tp.

I have used one of Sargent's Patent Load Lifter one season, and can safely say that it works to perfection. I can recommend it to the farming community.

H. D. IRWIN,

Lot 113, Con. 1, E. T. & S. Road,

Artemesia.

My barn is 20 feet high to the plate and I always had to put a scaffold up to fill the mow, which required a extra man, but since I got your Load Litter three men can take off a load easier than four could without it. I consider that they will pay for themselves this year, as they take the place of one man.

GEO. HOLTBY,

Locus Grove Farm.

Numerous other names are pouring in, but the above is sufficient to prove the popularity and merits of Sargent's Patent Load Lifter.

National Pills purifies the blood, regulate stomach, Liver and bowels.

A man whose knowledge is based on actual experience says that when calling on their sweethearts young men should carry affection in their hearts, perfection in their manners and confection in their pockets.—Boston Journal.

November 6th has been proclaimed by the Governor-general as Thanksgiving Day throughout the Dominion.

RESPECT AGE.

Age should always command respect, in the case of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry it certainly does, for 25 years that has been the standard remedy with the people, for Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colic and a'l bowel complaints.

The Fifth Division Court of the County of Grey will hold its regular sittings in the Town Hall, Flesherton, on Thursday, October the 30th next.

A STRONG ENDORSEMENT.

The Clergy, the Medical Faculty, the press and the people all endorse Burdock Blood Bitters as the best system renovating blood purifying tonic known. Its work bears out their best recommend.

A chap from the country, stopping at one of the hotels, sat down to dinner. Upon the bill of fare being handed to him by the waiter he remarked that he "didn't care 'bout readin' now; he'd wait till after dinner."—Botton Transcript.

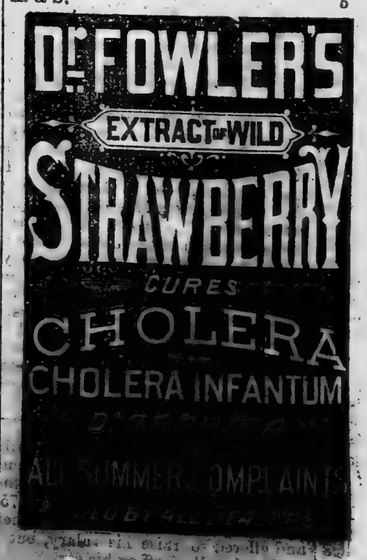
If there is any girl who doesn't like to pop the question even if it is leap year, she can get around it by asking her young man if he'd be willing to fill in his name on her marriage certificate.—Yonkers Gazette.

McGREGOR'S SPEEDY CURE.

Every purchaser of common sense business capacity, when requiring an article for a certain purpose, purchases only that which has been tried or is allowed first to test before buying. You are allowed a free trial bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure, the great remedy for Dyspepsia, Impure Blood and Liver Disorders at Hill Bro's. Sold at 50 cents and $1 per bottle. See testimonials from persons in your own town. A. & S. 6

The old saw, "Never kick a man when he is down" is a good one, because to kick a man when he is down is cowardly. Now we give another, "Never kick a man when he is up," because it is reckless.—Evansville Argus.

A BLESSING TO ALL MANKIND.



In these times when our Newspapers are flooded with patent medicine advertisements, it is gratifying to know what to procure that will certainly cure you. If you are billious, Blood out of order, Liver inactive or generally debilitated, there is nothing in the world that will cure you so quickly as Electric Bitters. They are a blessing to all mankind, and can be had for only fifty cents a bottle at A. Turner & Co's Drug Store. 2

Every young lady should learn to make her own dresses. There may come a time after marriage when she will need to make doll babies' dresses, and then her former experience will come into good service.—Phila. Chronicle.

All over the land are going into ecstasy over Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. There unlocked for recovery by the timely use of this great life Saving remedy, causes them to go nearly wild in its praise. It is guaranteed to positively cure Severe Caught, Colds, Asthma, Hay Fever, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Loss of Voice, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs. Trial bottles free at A. Turner, & Co's Drug Store. Large size $1.00 2

A minister having preached the same discourse to his people three times one of his constant hearers said to him after service: "Doctor the sermon you give us this morning having had three several readings, I move that it now be passed."—Boston Beacon.

The following is from J. W. Ptolemy, of Winnipeg, formerly grain buyer for William Gillesby, of Hamilton and Grimsby: "I was for many years much afflicted with Costiveness, Biliousness, and ultimately Dyspepsia. I suffered very much and tried many different medicines, which gave me only temporary relief and then I was as bad as ever again. I was recommended by a friend, who had been restored to health by it, to try McGregor's Speedy Cure. I did so, and it was not long before I felt like a new man, and I have enjoyed excellent health ever since. I first commenced taking it February 7th, 1879. Sold by Hill Bro's. A. & S. 5

Franco - Chinese

Notwithstanding the war now raging in China increase the price of Teas

Belfast House,

Having imported prior to ing of hostilities, a sufficient to supply 20,000 MEN for 12 months. In other depart the Grocery trade the HOUSE has KILLED SAND those who assume to business by purchasing of ers exorbitant rates of interest credit. Our imports of

PRESERVED MEATS, LOBSTERS, SARDINES, BACON, ASSORTED PI

and every articles in the gr

LIQUORS

Of the best brands and qual for Sacramental purposes pure. Brandies direct from ufacturer and all other kind Coffees, Teas and Tobacc fail to give satisfaction. Lemons, &c. Family Flour at Lowest Rates.

THOS. McN

BELFAST HOUSE, -

NEW GROCERY

IN CONNECTION WI

Plewes' Flour and Fe

Having just rece

Choicee, Fresh and

STOCK O

Teas,

Sugars,

Tobacc

Which will be sold VER

I respectfully solicit patronage.

193 J. PLE

CHATSWORTH

(LATE MORROW HOUSE)

CHATSWORTH

TUCK & McLEOD Pro

The best brand of liquors ways in stock. Good meals rooms guaranteed. Good tentive hostler.

HENRY GI

HOUSE PAI

GRAINER, GLAZIER A HANGER, CALCI AND WALL TIN

Residence opposite Plan

MARKDA

ORDERS SOLICITED.

HAGYARD PECTORA BALSA

Has no equal for the per Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Whooping Cough, Bron all Lung Disea

Every bottle guaranteed to T. MILBURN & CO., Pro

ROOKE'S BA

BREAD, the st PASTRY that your wife, always on ha the demand,

So when your stock Step in and let us And we'll your want Or you'll know t why.

E. ROCKE

M

J. G. IRV

MARKDA

Manufacturer of all

PUM

Drop Valve, Cylinder, Fo Pumps.

All kinds of

IRON - P

SUPPLIED.

The Markdale Stand

Issued every Thursday, at the office Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; paid within three months.

Professional and business cards or less and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50
Half column	27 00	15 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00
One inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks the advertisement not to exceed three.

No paper discontinued until all arrears paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid assortment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders with dispatch.

W. RUTLEDGE

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

SANDS & PERRY

(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to lend at lowest rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East, Toronto

Frost & Frost,

BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT-Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed practice in Flesherton, Office open every Thursday before.

FRED FROST, J. W. FROST, LL.B., County Crown Attorney.

J. MASSON,

BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REGISTRAR in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.

A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Bett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday of each week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.

OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday of each Friday of each week.

Funds to lend on reasonable terms.

CREASOR, Q. C. DUNCAN MORRISON.

Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.

ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner, B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farms, Tenants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.

Flesherville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES. Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N.B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate at low rates.

MANSION HOUSE

MARKDALE,

S. Bryan, Proprietor

CITY HOTEL

MARKDALE,

Wm McAleer, - Proprietor

This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 19

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

S. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

A. HILL,

Fashionable Tailor,

OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.

PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 4.--No. 212. MARKDALE, ONT., OCT. 2, 1884. { COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH. }

The Markdale Standard

Is issued evesy Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if not paid within three months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequents insertion.

Stray animals &c., advertised 3 weeks for $1 the advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid excepting at the option of the publisher.

—JOB PRINTING.—

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders filled with dispatch.

C. W. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HANDS & PERRY,
(SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),
BARRISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
9-251 TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,
BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c., Owen Sound, have resumed at Meaford, Office open every Thursday, as heretofore.
FRED FROST, J. W. FROST, LL. B.
County Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,
BARRISTER, MASTER AND DEP. REG in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c.
A NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block Collett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over Farland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week. 57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.
OFFICES in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, over W. F. Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
over W. J. McFarland's Store on Thursday and Friday of each week.
Funds to lend on reasonable terms.
W. CREASOR, Q.C., DUNCAN MORRISON
Markdale, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown,
ISSUER of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Life Insurance Agent. Commissioner in B. R. &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Tenants, and Land Sales, Punctually attended to and charges made very moderate.
Priceville, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

WM. BROWN,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N.B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se cury.

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Thos. Bryan, Proprietor.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
John McAleer, - Proprietor.
This house is fitted up in good style, situated on Mill street, where the travelling public may depend on the very best accommodation. Union bus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - - ONT.
THOS. RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

A. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

Medical.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O.
Physician and Surgeon, Priceville,
Graduate of University. Vict. College.
" " New York, and
Hon. Graduate, of the same,
" " Aylseth Medical Institute.
" " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y.
Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at Rutledge's Hotel, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.
122-47.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT.—Residence on Mill Street, Markdale.
1241y

HAMILTON'S
PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY
MARKDALE.
OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.
Fine work executed in all the latest sizes and shapes, fully equal to city work. Special attention given to
FRAMING
A large stock of moulding to choose from.
Call and leave your measure for a picture.
Jas. Hamilton.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larder well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.
Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

Dr. Hixon,
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, AND ACCOUCHER,
PRICEVILLE.
All calls promptly attended to.

ISAAC STINSON,
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

SAMUEL WARDELL,
WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

A PRIZE. Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

ALEX KAY
BOOT & SHOE
MAKER,
Mill Street, - Markdale

EAST GREY FALL SHOW.

The above exhibition was held in the Society's grounds, Flerherton, on the 23rd and 24th Sept. The number of entries were within three of being the same as last year, while the recipts at the gates showed a large increase in attendance. The show inside the hall was as good, if not better than any previous exhibit. Grain was an excellent quality through out and the exhibit was large. Roots, though not so large as we have seen, was a good average quality. There was a fine display of fruit, the best we have yet seen at a county show, and the exhibit far above the average in quantity. Flowers were also more numerous than usual which added much to the appearance of the hall. Ladies work in the various classes was well represented and in many instances of a high order. There was a very large and creditable collection, of photographs, which drew special attention and were much admired by spectators, Mr. J. Hamilton of Markdale, and Mr. Jas. Bulmer of Flesherton were the exhibitors, the former taking first prize. A pencil drawing of Eugenia Falls which hung at the West of the fruit stand arrested our special attention, the scene being a familiar one, and the drawing so perfect we were led to inquire, who it was that executed the work, when we learned that it was Miss Edith Richardson. There was not a very large exhibit of dairy products, but the quality was fine.

The quality of horses as well as the number continue to improve from year to year; the exhibit this year was decidedly good. In cattle however the show was below an average. Sheep and pigs were fair, Implements and machinery scarcely up to the average in numbers. The exhibit of poultry was large and fine; this branch (if it may so be called) of farming is now a very profitable one, and claims special attention, we have not the space to go into full particulars of this show, but would here compliment the directors of the Society on the success which has attended their arduous labors.

The following is the list of prizes awarded: Our thanks are due Mr. Damude, the corteous secretary for the list.

HORSES.

Pair Draught Horses—S Stokes.
Pair Roadster Horses—Jas. Johnston, W H & J Johnston.
Pair Carriage Horses—W J McNea, J H Henderson.
Buggy Horse—A S VanDusen, Joseph Henderson.
Saddle Horse—A Beattie, E Davis.
Draught Brood Mare—W Nicholls, Wm. Brewster.
General Purpose Mare—W Brewster, Jas. Best.
Draught 2-year-old Gelding or Filly—D McDonald, R Paton.
Draught 1-year-old Gelding or Filly—Geo. Glazier, D McDonald.
Draught Spring Foal—W Brewster, A Madill.
General Purpose 2-year-old Gelding or Filly—Alex. Madill, Jas. Farris.
General Purpose 1-year-old Gelding or Filly—Geo. Glazier, D. McDonald.
General Purpose SpringFoal—W Brewster, D Campbell.
S Damude's special for best Single Driving Horse. judged by style and speed—W H Campaigne.
A S. VanDusen's special, best 3-year-old Colt, driver. in harness—A S VanDusen.
Dr. Sproule's, M. P., special, best Carriage Team—W J McNea.
W McColman's special, best pair General Purpose Horses—1st Alex. Mercer, Jr., 2nd Geo. Dinwoodie.
J R Trimble's special, Clear Grit Colts, 1 year old—A S VanDusen, W H & J Johnston.
Spring Foal—A Beattie, Geo Stewart.
A Munshaw's special, Lady Driver—Miss Hannah.
J Gordon's special. best Lady Rider—Miss Madill.
W Clayton's special, 2nd best Lady Rider—Miss Donkin.

DURHAM CATTLE.

Bull Calf—R Black, R Leyer.
Cow—E & W S O'Brien, R Black.
2-year-old Heifer—R Black.

AYRSHIRE.

Bull Calf—A Cairns, sr.
Cow—C Konald, A Cairns, sr.

DEVON.

Bull Calf—R Oliver.
Cow—R Oliver.
1-year-old Heifer—R Oliver.

GRADE.

Cow—A White, A White.
2-year-old Heifer—A White, R Black.
1-year-old Heifer—R Black, Jas. Farris.
Heifer Calf—Jas. Farris, J & J Anderson.
Pair Working Oxen—R Oliver, J Milnor.
3-year-old Steers—J Thibaudeau, D McMillen.
2-year-old Steers—Thos. Timbuakle, Wm. Talbot.
Herd, consisting of 1 Bull and 4 females—R Black.
Wm. Richardson's special, fat Ox, Steer, Cow or Heifer, fed on Thorley Cattle Food—E & W S O'Brior.

COTSWOLD SHEEP.

Aged Ram—W Fawcett, W Shepherdson.
Shearling Ram — W Shepherdson, W Fawcett.
Lamb Ram—W Shepherdson, W Shepherdson.
Pair aged Ewes—W Shepherdson, W Shepherdson.
Pair Shearling Ewes—W Shepherdson, Geo. Swanton.
Pair Ewe Lambs—W Shepherdson, W Shepherdson.

LEICESTER SHEEP.

Aged Ram—W Shepherdson, W Fawcett.
Shearling Ram—W Fawcett, Geo. Swanton.
Ram Lamb—W Shepherdson, W Fawcett.
Pair aged Ewes—W Shepherdson, W Fawcett.
Pair Shearling Ewes—W Shepherdson, A Cairns, sr.
Pair Ewe Lambs—W Shepherdson, W Fawcett.

SOUTH DOWN SHEEP.

Aged Ram—W J Piercy.

SHROPSHIRE DOWN.

Aged Ram—Joseph Howe.
Shearling Ram—Thos. Ellis.
Lamb Ram—J Howe, W Shepherdson.
Pair aged Ewes—Thos. Ellis.
Pair Shearling Ewes—Thos. Ellis, J Howe.
Pair Ewe Lambs—Thos. Ellis, J Howe.
Extra prize awarded Geo. Swanton for yearling Cotswold Ram.

SWINE.—BERKSHIRE OR OTHER BLACK BREEDS.

Aged Boar—J Johnston, R Oliver.
Aged Sow—D Stinson, Geo. Swanton.
Sow Pig—J Johnston.

SUFFOLK OR OTHER WHITE BREEDS.

Aged Boar—D Stinson, W H Campaigne.
Boar Pig—W Barnhouse, R Oliver.
Aged Sow—D Stinson, A Munshaw.
Sow Pig—W Barnhouse, R Oliver.

POULTRY.

Pair Brahmas—R Montgomery, R Montgomery.
Pair Leghorn—W Barnhouse, W H Campaigne.
Pair Hamburg—J McGee, R Lever.
Pair Houdans—W Barnhouse, W Barnhouse.
Pair Spanish—R Montgomery, R Montgomery.
Pair Game—R Montgomery, Wm. Hollinshead.
Pair Aylesbury Ducks—W J Cooey, Geo. Swanton.
Pair other Ducks—W Nicholls, D Campbell.
Pair Turkeys—Jas. Beecroft, Thos Elliott.
Pair Geese—A White, J Brodie.

GRAIN.

White Fall Wheat—R Ruthvan, Jacob Holley.
Clawson Fall Wheat—Thos Ellis, R Black.
Any other variety—D Stinson.
Spring Wheat, Glasgow—D Stinson.
Spring Wheat, Russian—J Brodie, James Stewart.
Dr. Sproule, M. P, special, best bushell Russian Wheat—J Brodie.
Spring Wheat, any other variety—James Stewart, Jas Brodie.
Barley—T Kells, J Brodie.
Oats, white—W Fawcett, Jas Stewart.
Oats, black—D Stinson, John Beecroft.
Peas, small—R Ruthvan, Jas Stewart.
Peas, large—J Brodie, W & J Anderson.
Timothy Seed—J Hickling, J Brodie.
Indian Corn, white—E Davis.
Indian Corn, yellow—H Mathewson, W Pickell.
Collection Beans—J McGee, W H Campaigne.

ROOTS AND VEGETABLES.

Early Rose Potatoes—R Black, J Howe.
Any other variety Potatoes—J Howe, J Holley.
Collection Potatoes—J Howe, R Black.
Mangolds, long—H Johnston, R H Stinson.
Mangolds, Globe—R H Stinson, H Mathewson.
Long Blood Beets—R H Stinson, J Farris.
Any other kind Beets—W Barnhouse, Jas Beecroft.
Swedish Turnips—R Black, W & J Anderson.
Other Field Turnips—R Lever, H Johnston
Table Turnips—Thos Leitch, J Milnor.
Field Carrots—Thos Ellis, H Hurd.
Early Horn Carrots—R H Stinson, J Brodie
Parsnips—E Butledge, R H Stinson.
Onions from black seed—Jas Beecroft, John Beecroft.
Potato Onions—A Teeter, Jas Farris.
Cabbage, Win'stadt—A Teeter, Jas Farris.
Cabbage, Drumhead—W Barnhouse.
Cabbage, any other variety—A Teeter, Wm Barnhouse.
Cauliflower—J Milnor.
Celery, white—S Damude, Jas Farris.
Celery, red—W Barnhouse.
Pumpkins—A Teeter, W J Cooey.
Squashes—H Mathewson, D C McDowell.
Citrons—Jas Balmer, J McGee.
Tomatoes—Jas Beecroft, J Brodie.

FRUIT.

Crab Apples—A Cairns, W Barnhouse.
Fall Apples, 3 varieties—R Ruthvan, J Holley.
Winter Apples, 3 varieties—W Norton, John Beecroft.
19 Fall Apples, 1 variety—E Davis, J Holley.
12 Winter Apples, 1 variety—R Gilray, W Norton.
Fall Pears—Alex. Madill, John Beecroft.
Winter Pears—J Brodie, J McGee.
Plums, red and blue—W Norton, Robert Plantt.
Plums, yellow or green—Thos Ellis, J McGee
Grapes—R Gilray, J I Graham.
Canned Fruit—Mrs. W W Trimble, Mrs. Jas Beecroft
Honey—J H Heard.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

5 lbs. Butter—J Abbott, H Johnston, J Hickling.
Pail or crock Butter—E Rutledge, James Farris, Geo Dinwoodie.
50 lb. Tub—Jas Farris, J Abbott, C Stokes
Dr. Sproule's special, best 50 lbs. Butter—Jas Farris.
Cheese Factory made—G Stewart, Thomas Elliott.
Cheese, not factory—W Norton, J Milnor.
Bread—J Abbott, W Norton

LEATHER MANUFACTURES.

Team Harness—J Gordon.
Carriage Harness—J Gordon.
Buggy Harness—J Gordon.
Gents fine sewed Boots—W Barnhouse.
Gents Stoga Boots—W Barnhouse, J Smith
Ladies Boots—J Smith, W Barnhouse.

GENERAL MANUFACTURE.

Lumber Waggon—1st prize protested. 2nd J H Heard.
Democrat Waggon—T & J Ryon.
Buggy, open—J H Heard, J H Heard.
Cutter, single—J H Heard.
Harrows—J H Heard.

DOMESTIC MANUFACTURE.

Blankets, home-made — W. Norton, J Hickling.
Full Cloth, home-made — J Milnor, J Hickling.
Full Cloth, factory-made—J M Burk, W Norton.
Rag Carpet—R Black, S Stokes.
Flannel, home made—J Milnor, J Abbott.
Stocking Yarn—Mrs Thos Ellis, Mrs J Abbott.
Mits, woollen—Mrs J McGee, Mrs J Milhor
Socks, woollen—Mrs J Abbott, Mrs W Norton.
Stockings, woollen—Mrs S Stokes, Mrs J McGee.
Patchwork Quilt—Mrs R Gilray, Mrs J Brodie.
Knitted Quilt—Mrs R Gilray, Mrs W Norton.
Any other kind Quilt—Mrs J M Burk, Mrs G Cruikshank.
Collection Berlin Wool Work—Mrs J Milnor, Mrs R Gilray.
Arrascne Work—Miss L Armstrong, Mrs J Milnor.
Braiding in Cotton—Miss Gilray, Mrs J Farris.
Embroidery in Silk—Miss L Armstrong, Miss C Leitch.
Embroidery in Cotton—Mrs J Milnor, Miss Gilray.
Embroidery in Worsted—Mrs J Milnor, Miss A Leitch.
Crotchet in Cotton—Miss Gilray, Mrs H Mathewson.
Crotchet in Wool—Mrs E Davis, Miss Gilray.
Paint and Honiton Lace—Mrs J Milnor.
Fancy Knitting in Wool—Mrs J Milnor.
Woollen Work on Canvass—Mrs J Milnor, Miss L Armstrong.
Needle Work, ornamental—Miss McGee, Miss Gilray.
Man's Shirt, hand made—Mrs Norton, Mrs Farris.
Rag Mat—Mrs W W Trimble, Mrs W Buchanan.
Macrame Lace—Mrs J Milnor, Miss L Armstrong.
Leather Work, ornamental—Miss Gilray.
Worked Slippers—W Barnhouse, Miss Damude.
Tatting—Miss Hickling.
Wax Fruit—Mrs J Milnor.
Wax Flowers—Miss L Armstrong, Mrs Milnor.
Collection Photos—J Hamilton, J Bulmer.
Crayon Drawing—Miss McDowell, Miss C Leitch.
Cretonne Work—Mrs Milnor, Miss McGee.
Pencil Drawing—Miss McDowell.
Water Color Painting—Miss McDowell, Miss L Armstrong.
Collection Paintings and Drawings—Miss E Richardson, Miss L Armstrong.
M Richardson's special for best sketch from nature, made in 1884—Miss E Richardson.

PLANTS AND FLOWERS.

Table Bouquet—Mrs. Jas Beecroft, Mrs Brodie.
Foliage Plant—Mrs Jas Beecroft.
Geranium—Mrs Jas Beecroft.
Hanging Basket—Mrs Jas Beecroft, Mrs. McDowell.
Calla Dilly—Mrs Damude, Mrs Beecroft.
Heliotrope—Mrs Beecroft.
Begonia—Mrs Hickling, Mrs Bulmer.
Collection Cut Flowers—Mrs Jas Beecroft.
Collection Plants—Mrs Beecroft, Mrs McDowell.

JUDGES.

Horses—J Cruikshank, R Campbell, J Grearson.
Cattle—R Walker, J Hutchinson, S Wiley.
Sheep and Swine—W Buchanan, sr., G Buskin, A Lyons.
Poultry—H Meldrum, J Beecroft.
General Manufacturers—W. Guy, D. J. Shanahan, F. Wait.
Grain and Seeds—J Hickling, R McGowon
Roots, Vegetables and Fruits—R J Sproule, Geo Middleton, R Campbell.
Ladies' Work—Mrs Middleton, Mrs Kells, Miss Page.

National Pills acts promptly upon the Liver, regulate the Bowels and as a purgative are mild and thorough.

A BLUE GRASS PENELOPE.

BY BRET HARTE.

CHAPTER IV.

As Mrs. Tucker, erect, white and rigid, drove away from the tienda, it seemed to her to sink again into the monotonous plain, with all its horrible realities. Except that there was now a new and heart-breaking significance to the solitude and loneliness of the landscape, all that had passed might have been a dream. But as the blood came back to her cheek, and little by little her tingling consciousness returned, it seemed as if her life had been the dream, and this last scene the awakening reality. With eyes smarting with the moisture of shame, the scarlet blood at times dyeing her very neck and temples, she muffled her lowered crest in her shawl and bent over the reins. Bit by bit she recalled, in Poindexter's mysterious caution and strange allusions, the corroboration of her husband's shame and her own disgrace. This was why she was brought hither—the deserted wife, the abandoned confederate! The mocking glitter of the concave vault above her scoured by the incessant wind, the cold stare of the shining pools beyond, the hard outlines of the coast range and the jarring accompaniment of her horse's hoofs and rattling buggy wheels alternately goaded and distracted her. She found herself repeating 'No! no! no!' with the dogged reiteration of fever. She scarcely knew when or how she reached the hacienda. She was only conscious that she entered the patio. The dusty solitude that had before filled her with unrest now came to her like balm. A benumbing peace seemed to fall from the crumbling walls—the peace of utter seclusion, isolation, oblivion. death! Nevertheless, an hour later, when the jingle of spurs and bridle were again heard in the road, she started to her feet with bent brows and a kindling eye, and confronted Capt. Poindexter in the corridor.

"I would not have intruded upon you so soon again," he said gravely, "but I thought I might perhaps spare you a repetition of the scene of this morning. Hear me out, please," he added, with a gentle, half deprecating gesture, as she lifted the beautiful scorn of her eyes to his. "I have just heard that your neighbor, Don Jose Santierra of Los Gatos, is on his way to this house. He once claimed this land and hated your husband, who bought of the rival claimant, whose grant was confirmed. I tell you this," he added, slightly flushing as Mrs. Tucker turned impatiently away, "only to show you that legally he has no rights, and you need not see him unless you choose. I could not stop his coming without perhaps doing you more harm than good; but when he does come, my presence under this roof as your legal counsel will enable you to refer him to me." He stopped. She was pacing the corridor with short, impatient steps, her arms dropped and her hands clasped rigidly before her. "Have I your permission to stay?"

She suddenly stopped in her walk, approached him rapidly, and, fixing her eyes on his, said:

"Do I know all now—everything?"

He could only reply that she had not yet told him what she had heard.

"Well," she said, scornfully," that my husband has been cruelly imposed upon—imposed upon by some wretched woman, who has made him sacrifice his property, his friends, his honor—everything but me."

"Everything but whom?" gasped Poindexter.

"But me!"

Poindexter gazed at the sky, the air, the deserted corridor, the stones of the patio, itself, and then at the inexplicable woman, before him. Then he said gravely, "I think you know everything."

"Then if my husband has left me all he could—this property," she went on rapidly twisting her handkerchief between her fingers, "I can do with it what I like, can't I?"

"You certainly can."

"Then sell it," she said with passionate vehemence. "Sell it—all! everything! And sell these." She darted into her bedroom, and returned with the diamond rings she had torn from her fingers and ears when she entered the house. "Sell them for anything they'll bring—only sell them at once."

"But for what?" asked Poindexter, with demure lips but twinkling eyes.

"To pay the debts that this—this—woman has led him into; to return the money she has stolen!" she went on rapidly, "to keep him from sharing her infamy! Can't you understand?"

"But, my dear madam," began Poindexter, "even if this could be done——"

"Don't tell me 'if it could'—it must be done. Do you think I could sleep under this roof, propped up by the timbers of that ruined tienda? Do you think I could wear those diamonds again, while that termagant shop woman can say that her money bought them? No If you are my husband's friend, you will do this—for—for—his sake." She stopped, locked and interlocked her cold fingers before her, and said hesitatingly and mechanically, "You meant well, Captain Poindexter, in bringing me here, I know! You must not think that I blame you for it—or for the miserable result of it that you have just witnessed. But if I have gained anything by it, for God's sake let me reap it quickly, that I may give it to these people and go! I have a friend who can aid me to get to my husband or to my home in Kentucky, where Spencer will yet find me, I know. I want nothing more." She stopped again. With another woman the pause would have been one of tears. But she kept her head above the flood that filled her heart and the clear eyes fixed upon Poindexter, albeit pained, were undimmed.

"But this would require time," said Poindexter, with a smile of compassionate explanation; "you could not sell now, nobody would buy. Your are safe to hold this property while in actual possession, but you are not strong enough to guarantee it to another. There may still be litigation; your husband has other creditors than these people you have talked with. But while nobody could oust you—the wife who would have the sympathies of judge and jury—it might be a different case with anyone who derived title from you. Any purchaser would know that you could not sell, or, if you did, it would be at a ridiculous sacrifice."

She listened to him abstractedly, walked to the end of the corridor, returned, and without looking up, said:

"I suppose you know her?"

"I beg your pardon?"

"This woman. You have seen her?"

"Never to my knowledge."

"And you are his friend? That's strange." She raised her eyes to his. "Well," she continued impatiently, "who is she? and what is she? You know that surely?"

"I know no more of her than what I have said," said Poindexter. "She is a notorious woman."

The swift color came to Mrs. Tucker's face as if the epithet had been applied to herself. "I suppose," she said, in a dry voice, as if she were asking a business question, but with an eye that showed her rising anger—"I suppose there is some law by which creatures of this kind can be followed and brought to justice—some law that would keep innocent people from suffering for their crimes?"

"I am afraid," said Poindexter, "that arresting her would hardly help these people over in the tienda."

"I am not speaking of them," responded Mrs. Tucker, with a sudden sublime contempt for the people whose cause she had espoused; "I am talking of my husband."

Poindexter bit his lip. "You'd hardly think of bringing back the strongest witness against him," he said bluntly.

Mrs. Tucker dropped her eyes and was silent. A sudden shame suffused Poindexter's cheek; he felt as if he had struck that woman a blow. "I beg your pardon," he said hastily, "I am talking like a lawyer to a lawyer." He would have taken any other woman by the hand in the honest fulness of his apology, but something restrained him here. He only looked down gently on her lowered lashes, and repeated his question, if he should remain during the coming interview with Don Jose. "I must beg you to determine quickly," he added, "I already hear him entering the gate."

"Stay," said Mrs. Tucker, as the ringing of spurs and clatter of hoofs came from the corral. "One moment." She looked up suddenly and said, "How long had he known her?" But before he could reply there was a step in the doorway, and the figure of Don Jose Santierra emerged from the archway.

He was a man slighty past middle age, fair and well shaven, wearing a black broadcloth serape, the deeply ombroidered opening of which formed a collar of silver rays around his neck, while a row of silver buttons, down the side seams of his riding trousers, and silver spurs completed his singular equipment. Mrs. Tucker's swift feminine glance took in these details as well as the deep salutation, more formal than the exuberant frontier politeness she was accustomed to, with which he greeted her. It was enough to arrest her first impulse to retreat. She hesitated and stoppod as Poindexter stepped forward, partly interposing between them, acknowledging Don Jose's distant recognition of himself with an ironical accession of his usual humorous tolerance. The Spaniard did not seem to notice it, but remained gravely silent before Mrs. Tucker, gazing at her with an expression of intent and unconscious absorption.

"You are quite right, Don Jose," said Poindexter, with ironical concern, "it is Mrs. Tucker. Your eyes do not deceive you. She will be glad to do the honors of her house," he continued with a simulation of appealing to her, "unless you visit her on business, when I need not say I shall only too happy to attend you, as before."

Don Jose with a slight lifting of the eyebrows, allowed himself to become conscious of the lawyer's meaning. "It is not of business that I come to kiss the Senora's hand to-day," he replied, with a melancholy softness: "it is as a neighbor, to put myself at her disposition. Ah! what have we here for a lady?" he continued, raising his eyes in depreciation of the surroundings: "a house of nothing, a place of winds and dry bones, without refreshments, or satisfaction or delicacy. The Senora will not refuse to make us proud this day to send her of that which we have in our poor home at Los Gatos, to make her more complete. Of what shall it be? Let her make choice. Or if she would commemorate this day by accepting of our hospitality at Los Gatos, until she shall arrange herself the more to receive us here we shall have too much honor.,'

"The Senora would only find it the more difficult to return to this humble roof again after once leaving it for Don Jose's hospitality," said Poindexter with a demure glance at Mrs. Tucker. But the innuendo seemed to lapse equally unheeded by his fair client and the stranger. Raising her eyes with a certain timid dignity which Don Jose's presence seemed to have called out, she addressed herself to him

"You are very kind and considerate, Senor Santierra, and I thank you. I know that my husband"—she let the clear beauty of her translucent epes rest full on both men—"would thank you too. But I shall not be here long enough to accept your kindness in this house or in your own I have but one desire and object now. It is to dispose of this property—and indeed all I possess—to pay the debt of my husband. It is in your power perhaps, to help me. I am told that you wish to possess Los Cuervos." she went on, equally oblivious of the consciousness that appeared in Don Jose's face, and a humorous perplexity on the brow of Poindexter. "If you can arrange it with Mr. Poindexter, you will find me a liberal vender. That much you can do, and I know you will believe I shall be grateful. You can do no more, unless it be to say to your friends that Mrs Belle Tucker remains here only for that purpose, and to carry out what she knows to be the wishes of her husband." She paused, bent her pretty crest, dropped a quaint curtsey to the superior age, the silvor broid, and the gentlemanly bearing of Don Jose, and with the passing sunshine of a smile disappeared from the corridor.

The two men remained silent for a moment, Don Jose gazing abstractedly at the door through which she had vanished, until Poindexter, with a return of his tolerant smile, said. "You have heard the views of Mrs Tucker. You know the situation as well as she does"

"Ah, yes—possibly better."

Poindexter darted a quick glance at the grave, sallow face of Don Jose, but detecting no unusual significance in his manner, continued, "As you see, she leaves this matter in my hands. Let us talk like business men. Have you any idea of purchasing this property?"

"Of purchasing—ah no."

Poindexter bent his brows, but quickly relaxed them with a smile of humorous forgiveness. "If you have any other idea, Don Jose, I ought to warn you, as Mrs. Tucker's lawyer, that she is in legal possession here, and that nothing but her own act can change that position."

"Ah—so."

Irritated at the shrug which accompanied this, Poindexter continued haughtily, "If I am to understand, you have nothing to say."

"To say—ah yes, possibly. But,"—he glanced toward the door of Mrs. Tucker's room—"not here." He stopped, appeared to recall himself, and with an apologetic smile, and a studied but graceful gesture of invitation, he motioned to the gateway, and said, "Will you ride?"

"What can the fellow be up to?" muttered Poindexter, as with an assenting nod he proceeded to remount his horse. "If he wasn't an old hidalgo I'd mistrust him. No matter. Here goes!"

The Don also remounted his half-broken mustang; they proceeded in solemn silence through the corral, and side by side emerged on the open plain. Poindexter glanced around; no other being was in sight. It was not until the lonely hacienda had also sunk behind them that Don Jose broke the silence.

"You say just now we shall speak as business men I say no, Don Marco; I will not. I shall speak—we shall speak—as gentlemen."

"Go on," said Poindexter, who was beginning to be amused.

"I say just now I will not purchase the rancho from the Senora. And why? Look you, Don Marco;" he reined in his horse, thrust his hand under his serape, and drew out a folded document: "This is why."

With a smile, Poindexter took the paper from his hand and opened it. But the smile faded from his lips as he read. With blazing eyes he spurred his horse beside the Spaniard almost unseating him, and said sternly, "What does this mean?"

"What does it mean?" repeated Don Jose, with equally flashing eyes, "I'll tell you. It means that your client, this man, Spencer Tucker, is a Judas—a traitor! It means that he gave Los Cuervos to his mistress a year ago, and she sold it to me—to me you hear—me, Jose Santerra, the day before she left! It means that the coyote of a Spencer, the thief who bought these lands of a thief, and gave them to a thief, has tricked you all. Look," he said. rising in his saddle. holding the paper like a baton, and defining with a sweep of his arm the whole level plain, "all these lands were once mine—they are mine again to-day. Do I want to purchase Los Cuervos? you ask, for you will speak of the business. Well, listen. I have purchased Los Cuervos, and here is the deed."

"But it has never been recorded," said Poindexter, with a carelessness he was far from feeling.

"Of a verity, no. Do you wish that I should record it?" asked Don Jose, with a return of his simple gravity.

Poindexter bit his lip. "You said we were to talk like gentleman," he returned. "Do you think you have come into possession of this alleged deed like a gentleman?"

Don Jose shrugged his shoulders. "I found it tossed in the lap of a harlot. I bought it for a song. Eh—what would you?"

"Would you sell it again for a song?" asked Poindexter.

"Ah! what is this?" said Don Jose, lifting his iron gray brows: "but a moment ago we would sell everything for any money. Now we would buy. Is it so?"

"One moment, Don Jose," said Poindexter with a baleful light in his dark eyes. "Do I understand that you are the ally of Spencer Tucker and his mistress—that you intend to turn this doubly betrayed wife from the only roof she has to cover her?"

"Ah, I comprehend not. You heard her say she wished to go. Perhaps it may please me to distribute largess to these cattle-yonder; I do not say no. More she does not ask. But you, Don Marco, of whom are you advocate? You abandon your client's mistress for the wife—is it so?"

"What I may do you will learn hereafter," said Poindexter, who had regained his composure, suddenly reining up his horse. "As our paths seem likely to diverge, they had better begin now. Good morning."

"Patience, my friend, patience! Ah, blessed St. Anthony, what these Americans are! Listen. For what you shall do, I do not inquire. The question is to me, what I"—he emphasized the pronoun by tapping himself on the breast—'I, Jose Santierra, will do. Well, I shall tell you. To-day—nothing. To morrow—nothing. For a week, for a month—nothing! After, we shall see."

Poindexter paused thoughtfully. "Will you give your word, Don Jose, that you will not press the claim for a month?"

"Truly, on one condition. Observe! I do not ask you for an equal promise—that you will not take this time to defend yourself." He shrugged his shoulders. "No! it is only this. You shall promise that during that time the Senora Tucker shall remain ignorant of this document."

Poindexter hesitated a moment. "I promise," he said at last.

"Good. Adois. Don Marco."

"Adois, Don Jose."

The Spaniard put spurs to his mustang and gallopped off in the direction of Los Gatos. The lawyer remained for a moment gazing on his retreating but victorious figure. For the first time the old look of humorous toleration with which Mr. Poindexter was in the habit of regarding all human infirmity gave way to something like bitterness. "I might have guessed it," he said, with a slight rise of color. "He's an old fool; and she—well, perhaps it's all the better for her!" He glanced tenderly in the direction of Los Cuervos, and then turned his head toward the embarvadero.

As the afternoon wore on, a creaking, antiquated oxcart arrived at Los Cuervos, bearing several articles of furniture, and some tasteful ornaments from Los Gatos, at the same time that a young Mexican girl mysteriously appeared in the kitchen, as a temperary assistant of the decrepit Concha. These were, both clearly attributable to Don Jose, whose visit was not so remote, but that these delicate attentions might have been already projected before Mrs. Tucker had declined them, and she could not without marked discourtesy, reject them now.

She did not wish to seem discourteous; she would like to have been more civil to the old gentleman, who still retained the evidences of a picturesque and decorous past, and a repose so different from the life that was perplexing her. Reflecting that if he bought the estate these things would be ready for his hand and with a woman's instinct recognizing their value in setting off the house to other purchasers' eyes, she took a pleasure in tastefully arranging them, and even found herself speculating how she might have enjoyed them herself had she been able to keep possession of the property. After all, it would not have been so lonely if refined and gentle neighbors, like this old man, would have sympathised with her; she had an instinctive feeling that, in their own hopeless decay and hereditary unfitness for this new civilization they would have been more tolerant of her husband's failure than his own kind. She could not believe that Don Jose really hated her husband for buying off the successful claimant, as there was no other legal title. Allowing herself to become interested in the guileless gossip of the new handmaiden—proud of her broken English—she was drawn into a sympathy with the grave simplicity of Don Jose's character—a relic of that true nobility which placed the descendant of the Castilians and this daughter of a free people on the same level.

In this way the second day of her occupancy of Los Cuervos closed, with dun clouds along the gray horizon, and the paroxysms of hysterical wind growing fainter and fainter outside the walls with the moon rising after nightfall, and losing itself in silent and mysterious confidences with drifting scud. She went to bed early, but awoke past midnight, hearing, as she thought, her own name called. The impression was so strong upon her that she rose, and, hastily enwrapping herself, went to the dark embrasures of the oven-shaped windows and looked out. The dwarfed oak beside the window was still drooping from a passed shower, but the level waste of marsh and meadow beyond seemed to advance and recede with the coming and going of the moon. Again she heard her name called, and this time in accents so strangely familiar that with a slight cry she ran into the corridor, crossed the patio, and reached the open gate. The darkness that had, even in this brief interval, again fallen upon the prospect she tried in vain to pierce with eye and voice. A blank silence followed. Then the veil was suddenly withdrawn, the vast plain, stretching from the mountain to the sea, shone as clearly as in the light of day; the moving current of the channel glittered like black pearls, the stagnant pools like molten lead; but not a sign of life nor motion broke the monotony of the broad expanse. She must have surely dreamed it. A chill wind drove her back to the house again; she entered her bedroom, and in half an hour she was in a peaceful sleep.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Who Struck Billy Patterson?

I did!

I am an old man now, and the sands of life are nearly run, and I cannot be far distant from that traveller whence no bourne returns, and I have decided to make a clean breast of the whole matter, especially as nothing further is to be gained by lying. Do you happen to have a quid pro quo about you? Thanks.

Yes, I struck Billy Patterson!

You see we were boys together, him and me. We went to the same district school in the back woods of Troy, N. Y., and we both loved the same girl; her name was Helen, too; no, it was Helen Jones, come to think of it. We swapped chewing-gum and pocket-knives, and played hookey at recess. I loved Bill like a brosher. You know how brothers generally love each other. I was the very boy history tells about who gave his chum the brown side of a russet apple and said: "Bite bigger, Billy." I mean it sarcastic like. Billy didn't bite any bigger because he couldn't; he got away with the whole apple at the first mouthful.

Strange what large aches from little oak-horns grow. Billy and me quarreled. He said my skull wasn't any thicker than a sheet of brown paper; I told him it was as thick as his, and thicker too; he threw a paper wad that hit the master. Then he said I done it! Then I turned—even a worm will turn and I wasn't no worm—and yelled that his sister had red hair!

To my dying day I shall never forget the look he gave me! It was full of concentrated lie; he squinted and that made it worse. It hit me on the left shoulder, and thrilled my being, then it glanced off into my boots. (This is a figure of speech. I was barefoot.)

I struck him then in self-defense. It was a hard whack just behind the ear, and I rather guess Bill saw more stars than he had names for in his astronomy. I heard the master say in a voice of thunder:

"Who struck Billy Patterson?"

I held up my hand. The master told me to rise. I rose. Then, with the unblushing effrontery of youth and a glance of malignant triumph at the snuffling Billy, I answered in the language of history:

"I cannot tell a lie, sir; I don't know."

This late confession is hastened by the article in a recent issue, which assumes that Billy Patterson was baldha Pathan a sun-god of some ancient order. Billy might have looked like a sun-flower with his carroty top-knot, but he acted like a son of a gun and hadn't the first principles of even a heathen god. This is his true story that I'm telling now, so help me John Rogers, and the oldest inhabitants of Troy can vouch for it. I never knew what become of Billy.

How Fish are Spread.

In looking over the most recent faunal lists of this portion of the country, writes Dr. C C Abbott in his forthcoming "Rambles About Home," I find that much of our zoological literature is somewhat amusing. By a preconceived notion of what should be the geographical distribution of the fishes, and other animals as well, these "systematic" writers gravely assert that in such a river such a fish is found, but that it never wanders either to the eastward or westward. Perhaps originally this was true of our rivers, as the river itself determined the range of specific variation that has ultimately come about; but no river could retain all the species that originated in it. There are too many possible ways by which fish can be safely transported long distances for us to assert that none of them have operated in stocking a neighboring stream with species not native and to the manner born. There is undoubted evidence on record of whirlwinds gathering up immense numbers of minute fish and landing them miles away. These showers of fishes, frogs, and even salamanders, are not unknown, even if they are uncommon; and strange would it be if all such wind-transported species should fall upon dry ground, and never into the water. Fertilized eggs, too, can likewise be blown a long distance even over low ranges of hills which sometimes separate river valleys, and so give rise to a race of fishes that previously were unknown in the locality. Eggs, too, might readily adhere to the mud that often clings to the feet of wading birds, and would thus be gently replaced in a distant river, miles away from that in which they were deposited by the parent fish. The present extensive system of canals also has tended to mingle the ichthyic faunas of our various river systems. And when all these possible, probable and actual conditions are considered it need excite no wonder if in any one of our rivers or its tributaries we now find occasional individuals of unsuspected species.

Origin of Men of Genius.

Columbus was the son of [illegible] weaver himself. Rabelais was the son of [illegible] apothecary; Claude Lorraine was [illegible] pastry cook. Moliere was the son of [illegible] tapestry maker. Cervantes was a common soldier. Homer was the son of a [illegible] farmer. Demosthenes was the son of [illegible] ler. Oliver Cromwell was the son of [illegible] brewer. Howard was an apprentice [illegible] grocer. Franklin was a journeyman [illegible] son of a tallow-candler and soap boiler [illegible] Thomas, Bishop of Worcester, was the [illegible] of a linen draper. Daniel De Foe was [illegible] hosier and the son of a butcher. Wh[illegible] was the son of an innkeeper at Glo[illegible] Bishop Prideaux worked in the kitchen [illegible] Exeter College, Oxford. Cardinal W[illegible] was the son of a butcher. Ferguson [illegible] shepherd. Dean Tucker was the son [illegible] small farmer in Cardiganshire, and [illegible] ed his journeys to Oxford on foot. [illegible] Halley was the son of a soap boiler [illegible] Shoreditch. Joseph Hall, Bishop of [illegible] wich, was the son of a farmer at Ashby-de-le-Zouch. Lucian was the son of a maker [illegible] statuary. Virgil was the son of a po[illegible] Horace was the son of a shopkeeper. Shake[illegible] speare was the son of a wool-stapler. M[illegible] was the son of a money scrivener. [illegible] was the son of a merchant. Robert B[illegible] was the son of a ploughman in Ayrshire.

A Hero of the Rockies.

Long before Horace Greely had made [illegible] self famous Hank Monk was a hero [illegible] the heroes of the Pacific coast. H[illegible] perhaps, the first man to use the [illegible] double-barrel shotgun, which Wells-F[illegible] messengers made famous in their [illegible] battles with stage robbers. The fact [illegible] Hank Monk was such a reckless dri[illegible] that, while every one was proud of the [illegible] of having once crossed the Sierras with [illegible] no treasure messenger was willing to [illegible] a regular thing of it. For it was univer[illegible] conceded that it was only a question of [illegible] when Hank Monk and his new [illegible] "Tally-ho" stage, along with his six h[illegible] would be tumbled from the heights into [illegible] of the innumerable gorges that lay yawn[illegible] under his narrow span of road around [illegible] mountain peaks.

It was the ingenuity of Monk that in[illegible] duced the short double-barrel shot gun. [illegible] he did not carry it under his cloak [illegible] cock lifted and finger on trigger. No[illegible] of that sort; his hands were too full [illegible] ten or a dozen reins for that. He [illegible] had the gun pointed down on the side [illegible] leg, with the muzzle just peeping th[illegible] the sole of his heavy boots. And n[illegible] was permitted to know of the presen[illegible] this arm at all. It was known that [illegible] ried his bowie knife down the back of [illegible] neck so as to be in easy reach wh[illegible] pushed back his broad hat to get a [illegible] look at his enemy; but the novel [illegible] gun no one knew anything about; [illegible] even after he had twice been attacked [illegible] had thrice beaten off the robbers. [illegible] that the first time he used this [illegible] he stopped the stage, and was slowly [illegible] ing down the treasure box to the [illegible] when, getting his leg in range, he emp[illegible] a load of buckshot into the robber's [illegible] A second shot into the crowd of sur[illegible] robbers and he dashed away with all [illegible] desperate speed down the mountain. [illegible] even then no one knew who fired the [illegible] The robbers believed it was all the wor[illegible] the passengers inside the stage.

Purely Vegetable.

First the bud, then the blossom, [illegible] the perfect fruit. These are the se[illegible] stages of some of the most importa[illegible] gredients composing the painless and [illegible] corn cure—Putnam's Painless Corn [illegible] tractor. The juice of plants greatly [illegible] centrated and purified, gums and b[illegible] in harmonious union, all combined [illegible] the grand results. Putnam's Ex[illegible] makes no sore spot, does not lay [illegible] up for a week, but goes on quietly [illegible] its work until a perfect cure results. [illegible] ware of acid substitues.

It is stated that some enterprising [illegible] kees have adopted the Piute dish of [illegible] hopper soup, as a delicacy. It ought [illegible] make a good spring entree.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, [illegible] Baggage expressage and Carriage Hire [illegible] stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, op[illegible] Grand Central Depot 600 elegant rooms [illegible] up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 a[illegible] wards per day. European plan. El[illegible] Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse [illegible] stages and elevated railroads to all d[illegible] Families can live better for less money a[illegible] Grand Union Hotel than at any other [illegible] class hotel in the city.

Are shrouds classed as kilt suits!

Young Men! Read This.

The Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, M[illegible] offer to send their celebrated El[illegible] Volatic Belt and other Electric Appli[illegible] on trial for thirty days, to men (you[illegible] old) afflicted with nervous debility, l[illegible] vitality and manhood, and all ki[illegible] troubles. Also for rheumatism, neur[illegible] paralysis, and many other diseases. C[illegible] plete restoration to health, vigor and [illegible] hood guaranteed. No risk is incurred [illegible] thirty days trial is allowed. Write [illegible] at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

What is the difference between the [illegible] prietor of a cattle train and a sea capt[illegible] One ships his steers and the other steers [illegible] ship. Hence these steers.

What's the Use?

Why suffer a single moment, when [illegible] can get immediate relief from in[illegible] or external pain by the use of Po[illegible] NERVILINE, the great pain cure? [illegible] viline has never been known to fail. [illegible] a 10 cent sample bottle. You will fi[illegible] just as recommended. Neuralgia, [illegible] ache, cramps, headache, and all s[illegible] complaints disappear as if by magic [illegible] Nerviline is used. Large bottles [illegible] cents. Test bottles 10 cents, at d[illegible] gists and country dealers.

The credit system has its drawbacks [illegible] business, but in truly good newspa[illegible] it is highly approved. It is a wise pa[illegible] graph that knows its own father.

There are lots of people going around grumbling, [illegible] half sick at the Stomach all the time; who might [illegible] well and happy, if they only used Dr. Carson's S[illegible] Bitters occasionally. It is a splendid Blood P[illegible] All Druggists 50 cents.

"No," said an old lady, "I'm not o[illegible] talk agin my neighbors, or say anything [illegible] hind their backs. Now, there is [illegible] Brown, she who lives over in the c[illegible] house. I may not like her very well, [illegible] there is no reason why I should run [illegible] down. But I do feel miserably sorry [illegible] poor Mr. Brown and the children."

[illegible]GRICULTURAL

[illegible]TURAL NOTES.

[illegible] the corn stalks low—just above [illegible]

[illegible] are to plant a bed of hyacin[illegible] [illegible] ets. It will delight you next spri[illegible]

[illegible] ntly sixteen carloads of Texas m[illegible] [illegible] tallions were shipped from New [illegible] [illegible] or Constantinople.

[illegible] n different parts of Colorado come [illegible] that the grazing is better than it [illegible] been in a dozen years.

[illegible] live stock papers say that never [illegible] story of the country has there been [illegible] drouth. Stock is already suffer[illegible]

[illegible] of hardy perennials may now [illegible] Save the seeds of the gladioli. T[illegible] [illegible] ly raised from seed, and will blo[illegible] [illegible] ways—sometimes in two.

[illegible] transplant trees or shrubs j[illegible] [illegible] as the leaves begin to change col[illegible] [illegible] best time, because the roots [illegible] longer time to become settled in [illegible]

[illegible] is the time to paint the house, [illegible] [illegible] ses, and fences. A little varnish [illegible] [illegible] ist added to the lead, will prevent [illegible] [illegible] om rubbing off like white-wash i[illegible] [illegible] ra.

[illegible] keeping large flocks of poultry w[illegible] [illegible] advantage in separating the coc[illegible] [illegible] hens and keeping each by the[illegible] [illegible] until mid-winter.

[illegible] France, eggs are sorted and sized [illegible] [illegible] them through a ring. The avera[illegible] [illegible] must enter a ring four centimete[illegible] [illegible] eter; the small ones must enter [illegible] [illegible] ree centimeters.

[illegible] of the detractions from clematis c[illegible] [illegible] disease which has eluded all rem[illegible] An Illinois florist however finds th[illegible] [illegible] rm powder put about the collar [illegible] [illegible] t is a remedy.

[illegible] olorado wool-grower says: "Wha[illegible] [illegible] en need most is unity of action [illegible] [illegible] t it they can not obtain railro[illegible] [illegible] r mutton or wool." The same r[illegible] [illegible] pplies to growers of stock of othe[illegible]

[illegible] Denver Live Stock Record says th[illegible] [illegible] rloads of unbroken Colorado horse[illegible] [illegible] shipped in a few days for Europe [illegible] [illegible] re all half Norman, of good size an[illegible] [illegible] nd will be placed on the London ma[illegible]

[illegible] od farmer will be long without plat[illegible] [illegible] scales to weigh stock or produce tha[illegible] [illegible] goes to market. The use of these [illegible] [illegible] will pay better interest on their cos[illegible] [illegible] ll that of many other implements o[illegible]

[illegible] in their food when cooked, for poul[illegible] [illegible] very proper seasoning, but salt given [illegible] [illegible] w state is deleterious, if much of i[illegible] [illegible] by fowls. We do not recommend [illegible] in any form save mixed with thei[illegible] [illegible] scalded meal and boiled vegetables.

[illegible] ides that apples dry up the flow of [illegible] [illegible] les from turning cows into orchards [illegible] up the fallen fruit. They get a very [illegible] supply, and after heavy winds un[illegible] [illegible] ly get too many. A few fed daily [illegible] rease the flow, and the amount fed [illegible] o gradually be increased with bene[illegible]

[illegible] is a great advantage in subsoil plow[illegible] [illegible] wheat. The colder and poorer sub[illegible] [illegible] t turned up for a seed bed, nor do [illegible] at roots penetrate it deeply in the [illegible] But next spring and summer this [illegible] subsoil is a reservoir for water, giv[illegible] [illegible] t as most needed to perfect the head [illegible]

[illegible] er Trail, Colo., a bunch of wethers [illegible] ng 111 pounds lately sold for $3.33 [illegible] A short time before they had clipped [illegible] unds of wool each, which at 15 cents [illegible] nd will bring the income from each [illegible] p to $4 53. Yet 'tis said that sheep-[illegible] the West are discouraged by their [illegible] ts.

[illegible] has been said in regard to the hardi[illegible] [illegible] the beautiful Japanese maples, and [illegible] conflicting experiences are reported. [illegible] llowing from W. Falconer in the [illegible] er's Monthly refers to their hardiness [illegible] ltivation in New England: "Shelter, [illegible] summer and winter, has much to do [illegible] eir sucessful cultivation. They will [illegible] n sandy or loamy soils. Most of the [illegible] d more delicately covered varieties [illegible] nerally increased be grafting, and [illegible] them by layering. I have raised ex[illegible] [illegible] plants from layers left till the second [illegible] efore disconnecting them from the [illegible]

Horse Notes.

[illegible] authenticated reports from all sec[illegible] [illegible] f the country indicate that the sup[illegible] [illegible] ood carriage horses is not equal to [illegible] nand, and prices on this class of ani[illegible] [illegible] re likely to rule higher for some time [illegible] than they have averaged during the [illegible] y years. Speaking of this state of [illegible] "Observer," in the National Live [illegible] Journal, remarks that "there is a [illegible] in the market of well bred, high-[illegible] carriage horses; they have doubled in [illegible] within the last few years. The man [illegible] n supply this demand with a highly-[illegible] powerful breed, possessing the ines[illegible] [illegible] qualities of speed and endurance for [illegible] g loads, and endowed with a kind, [illegible] t disposition, with good spirits, and [illegible] ence of all irritability, will quad-[illegible] he value of the breed, and furnish the [illegible] nity with a safe and agreeable family [illegible]

[illegible] utiful form, superlative action and [illegible] disposition are what constitute the [illegible] f family horses. It costs no more to [illegible] high priced horse than it does a low [illegible] mongrel. The difference in their re-[illegible] value is more than the cost of produc-[illegible] The more good qualities concentrated [illegible] family, the higher will rise the mar-[illegible] e of the produce of that family. If [illegible] succeed in breeding docility into our [illegible] a good, kind, fearless disposition and [illegible] ence of all vices that horse flesh is [illegible] the family could ride after such a [illegible] disposition without risk of life or [illegible]

Look to the Fodder.

[illegible] just the time now for all owners of [illegible] to look well to the fodder. Dry, hard, [illegible] tible feed promotes what is known as [illegible] red water, mad itch, and other dis-[illegible] hich prevail in the fall. When the [illegible] poor, then is the time to make use of [illegible] the cheap linseed cake meal; or of [illegible] alone, which is nutritive and health-

Origin of Rats & Mice.

Columbus was the son of [illegible]
weaver himself. Rabelais [illegible] pothecary; Claude Lorraine was [illegible] astry cook. Moliere was the son of pestry maker. Cervantes was the son of oldier. Homer was the son of a rmer. Demosthenes was the son of a r. Oliver Cromwell was the son of rewer. Howard was an apothecary rocer. Franklin was a journeyman printer n of a tallow-chandler and soap boiler.
homas, Bishop of Worcester, was the a linen draper. Daniel De Foe was sier and the son of a butcher. Whitefield as the son of an innkeeper at Gloucester.
shop Prideaux worked in the kitchen
eter College, Oxford. Cardinal Wolsey as the son of a butcher. Ferguson was epherd. Dean Tucker was the son of all farmer in Cardiganshire, and perfected his journeys to Oxford on foot. Bloomfield alley was the son of a soap boiler oreditch. Joseph Hall, Bishop of Norwich, ch, was the son of a farmer at Ashby-de-la-Zouch. Lucian was the son of a maker tuary. Virgil was the son of a potter.
race was the son of a shopkeeper. Shakspeare are was the son of a wool-stapler. Milton s the son of a money scrivener. Pope s the son of a merchant. Robert Burns
s the son of a ploughman in Ayrshire.

A Hero of the Rockies.

ng before Horace Greely had made his famous Hank Monk was a hero among heroes of the Pacific coast. His haps, the first man to use the doubleble-barrel shotgun, which Wells-Fargo ssengers made famous in their bloody tles with stage robbers. The facts of nk Monk was such a reckless driver
t, while every one was proud of the honor aving once crossed the Sierras with his reasure messenger was willing to make gular thing of it. For it was universally ceded that it was only a question of time n Hank Monk and his new famous ally-ho" stage, along with his six horses, ld be tumbled from the heights into one he innumerable gorges that lay yawning er his narrow span of road around ntain peaks.
was the ingenuity of Monk that introduced d the short double-barrel shot gun. He id not carry it under his cloak with lifted and finger on trigger. Nothing hat sort; his hands were too full of r a dozen reins for that. His simple the gun pointed down on the side of with the muzzle just peeping through ole of his heavy boots. And no one permitted to know of the presence arm at all. It was known that he carried his bowie knife down the back of so as to be in easy reach when ed back his broad hat to get a good at his enemy; but the novel fact is no one knew anything about; no, not after he had twice been attacked and thrice beaten off the robbers. I am told the first time he used this weapon opped the stage, and was slowly handing own the treasure box to the landlord, getting his leg in range, he emptied
d of buckshot into the robber's nose.
ond shot into the crowd of surprised rs and he dashed away with all rate speed down the mountain. And hen no one knew who fired the shots.
bbers believed it was all the work of assengers inside the stage.

Purely Vegetable.

st the bud, then the blossom, then erfect fruit. These are the seven of some of the most important ents composing the painless and ure—Putnam's Painless Corn
r. The juice of plants greatly concentrated ted and purified, gums and balsams monious union, all combined, give and results. Putnam's Extractor no sore spot, does not lay a man a week, but goes on quietly doing rk until a perfect cure results. Beware f acid substitutes.

stated that some enterprising Yankee ave adopted the Piute dish of grasshopper soup, as a delicacy. It ought to be a good spring entree.

Important.

you visit or leave New York City, save e expressage and Carriage Hire, stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Union Hotel than at any other first-class tel in the city.

hro'ds classed as kilt suits!

Young Men! Read This.

Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich.,
o send their celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belt and other Electric Appliances for thirty days, to men (young or old) ted with nervous debility, loss of vitality and manhood, and all kindred troubles.
Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis,
s, and many other diseases. Complete storation to health, vigor and manhood aranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty lays trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

is the difference between the Pope
a cattle train and a sea captain?
s his steers and the other steers his
Hence these steers.

What's the Use?

suffer a single moment, when you can immediate relief from intense pain nal pain by the use of Polson's NERVINE, the great pain cure? Nervine as never been known to fail. Trial t sample bottle. You will find it recommended. Neuralgia, toothache, amps, headache, and all similar pains
nts disappear as if by magic when Nervine
e is used. Large bottles 75 cents.
Test bottles 10 cents, at druggists country dealers.

edit system has its drawbacks, but but in truly good newspapers ly approved. It is a wise parent at knows its own father.

lots of people going around grumbling about the Stomach all the time; who might be ppy, if they only used Dr. Carson's Stomach sionally. It is a splendid Blood Purifier.
ts 50 cents.

said an old lady, "I'm not one of my neighbors, or say anything ir backs. Now, there is Mrs.
she who lives over in the corner
I may not like her very well, still no reason why I should run her
But I do feel miserably sorry for Brown and the children."

AGRICULTURAL:

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

the corn stalks low—just above the pare to plant a bed of hyacinths,

, etc. It will delight you next spring.

ually sixteen carloads of Texas mares gallons were shipped from New Orleans ter Constantinople.

ree different parts of Colorado come reports that the grazing is better than it has been in a dozen years.

ew live stock papers say that never in mory of the country has there been so a drouth. Stock is already suffering

ly.

ds of hardy perennials may now be Save the seeds of the gladioli. They ily raised from seed, and will bloom ree years—sometimes in two.

ay transplant trees or shrubs just as the leaves begin to change color.
the best time, because the roots will a longer time to become settled in the w is the time to paint the house, the ns, and fences. A little varnish or oint added to the lead, will prevent the from rubbing off like white-wash in a

ers.

ee keeping large flocks of poultry will an advantage in separating the cocks like hens and keeping each by themselves until mid-winter.

France, eggs are sorted and sized by g them through a ring. The average es must enter a ring four centimeters ameter; the small ones must enter a ree centimeters.

e of the detractions from clematis culture
a disease which has eluded all remedies.
An Illinois florist however finds that rum powder put about the collar of ant is a remedy.

Colorado wool-grower says: "What men need most is unity of action, ut it they can not obtain railroad for mutton or wool." The same remedy applies to growers of stock of other

Denver Live Stock Record says that carloads of unbroken Colorado horses be shipped in a few days for Europe.
are all half Norman, of good size and
and will be placed on the London market.

good farmer will be long without platform cales to weigh stock or produce that poses to market. The use of these will pay better interest on their cost will that of many other implements on in their food when cooked, for poultry a very proper seasoning, but salt given raw state is deleterious, if much of it en by fowls. We do not recommend e in any form save mixed with their of scalded meal and boiled vegetables.

ides that apples dry up the flow of ries from turning cows into orchards k up the fallen fruit. They get a very n supply, and after heavy winds unwisely get too many. A few fed daily crease the flow, and the amount fed ld gradually be increased with benefit.

re is a great advantage in subsoil plowing wheat. The colder and poorer subsoil not turned up for a seed bed, nor do heat roots penetrate it deeply in the

But next spring and summer this ed subsoil is a reservoir for water, given out as most needed to perfect the head rain.

Deer Trail, Colo., a bunch of wethers ging 111 pounds lately sold for $3.33
A short time before they had clipped pounds of wool each, which at 15 cents und will bring the income from each up to $4 53. Yet 'tis said that sheepmen of the West are discouraged by their ch has been said in regard to the hardiness of the beautiful Japanese maples, and conflicting experiences are reported.

following from W. Falconer in the er's Monthly refers to their hardiness ultivation in New England: "Shelter, n summer and winter, has much to do their successful cultivation. They will on sandy or loamy soils. Most of the ed more delicately covered varieties erally increased be grafting, and them by layering. I have raised excellent plants from layers left till the second before disconnecting them from the Horse Notes.

ll authenticated reports from all sections of the country indicate that the supply good carriage horses is not equal to mand, and prices on this class of animals are likely to rule higher for some time e than they have averaged during the w years. Speaking on this state of "Observer," in the National Live Journal, remarks that "there is a y in the market of well bred, high-carriage horses; they have doubled in within the last few years. The man n supply this demand with a highly-, powerful breed, possessing the inese qualities of speed and endurance for ng loads, and endowed with a kind, t disposition, with good spirits, and ence of all irritability, will quadruple the value of the breed, and furnish the unity with a safe and agreeable family autiful form, superlative action and disposition are what constitute the of family horses. It costs no more to a high priced horse than it does a low mongrel. The difference in their relative value is more than the cost of production.

The more good qualities concentrated family, the higher will rise the market ice of the produce of that family. If succeed in breeding docility into our a good, kind, fearless disposition and sence of all vices that horse flesh is
, the family could ride after such a disposition without risk of life or

Look to the Fodder.

is just the time now for all owners of
to look well to the fodder. Dry, hard, tible feed promotes what is known as ss, red water, mad itch, and other diseases which prevail in the fall. When the e poor, then is the time to make use of the cheap linseed cake meal; or of alone, which is nutritive and healthfully laxative. But the prevalent bad water is the worst of all, loaded as it is with decaying matter and foul with filth. The first thought of the [illegible] should be to secure a supply of pure water; with this, cattle will worry through a good deal of poor food; but dry, hard feed without water is more than any animal can stand.

Isn't it just a bit cruel to make a horse work seven hours in the hot sun, dry wind, and dust, without water? The stomach of the horse is small. Why not water, say five times a day! No hurt comes of it, and the horse will be refreshed and work better.
This matter of watering horses should receive considerable attention just at this season—when the horses are being worked in the horse powers of thrashing machines or are pulling the plow through the dry, hard ground.

Wheat After Corn.

The practice of sowing wheat after corn, is for the Northern farmer, a striking feature in Southern farm management, and might, in some instances, be adopted also in northern sections to good advantage.

Early in September, when the corn has come to maturity, three or four rows, at intervals of about 60 feet, are cut down. The open spaces are then thoroughly harrowed and sown to wheat with the drill. Afterwards the corn is all cut and placed in shocks on these seeded strips, when the rest of the field is ready for narrow and drill. If the soil is hard or baked, the harrow is often weighted down with a short piece of timber or a small log, for the purpose of making a smooth and mellow seed bed.

The advantages of this method in a mild climate are obvious. The labor of preparing the field for the drill is reduced to a minimum.
Late weeds are destroyed, and a stop is put to the production of seed by them.
The only disadvantageous circumstance connected it is that it may put off the seeding to a rather late season; but I am told by some very successful Southern farmers that the yield of wheat in corn land, after a favorable Fall, generally exceeds that on stubble, which, was treated with plow and harrow.

There are many localities in New York
State and elsewhere with lands full of weed growth, where the corn crop matures early enough to make the adoption of the above practice feasible. But rye, more particularly, should always be grown after corn and potatoes. Save the labor of plowing, and make your land free from weeds.

Jersey Cows for the Farm.

Now the farmer's opportunity appears.
The recent sales of Jersey cattle have shown that good animals are sold and can be procured at reasonable farmers' prices. It is not to be supposed that Jersey cows will go a-begging for a good many years yet; for, all told, there is about one cow only for 300 farmers if all the country were equally divided and every farmer who keeps cows for butter should have either pure Jersey cows or good half bred ones. For the latter, of course the farmer needs to have a good Jersey bull and to breed his best cows to it. The produce in most cases will be equal to that of the pure bred cows, and in saying this, a breeder or farmer who understands something about breeding stock will realize that the very highest character for excellence is given to the breed. The Jerseys have made their reputation, not only for having among them the largest butter producers of any breed, for weight, and feed consumed, but for being on the average, the best of cows for the production of butter for farmers and dairymen. And the farmers are fast finding this out, for the Jersey colors and form are visible in thousands of fields, where the half bred cattle, scarcely to be distinguished from the pure bred, may be seen in every part of the country, North, South, East and West. It is to be hoped that the breeders who have hitherto led the crowd in holding their cattle at high prices will not selfishly sacrifice their bull calves, lest the stock may become too common, but offer them to farmers at such prices as they can well afford to pay, and which will amply remunerate the breeders for their expenditure.

Many farmers have already supplied themselves with pure bred stock for making butter, and having the skill to handle the butter as it deserves, are doing a good business in selling their product at double the ordinary market prices.

Testing People's Temper.

Another conspicious way in which one person differs from another is in temper.
Some men are easily provoked, others remain cheerful even when affairs go very contrary to their liking. We all know specimens of good and bad tempered persons, and all of us could probably specify not a few appropriate test conditions to try the temper in various ways, and elicit definite responses. There is no doubt that the temper of a dog can be tested. Many boys do it habitually, and learn to a nicety how much each will put up with, without growling or showing other signs of resentiment.
They do the same to one another, and gauge each other's tempers accurately.

It is difficult to speak of tests of character without thinking of Benjamin Franklin's amusing tale of the "Handsome and the Deformed Leg," and there is no harm in quoting it because, however grotesque, it exemplifies the principle of tests. In it he describes two sorts of people: those who habitually dwell on the pleasant circumstances of the moment, and those who have no eyes but for the unpleasing ones. He tells how a philosophical friend took special precautions to avoid those persons who, being discontented themselves, sour the pleasures of society, offend many people and make themselves everywhere disagreeable.
In order to discover a pessimist at first sight, he cast about for an instrument. He of course possessed a thermometer to test heat, and a barometer to tell the air pressure, but he had no instrument to test the characteristic of which we are speaking.
After much pondering he hit upon a happy idea. He chanced to have one remarkably handsome leg, and one that by some accident was crooked and deformed, and these he used for the purpose. If a stranger regarded his ugly leg more than his handsome one, he doubted him. If he spoke of it and took no notice of the handsome leg, the philosopher determined to avoid his further acquaintance. Franklin sums up by saying that every one has not this two legged instrument, but every one with a little attention may observe the signs of a carping and fault finding disposition.

The Method of Climbing a Church Steeple.

A man, said a steeple climber to a reporter of the Boston Globe, cannot go up a steeple as he climbs a telegraph pole. In the first place he cannot reach around the spire, and, secondly, if the spire is shingled, a man in attempting to climb would undoubtedly meet with an accident, for the shingles, being usually decayed, would not hold the weight of his body. The way to reach the top af a steeple without the aid of a ladder or a staging would be to go inside the spire and climb to the highest point and then make an aperture. Out of this hole a piece of joist could be run, and a tackle rigged for a boatswain's chair. The man could then be hoisted on the outside up to the aperature:
and from this point, by standing in the chair, he could place a trap around the spire, into which he could place the tackle, and by degrees reach the top. It is strange that in climbing a steeple there is an uncontrollable desire to look down, and I do not believe that the mere looking down causes one to fall. The awful stillness which prevails, the strangeness of the situation, and the fact that one is so near danger overpowers the brain and the man falls. Danger acts strangely upon a man. I remember in the war when the rebels were approaching and we were retreating, seeing wounded men arise from the ground and run as swiftly as an athlete. Sounds from the street comes very indistinct to a man on a steeple.
When I have a steeple job I go into training.
I abstain from using any intoxicants and tobacco,
and I drink but little tea or coffee.
I do this, not so much for myself as for others who maybe at work for me in a dangerous place. I always want to have steady nerves and a strong arm so as to be ready to work quickly.

Caustic Remarks by Divines.

The fame of Stockbridge Mass., rests largely upon three great names, of which the first is that of Jonathan Edwards. Here is the house in which that wonderful preacher and philosopher used to pray and read and write and fight hand to hand with the devil. Here is the very table at which he sat, and on it are ink stains from the very ink-horn into which he so often dipped his pen.

Here is the very chair in which Edwards often sat; perhaps the very one in which he was seated when a young man called upon him to ask his daughter's hand in marriage.
"You can't have her," said the preacher. "But I love her." "No matter, you can't have her." "But she loves me, too." "I say you can't have her." "But I am well off and can support her." "You can't have her, I tell you." "Why not, Mr.
Edwards? What have you against me?"
"Nothing." "Well, then, why can't I have Emily?" "Because I think you are a pretty decent sort of young man; too good for her."

"What? Mr. Edwards, what in the world do you mean?" 'She's got a wicked temper, and you wouldn't be happy with her."
"But I thought she was a Christian?" "So she is, young man; so she is. But before you have lived as long as I have you'll find out that there are some people in this world that the grace of God may get along with but you can't."

In a neighboring village in Edwards' time a similar grim divine, to whom, during a revival season, came a notorious scamp and practised backslider, with sanctimonious snivel, saying: "Doctor, I realize that I am indeed the chief of sinners." "Glad to hear it; your neighbors realized it long ago."
"I feel that I want salvation." "Guess you need it as much as anyone." "And I feel," continued the hypocritical patient, "that I am willing to do anything God requires of me. I would willingly even be damned for His glory." "Well," said the preacher,
"I don't think there is anyone that knows you that would have the slightest objection to that!"

The Cleanest People in the World.

Holland is the cleanest country in the world, as everybody knows, but no one can understand how very clean cleanliness can be until he visits her little villages. Even The Hague is a wonder of neatness, and on every Friday and Saturday undergoes an indescribable drenching and scouring. Water flies about everywhere on these two days from hose and garden-squirt in jets, and from tubs and pails in torrents; there is an immense clattering about of women in wooden shoes, and the whisking and scraping of brooms and scrubbing brushes resound on all sides. Not only the windows, but also the sides of the houses are scoured; not only the sidewalk, but the roadway as well, until one thinks that the dikes all over the country have given way at once, and the sea has again come into possession of its ancient domain. But in the smaller towns the swash and gurgle of water seems to go on all the time, and the people to be absolutely daft on the subject of neatness. But the effects of so much washing and scrubbing is very agreeable, and one immediately feels delight in seeing the peaceable fruits of the virtue which is universally held to be second only to godliness.

An immense dog, a cross between a mastiff and a St. Bernard, savagely attacked a young man at Edmonton, England, and would have killed him had not his sister come to his rescue. The girl fought the beast courageously and desperately, and was terribly bitten, but she conquered him.

The frenzied prediction by a woman on a Missouri railroad train that an awful accident was impending might not have scared anybody had she not immediately afterward fallen from her seat dead. Most of the passengers quit the cars at the next station, but nothing happened to those who continued their journey.

There is a stagnant pool in a Florida forest particularly lonesome and secluded. Thirty years ago a lover was shot and thrown into it by the father of his sweetheart, who at once drowned herself in the same water; and the belief is held among the people of that region that no visitor to the spot can avoid an intense depression of spirits, occasioned by the brooding ghosts of the pair.

"Melindy," said Zeke, as he and the old woman were discussing some purchases to be made in the city, "I kan't see whatcher want with so menny little trimmin's and fixin's;
you ain't no young gal now, an' I think you orter be satisfied with one nice kalliker dress." "Yes, I s'pose so," was all she said.
The next morning Zeke rose at his usual hour, and proceeded to his little brown jug to take his morning nip, when lo! it was empty. "Melndy," he yelled, "whar's my likker gone to?" "Zeke," she said smiling sweetly, "you ain't so young as you uster be, an' I kan't see whatever you want with so many fixin's; so I jis emptied the jug, an' think ye orter be satisfied with nothing but a purty little jug." Zeke caved.

IRELAND AS SHE IS.

What Father Davis and Lady Burdett-Coutts Have Done for Cape Clear Fishermen.

The fisheries of Ireland are the only industry which are likely to be left exclusively or principally to Irish home enterprise. The geographical position of the Emerald Isle permits her inhabitants to make of this industry a source of wealth more plentiful and more lasting than the gold of California.
Hitherto the unaccountable indifference of the imperial Government, as well as the reckless improvidence of the great Irish landlords, had left that wealth as untouched by the needy and destitute populations of the long line of seacoast as if these teeming waters bathed the shores of Alaska or Kamschatka.
The extraordinary success which has attended the patriotic zeal of one poor priest and the creation in this, the remotest corner of South Cork of a prosperous fishing industry, have suddenly concentrated upon this spot the attention of not only Irish patriots, but of British statesmen.

Here I am, writing to you from the chapel of the Rath, overlooking Baltimore harbor, with Carberry's hundred isles, chief among which are the large islands of Innisherkin and Cape Clear. There was terrible suffering among the starving fisherfolk of this large, desolate, and most picturesque district during the years of the great famine, 1846 and 1847. Thanks to the intelligent energy and priestly devotion of one man, the Rev. Charles Davis, and to the disinterested generosity of one true-hearted woman, the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, the situation is changed. Each of the two great islands of Innisherkin and Cape Clear has for resident priest a curate of Father Davis, so that they have on each Island Sunday services and a chapel of their own. Father Davis, when he came to Baltimore, in 1879, found the once flourishing borough town reduced to a few wretched tumble-down houses, the only decent and comfortable dwellings being those of the Protestant rector and his confrere of Youngbal, who occasionally spends the summer here. The harbor, from the beginning of March till August, is frequented by large fleets of Scotch, Manx, and French fishermen, who have hitherto had the monopoly of the mackerel fishery in these waters. The native fishermen, possessing only small rowboats,

COULD NOT VENTURE FAR OUTSIDE THE HARBOR, and were thus unable to take any share in the deep-sea fishing. They were compelled to look on helplessly, year after year, while strangers and foreigners bore off the treasures which are by right the possess on of Irishmen.

The herring and such other fish as can be caught in shallow waters were the only resource they had, together with the scanty crop of vegetables raised in the rare patches of land, along the shore or in sheltered nooks in the islands. Even for the privilege of cultivating these patches they had to pay high rents to the owners of the soil. Yet they are a noble race, these islanders and Baltimoreans, eager to profit by every opportunity to improve their own social position.

It was generally believed and openly asserted, that the chronic state of abject poverty and hopeless destitution prevailing among the populations of Skibbereen and this district was the result of Irish idleness, shiftlessness, and stupidity. Father Davis has forever and peremptorily given the lie to this blind, traditional prejudice. He has often heard it affirmed dogmatically that the Irish are unwilling to work even when remunnerative work is offered them, and incapable of improving even when the utmost pains are taken to ameliorate their condition and their methods of labor. To be sure, the contrary was evident to all observers both in the United States and throughout the British colonies. Everywhere the Irish laborer has proved himself to be able to compete with the most intelligent and to rival the most successful. Still the majority of Englishmen and the dominant proprietory class in Ireland continued to believe and to say that Irish destitution was the fruit of Irish sloth, thriftlessness and improvidence.

Father Davis's immediate predecessor had applied to the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, but without obtaining any favorable answer.
The new pastor, thoroughly acquainted with what this lady's spontaneous generosity had done for the costermongers of London, felt sure the daughter of Sir Faancis Burdett would not close her ear or steel her heart against an appeal properly made from the neediest district in Ireland. He wrote, inspired by priestly zeal and patriotic ardor.
Without delay came an answer bidding him to write again and lay before Lady Burdett-Coutts a detailed statement of his people's needs and of the remedial measures he judged to be most urgent. He did so, and forthwith Lady Burdett-Coutts sent her confidential agent to Baltimore to confer with Father Davis. For three entire weeks the English gentlemen, in every way worthy of the mission intrusted to him, stayed with the priest, verifying every assertion of his,
and verifying every one of the remedies suggested. Upon his reporting, £7 000 was at once deposited at the Bank of Skibbereen.
This was soon afterward increased to £6 000. No interest was demanded. The fishermen were to receive loans, under the direction of Father Davis, and these were to be

PAID BACK IN YEARLY INSTALLMENTS.

The new boats with their equipments were thus to become the property of the fishermen.
So, at length, after many centuries of heartsickening discouragement, the brave men obtained the means of laboring for themselves, and by well-requited labor of lifting themselves up from poverty and all its degrading influences! The men clubbed together, and joyously accepted the conditions sent them, they believed, by God's merciful providence. How well they have profited by this golden opportunity, the following facts will tell better than the most ornate narration.

The boats are constructed in the Isle of Man, on the best models, of the very best materials, and cost, each, from £500 to £800.
A Manx crew, in the beginning, brought these large craft to Baltimore and taught the islanders how to manage them. They proved themselves to be apt scholars. Irish intellect, enthusiasm, and courage soon made of every schooner's crew accomplished sailors and most successful fishermen. They had now a chance to prove, in their own native waters, that they could do better than Manxmen, Scotchmen, or Frenchmen, and they proved it speedily and triumphantly.
In 1879 there were but four boats in this district belonging to native fishermen that were in any way fit for deep-sea fishing. Now there are forty-two boats of 30 tons and upward, of an aggregate value of £20 000, or $100 000. The owners have honestly and scrupulously paid back the money loaned by yearly instalments, and there is in every fisherman's home in Baltimore and the islands independence, comfort, competence—all the blessings which are the fruit of labor, when the toiler is a good and true man, and when his time and his labor and his implements are his own.

Father Davis related to us one incident which vividly paints the revulsion of feeling wrought in these good souls by the unhoped-for chance of becoming the proprietors of such large craft. Two stout-hearted fellows had worked for the priest from time to time at one job or another. They saw with a kind of envy the rising prosperity of their neighbors. But such was their own poverty, and so crowded was the labor market in Baltimore, that they could only support wives and children by doing such chores as chance offered them. Father Davis, seeing how willing to work and rise in the world they were, asked them one day, as they were gazing at a beautiful new craft, "if they would like to have a boat of their own."
The poor fellows did not answer, for they did not think he had seriously put the question.
"Would you really, boys," he again said, "like to have such a boat yourselves?"

"Ah, your reverence, do not be laughing at us; only give us a chance," was the answer.

"Indeed I will, my brave fellows," the good priest replied. "I'll get you a boat."

The promise was made good without a moment's delay. When their boat at length was brought to Baltimore and hauled upon the beach to receive its complement of gear, Father Davis went down to present it to its proprietors. They could not believe their eyes. They would walk round and round the pretty craft, and

STOP IN SILENCE TO LOOK AT IT,

as if asking themselves if this were a dream,
a delusion.

Indeed, this is the very question which the inhabitants of this district ask themselves as they see, each spring and summer, the fleet of stout boats which comes into their harbor daily, manned and owned by their brethern, laden with the treasures of the deep. They cannot believe their eyes as they see, under the fatherly hand of their priest, Baltimore rising from its ruins—commerce, prosperity, education revisiting these shores so long desolate and seemingly forsaken of God and man.

Besides the mackerel fishing in which the Baltimoreans now outstrip all rivals, the pilchard has lately become another source of profitable enterprise. This fish, rich and oily, is unpalatable to Irishmen; but, when salted, packed, and carefully preserved, it find a ready market in Spain and all along the shores of the Mediterranean. For this ever increasing industrial activity, Father Davis is ever watchful to provide new means and appliances. He has obtained the building of a new pier in Baltimore harbor, and of other piers on both sides of Cape Clear and Sherkin Islands, thereby creating safe ports of refuge for the fishermen at the approach of every storm. At this moment, too, the Government, at his solicitation, is about to construct a lighthouse on the headland opposite Baltimore Beacon, so that his brave fisherman can run into the harbor at all hours of the darkest night.

Decline of the Influence of the Press.

It will not be denied that the influence once exerted by the public press has greatly diminished, and if a reaction does not soon occur, will become a thing of the past.
Why this is true, is plain to all who have given the subject a thought. It is an utter disregard for the truth, not only in dealing with advertisers, the real supporters of the press, but with readers as well. Partisan journals let nothing pass that they can turn to account against a rival, no matter how untrue or unjust. Some will say this is to be expected. It ought not to be. But a short time ago we saw published in several newspapers laying claim to high standing in journalistic circles, the statement that the editor of a rival journal was born at a time and place he had said over his own signature he was not, the object being not only to cloud his word but rob him of his birthright, and all this for demagogy.

Many newspapers proceed on the assumption that their readers are fools, while the only reason for such an opinion can be based upon the fact that they are the readers of such characterless newspapers.

We might say American politics had much to do with this sad state of affairs, and perhaps they have, but as will be seen by the following extract from a London dispatch, this decline of the press is not confined alone to the American press: "It is not a long time since the Times occupied a position of so great authority that a publication by it of such as it printed this morning would have thrown the city of London into a tumult and the financial markets of Europe into a fever. To-day's occurrence marks plainly how far the influence of the Times has waned."

As stated, the newspaper that has made this great decline is none other than the London daily Times, and the matter it published on this occasion was a sensational dispatch about the operations of the French fleet bombarding Chinese ports. The only object apparent that the Times had in view was an increase in the sale of that single edition by a few thousand copies. To accomplish this fiend, throwing the "markets of Europe into a fever" and unsettling business of all kinds—perhaps bankrupting many persons—was of small account. Such a perfidious course should bankrupt the Times' management instead. Its waning power is deserved.

In this country many newspapers try to increase their sales by beastly obscenity.
We have more than one that are simply sewers through which all the vile and loathsome side of life as brought out in the police courts are filtered. Even stories of the vilest character—stories that only have an existence in the low and vile minds of the writers, are published. We wish it was possible to trace to the press all the wrong it has wrought. We wish we could hold up to the public gaze all the lies and deceptions it has practised, the homes it has wrecked,
the young men and women it has led astray.
If we could, it would not be a question of its decline, for the outraged public would not let it appear at all. We believe in the freedom of the press as we do of the man until after he has committed crime, and then we believe that the same law that punishes him should be meted out to the press.—Agents' Herald.

The Standard.

MARKDALE OCT. 2, 1884.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

Walters Falls.

To the Editor of the Standard.

DEAR SIR,—Since I last wrote you, another new dwelling house is in course of construction, to be owned and occupied by Mrs. Seabook. The extent to which building operations have been carried on here this year, is quite unprecedented, proving that an era of prosperity has commenced, and that a promising future is before Walter's Falls. Some allege that it is only temporary, merely a move, which receding, will leave us stationary as before; but, Sir, I cannot believe this progress to be only transitory, for here no wild speculations of imaginary wealth are indulged in, hence no mushroom growth, to flourish one day and perish the next. It is the natural, sound, steady outcome, of a fine agricultural section of country teeming with real wealth, converging towards the centre (and this is the centre) and on account of its long repression, with accumulated force. Still there are some who persist in taking an unfavorable view of things, and question the capabilities of the country to support such a rapidly increasing population; but should that time ever arrive here, which I do not think will, when population will press on the means of subsistence, the surplus population might be removed with advantage to Markdale or some other sparsely settled district. The result of overcrowding being so well known, there is no need to expatiate on its dangers.

B. R.

Dundalk.

From our own Correspondent.

Mr. W. T. Rundle has forsaken the ranks of the batchelors. We feel lonesome now without him. Dear me, what will become of the rest of us. When will our time come. So long to wait, and so many marriageable young ladies in Dundalk, actually anxious, (we had almost said spoiling) for "Some one to love and cherish them"

The bride and groom arrived home on Monday evening, when the band serenaded at their residence. It is said "Walter" is getting over his bashfulness, and now thinks it foolish to be faint hearted, the probability is that there will be another wedding before long.

Mr. Clark has the brick work of his new stores completed. Messrs. Hanbury & Bell are bricking the stores occupied by G. W. Parsons, and the Post office. Mr. Gardiner is veneering his house and shop. A number of substantial improvements have been made in the appearance of our village this summer.

Dr. McWilliam's new residence will be late before completed as the brickwork is not yet begun.

The Council of Royal Templars has now 33 members, and others propose to join shortly. We hope it will prove permanent. It should, as a number of our best men are at the head of it.

Ratepayer has been trying to "lay out" the teachers through the columns of our local paper, for carelessness with regard to the miserable old shell known as a school house. The prevailing opinion is, that in view of a new building, both trustees and teachers have been rather careless about the old one. It is really no wonder that the trustees do not care to repair, but still the teachers might have prevented it from looking so uninviting and uncomfortable.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

Mr. Thos. Aikinhead of Toronto paid a flying visit to Flesherton this week, spending Sunday last at the residence of J. W. Armstrong, Esq.,

Miss. Georgie Woodland of Toronto is at present spending a few holidays with the Misses Richardson's of this place.

Mr. M. P. McMaster having left here some weeks ago to take charge of the senior department of the public school in the town of Thorold, Mrs. McMaster and family moved from here on Monday last to join Mr. Mc in their new home. They carry with them the kind wishes of all.

Rev. Robt. H. Leitch, son of our esteemed citizen, Thos. Leitch, with his newly made bride is paying a visit at home here this week, being out on their wedding tour. Mr. Harry Leitch also son of Mr. T. Leitch, who is this summer practicing medicine in the county of Hastings, accompanies the bridal party. The Rev. Mr. Leitch occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church here morning and evening on Sabbath last and preached two very eloquent and interesting sermons.

The Bazaar and Concert, given under the auspices of Ladies' Aid Association of the Presbyterian Church on the second day of the County Fair was decidedly a success although the day and evening was so unfavorable. At the Bazaar during the day a large quantity of goods were disposed of, and in the evening the concert in the Hall was well patronized. The Rev. Mr. Wilson occupied the chair and performed his duties in his most happy manner. The following names appeared on the programme and each one excellent in his and her parts several selections rendered by the Parks Bros. and Vanzant were highly appreciated and loudly enchored. Messrs. J. R. Anderson and D. Munroe gave the "Larbord Watch" in the most pleasing manner. Miss Hopkins recited "Mary Queen of Scotts" in her usual able manner. A short reading by A. R. Fawcett, editor of Advance, was attentively listened to. Song by special request, "Robin Thompson's Smiddy," by our Scotch Vocalist Mr. J. R. Anderson, brought down the house, or I should say almost brought the audience to their feet. Although old these songs always seem fresh from Mr. Anderson. Miss Millie Van Dusen sang in her usual sweet manner. Millie's voice is almost charming, an Instrumental by Messrs. McDowell and Vanzant was well received. Mrs. W. W. Trimble sang two songs very sweetly; also a song by Miss Damude was well rendered. A song by Messrs. Anderson & Co. was well rendered and listened to with wrapt attention. The evening's entertainment was of a most pleasant character; proceeds of Bazaar and Concert $93.

Holland Council.

Holland Centre, Sept. 22, '84.

Council met on the above date for the transaction of business. Members all present; Reeve in the chair. Minutes of former meeting read and approved.

A report on Bruce's bridge was read (15 and 16 side road).

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, seconded by Mr. Howey, that the above report be adopted, and that a new bridge be built and completed not later than the 10th July, 1885.

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, seconded by Mr. Howey, that George Sinclair be paid $5 for getting stones removed from the road.

Moved by Mr. Norton, seconded by Mr. Galbraith, that S. Cannel's name be placed on the roll for lot 31 and 32, Walter's Falls, at a valuation of $200.

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, seconded by Mr. Williscroft, that the account of the arbitrators be paid, and that we consider the charge very high.

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, seconded by Mr. Howey, that the account of C. W. Rutledge be paid.

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, seconded by Mr. Norton, that the sum of $27 be paid to the Treasurer to cover expenses on defending the appeal against the County Valuation.

Moved by Mr. Norton, seconded by Mr. Williscroft, that by-law No. 6, for the purpose of breaking up U. S. S. No. 2, and attaching the same to Sections Nos. 6 and 9.

Moved by Mr. Norton, seconded by Mr. Galbraith, that a rate of 9 mills be levied on all the rateable property of the township both real and personal.

Moved by Mr Norton, seconded by Mr. Galbraith, that by-law No. 7, for the purpose of levying a rate of 9 mills on all rateable property of the township, be read first, second and third time and engrossed on the minutes.

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, seconded by Mr. Williscroft, that $4 be granted to repair on Conger's side-road in beaver meadow.

Moved by Mr. Howey, seconded by Mr. Galbraith, that George Little be assessor at a salary of $55.

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, seconded by Mr. Williscroft, that by law No. 5, for the appointing of collector, be read first, second and third time and engrossed on the minutes.

Moved by Mr. Norton, seconded by Mr. Galbraith, that John Findly get an order for $2.50 for repairing scraper.

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, seconded by Mr. Williscroft, that A. McGill be paid the sum of $1.25 as balance of account.

The Clerk tenders his resignation to the council.

Moved by Mr. Galbraith, seconded by Mr. Norton, that the Clerk's resignation be not now accepted.

Moved by Mr. Williscroft, seconded by Mr. Howey, that we adjourn till the 20th of October.

CARSON PRICE.

What we may Expect.

Variable weather.
To hear of wood thieves.
An improvement in business,
During October.
Incorporation laid over till 85.
A big fire in town,
And then the question of fire protection revived.
Big threshing stories,
And an accident.

Personals.

Mrs. John Bonnell, of Walter's Falls, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. McKenna, the past week.

Mrs. Shepherd Boyce and Mrs. John Orr have been visiting friends in Rochester, N. Y.

Arch. Deacon Marsh, of London, visited Markdale this week.

Ed. Wright returned from Butte City, Montana, last Tuesday.

Miss Campbell (Hill's Milliner) returned this week.

Miss Carry Foster returned to Williamsford from Perth on Tuesday.

This That, and the Other.

The Scott Act is to be voted on in Bruce Co., on the 30th October., James Allen, of Allenford, Returning Officer.

The Shelburne Economist appeared last week printed in two colors.

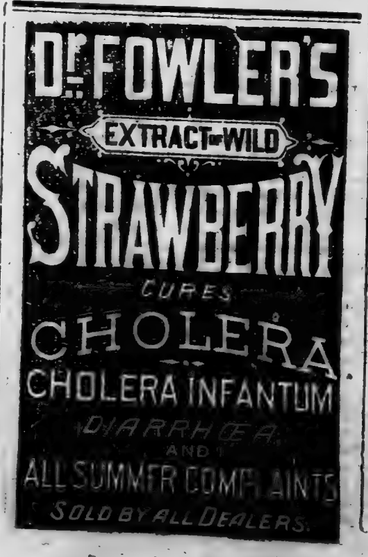
A Council of Royal Templars was organized in Chesely last week with a membership of 28.

The Western Fair, held at London last week was a grand success.

Dundalk is agitating for incorporation.

The plans for the Orangeville Post Office are out.

Durham Brass Band is prospering.



Collingwood Exhibition takes place this week.

The latest phase in the trouble between Gordon Brown and the Globe is that he has entered suit against the company to recover $50,000 for alleged wrongful dismissal from the position of editor-in-chief and managing director of the Globe.

Fall Show Fairs.

Osprey, at McIntyre October 9th.
Proton, at Dundalk October 7th and 8th.
Melancthon, at Shelburne October 7th and 8th.
Glenelg, at Markdale, on the 2nd and 3rd October.
Sydenham, at Annan, Tuesday, Oct. 7th.
Holland, at Chatsworth, Thursday, Oct, 9th.
Derby, at Kilsyth, Thursday, Oct. 9th.
Sullivan, at Desboro, Tuesday, Oct. 7th.
Artemesia, in Priceville Oct. 7th.
St. Vincent in Meaford the 8th and 9th October.
Euphrasia, in Rocklyn, on Friday Oct. 10.

If you should be so unfortunate as to Burn Scald or Wound yourself in any way the proper thing to keep clean and heal it is McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Insist on having, and be sure you get, McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Price 25 cents. Hill Bro's. has the genuine. J. & J. 2

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 68	to	$0 70
Spring Wheat	0 75	to	0 76
Barley	48	to	50
Peas	55	to	00
Oat	28	to	00
Butter	17	to	00
Eggs	16	to	00
Apples	30	to	35
Potatoes	30	to	00
Hay	7 00	to	0 00
Pork	7 00	to	7 50
Flour	4 25	to	4 50

A RARE PLANT.

The Wild Strawberry Plant possesses rare virtue as a cleansing, cooling, astringent, antiseptic and healing medicine, and when combined with other valuable vegetable extracts, as in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, it is an unfailing remedy in all bowel complaints.

AUCTION SALE
—OF—
VALUABLE FARM,

In the township of Glenelg, in the County of Grey. There will be sold, on Wednesday, the

22nd DAY OF OCTOBER, 1884,

at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, at

Rutledge's Hotel,
MARKDALE,

By virtue of Powers of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage which will be produced at the Sale, the following Property:

PARCEL I.

Under Mortgage from Thomas English, Lot 27, in the 4th Concession of the Township of Holland, in the County of Grey, containing 117 acres more or less.

The following improvements are said to be on the premises: Ninety acres cleared, one frame dwelling, one log dwelling, two log barns, one stable, good orchard and well.

TERMS—One-tenth of the purchase money to be paid down on the day of sale. For balance, terms will be made known at the sale. For further particulars apply to

JONES BROS. & MACKENZIE,
Solicitors, Masonic Hall, Toronto.
Or to JOHN LYONS, Esq.,
Markdale.

Toronto, 29th Sept., 1884. 212-4in

Strayed or Stolen.

From the farm of Richard Shears, Lot 1, con. 11, Euphrasia, about the 18th Sept. A ram, 3 years old, Cotswold, marked with red lead along back. Any person giving such information as will lead to his recovery will be suitably rewarded. Should any person allow above sheep to stay on their premises without giving public notice of the same they will be dealt with according to law.

RICHARD SHEARS.
Markdale P. O. 112-114.*

Dakota Illustrated.

A 32-page paper descriptive of the Northwest and Far West and a County Map of Dakota sent free for 2-cent stamp. Send your address to A. V. H. CARPENTER, General Passenger Agent, Milwaukee, 212-115.

IN THE GOODS AND CHATTELS.
—OF THE LATE—
JOHN MANAREY,
(DECEASED.)

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Pursuant to Section 34, of Chapter 107, R. S. O. the creditors of John Manarey, late of the township of Euphrasia, County Grey, deceased, who died on or about the 30th May 1884, and all parties having claims upon his estate are, on or before the 1st DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1884 to send by post, prepaid, to Joseph Manarey, giving P. O., in the County of Grey, administerator of the personal estate and effects of deceased, their christian and surnames, adresses and description, the full particulars of their claims a statement of their accounts and nature of the securities (if any) held by them, and in default thereof the assets of said deceased will be distributed, having regard only to the claims then received, or those of them which the administerator then have notice.

JOS. MANAREY,
Administerator
Date September 4th 1884.

FARM FOR SALE.

A valuable property of 75 acres, comprising Lot 40, and west half of 42, 1st East T. & S. Road, Holland one mile from Williamsford Station, the place is in good shape, fit to run a reaper and mower, good orchard, well fenced, picket fence around orchard and front of lot with maple trees planted inside, good dwelling house, also good barn and out houses. Title good, no transfers from the crown. For further particulars apply on the premises to owner. ROBERT CLARK. Williamsford Station P. O. 209—211. Pd.

Notice of Dessolution of Partnership

Notice is hereby given, that the partnership lately subsisting between W. H. Rutledge and John Trelford of Markdale, under the name of Rutledge & Trelford, butchers, was dissolved on the 18th day of September 1884, by Mutual consent. The business will be carried on by W. H. Rutledge, who will collect all accounts, and pay all liabilities of the late firm.

Signed { W. H. RUTLEDGE, JOHN TRELFORD.

Holland, Sept. 18, 1884.

AN ACROSTIC.

Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a mist
It's true, Lardine's the best
Nothing its equal, can't excel
External its use, on every axle

Use Lardine Machine Oil in all machinery, sold manufactured, McColl Toronto.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults

VISITORS TO OWEN SOUND
DON'T FAIL TO CALL AT
THE "BON MARCHE"
THEY HAVE THE LARGEST,
BEST and CHEAPEST
ASSORTMENT OF
CROCKERY
AND WILL SELL
Lower than the Toronto Houses.

Look at This
A GOOD ENGLISH-MADE
SERGE SUIT
(This is no Shoddy.)
BOYS' - - - FROM $4 00
YOUTHS' - - " 6 00
MENS' - - - " 8 00
Everybody should look at the
Bon Marche
They sell everything at
ROCK BOTTOM PRICES
B. ALLEN'S old stand
OWEN SOUND.

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and completeness wherever tried. An assortment of Furnace and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

New Butcher Shop

The best meats the country can produce kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNee's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE.
181

NOTICE.

TO ALL TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

A Chattle Mortgage, made by Joseph Hewitt and Joseph Payne of the township of Glenelg, in the County of Grey, in favor of Alexander McPhee, of the same place, dated 22nd March, A.D. 1884, on certain stock and chattles mentioned in said mortgage, and for which the Mortgagee received no value. The public are hereby cautioned against purchasing said mortgaged as no value has been received for the same.

JOSEPH HEWITT,
JOSEPH PAYNE.

Dated Glenelg, 20th Sept., 1884.

ESTRAY.

FROM the premises of John Atkinson, Lot 8, Con. 8, Holland, about the 1st May. 8 head of yearlings—6 heifers and 2 steers, all spotted and grey.—Each one has a nick cut in the left ear, and a hole through same ear, made with hot iron.

Any person giving such information as will lead to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.

JOHN ATKINSON,
Massie P. O.
111-12

Holland, Sept. 13, 1884.

WALTHAM,
ELGIN. SWISS
WATCHES.
LARGE STOCK OF CLOCKS
Quadruple Plated Ware,
Wedding Rings, 18
RINGS,
CHAINS,
SEALS
Lizzarus & Morris and B
Decks, good Violin Strin
Musical Instruments.
Careful and accurate repa
personally attended to a
fully warranted.
Square Dealing. - Fair Price
W. A. BROWN.
MARKDALE.

Local and Other Items

NOTICES in these columns intended to bene individual or Society will be charged 5 a line for the first insertion and 2 a line each subsequent insertion.

JOHN ORR has a good supply of lime, having just burnt a kil

ANOTHER lot of that famous 50c. T 10 lbs. for $4, at R. J. Sproule Chorton.

THE Weekly Mail to the end 35 for $1, subscription taken at th STANDARD office.

FOR sideboards, dressing cases, bed ads, lounges and cradles, go t ant & Co., Markdale.

THE Weekly Globe for $1, to th of 1885 leave your name an scription at this office.

R. J. SPROULE'S new stock of fa winter goods is now complete an ing like hot cakes.

WHAT TO DO.—If you are not scriber to the Markdale STANDARD nd us one dollar and get it 1 nths from date.

LARGE lot of men's and boys Hat Caps at less than half price a J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

WE can always rely on a notic IN some of our exchanges by owing a typographical error to g corrected.

THE electric lamp is far ahead all other lamps or even gasoline J. Sproule, agent for Flesherton

CATTLE FAIR.—Markdale cattle fai continued to enlarge until it i w considered the best in the district. umber of good buyers will be pre- at at the next fair, Saturday Oct

SPLENDID heavy factory cotton R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton, only ents per yd. and all other goods cordingly.

MARKDALE Council of Royal Temp s have leased the Workmen and d Fellows hall, where they will hold eir regular meetings every two eks on Friday evenings, next iday 3rd being their next meeting.

PAIN from indigestion or sick head he is instantly relieved by one dos Rejuvinator Bitters, made from ots and herbs. Sold by Smith, the rber.

THE Montreal Star will be sent to w subscribers from the 1st October to the 1st January 1886 for $1 w is your time to secure the best nily paper published; 15 months for Subscribe at this office.

R. J. SPROULE, Flesherton, wants e thousand pairs heavy large home ade Socks and Mitts to fill a north et order, for which he will pay the ghest market price.

ARE you a subscriber to the STAND- D and would like to send the paper a friend, if so we will forward the balance of the year to any dress free of postage for 25 cents.

CALL at this office and get sample py of the Toronto Weekly News. e will give it together with the STAN- RD to the end of 1885 for $1.50.

NOTICE.—There will be no meeting Royal Templars on Friday evening xt, 3rd, but a meeting will be held Tuesday next instead. This change made owing to the Presbyterian ncert which takes place on Friday ening.

AN ACROSTIC.
Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a man
It's true, Lardine's the best Oil
Nothing its equal, ...'s aside to External its use, on every roll.
Use Lardine Machine Oil, unexcelled machinery, sold manufacturer, McColl Bro
Toronto.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDERS.
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults

VISITORS TO OWEN SOUND
DON'T FAIL TO CALL AT
THE "BON MARCHE"
THEY HAVE THE LARGEST,
BEST and CHEAPEST
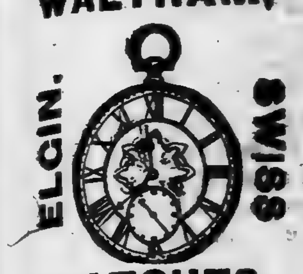
ASSORTMENT OF
CROCKERY
AND WILL SELL
Lower than the Toronto Houses.

Look at This
A GOOD ENGLISH-MADE
SERGE SUIT
(This is no Shoddy.)
BOYS' - - - FROM $4 00
YOUTHS' - - " 6 00
MENS' - - - " 8 00
Everybody should look in at the
Bon Marche
They sell everything at
ROCK BOTTOM PRICES,
ALLEN'S old stand
OWEN SOUND.



SCHOOL TRUSTEES
undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture.
consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest and most approved pattern. Recommended by School Trustees and Teachers for cheapness, comfort and compactness ever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
ANDREW McGILL.

New Butcher Shop.
best meats the country can produce on hand and
DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED.
share of public patronage respectfully solicited.
Remember the stand in McNea's block.
W. H. RUTLEDGE.

NOTICE.
TO ALL TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.
Chattle Mortgage, made by Joseph Hewitt and Joseph Payne of the township of Glenelg, in the County of Grey, to ... of Alexander McPhee, of the same, dated 22nd March, A.D. 1884, ... stock and chattles mentioned in said mortgage, and for which the Mortgagers ... no value. The public are hereby warned against purchasing said mortgage, ... value has been received for the same.
JOSEPH HEWITT,
JOSEPH PAYNE.
Glenelg, 20th Sept., 1884.

ESTRAY.
FROM the premises of John Atkinson, Lot 8, Con. 8, Holland, about the ... head of yearlings—6 heifers and ... all spotted and grey.—Each one has ... in the left ear, and a hole through ... ear, made with hot iron. ... person giving such information ... to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.
JOHN ATKINSON,
Massie P. O.
111-113
..., Sept. 18, 1884.

WALTHAM,

WATCHES.

LARGE STOCK OF CLOCKS,
Quadruple Plated Ware,
Wedding Rings, 18 k.,
RINGS,
CHAINS,
SEALS,
Lazzarus & Morris and Boss Specks, good Violin Strings, Musical Instruments.

Careful and accurate repairing personally attended to and fully warranted.

Square Dealing. - Fair Prices.

W. A. BROWN.
MARKDALE.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

John Orr has a good supply of fresh lime, having just burnt a kiln.

Another lot of that famous 50c. Tea 10 lbs. for $4, at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

The Weekly Mail to the end of 1885 for $1, subscription taken at the Standard office.

For sideboards, dressing cases, bedsteads, lounges and cradles, go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

The Weekly Globe for $1, to the end of 1885 leave your name and subscription at this office.

R. J. Sproule's new stock of fall and winter goods is now complete and selling like hot cakes.

What to do.—If you are not a subscriber to the Markdale Standard, send us one dollar and get it 15 months from date.

Large lot of men's and boys Hats and Caps at less than half price at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton.

We can always rely on a notice from some of our exchanges by allowing a typographical error to go uncorrected.

The electric lamp is far ahead of all other lamps or even gasoline, R. J. Sproule, agent for Flesherton.

Cattle Fair.—Markdale cattle fair has continued to enlarge until it is now considered the best in the district. A number of good buyers will be present at the next fair, Saturday Oct, 4th.

Splended heavy factory cottons at R. J. Sproule's, Flesherton, only ... cents per yd. and all other goods accordingly.

Markdale Council of Royal Templars have leased the Workmen and Odd Fellows hall, where they will hold their regular meetings every two weeks on Friday evenings, next Friday 3rd being their next meeting.

Pain from indigestion or sick headache is instantly relieved by one dose of Rejuvinator Bitters, made from roots and herbs. Sold by Smith, the Barber.

The Montreal Star will be sent to new subscribers from the 1st October to the 1st January 1886 for $1. Now is your time to secure the best family paper published; 15 months for $1. Subscribe at this office.

R. J. Sproule, Flesherton, wants one thousand pairs heavy large home made Socks and Mitts to fill a north west order, for which he will pay the highest market price.

Are you a subscriber to the Standard and would like to send the paper to a friend, if so we will forward for the balance of the year to any address free of postage for 25 cents.

Call at this office and get sample copy of the Toronto Weekly News. We will give it together with the Standard to the end of 1885 for $1.50.

Notice.—There will be no meeting of Royal Templars on Friday evening next, 3rd, but a meeting will be held on Tuesday next instead. This change is made owing to the Presbyterian Concert which takes place on Friday evening.

Don't forget the Concert in Mr. Rae's new Hall on Friday evening.

For Sash, Doors and Mouldings, go to grant & Co., Markdale.

Good double-barrel Gun for sale. Apply to Smith, the Barber.

You can get 13½ lbs. granulated sugar at Benson's, for $1.

Don't forget Hill Bro's. Millinery opening to-day and to-morrow, (Thursday and Friday.)

Land sakes, Mary, the very smell of McFarland's Tea makes me feel good.

Wm. Braidner, 10 con. Euphrasia wishes to lease his farm for a term of years.

W. J. McFarland has received one car load first class coal oil: price 20 cents per gallon, Imperial measure.

Confirmation.—Bishop Baldwin, of the Diocese of Huron, held confirmation services in Christ Church on Monday evening last when about 80 candidates were confirmed.

You can get both the stone and rolled Flour at Benson's.

Miss Burch calls attention to her new stock in Dress and Mantle Trimmings. Patterns etc., Dress and Mantle making promptly executed. Mantles a specialty. Note—Bargains in Millinery.

All goods purchased at Benson's delivered at any place in town.

Ladies see the New Fur-in-hand Jackets, Velvet Bonnets, Hats, Black Gro-grain Silks and Empress Velveteens at McFarland's.

Bottled ale and stout only 10c. per bottle at Benson's Liquor Store.

Call at the Standard office if you want Bill Heads, Letter Heads, Envelopes, Blank Notes, Receipts, Business Cards, Shipping Tags, Sale Bills, Streamers, Dodgers, Circulars or anything from a calling card to a double sheet Poster.

Benson's have the name of keeping the best Rye and Malt whiskey in Markdale: Try them.

Why buy Shoddy Boots Shoddy Tweeds Shoddy Hats Shoddy Flannels and shoddy Over Coats when you can get the genuine article for a little more money at McFarland's great Importing House.

Another choice lot of smoked Hams Bologno Sausage; just arrived at Benson's.

Parties.—Getting their sale bills at this office will get a notice in the Standard free; this is worth considerable as the paper has a very large circulation.

Our Mail carrier had to secure a hand-cart and a man to assist him to convey the mail from the Post Office to the train the day the Standard was issued. Last week's issue of the Standard was over 170 lbs. in itself.

A big discount off the balance of wheel rigs at Shanahan's Carriage Works; we have not many left and are bound to clear them all out to make room for our winter work which is now in the way. Call at once and get a bargain in a waggon, carriage or buggy, all guaranteed for four years.

A good Investment.—The Standard a year for $1. New subscribers now will get three months free. You cannot invest a dollar that will bring you a more satisfactory return: try it.

The Weekly Globe.—We are now prepared to take subscriptions for the Weekly Globe for balance of this year and all of 1885 for $1. The cash must accompany the order. Hand them in to this office at once and get three months free.

Accident.—On Friday last while driving near Maxwell Mrs. Robt. Gordon was thrown from the rig, the team having taken fright and were running full speed. Mrs. G. was considerably injured but is fast recovering.

See here.—If you have lost any cattle, sheep or other stock, or if any such have strayed into your premises, advertise them at once in the Standard. This paper circulates largely through Artemesia, Glenelg, Holland, Euphrasia and Osprey townships.

Hurrah for the Scott Act!—R. H. Benson, of the original Belfast House, wishes to inform the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that he has contracted for a sufficient quantity of Liquor to keep the mirth of the public in general Humour during the next three years, or until the Common Sence of public opinion will render a contrary verdict; but, Benson will have sold out his stock; and by that time his fortune will be made, at the enjoyment of the public and a decreased revenue to the Dominion Government.

Revival.—Rev. Mr. Corcoran, Methodist minister of the Hepworth mission, has for the past few weeks been holding a series of successful revival meetings in the various appointments throughout the mission.—Wiarton Echo.

Eggs.—Who would imagine the egg business had assumed such proportions. Mr. Carrie, our Markdale egg merchant, has purchased this summer, up to Saturday the 27th September, 75,000 dozen, for which he paid $11,250,00.

Balance of '84 free.—We will send the Standard to new subscribers from the 1st October to the end of 1885 for $1, to any address, or we will put in the Toronto Weekly News with the Standard for the same period for $1.50 Now is the time to secure cheap reading matter. Send in the dimes with your name and address at once to this office.

Fatal accident.—A little girl named Nellie Gains was killed at Orangeville on Saturday morning by an unprotected shaft in connection with Jull's saw-mill. She was at the mill along with some companions, and placing her hands on the shaft it caught her clothes, dragging her round and dashing her brains out against a log.

The Canadian Dairyman and Farmer is the name of a new monthly (the second number of which is before us) is a 16-page journal, and will supply a felt want. The dairy interest in Canada is assuming large proportions and should be represented by an able and well conducted journal, and from the appearance and tone of the Dairyman it will "fill the bill." It is published by the Canadian Dairyman Publishing Company, Montreal. Subscription 50 cents per year.

The St. Marys Carriage Manufacturing Company, an enterprise managed by capitalists of that town is meeting with great success, having sold already over twenty-three thousand shares. The surplus stock of the Company amounting to $106,000 will be divided on October 22nd. Shares are $2 each and all those desiring to participate in this Grand Division, should buy a share at once. Address: H. A. L. White, Sec'y., St. Marys.
*112-115

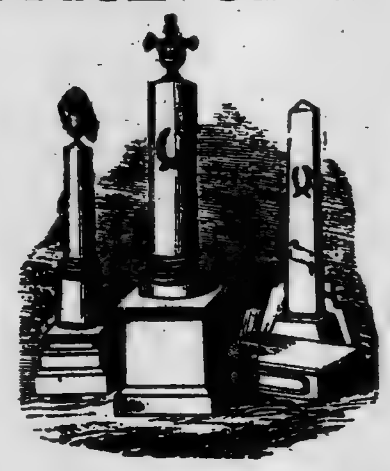
Mr. Alex. Mercer, Jr., has perhaps the best team of general purpose horses in the County; they are 4 years old, and took 1st prize at East Grey exhibition last week. One of them carried off 1st prize at the same show in 1880-81 and '82, and the team has never yet been beaten either single or as a pair. They were not shown last year at Flesherton, as stated and believed by several parties, but Alex. Mercer, Sr., showed a team in the same class.

Re-opening.—The Revere Hotel, which has been undergoing repairs for the past two months, was this week re-opened. The premises has been thoroughly overhauled and many important changes made. It has also been re-painted throughout and an addition built to the rear, making it both spacious and convenient. The changes has incurred an outlay of over $600, and the Revere is now one of the best hotels in the district. Mr. John Colwell is the new proprietor, and we are very much mistaken in the man if he does not keep a first-class house.

A grand tea-meeting and concert was held in Hannah's school-house, Holland, on the evening of Friday, 26th inst. The place was crowded to excess. After due regard was paid to what had been prepared by the ladies, a choice programme was presented. Mr. Hay gave an eloquent address on "The young men of Canada." Mr. J. Richards of Markdale figured prominently in his favorite role of the "Red Jacket", during the rendering of which he worked the feelings of the astonished rustics up to such a pitch of excitement that they really laughed. Mr. Porter of the same place gave a recitation, followed by readings by Miss Stewart and Mr. Walker and interspersed with singing by Miss Bailey of Berkeley, who has reason to be proud of the talent with which she is endowed. Her singing was simply sublime. The chairman deserves all praise for the masterly manner in which he filled the chair. But the most important feature of the programme was the presenting of a nicely worded address and a purse, to Mr. Hay, a student of Queen's College, Kingston, for which institute he starts about the 1st of October. We much regretted the absence of the Markdale choir, but suppose it was unavoidable.—Com.

Freeman's Worm Powders require no other purgative. They are safe and sure to remove all varieties of Worms.

INVALUABLE TO EVERY LADY!
"MAY DEW"
The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.



It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworm, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness; imparting a perfectly healthy, natural and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A LARGE BOTTLE" to any address on receipt of price, $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Address all letters to the MAY DEW AGENCY, 167 Church Street, Toronto, Ont. Parlor and Reception Room for Ladies.

Trade Mark.

OFFICE OF THE
Flesherton Marble

And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.
All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.
Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

ROBT. S. RAE, — Sydenham St., Markdale. — TAILOR,

Toronto House.

We are now showing special drives in New, Stylish and Fashionable

Dress Goods, Laces, Trimmings, Mantle Cloths, Buttons, Hosiery,
LADIES & GENTS UNDERCLOTHING ETC.

TWEEDS, CANADIAN, SCOTCH and WEST of ENGLAND for Men's and Boys' Suits, Overcoats and Garments—Cheap, Fashionable and Stylish.

BOOTS AND SHOES
For all ages and conditions from the heavy Stoga to the finest Kid. These goods are unsurpassed—price, value and quality considered.

We invite special attention to our
BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED TEA SETS,
Suitable for Wedding Gifts or Birthday Presents.

TEAS A Spesialty from 15c to 60c per lb. Every grade. Splendid value. TEAS

Give us a call. Examine & compare goods & prices

Markdale, Sept. 1, 1884. 190-tf
WM. BROWN.

A TRAGIC TALE OF THE SEA.

The Story of the Yacht Mignonette.

Edwin Stephens and Edmund Brooks, the mate and seaman of the ill-fated yacht Mignonette, reached Southampton at 12:30 o'clock. Stephens was met at Northam by his mother and brother-in-law, Mr. Fisher, and appeared quite prostrate.

Brooks furnishes the following interesting account of his experiences:

The Mignonette proved a capital sea boat. Prior to July 5, the day she was lost, the wind had been hard and shifty, but she rode out the gale admirably. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon of that day Capt. Dudley called the watch—myself and Mr. Stephens—the boy Parker sharing the watch with the skipper. Parker had gone down to wet the tea of which we were all to partake when we hove to. He had just come up, when Mr. Stephens called, "Look out!" and I saw a tremendous sea reaching, I should think, quite half way up to our masthead, coming down upon us. The Captain and Parker had held on to the main boom to leeward, and the mainsail being furled had broken the force of the sea upon them. Mr. Stephens held on by the tiller ropes. When the sea had passed, Stephens almost directly said, "Oh, my God, her sides are stove in!" The Captain ordered the boat out. I helped get the boat out. In fact, I was able nearly to throw her out myself. We got in—Stephens, I, and Parker—and called out several times to the Captain to come on board, and he presently did so, the Mignonette sinking in about five minutes after she was struck. We then found our boat had been stove in on the port side, and she leaked a lot; but I stopped it as well as I could with a piece of waist I found on the bottom boards, and this kept the water out till the morning, when Capt. Dudley made it more secure. Parker took the shipwreck very kindly, his expectation after we were in the boat being that but of course the rest of us knew better thon that. He was a nice, steady, and good boy—as good a boy, in fact, as I ever sailed with in my life. I regularly took to him, and tried to teach him all I knew myself.

WE SHOULD SOON SEE LAND;

We did not open our first tin of turnips till three days after the wreck, having eaten nothing at all in the meantime. We knew the tins contained only turnips, for I had acted as a sort of cook on board the Mignonette. On the fifth day out I was steering, and saw a turtle swimming almost to windward of us; in fact, we had almost passed it when I saw it. Its head was some distance out of the water, and I pointed it out to the others. I and the Captain pulled the boat's head to sea, and Mr. Stephens got hold of the creature by the fins and turned it over. I let go the fore oar, and although it was a pretty good sized fish, it came on board as light as a fly. We all now felt as if we were sure to be saved. This feeling was strong up to the time poor little Parker was killed, but after then my heart was cold. Capt. Dudley killed the turtle, but as the weather was so rough, we lost the blood through the salt water coming on board. But for this we al ould have had quite a quart or more, which would have lasted us several days. The water got into the chronometer box, in which we were getting the blood. The turtle lasted us till the twelfth day. We ate everything, skin and all, throwing the shell overboard. If we saw a little bit of the turtle fat lying about that had been left, we picked it up and ate it.

Parker, the boy, had several times expressed a desire to drink the sea water, and I and the other two strongly warned him against such a course, saying that if he did so it would kill him, but his reply always was,

"I MUST DRINK SOMETHING."

I told him he should not if I saw him. One morning—I think we must then have been fifteen or sixteen days out, but I can't remember exactly—about 5 o'clock, Dickey told me he had drank the bailer, which would hold quite a quart, empty, and half full again. I told he was a very silly young fellow, and he again replied that he must drink something. He had been gradually getting weaker, and was, in fact, the weakest of us all. The salt water put his insides out of order, and he suffered very much from diarrhœa, being at times in an agony of pain from this cause, and we all thought he would die. He appeared at times to be delirious; he would lie in the bottom of the boat and try to sleep, and if he went off, when he woke up he would say he wanted a ship. To get on board a ship was all I every heard him express a wish to do. I said to him several times: "Cheer up, Dickey, it will all come right," and the Captain and Stephens did all they could in the same way.

We had several times spoken between the three of us about casting lots as to who should be killed, and Parker had heard of this, but I and Mr. Stephens would not hear of it, and said that if we were to die we would all die together. Excepting Parker, Mr. Stephens suffered more than any of us. He was seized with pains internally, and his legs were so much swollen that he could hardly move. One night he was so bad that I thought he was going to die, and took hold of his hand, and we prayed together to the Almighty to save us.

July 20, when Parker's life was taken, was a very fine day. Excepting a little piece of the skin of the turtle, with a little drop of water we had caught in a storm which had passed over our heads,

WE HAD HAD NOTHING FOR EIGHT DAYS

Dick was lying in the bottom of the boat, groaning with pain; but he had never said anything to lead us to suppose that his life was a burden to him. I believe that the Captain and Stephens had spoken about it in the night, though nothing had been said to me either directly or indirectly of any intention to kill the boy, and Mr. Stephens, I believe, would never have consented to it. I had been at the helm three or four hours, and was lying in the bows of the boat; and Stephens made signs to me which I understood to mean that the Captain intended to take the boy's life, as he was dying. I believe he was dying, and if he had not been killed, I have not the slightest doubt we should all have died. I did not see the deed done, I had my oil-skin coat over my head trying to get to sleep, and I was not aware when it was to happen. All I heard was the Captain say to Mr. Stephens, "Hold his feet," and uncovered my head, and then saw the boy was dead. I fainted away for a minute or two, and when I came to I saw the Captain and Mr. Stephens drinking the blood which was running from his neck. I said, "Give me a drop," but it was very nearly all gone, but what I had was quite congealed. I felt quite strong after that—in fact we all made use of the expression that we were quite different men. I went aft and steered for two or three hours. I don't know exactly how long. Capt. Dudley and Stephens cut off the boy's clothes and threw them overboard. It was a horrible sight and no mistake.

I and the Captain fed on the body, and so did Mr. Stephens occasionally, but he had very little. We lived on it for four days, and we ate a good deal—I should think quite half the body—before we were picked up, and I can say that we partook of it with

AS MUCH RELISH AS ORDINARY FOOD.

We were picked up on the twenty-fifth day out. I was steering the boat, about half past six in the morning, as near as I can guess, but we had no watch. I saw a sail, but did not at first know what it was, for I had been sitting down talking to myself and praying to the Almighty to rescue us from death, as our sufferings from thirst were so horible. When Mr. Stephens and the Captain "got up," I said: "Oh, my God, here's a ship coming straight for us."

We all prayed together out loud that she would not miss us, each promising to lead a different life to what we had done if the Almighty would only give us the strength to reach the vessel. We put our sail, which was made out of Stephen's shirt, down, as the bark was a little to windward, and pulled as well as we could a little way. I should think she was four or five miles off when we sighted her, and as she came down upon us Mr. Stephens hoisted the shirt, and signalled as well as he was able, for he had not much strength to hold it up. Quite an hour and a half was passed in this dreadful suspense, for we were afraid, being still to leeward, that the bark would not see us. We at last saw her keep away from the wind, and then we felt she had seen us, and were very much rejoiced, and all thanked God for His mercy.

As we got close alongside I took both oars, being the strongest. The Captain caught the rope, and made a turn, as well as he was able, round the fore thwart, Mr. Stephens being aft. The latter sang out, "Oh, Captain, for God's sake, help us. We have been twenty-four days, and have had nothing to eat or drink. Helph us on board." The Captain of the bark made a reply in German, which I could not understand. Capt. Dudley also hailed him. Two of the crew came down and made the boat fast, and got ropes around and lifted us on board, for we were so weak we could not climb the ship's side. I took hold of the chain plates and scrambled up as well as I could, and the carpenter then carried me across the deck to the place where Mr. Stephens was lying. The Captain of the Montezuma had taken charge of Capt. Dudley. They all treated us very kindly.

THE MATE'S ACCOUNT.

Edwin Stephens, who is the son of the late Capt. Richard Stephens, of Southampton, late of the Isle of Wight Company's service, on his arrival home, furnished some interesting details. He said:

"Our nights were the worst time; they seemed never to end; we dreaded them very much. We had now the longest interval without food or water, viz., eight days without food and five days without water, with the exception mentioned. The lad dying before our eyes, the longing for his blood came upon us, and on Friday morning the twentieth day of our being cast away, the master hastened his death by bleeding him. In a minute all was over.

"I will leave you to imagine how we subsisted on the body until Tuesday, July 29, the twenty-fourth day after being in the boat, when were picked up by the German bark Montezuma, of Hamburg, Capt. Tremonsen, bound to Falmouth, from whom we received every kindness. We suffered a great deal for some days afterwards. The extremities seemed to have entirely lost life. We had thus been in the boat from July 5, at 5 p. m., until July 29, at 10 a.m., nearly twenty-four days, having drifted and sailed a distance of about 900 miles, viz, from lat. 27° 10′ S., long. 9° 50′ W., to lat. 24° 20′ S., long. 28° 25′ W., our position when picked up.

"Many of the statements that have been published in the papers are wrong, particularly one, which said I stood up and held the boy Parker while the Captain killed him. That is quite wrong. I don't remember hearing anything at all, but I know I was expected to hold his feet if he struggled, but he did not. The fact is, you can't carry your recollection back to the thing at all properly. We don't know what we did; we were maddened with thirst and hunger; but I know I did not suffer from hunger as the others did for the first eight days. I had hardly anything to eat, and I never thought of eating any of the turtle until it was about three parts gone. Drink was all I wanted.

"The boy's death saved our lives, for we should have all have been dead before the time we were picked up. Prrker was a nice lad—a regular Itchen ferryman, honest, and always willing to do everything he was told, which is a great virtue in a boy on board a ship."

THE CAPTAIN'S CONFESSION.

The Captain, who is a stout-built, fair-bearded man of middle height, looks fairly well, but is still very weak. He wears slippers on his feet, as they are still too tender to admit of putting boots on. When the unfortunate men were picked up both his legs were much swollen, and it was only after a long course of blistering and bandaging that they were reduced to a normal size.

Capt. Dudley, in an interview in the afternoon, conversed freely about the terrible occurence. After detailing the earlier part of the voyage of the Mignonette from Southampton to Madeira, and their afterwards signalling an Italian bark and speaking the Bride of Lorne, he said:

Day after day passed, and on the eleventh day we had finished the turtle, and had nothing left except the two fins; but we ate every portion, even the bones. The fat of the turtle proved very nutritious, and we got water a few times when there were showers by catching the rain in our oilskins, though sometimes when we had a little drop a sea broke into it and spoiled it, so that we had to throw it away.

We went on from the fifteenth to the twentieth day without any food at all or drink, and by that time we had begun to look each other in the face very black. The boy, who had drank some sea water at night, had said, "We shall all die, i' and I remarked, "We shall have to draw lots, boys."

This was ignored by all, and they said, "We had better die together," to which I replied: "So let be, but it is hard for four to die when perhaps one might save the rest."

A day or two before I suggested we should try and make some kind of a sail, which we did with our shirts rigged on an oar for a mast and a strand of the painter for shrouds and stays. Things now looked as hard as they could.

On either the nineteenth or twentieth day the boy was lying in the bottom of the boat, where he he had been for two days, gasping for breath and nearly dead. At about 3 o'clock in the morning I said to the mate: "What is to be done? I believe that boy is dying. You have a wife and five children and I have a wife and three children." I said that human flesh had been eaten before.

Stephens replied: "See what daylight brings forth."

Brooks took his watch at 6 o'clock, and we made motions to each. Brooks said he could not do it, and Stephens said he could not do it.

I told Brooks to go forward, which he did. I then took hold of the shrouds and had a last look round to see if anything was in sight, but there was nothing. I offered up a prayer most fervently that God above might forgive us for such an act, and then I knelt down by the boy and said: "Now, Dick, my boy, your time has come."

He murmured: "What, me, sir?"

I put the penknife in his throat and he was dead instantly.

The Captain, who was much upset by the recital, further stated how they drank the blood of the poor boy, and lived upon his flesh for the next four days. On the twenty-fourth day, when they had almost given up all hope, Brooks called out, at about 8 o'clock in the morning, "Sail, oh!" In an hour and a half the Montezuma was alongside, and they were lifted on to the deck. The remains of the lad Parker were buried by the Captain of the rescuing vessel.

BUBBLES

Didn't Know his Business.

"What are you doing there?" demanded the grocer of the new clerk.

"I'm putting a little sand in the sugar. Ain't that right?"

"Right? Great Scott! No. You take a little of the sugar and put it in the sand."

Quick Work in Court.

"I grant an absolute divorce to both parties," said the Judge. "Call the next case."

"But the children, your Honor. What disposition shall be made of them?"

"Equal division. Let each party take half. Call the next——"

"But there are three of them, your Hon——"

"Can't help it. That's their look out, not mine. Call the next case."

Where the Libel Hurt.

A politician who had been nominated for office said to a lawyer, "I want you to bring suit against the editor of the Daily Wanderer. He has defamed my character outrageously."

"But, my dear man, what he has published won't lose you any votes."

"Of course it won't lose me any votes, but my wife complains that she isn't able to hire a servant girl."

An Investigation not Necessary.

Depositor—Have you looked into the affairs of the bank recently?

Director—No, but everything is all right I am sure.

Depositor—Why are you sure?

Director—Because the health of the cashier is very poor.

Depositor—What has that got to do with the matter?

Director—He is too feeble to stand the rigors of a Canadian winter.

Sense of Taste in the Lower Animals.

The lowest animals hardly need a sense of taste at all, at least in the developed form: all is fish that comes to their net; they swallow, and, if possible, digest every bit of organic matter they happen to come across in the course of their aimless peregrinations. Or, rather, they swallow whatever is smaller than themselves, and get swallowed by whatever is larger. Still, even in these lowest depths of animal evolution, we get in a very simple and undeveloped form some first faint foreshadowing of the faculty which becomes specialized later on into the sense of taste. When floating jelly bag meets floating plantlet or floating jelly speck under the microscope, it makes an effort to envelop the edible morsel all round with its own matter. But when it meets mineral bodies or uneatable things generally, it either does not try to envelop them at all, or if it coats them for a moment it soon rejects them as of no practical use for its own purposes. These simplest rudimentary animals, besides being all mouth and all stomach, are also all nerve and all sense organ. Every part of them seems to possess in some feeble manner the power of discriminating between what is food and what is useless.

The First Napoleon a True Prophet.

A very curious fragment of Napoleon's table talk is brought to mind by the present position of affairs in Central Asia. The Emperor happened to speak of the way in which Alexander besought him at Tilsit to let Russia seize Constantinople. "Alexander a fort desire Constantinople de moi," said Napoleon; and he then went on to show how Russia might gradually sap our power in India. The subject interested him, and he spoke at great length, laying down a strategic details of the most minute description. His idea was that when Russia had firmly established herself within striking distance of our frontier she might bring about an insurrection and offer England her kind assistance in quelling the revolt. He said: "De toutes les puissances la Russia est la plus redoutable surtout pour les Anglais. Tout cela je l'avais prevu. Je vois dans l'avenir plus loin qui les autres."

There is no doubt but that he was right. He certainly did see further into the future than any statesman of whom we have knowledge. The predictions which he made during this memorable conversation form very suggestive reading at the present time, for they are being fulfilled one by one.

A COUPLE OF DOG STORIES.

AN AMICABLE TERRIER.

A few days since a hen belonging to Mrs. Elck stole off under the barn, and later was found sitting on four broken eggs, while the piping of ten newly fledged chicks came from beneath her wings. In order that she might bring out the remaining eggs the ten chicks were taken away from her and placed in a box nicely filled with straw in Mrs. Elck's kitchen. The plaintive cries of the chickens attracted the attention of Beauty, a pet black-and-tan dog, who after soberly inspecting the box and taking in the situation, stepped carefully into the straw and settled down among the chickens. The cries of the feathered youngsters ceased immediately, and they took to their unnatural, but attentive mother at once. For several days the dog assumed watchful care over her charges, carefully tucking them down about her with her nose, and becoming visibly anxious whenever one of the more active of the birds hopped over the edge of the box upon the floor, barking loudly until some one came and replaced the troublesome chick. When the chickens were finally taken from her and placed with the mother hen, Beauty seemed completely lost.

A CUTE CANINE.

A dog belonging to the B—s, which was a great favorite of theirs and regarded as of thoroughly irreproachable training, was charged by some of the neighbors with worrying sheep at night. The family rebutted this charge on the ground that the dog was fastened into their kitchen at night and was never let out until the servants came down in the morning.

The farmers, however, persisted that they knew the dog well, and had seen him going from the sheepfold, though he had managed to escape them. When this was urged so strongly as to make it imperative on the B—s to take some further steps, one of the daughters volunteered to sleep in the kitchen and watch the dog's behavior.

When they made up the young lady's bed the dog seemed very restless and strange but by and by he settled down, and all was silent.

A little after midnight he got up, came to the bed, and sniffed about until he had satisfied himself that the lady was not awake. Then he leaped into the window seat, lifted the latch of the shutters, and opened them. Then he undid the latch of the window, which he opened, and then disappeared.

After a long interval he came back, closed and fastened the windows and shutters, finished by licking his own feet, and the marks which he had left by springing on the floor. To the terror of the seeming sleeper, he now came and closely scrutinized her; but she kept still, and he at last crept off to his own bed.

As soon as she heard the servants stirring, the lady rose softly and slipped through the door. But the guilty dog had marked her. He sprang up and made a dash at her with most undisguised fury, for he saw that his secret was discovered and his character blasted by one whom he now regarded as a hateful spy.

Fortunately, she got the door fast shut in time, and at once alarmed the house. But the dog was now so furious that no one dared go into the kitchen, and at last a gun was brought, pointed through an apeture, and he was shot dead.

Italian Passions.

Love, jealousy, and vengeance continue to affect certain classes of society to a degree disproportionate to their actual importance. Tales of love have an invincible attraction for our lower classes, and there is a whole literature of tales of vengeance. Jealousy takes the same important place, and it has become the subject of legislation. A man who does not know to avenge an affront, to obtain justice for himself, and demand life for life, is unmanly in the popular estimation especially in Southern and Central Italy. A woman would refuse to smile upon a man who allowed himself to be insulted with impunity. This mode of feeling which manifests itself in the higher classes in the frequency of duels, is in the lower orders the principal cause of crime and violence. It is confirmed by the national quickness of temperament, and by the little respect for law which dates from earlier times, when legal justice was full of abuses. For this reason a naturally humane and gentle people takes an unfavorable place in the statistics of crime, in which violent offenses occupy an exceptional place. As, however, the Italians have not adopted destructive societies so, also, they could not possibly be guilty of the dragonnades nor of the excesses of the Convention and of the Commune. And we constantly encounter instances of kindness and humanity, especially in the lower classes, which called for our admiration. From their special qualities the people may be said to be capable of all good as well as of all evil. And among their prevailing sentiments, in addition to those who have already indicated, the highest place is taken by what is termed humanity. The lower classes are not only peculiarly sensible of the bonds of kindred, but they display in their family relations, and even in those with strangers, a devotion and love which puts those classes to shame who might do likewise at small personal inconvenience. The reserved and defensive spirit which characterizes the modern civilization of many countries is unknown in Italian life. The joys and sorrows of life are readily shared with relations, friends, and neighbors: He who has more than one loaf is ready to give to the neighbor who is destitute, knowing that he shall be relieved in a like necessity. Insensibility to the sufferings of others, a want of compassion or heartlessness, as it is called, is an unpardonable sin in Italy, while much is forgiven to the compassionate. There is no country where the plea for forgiveness to the Magdalen is more readily accepted. This same people, if their honor or that of their wives is concerned, or even if their passions are aroused by a gument or contradiction, will stain some friendly dwelling with blood without incurring the censure of the multitude. It is this morbid condition of public opinion which produces the evil; nor can it be cured by legislation, but it must be traced back to its source. On the day when the striker is regarded as an ordinary criminal the number of crimes committed in Italy will be materially diminished, since deliberate offenses, committed from motives of self-interest, are comparatively few. The first effect of an act of violence is commonly to ruin the position and future of the delinquent who has preferred the satisfaction of his dominant passion to any other consideration.

Novel Marriage Customs.

The people now living in the Northern Turkestan steppes consist, for the most part, of a Turkish race generally called Kirghese, of which the two sections are the Kara Kirghese living in the mountains of the south, whilst the Kirghese of the plains call themselves Kaisak. The manifold circumstances connected with marriage among the Kirghese are somewhat formidable, and involve the payment of a kalim besides the giving of various presents. The affair is arranged as to its preliminaries by matchmakers, and the bridegroom after betrothal has sometimes to wait for a year or more until he can bring the remaining portion of the kalim. If during this period the betrothed girl should die, her parents are bound to give instead their next daughter, or in default to return the kalim and pay also a fine of one or two horses and robes or furs. So also is it if the girl should refuse to marry, which she may do on account of the suitor's ill health, or his poverty, or (in some localities) her personal dislike. Yet another custom is that if the bridegroom die or refuse to marry the girl, his parents are bound to take her for their next son, paying a fine, usually a camel, in case of refusal. When the prescribed period of betrothal is at an end the bridegroom, dressed and mounted on his best, goes with his friends to the aul or village of the bride, where the tent has been prepared for his reception. Throughout the ceremonies of betrothal the bride's brother has the right of pilfering from the bridegroom whatever he pleases, but now the bride's relations come and take as presents almost everything he has—his coat, hat, girdle, horse and saddle, saying each one that they are for the education of the bride—a seizure that is afterward repaid by the relations of the bridegroom on their visit to the aul of the relations of the bride. The bride's parents are bound to give up the bride when the kalim is paid, giving her in dowry a kibitka or tent, a camel or riding horse, and cattle, also a bride's head-dress, called saoukele, or, if poor, another called jaoulouk, besides a bed, crockery and a trunk of wearing apparel.

An Electric French Girl.

M. Arago, Dr. Cholet, and M. Victor Meunier are responsible for the following extraordinary account of an electric girl. The girl, a peasant of 13, called Angelique Cottin, was, Meunier tells us in his weekly scientific article, working in a factory, when a small table next to her was violently upset without ostensible cause. Subsequently, in the presence of M. Meunier, she sat on a chair held by several people, when the chair was hurled from their hands. This was tried more than once with like results, the chair being in one case broken when its holders were strong enough not to let it go. When isolation from the ground was produced by glass, none of these effects occurred. The only discomfort which the girl ever feels is a pain in the hollow of the elbow. Before a commission of engineers none of these experiments succeeded but it is alleged in explanation that the electric properties of her system have through repeated discharges lost their force and finally become exhausted.

The Moors' Use of Water.

The Moors displayed an astonishing ingenuity and fertility of invention in their manipulations of fountains and baths and running streams. It is plain to see that water from the same source is made to subserve different purposes in different parts of its course, though there is never lack of water about the Alhambra, for the hotter and drier the weather the more rapidly is the snow melted on the mountains and the more copiously flow its streams. All the courts about the Alhambra are arranged that water may flow continually, open to the air, and thus give coolnes to the atmosphere even in the heat of day. At the Alcazar (which is Arabian for palace) of Seville the water is made to gush in crossing jets all along the pavements of the gardens, and the apparatus of arrangement still remaining.

The Camphor Tree.

Camphor laurel, a native of China, Japan, Formosa, and Cochin China, the tree from which most of the camphor of commerce is obtained, has recently been introduced into California. It grows to considerable height, and is valuablable for timber, the wood being light and durable, not liably to injure from insects, and much in favor for carpenter and cabinet work. Every part of the tree, and especially the flowers, smells strongly of camphor. With respect to the growing of the camphor tree in California it is said that it is easily propagated from seeds or cuttings, and especially well along the coast. A tree at Sacramento has attained a height of thirty feet.

Why the Needle Points to the Pole.

Pressing on to the scientific subjects, Prof. Wiggins was asked his theory regarding the reason why the magnetic needle always points towards the North Pole. The Professor said he believed it was caused by a perpetual current of electricity running over the earth's surface from east to west, for it was well known that a needle swung freely within a wire coil through which an electric current is sent will invariably place itself across the current. This would be greater towards the equator, where the earth's diameter is greatest, for in both oblate and prolate spheroids electricity collects at the extremities of the greatest diameter.

Thought He was an American.

Stranger—"Ticket to Montreal, Canada, please?"

Ticket Agent (whispering)—"Here it is; lay low."

Stranger—"What?"

"Ticket Agent—"There is a detective right behind you."

Stranger—"What do I care for detectives? I came here from Montreal on business and am merely returning home."

Ticket Agent—"Beg pardon; thought you were an American."

Fifty Hereford and Short Horn bulls and 300 high grade bulls have been added to the herds of Douglas County, Colorado, this summer.

INTERESTING ITEMS

Evangelists—A Parisian Sc… Butter in India—English … Stealers, Etc., etc.

Two robbers took the hoarded hu… from belonging to an industrious N… widow, and then a third scoundrel, … the neighbor's sympathy and hi… cial address to account, collected e… reimburse the loser and then disapp…

Having lost the whole of both legs … and subsequently living in povert… forty years on his pension, a Na… has upon the idea of making a … curiosity of himself by attachin… wire wax feet to his stumps and fig… freak of nature. He is now pro…

Sullivan, a London cigarette man… says that more ladies smoke in … than the world wots of. The cigs … becoming popular with those wh… in the least afraid to ask for what … not. There is no special brand for … they prefer the one with the most … flavor.

A Wisconsin man of habitual prof… been speechless since, as he writes … account, he uttered some particu… ssptemous words while angered … refractory horse. He thinks tha… smitten down as a punishment, and … her be able again to speak. Others be… that he fell in a drunken sleep, and dre… vividly that his brain was turned b… incapacity being imaginary.

The oddest of evangelists are two … a girl, all negroes. They speak … dest of the Southern plantation too … to have been long at the North, … ir garments are about as flabby … tesque as any ever worn on the stag… Station Africans. The men carry … on fiddles, while the girl taps … kes a tambourine, and all sing c… eting airs. They range themselve… edge of the sidewalk, and with v… l instruments quickly call toge…he… wd. Then their exhorter delivers a … very animated harrangue, and a se… mn is sung, with interpolated halleln… d amens. The services last no more … minutes, and are followed by a co… e, the girl passing her tambourine … ns.

Within a few months past markings … n seen on the surface of the pla… ns which even so cautious an astro… r as Prof. Young has declared give … e that we may be able to learn so… ng concerning the poles, the mounta… continents, and the seas of that dist… ld. Mr. Trouvelent has discove… at he regards as probably the snow-c… mmits of mountains thrust up thro… cloudy atmosphere in the neighborh… its poles. The mountains, if they ex… st be of an amazing height, and it … ubted whether Trouvelot has correc… erpreted what he saw. Yet that he … some peculiar feature of the planet—t… did get a glimpse, though an obscure … o this far-away world—the astronom… not question.

A girl presented her nose to a surge… improvement. It was very conspicuo… d undeniably destructive of the beau… ich her face would otherwise have p… sed. She said that she had read abo… straightening out and reforming a no… t was flattened and askew, and … ted him to take a section out of … man feature, thus transforming it into … ecian one. She had a pretty clear … n, too, as to how the operation could … formed; and he had to admit that … n was entirely feasible—that her n… line beak could be altered into a femini… l, with only a scar across it to mark t… nt where some of the superfluous mat… had been removed. But he did not f… tified in carving human faces for such … rpose, and had to decline the job. S… wed, however, that she would find … rgeon to do it if it cost five thousand d… s.

Excitement was caused lately in … artier Louis le Grand, Paris, by a r… de by the Commissioner of Police at … okmakers. The officer was about … ize the wallet and papers on the table … e of them, when the proprietor of … e shouted, "Thieves, assassins!" … wd quickly gathered, and there w… es of "Put the police out." A wa… ied out, "The police are the robbe… d was promptly arrested. The proprie… ain interfered and protested, so he … rried off too, and is in the more tro… r having been stopped in the act of th… g a tumbler at the Commissioner's h… e cafe is closed.

When the English dog-stealer decides … rural trip he takes a horse and cart, … ter covered in behind the seat so a… m a locker, and invites a friend of … n kidney to accompany him. Ha… rked down his quarry, he drives al… at the house; turns back again, an… asses. His hope is that the dog will … t into the road and bark. If nobody … ns to be watching the cart is driven s… off, and the dog follows it till some… nded spot is reached, when the confe… e gets out and secures him; or else, if … known to be savage, a noose is dro… er his head from behind, and he is ha… to the cart. The secret of a dog fo… g the strange cart, it is added, is tha… res of the wheels are plentifully ano… ith aniseed oil, or a bag saturated … at extract is let down by a cord to … the ground.

Irish butter seems to be the best. … e International Exhibition held this … Calcutta, it was awarded a medal … diploma. The samples exhibited … oyaged from Ireland to India, and … ithstood several months' exposure to … ical heat. The next in merit was a s… f American cleomargarine, but it … rown out by the judges on learning … ature.

In Mount Morris, Mich., a family, b… ng its members to be bewitched by a … oman in the neighborhood, nicke… urs of all its pigs and cows to driv… he devils.

M. Poincaire (Comptes Rendus) co… hat the attraction of the moon modif… tensity of gravitation. Hence … quator the clock is retarded by … econd yearly by the combined attrac… he sun and moon, and advanced a sec… he poles.

Novel Marriage Customs.

The people now living in the Northern Turkestan steppes consist, for the most part, of a Turkish race generally called the Kirghese, of which the two sections are the Kara Kirghese living in the mountains of the south, whilst the Kirghese of the plains call themselves Kazaks. The manifold circumstances connected with marriage among the Kirghese are somewhat formidable, and involve the payment of a kalim besides the giving of various presents. The affair is arranged as to its preliminaries by matchmakers, and the bridegroom after betrothal has sometimes to wait for a year or more until he can bring the remaining portion of the kalim. If during this period the betrothed girl should die, her parents are bound to give instead their next daughter, and in default to return the kalim and pay a fine of one or two horses and rebes of furs. So also is it if the girl should refuse to marry, which she may do on account of the suitor's ill health, or his poverty, or (in some localities) her personal dislike. Yet another custom is that if the bridegroom die or refuse to marry the girl, his parents are bound to take her for their next son, paying a fine, usually a camel, in case of refusal. When the prescribed period of betrothal is at an end, the bridegroom, dressed and mounted as best, goes with his friends to the aul or village of the bride, where the tent has been prepared for his reception. Throughout the ceremonies of betrothal the bride's brother has the right of pilfering from the bridegroom whatever he pleases; now the bride's relations come and ask as presents almost everything he has—his coat, hat, girdle, horse and saddle, saying each one that they are for the relation of the bride—a seizure that is afterward repaid by the relations of the bridegroom on their visit to the aul of the relations of the bride. The bride's parents are bound to give up the bride when the kalim is paid, giving her in dowry a yurta or tent, a camel or riding horse, some cattle, also a bride's head-dress, called koukele, or, if poor, another called kouk, besides a bed, crockery and a chest of wearing apparel.

An Electric French Girl.

Arago, Dr. Cholet, and M. Victor Meunier are responsible for the following extraordinary account of an electric girl. Marie Angelique, a peasant of 13, called Angelique Cottin, was, Meunier tells us in his weekly scientific article, working in a factory, when a small table next to her was violently upset without ostensible cause. Subsequently, in the absence of M. Meunier, she sat on a chair held by several people, when the chair was hurled from their hands. This was more than once with like results, the girl being in one case broken when its legs were strong enough not to let it go. Complete isolation from the ground was produced by glass, none of these effects occurred. Finally discomfort which the girl ever felt like a pain in the hollow of the elbow. A commission of engineers none of whose experiments succeeded but it is alleged to explanation that the electric properties of her system have through repeated discharges lost their force and finally became exhausted.

The Moors' Use of Water.

The Moors displayed an astonishing inventive and fertility of invention in their decorations of fountains and baths and running streams. It is plain to see that they drew on the same source is made to subserve different purposes in different parts of the house, though there is never lack of water. Without the Alhambra, for the hotter the weather the more rapidly is the snow melted on the mountains and the more copiously flow its streams. All the courts of the Alhambra are arranged that water may flow continually, open to the air, and give coolness to the atmosphere during the heat of day. At the Alcazar (the Arabian for palace) of Seville the water is made to gush in crossing jets all the pavements of the gardens, and the ancient arrangement still remains in use.

The Camphor Tree.

The camphor laurel, a native of China, Japan, Formosa and Cochin China, the tree from which most of the camphor of commerce is obtained, has recently been introduced into California. It grows to considerable height, and is valuable for timber, the wood being very durable, not liably to injure from insects, and much in favor for carpenter and cabinet work. Every part of the tree, and especially the flowers, smells strongly of camphor. With respect to the growing of the camphor tree in California it is said that it may be propagated from seeds or cuttings, and especially well along the coast. A specimen tree in the Sacramento has attained a height of Needle Points to the Pole.

In addition to the scientific subjects, Prof. Barker was asked his theory regarding the reason why the magnetic needle always points or tends the North Pole The Professor believed it was caused by a powerful current of electricity running over the earth's surface from east to west, for it was known that a needle swung freely within the coil through which an electric current will invariably place itself in the current. This would be greatest at the equator, where the earth's motion is greatest, for in both oblate and prolate spheroids electricity collects at the extremities of the greatest diameter.

But He was an American.

"Ticket to Montreal, Canada, Agent (whispering)—"Here it is;

"What?"

Agent—"There is a detective after you."

"What do I care for detectives? I'm here from Montreal on business, merely returning home."

Agent—"Beg pardon; thought you were American."

Hereford and Short Horn bulls and grades have been added to the Douglas County, Colorado, this

INTERESTING ITEMS.

Bold Evangelists—A Parisian Scene—Irish Butter in India—English Dog Stealers. Etc., etc.

Two robbers took the hoarded hundred dollars belonging to an industrious Nebraska widow, and then a third scoundrel, turning the neighbor's sympathy and his own official address to account, collected enough to reimburse the loser and then disappeared.

Having lost the whole of both legs in the army, and subsequently living in poverty for many years on his pension, a Nashville man hit upon the idea of making a side-show curiosity of himself by attaching deceptive wax feet to his stumps and figuring as a freak of nature. He is now prosperous.

Sullivan, a London cigarette manufacturer, says that more ladies smoke in London than the world wots of. The cigarette is becoming popular with those who are not in the least afraid to ask for what they want. There is no special brand for them, but they prefer the one with the most delicate flavor.

A Wisconsin man of habitual profanity has been speechless since, as he writes out to account, he uttered some particularly blasphemous words while angered by a refractory horse. He thinks that he was smitten down as a punishment, and will never be able again to speak. Others believe that he fell in a drunken sleep, and dreamed so vividly that his brain was turned by it, the incapacity being imaginary.

The oddest of evangelists are two men and a girl, all negroes. They speak the dialect of the Southern plantation too rich to have been long at the North, and their garments are about as flabby and grotesque as any ever worn on the stage by imitation Africans. The men carry and play on fiddles, while the girl taps and shakes a tambourine, and all sing camp-meeting airs. They range themselves at the edge of the sidewalk, and with voices and instruments quickly call together a crowd. Then their exhorter delivers a brief but very animated harrangue, and a second hymn is sung, with interpolated hallelujahs and amens. The services last no more than ten minutes, and are followed by a collection, the girl passing her tambourine for coins.

Within a few months past markings have been seen on the surface of the planet Venus which even so cautious an astronomer as Prof. Young has declared give promise that we may be able to learn something concerning the poles, the mountains, the continents, and the seas of that distant world. Mr. Trouvelent has discovered what he regards as probably the snow-clad summits of mountains thrust up through the cloudy atmosphere in the neighborhood of its poles. The mountains, if they exist, must be of an amazing height, and it is doubted whether Trouvelot has correctly interpreted what he saw. Yet that he did see some peculiar feature of the planet—that he did get a glimpse, though an obscure one of this far-away world—the astronomers do not question.

A girl presented her nose to a surgeon for improvement. It was very conspicuous, and undeniably destructive of the beauty which her face would otherwise have possessed. She said that she had read about straightening out and reforming a nose that was flattened and askew, and she wanted him to take a section out of her Roman feature, thus transforming it into a Grecian one. She had a pretty clear notion, too, as to how the operation could be performed; and he had to admit that her plan was entirely feasible—that her masculine beak could be altered into a feminine one, with only a scar across it to mark the point where some of the superfluous material had been removed. But he did not feel justified in carving human faces for such a purpose, and had to decline the job. She vowed, however, that she would find a surgeon to do it if it cost five thousand dollars.

Excitement was caused lately in the Quartier Louis le Grand, Paris, by a raid made by the Commissioner of Police after pickpockets. The officer was about to seize the wallet and papers on the table of one of them, when the proprietor of the cafe shouted, "Thieves, assassins!" A crowd quickly gathered, and there were cries of "Put the police out." A waiter cried out, "The police are the robbers," and was promptly arrested. The proprietor again interfered and protested, so he was carried off too, and is in the more trouble for having been stopped in the act of throwing a tumbler at the Commissioner's head. The cafe is closed.

When the English dog-stealer decides on a rural trip he takes a horse and cart, the latter covered in behind the seat so as to form a locker, and invites a friend of his own kidney to accompany him. Having marked down his quarry, he drives slowly past the house: turns back again, and repasses. His hope is that the dog will run out into the road and bark. If nobody happens to be watching the cart is driven slowly off, and the dog follows it till some secluded spot is reached, when the confederate gets out and secures him; or else, if he is known to be savage, a noose is dropped over his head from behind, and he is hauled into the cart. The secret of a dog following the strange cart, it is added, is that the tires of the wheels are plentifully anointed with aniseed oil, or a bag saturated with that extract is let down by a cord to trail on the ground.

Irish butter seems to be the best. At the International Exhibition held this year at Calcutta, it was awarded a medal and diploma. The samples exhibited had voyaged from Ireland to India, and had withstood several months' exposure to tropical heat. The next in merit was a sample of American cleomargarine, but it was thrown out by the judges on learning its nature.

In Mount Morris, Mich., a family, believing its members to be bewitched by an old woman in the neighborhood, nicked the ears of all its pigs and cows to drive out the devils.

M. Poincaire (Comptes Rendus) contends that the attraction of the moon modifies the intensity of gravitation. Hence at the equator the clock is retarded by half a second yearly by the combined attraction of the sun and moon, and advanced a second at the poles.

THE SLAVE TRADE IN THE PACIFIC.

The Inhuman Traffic Carried on in the South Sea Islands by Englishmen.

For some years past attention has been from time to time directed to the fact that there is carried on in the Western Pacific by British ships, under the protection of British men-of-war, what is in effect a slave trade accompanied by many of the horrors which have made the African infamous. Assertions to that effect have, indeed, been decried as sensational or denied as false. The report of Mr. Romilly, commissioner in the Western Pacific, and the accounts which have been received of several trials for murder and kidnapping held at Brisbane, have brought this question most prominently before the public. The following notes of his personal experience have been furnished by an old master mariner who has during the last three years, made a number of voyages between Queensland and the Solomon Islands, the New Hebrides, and other groups in that quarter as master or mate of vessels engaged in the labor trade:

For the benefit of those who are wholly unacquainted with the traffic, let me explain the manner of it from the beginning. About two thousand pounds are required—and very often people club to raise it, and buy an old sailing vessel, generally a schooner, that is no longer fit to carry a heavy cargo. When a craft of that kind has been found she is fitted up for the trade. She then is surveyed by the Government surveyor, and on his favorable report the vessel is granted a license to carry so many "boys" as the native men are called, and so many Marys, as the women are called, she then ships a white crew, which she is by law compelled to do, and then having taken on board a Government agent, makes her way into the seas lying west of New Guinea, stopping at one of the nearest islands where it is known that boats' crews can be obtained. Having got these helpers on board the vessel then goes on to cruise among the islands. In many islands it is customary to light a fire as the ship approaches as a signal that the islanders want to trade. Two boats then go to the shore, rowed by the natives I have described, and carrying a white man, who is known as a "recruiter," one of these boats has on board the "trade," as we call the goods by which purchases are effected, and this boat goes ashore; while the second boat, which is called the "cover" boat, keeps a short distance outside the surf, in order to cover the retreat of the trading boat if it becomes necessary. When the first boat approaches the shore the bargain is conducted in the following manner. There is generally a head man on the beach, with several assistants belonging to him. They keep the "boys" and the Marys in the background while the head man makes the bargain. Only one boy is bought and sold at a time. The head man who gets into the "trade" boats, tells the recruiter how much he wants for the boy, and they in the usual way try to make the best bargain they can, and on their agreeing upon the price, the "trade" is taken from the trade chest and placed into the head-man's hands exactly at the same moment that the boy is passed into the boat. In order to make the thing legal, the man or woman is taken on board before the Government agent and captain, and the question asked, through an interpreter, whether they would like to go to Queensland and work for three years. The interpreter knows exactly what the buyers would like him to say and he says it, and it is duly entered on the ship's log or the Government agent's official book. The islanders are thus bought, often without knowing what has happened and are carried off.

The trade is a paying one to all concerned, and there are some rough crews engaged in it. As a rule, the natives deal fairly, but the European traders who go among them try to cheat them, and they try to retaliate. The word "gammon" is in great use among them. For example, if you say anything to them that they do not care to believe they will say, "You gammon," and when they wish to ask you if you mean what you say, they will say, "You no gammon" They seem at some of the islands to have a great terror of vessels from the Figi Islands for the reason that there has been a great deal of kidnapping going on by vessels from those islands, and it is hard to make them believe at times that you are of a Queensland vessel and not a Figi man.

When the vessel has a full cargo, which it often takes her some months to collect, she starts off on her way home, going round first to drop her natives boat's crew at the island from which they were taken, which often means a long round and great delay. As to the treatment of the cargo during the voyage it differs of course according to the character of the crews, but I have often seen things which it would be impossible to relate with regard to decency. Cruelty is less common, as it is in the interest of the crew to land the "boys" (who are generally fed on yams, a most nutritious fruit) in good condition, but I have seen some cases of horrible barbarity.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Ice and Caste in India.

India is no longer dependent upon America for her ice supply, as in many of the large cities ice factories have been established, thus bringing the luxury within the reach of persons of very modest incomes. Many of the natives have learned to esteem the use of ice a grateful addition to their comfort. In an advertisement of one of the great companies having factories at Allahabad, Lucknow and Agra we find this addressed to high-caste natives: "We invite inspection of any of our factories by native friends, so that they may see for themselves that the ice is manufactured with all due regard to caste, and that nothing is done to offend the most prejudiced." Recently a fire in Bombay destroyed a large ice factory, and had the bread supply been suddenly cut off there would not have been a greater outcry than was raised at the prospect of an ice famine.

Oh! how tired and weak I feel, I don't believe I will ever get through this Spring house-cleaning! Oh yes you will if you take a bottle or two of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters to purify your blood and tone up the system. In large bottles 50 cents

Bank of England notes will stand almost anything. They will hold together at the bottom of the sea and come out of a furnace intact, but they will not outlast the scrubbing, the bleaching, and the mangling of the laundry. That trial, to which they are sometimes subjected through the inadvertence of ladies who send them to the wash in their pockets, usually deface them, though even after it their genuineness is recognizable.

A FATHER'S PREMONITION.

Verified by a Telegram and a Post Mortem.

A remarkable case of premonition of trouble and death is now agitating the people of Jersey City. Some time ago Miss Laura L. Bunnell, aged 23 years, daughter of Mr. William J. Bunnell, a well-known wealthy resident of Jersey City, spent a few weeks on a visit to an aunt of her's in New York. She attended a series of Methodist revival meetings and soon became a convert to that faith.

On her return home her mind seemed to dwell almost wholly on religious subjects and, from her conduct, it soon became apparent that her mind had become unsettled. She believed herself possessed of supernatural power and that she possessed the gift of restoring the sick by laying on of hands.

Finally she became imbued with the idea that her family friends were endeavoring to kill her with poison, and she would neither eat nor drink till her father had first partaken of the dish. She was sent to the hospital in the hope that relief could be afforded by physical treatment, but after a few days it was decided to remove her to the State Insane Asylum at Morris Plains, where she was accordingly taken. She was then very quiet and harmless, her parents getting frequent telephonic communication with the institution.

On last Friday week Mr. Bunnell went as usual to his place of business, but a sense of great oppression weighed upon his spirits. "I could not work," said Mr Bunnell to a reporter; "if I attempted to look over my books I found that

I COULD NOT CONCENTRATE MY THOUGHTS.

My ideas all seemed centered upon my daughter, and I felt that she was in trouble. I finally requested my son to tel-phone to the asylum and make inquiries concerning her. He did so, and the steward replied that he would call the physician and ascertain. Presently he came to the telephone again, and said that the doctor said that the girl was doing well That while she could not be considered as being really any better, still she was no worse.

"But this assurance did not relieve me and I could not rid myself of the impression that something terrible was about to happen. I was so affected that I went home and lay down, but the idea continued to grow upon me and I cried like a child. My family became alarmed and sought to learn the cause of my singular conduct. But I could only say that Laura was in trouble.

"I suffered terribly; nor was it of any use to attempt to reason against my convictions, although I had positive assurance that my daughter was all right. At last a telegram was received stating that Laura had grown suddenly worse and had died during the night."

Subsequent developments have revealed the fact that during the time Mr. Bonnell was laboring under the conviction his daughter was in trouble, she was in a straight-jacket, strapped to a bedstead. He made inquiries into the case and finally received a letter from Dr. H. A. Buttolph, the manager of the asylum, in which he stated that the morbid excitement under which Miss Bunnell was laboring suddenly took on a form so acute as to render it "necessary to restrain her in a recumbent position."

Mr. Bunnell was not satisfied with the explanation, for the doctor added in a postscript to this letter: "It occurs to me to add that, with the strong suicidal tendency existing in your daughter's mind during the day and night before her death, she would probably have effected her purpose had she remained unrestrained, thus making it a duty to use this means of safety."

"My daughter never manifested any tendencies of this nature alluded to in the doctor's letter. It was wholly uncalled for to employ the means used, as they alleged to restrain her at the asylum, and I hold the asylum managers responsible for her death."

A post-mortem examination of the remains of Miss Bunnell revealed the evidence of very savage usage.

Life in Uruguay.

Uruguay has a delightful climate, temperate and pleasant. The mercury does not rise above eighty-five degrees. The climate is salubrious and the people are subject to no disease in particular. There are thirty-four Americans in Uruguay. The natives are remarkable for their refinement and intelligence. They have a number of good schools and colleges. The revenue of the country is $4 000,000. Their exports amount to $1,200,000, and their imports $900,000. Twenty steamers a day enter and depart from the port at Montevideo. The people are engaged largely in manufacturing and cattle herding. Half a million dollars' worth of cattle are killed each year for the hides. It is a strange thing, but the people there will not use mares in any way. The street railway company put them before the cars and the people refused to ride in the cars. Fine animals of this kind, which would sell here for $150, are sold there for $5 and killed for their hides. The natives are enterprising and progressive. Ten years ago they imported all their wheat; to-day they export 400,000 bushels of their own production. Uruguay is a beautiful, blooming country, and its scenery is a source of perpetual delights to a traveler within its bounds. I attended a wedding a few weeks ago; 240 guests were present and a finer appearing, better dressed assembly I have never seen in any country.

The Chinese a Subject Race.

The Chinese are a composite nation. The Chinese proper form the basis of population in the eighteen provinces. The Tartars are the ruling race. They have held the imperial power for more than two hundrod years. Tartar Garrisons distributed throughout the empire keep the great cities in order and dominate the provincial armies, which are chiefly composed of Chinese. Besides these leading elements there are the Mohammedans, who are found principally in the southern and western provinces. They are descendants of the first Arab invaders who found their way to China about the tenth century. They have not preserved the faith of Mohammed in a high degree of perfection and in externals of dress and manners they resemble the Chinese about them. The Mohammedans are always oppressed and discontented. The Chinese, though they have so long obeyed a Tartar emperor, are dissatisfied, and, as shown by their recent revolts, would willingly transfer their allegiance to rulers of their own or even of another race if they could do so with safety,

"I must congratulate you on your apparent success," remarked a gentleman to a young man who had just opened a writing school in the village. "Thanks," replied the teacher, "I hope to flourish here."

Not another Pill shall go down my throat again, said a citizen "when I can get such a prompt and pleasant cure for my Bilious attacks, such as Dr Carson's Stomach Bitters. It renders the Blood Pure and Cool and makes a splendid Spring Medicine. Large bottles 50 cents

A. P. 197.

PHRENOLOGY. EXAMINATIONS GIVEN BY WALLACE MASON, 353 Yonge St., Toronto.

THOS. GALLOWAY & Co., Cotton, Woollen, Silk, Carpet, and Worsted Shuttle Makers, Dundas, On

GRAND OPPORTUNITY FOR A FARMER RETiring and able to command from $12,000 to $20,000, large clay estate, embracing about 30 houses, will bring such rental as will give good interest on investment and handsome return for necessary attention; property compact. W. HAMILTON, 241 Talbot street, London.

MEN WANTED

Active pushing men wanted to wholesale my famous teas to consumers. Salary from $600 to $2000 per year Send stamp for particulars, JAMES LAUT, Importer, Toronto.

PARTY WANTED TO PURCHASE CARRIAGE shops 24 x 118 feet; double stoop, with office 24 x 60; blacksmith's shop, 20 x 42; lumber, barn, and shed horse barn, two acres of land with dwelling-house suitable for two small families; two cisterns, cellar, and well; situated at Ross' Corners, four miles from Belleville, on main gravelled road; good locality, where a business from $8,000 to $10,000 per annum is done. The premises are new in full blast, and will be sold to good live man at a bargain. HARFORD ASHLEY, Belleville

MUTUAL MARRIAGE ENDOWNMENT AS Incorporated. Head Office, London, Ont. Issues Certificates from $125 to $3,000, payable on marriage, as following rates. For $500, or half certificate $4; quarterly dues in advance, $0.75. For $1,000 Certificate, $6; quarterly dues in advance, $1.00. For $2,000 Certificate, $10; quarterly dues in advance. $2.00. For $3,000 Certificate, $15; quarterly dues in advance. $3.00. The only cash payments. Assessments on marriages $1.60 on each $100 0, First years quarterly assessments are promptly paid, on present membership at end of year. Endowment reserve account will amount to $10.000, providing for a large number of endowments, which places this association in a sound financial position. No connection with any similar institution. A good savings society for young people, Send for By-Laws, &c. W. J IMLACH, Secretary, London, Ont.

HOUSE CLEANING TIME.

If you want your houses to be attractive, use Ramsay's Improved Calsomine Colors for tinting Walls.—Can be used without the aid of a Painter and do not rub off. Made in fifteen different tints. Apply to your local dealers for them.

MANUFACTURED BY A. RAMSAY & SON, MONTREAL.

E E KNOTT' Speculator's Mart. Adelaide St. East, Toronto. All kinds of real estate sold or exchanged on commission. Money loaned on all kinds of real estate at lowest rates of interest. Application for money from farmers a speciality. Rents collected and estates managed in town or country. N.B.—Best of references on application.

1883.-ST. JOHN EXHIBITION.-1883

Leather Belting, Fire Engine Hose, &c. Our First Prizes and Two Diplomas. The highest of all Awards for Leather Belting, and Fire Engine Hose were accorded by th Judges at the St. John Centennial and Dominion Exhibition, to ROBIN & SADLER, Montreal, over all competitors.

F. E. DIXON & CO.,

Manufacturers of Star Rivet

Leather Belting

70 King Street, East, Toronto

Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts.

W. & F. P. CURRIE & Co

100 Grey Nun Street, Montreal.

Importers of

Drain Pipes, Portland Cement, Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings, Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting, Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay, Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay

Manufacturers of

Bessemer Steel Sofa, Chair & Bed Springs

MACHINERY. For sale 1 Westinghouse Traction Farm Engine. 1 Able Triumph do. 1 G. C. Morrison do, 18 h. p. Portable Engine and Boiler on Skids. 1 35 h. p. Horozontal by Northy. 1 do. by Waterous with cut off valve, and 20 engines an boilers of smaller sizes, all thoroughly refitted before leaving shop. 3 24-inch Planers and Matchers. 1 20-inch Pony Planer. 1 Iron Frame Tenoning machine. 1 Blind Slat Tenoner. 1 Buggy Plainer or jointer. 2 band saws. 10 Saw Tables. 1 Fire-Proof Safe. 1 Jeweler's Rools Steel. 1 Book-Binder's Screw Press. 1 42-inch French Burr Portable Grist Mill. 1 62-inch inserted Tooth-Saw &c., &c. Send for new list, No. 9, containing full description of machinery in stock. Address,

H. W. PETRIE, Brantford, Ont.

The White Glycerine--The Sharon Bouquet — Palm Oil Bath Soap—Oatmeal Skin Soap, and The Baby's Own Soap.

MADE BY THE ALBERT TOILET SOAP CO.'Y

ARE UNSURPASSED FOR PURITY & EXCELLENCE.

Sold by all leading druggists.

WANTED In every City, Town, Village and County in Canada, Lady and Gentleman to sell "Queen Victoria, her girlhood and womanhood" by Grace Greenwood, 400 pages. The cheapest and fastest selling book ever published. Send 75c. for sample copy, and address for terms and territory: The Canadian Subscription Company, 8 Exchange Bank Buildings, Montreal.

SMOKED SAUSAGES.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use. Sold by grocers through the Dominion Send for price to W. CLARK, P. O. Box 949 Montreal.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter between Portland and Glasgow, and Boston and Glasgow alternately; and during summer between Quebec and Glasgow and Boston and Glasgow every week.

For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B. Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; H A. Allan, Portland, Boston, Montreal

Dominion Line of Steamships.

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from

QUEBEC TO LIVERPOOL.

Brooklyn,	Aug. 25	Montreal,	Sept. 13
Toronto,	Aug. 30	*Vancouver,	Sept. 20
*Oregon	Sept. 6

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $50, $60 $55, $80. Return, $90, $105. $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $35, Steerage at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion felt, and no cattle or sheep is carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to

DAVID TORRANCE & CO., General Agents, Montreal

THE MODEL Washer AND BLEACHER

Weighs but 6 pounds. Can be carried in a small valise. Illustration shows Machine in boiler. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded within 30 days

$1000.00 REWARD FOR ITS SUPERIOR.

Washing made light and easy. The clothes have that pure whiteness which no other mode of washing can produce. No rubbing required, no friction to injure the fabric. A 10 year old girl can do the washing as well as an older person.

To place it in every household THE PRICE HAS BEEN REDUCED TO $2.50, and if not found satisfactory, money refunded. See what the "Canada Presbyterian," says about it—The Model Washer and Bleacher which Mr. C. W. Dennis offers to the public has many and valuable advantages. It is a time and labor saving machine, substantial and enduring, and is very cheap. From trial in the household we can testify to its excellence. Delivered to any express office in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. Charges paid $3.00. Send for circulars.

AGENTS WANTED.

C. W. DENNIS,

TORONTO BARGAIN HOUSE.

213 YONGE STREET, TORONTO, ONT

GURNEYS & WARE,

STANDARD SCALES.

THE BEST, THE STRONGEST, THE MOST RELIABLE.

Unrivalled in material, construction and finish, perfect in accuracy and unequalled in durability. Guaranteed to give entire satisfaction.

THEY EXCEL ALL OTHERS.

RAILROAD, WAREHOUSE AND MILL TRUCKS.

Mills' Alarm Money Drawers.

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST.

GURNEYS & WARE,

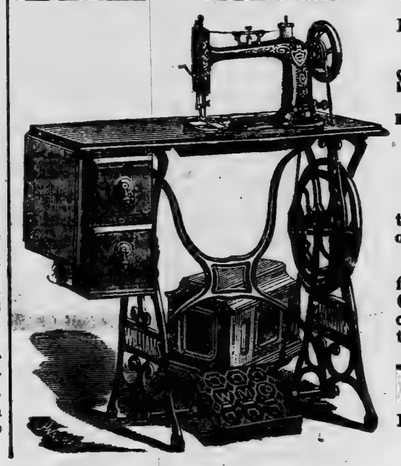
HAMILTON, ONT.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.,

MANUFACTURERS OF

Finest Electro Gold and Silver Plate,

New York, Meriden (Ct.), Chicago, San Francisco, London, (Eng.).



BRANCH FACTORY—Cor. Cannon and Wellington Streets, Hamilton, Ont.

TRADE MERIDEN B'COMPANY. MARK.

Many purchasers having through a similarity of names purchased other wares under the impression that they were of our manufacture, we are compelled to ask special attention to the above TRADE MARKS The fact that our name and Trade Marks are being so closely imitated should be a sufficient guarantee to the public that our wares are the BEST IN THE WORLD.

TRADE 1847 Rogers Bros. A1. MARK.

THE NEW WILLIAMS

High Arm Machine is now recognized as the

Sewing Machine of the Period.

It is Light and Easy to run.

Silent and Rapid in movement'

Plain and Simple to Learn.

It is strong, durable, and well built, of the very best material that money can buy or skill produce.

It was awarded five medals and three first prizes at the Dominion Exhibition last October. It is rapidly superseding all the old fashioned makes everywhere. See it, try it, buy it, and make sure that you get it.

THE WILLIAMS' MFG CO.

1783 Notre Dame St., Montreal, and 59 King St., West, Toronto.

The Canadian Mutual Aid Association.

INCORPORATED AUGUST 20TH, 1880.

HEAD OFFICE, - - TORONTO.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

Wm. Beattie, Esq., Toronto, President; A. Gifford, Esq., Meaford, Vice-President; E. H. Hilborn, Esq., Uxbridge, Treasurer; W. Pemberton Page, Esq., Toronto, Sec'y; G. H. Watson, L.L.B., Toronto, Solicitor; R. H. Robertson, M.D., Toronto, Med. Dir; C. H. Mackintosh, M.P., Ottawa; Lewis Wigle, M.P.P., Leamington; Thos. Menkies, Peterboro; J. P. Bull, Downsview; Peter Graham, M.P.P., Warwick; S. W. Hill, Esq., Ridgeville, Memb. Supt.

The Directors have filed with the Hon. S. C. Wood, (Ex-Provintial Treasurer of Ontario) Trustee for the Association. Bonds to the amount of $60,000.00, as a guarantee for the honest carrying out of the terms of Certificates issued to members.

Reliable Aid to Families of Deceased Members at Small Cost.

The Association will do business on the following plan:

Applications.

All Applications for Membership shall be made upon printed forms furnished by the Association, (and applicants must pass a satisfactory medical examination). If accepted, a certificate will be issued within thirty days from date of such acceptance.

Membership.

The payment of TWELVE DOLLARS admits any of sound body and mind between the age of 18 and 60 years, to all the benefits of the Association. If the application is not accepted the money is promptly returned to the applicant.

Plan of Business.

The following table shows the amount for which Certificates of Membership will be issued by the Association, according to age:

AGE.	Amount at Death	AGE.	Amount at Death
From 18 to 30	$3 000	From 45 to 46	$2 200
30 to 31	2 950	46 to 47	2 150
31 to 32	2 900	47 to 48	2 100
32 to 33	2 850	48 to 49	2 050
33 to 34	2 800	49 to 50	2 000
34 to 35	2 750	50 to 51	1 900
35 to 36	2 700	51 to 52	1 800
36 to 37	2 650	52 to 53	1 700
37 to 38	2 600	53 to 54	1 600
38 to 39	2 550	54 to 55	1 500
39 to 40	2 500	55 to 56	1 400
40 to 41	2 450	56 to 57	1 300
41 to 42	2 400	57 to 58	1 200
42 to 43	2 350	58 to 59	1 100
43 to 44	2 300	59 to 60	1 000
44 to 45	2 250

HALF RATE PLAN.

Certificates will be issued for half the above amounts should the applicant so desire.

Assessments.

An Assessment of One Dollar upon each member will be made in case of death or total disability of a member, except when there is money enough in surplus funds to pay said claim.

Special Features.

1—Great inducements to provide for families in case of death, at small cost.
2—Equal benefits to both sexes.
3—Uniform assessments of one dollar only.
4—Careful medical examination required.
5—No annual dues or extra charges.
6—No large salaries or expenses.
7—Two hundred dollars advanced for funeral expenses when necessary.
8—Benefits secured at actual cost.
9—Members becoming totally disabled, may draw half of their claims, the balance being payable at death.
10—Ladies accepted in this Association as well as men.

For particulars apply to S. W. HILL, Membership Superintendent, Ridgeville, or to W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Secretary, 87 King Street West, Toronto.

AGENT FOR MARKDALE, - - THOS. MANN.

Also Agent for Dominion Grange Mutual Fire Insurance Association.

SAW MILL AND TIMBER LAND FOR SALE OR TO LET

In the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, 4 miles from Flesherton Station, on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The mill is situated at Little Falls, in a block of about 400 acres timber lnd, with other timber land surrounding. The building is substantially built on stone foundation. The machinery is all good and driven with great power by a 23 inch Leffell wheel, under 36 ft. head of water. There are one large circular saw for cutting logs, 2 small circulars for sawing lath and broom handles, 1 guage lathe for turning broom handles, etc., 1 shingle machine with jointer and packer complete. The water power is excellent, the stream being very regular. There are several other good mill sites on the proyerty. The land in the valley is considered the best in the country. The place would make an excellent stock farm when the timber is taken off.

This offers a good opportunity for a practical, energetic man to go into this kind of business, as the place will be sold or let on liberal terms.

The bush is so convenient to the mill logs can be trucked in summer time. Immediate possession given.

Apply to the proprietor, WM. HOGG,
FLESHERTON STATION P. O., ONT.

—Good Work Guaranteed—

—AT—

Bulmers Photograph Gallery

FLESHERTON.

Call at once and see samples of work which we area not ashamed to show.

All kinds of Framing done cheap at

JAS. BULMER'S, FLESHERTON.

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice. Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

RESPECT AGE.

Age should always command respect, in the case of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry it certainly does, for 25 years that has been the standard remedy with the people, for Cholera Morbus, Dysentery Diarrhœa, Colic and all bowel complaints.

The Fifth Division Court of the County of Grey will hold its regular sittings in the Town Hall, Flesherton, on Thursday, October the 28th next.

A STRONG ENDORSEMENT.

The Clergy, the Medical Faculty, the press and the people all endorse Burdock Blood Bitters as the best system renovating blood purifying tonic known. Its work bears out their best repommend.

Toronto's population is now 104,276.

THOUSANDS SAY SO.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by A. Turner & Co. 3

The jury in the Blyth murder case yesterday returned a verdict of manslaughter against the three Beamishes, for causing the death of Mr. Main. Bemish senior and one son were sentenced to twenty years' penitentiary and the youngest son to five years.

AN EX-ALDERMAN TRIED IT.

Ex-Alderman Taylor of Toronto, tried Hagyard's Yellow Oil for rheumatism. It cured him after all other remedies had failed.

FIRE.—We regret to learn that the Mt. Forest Advocate newspaper office was destroyed by fire on Sunday morning, the 21st Sept. Loss covered by insurance.

A SAD NEGLECT.

Neglecting a constipated condition of the bowels is sure to bring ill-health and great suffering. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate the bowels in a natural manner, purifying the blood and promote a healthy action of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap is highly recommended for the cure of Eruption, Chafes, Chapped Hands, Pimples, Tan, etc.

The following is from J. W. Ptolemy, of Winnipeg, formerly grain buyer for William Gillesby, of Hamilton and Grimsby: "I was for many years much afflicted with Costiveness, Biliousness, and ultimately Dyspepsia. I suffered very much and tried many different medicines, which gave me only temporary relief and then I was as bad as ever again. I was recommended by a friend, who had been restored to health by it, to try McGregor's Speedy Cure. I did so, and it was not long before I felt like a new man, and I have enjoyed excellent health ever since. I first commenced taking it February 7th, 1879. Sold by Hill Bro's, A. & S. 5

The Climate of Colorado.

DENVER, Sept. 26.—Miss J. C. Welton, of New York, was frozen to death on Tuesday in making an ascent of Long's Peak. She was caught in a snowstorm.

A WIDE AWAKE DRUGGIST.

Mr. A. Turner is always wide awake in his business, and spares no pains to secure the best of every article in his line. He has secured the agency for the celebrated Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. The only certain cure known for Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Asthma, Hay Fever, Bronchitis, or any affection of the throat and lungs. Sold on positive guarantee. Will give you a trial bottle free. Regular size $1.00. 3

THE GLOBE AND THE C. P. R.—The impression prevails amongst the intimate friends of Duncan McIntyre that the rumors regarding his purchase of the Nelson stock in the Globe Company are true, and that a change in the attitude of the paper towards the Canadian Pacific and the development of the Northwest may be expected shortly. It is understood that the present management is doing all in its power to prevent the sale, knowing that the Nelson stock, together with that owned by Hon. Donald A. Smith, has the controlling influence on a stock vote.—Montreal Star.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best Salve in the world for cuts, bruises sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by A. Turner & Co.

An incorporation meeting was held in Thornbury on Tuesday evening Mr. A. Grier was appointed chairman and Mr. E. Rorke secretary. After a good deal of discussion on the matter it was carried by the casting vote of the chairman (the vote being 17 to 17) that Thornbury incorporate. A committee was then appointed to wait upon the people of Clarksburg to ascertain their desire or otherwise as to joining Thornbury in the scheme. The vote seemed to be regarded as more for fun than reality. At present there is not the slightest probability of Thornbury incorporating. We notice that every farmer in the meeting voted that Thornbury incorporate. —Thornbury Standard.

Dr. Low's Worm Syrup has removed tape worm from 15 to 80 feet in length. It also destroys all kinds of worm.

A CURE FOR CHOLERA MORBUS.

A positive cure for this dangerous complaint, and for all acute or chronic forms of Bowel Complaint incident to summer and fall, is found in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, to be procured from any druggist.

McGREGOR'S SPEEDY CURE.

Every purchaser of common sense business capacity, when requiring an article for a certain purpose, purchases only that which has been tried or is allowed first to test before buying. You are allowed a free trial bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure, the great remedy for Dyspepsia, Impure Blood and Liver Disorders at Hill Bro's. Sold at 50 cents and $1 per bottle. See testimonials from persons in your own town. A. & S. 6

The magical power over pain that Hagyard's Yellow Oil possesses, outrivals the marvels of ancient times. It acts in a natural manner to subdue inflammation; cures Rheumatism, Croup, Deafness, Sore Throat, and painful injuries.

Prominent among the greatest medical discoveries, by the many cures it has effected, McGregor's Speedy Cure leads the van. Subjected to the minutest chemical analysis, it has been found to contain none of those injurious ingredients characterizing the worthless specifics daily offered to the public. Every ingredient possesses a peculiar adaptability to the various complaints for which it has been compounded, and its efficacy is being established by testimonials hourly received. We are therefore confident that we have a preparation which we can offer to the public with the assurance that it will be found not only a relief but an absolute cure for Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Constipation and Impure Blood. Free trial bottles at Hill Bro's. A. & S. 4

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt,

COFFINS, CASKETS, SHROUDS, and all

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

MARKDALE HARNESS EMPORIUM

ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Buttornut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

HEAP'S PATENT

Dry Earth or Ashes Closet Factory

UNION STREET, (S. Allans Old Stand,)

OWEN SOUND.

By this system you can have a closet inside your house (if desired) and yet have no smell from it.

By their use you ensure Health, Comfort and Cleanliness.

CALL AND SEE THEM WORKING.

Wm. Heap, SANITARY ENGINEER.

Agent for Markdale; W. Cornwall.

Franco - Chinese W

Notwithstanding the war now raging in China increase the price of Teas

Belfast House, Mark

Having imported prior to the ing of hostilities, a sufficient to supply 20,000 MEN for a per 12 months. In other departmen the Grocery trade the BELF HOUSE has KILLED BY TH SAND those who assume to business by purchasing of small ers exorbitant rates of interest on credit. Our imports of

PRESERVED MEATS, SAL LOBSTERS, SARDINES, HA BACON, ASSORTED PICKLE

and every articles in the grocery

LIQUORS

Of the best brands and quality, for Sacramental purposes warra pure. Brandies direct from the ufacturer and all other kinds of liq Coffees, Teas and Tobaccos ca fail to give satisfaction. Ora Lemons, &c. Family Flour sup at Lowest Rates.

THOS. McNEA,
BELFAST HOUSE, - MARK

NEW GROCERY STOR

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed Sto

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Sol STOCK OF

Teas, Sugars, Tobacco,

Which will be sold VERY CHE

I respectfully solicit the pu patronage.

198 J. PLEWES.

CHATSWORTH HOUS

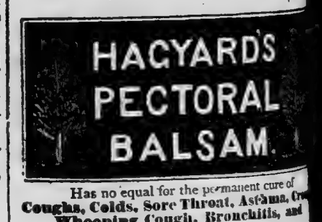
(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, ONT.

TUCK & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.

The best brand of liquors and cigars ways in stock. Good meals and comfor rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and tentive hostler. 1

HENRY GILL,



HOUSE PAINTE

GRAINER, GLAZIER AND PAP HANGER, CALCIMINING AND WALL TINTING.

Residence opposite Planing Fact

MARKDALE.

ORDERS SOLICITED. ESTIMATES G

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toron

ROOKE'S BAKERY

BREAD, the staff of life and PASTRY that will please your wife, always on hand, to supply the demand.

So when your stock is low
Step in and let us know,
And we'll your wants supply
Or you'll know the reason why.

E. ROOKE,
Markdale.

J. G. IRVING,

MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all Kinds of

PUMPS,

Drop Valve, Cylinder, Force, and Cistern Pumps.

All kinds of

IRON - PUMPS

SUPPLIED.

...Ma...

...L. 4.--No. 213

...arkdale Standard

...esey Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

...$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if within three months.

...onal and business cards one inch or under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
...lumn	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
...mn	27 00	15 00	10 00
...olumn	15 00	10 00	6 00
...space	7 00	4 00
...space	10 00	5 00

...dvertisements 8 cents per line first 3 cents per line each subsequent nonpareil measure.

...l notices, or notices in local columns per line first insertion 5 cents ...equents insertion.

...nimals &c., advertised 3 weeks for ...dvertisement not to exceed twelve

...r discontinued until all arrears ...except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

...NDARD office has a splendid equipment ...oster as well as fine job type. Special ...tion to orders by mail. Orders ... dispatch.

...RUTLEDGE

...TOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

...DS & PERRY,

...CESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

...STERS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to ...west rates of interest.

...ffices 16 King Street East, TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,

...STERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT-... Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, ..., Owen Sound, have resumed at ..., Office open every Thursday, as ...

...ROST, J. W. FROST, LL. B. ...y Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

...TER, MASTER AND DEP. REG ...ancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer

...UMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.

...—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block; Branch office in Markdale, over ...'s Store, on Friday and Saturday ... 57-1y

---

...easor & Morrison,

...—...ns, SOLICITORS, CONVEY... &c. &c,

...in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, ... Wolf's Store and in

MARKDALE;

... McFarland's Store on Thursday ... of each week.

...s to lend on reasonable terms.

...SON, Q. C. DUNCAN MORISON ..., March 15, 1882. 79-1y

...lexander Brown.

... of Marriage Licenses, Fire and ...surance Agent. Commissioner ...&c. Conveyancer and Licensed ... for the County of Grey. Farmers ... and Land Sales, Punctually at... ...nd charges made very moderate ..., Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

---

Wm. Brown,

... OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c ...missioner in B. R. &c.

...ncing in all its branches promptly ... and carefully executed.

...Money to Lend on Real Estate se

...SION HOUSE,

...ARKDALE,

...Bryan, Proprietor.

...Y HOTEL,

...ARKDALE,

...cAleer, - Proprietor.

...use is fitted up in good style, situ... ...ill street, where the travelling pub... ...epend on the very best accommo... Union bus to all trains. 194

...RKDALE HOUSE,

...RKDALE, - - ONT.

...UTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

...A. HILL,

...ionable Tailor,

...ER MACFARLAND'S STORE.

...CT FIT GUARANTEED.

Franco - Chinese W
Notwithstanding
war now raging in China it will increase the price
Belfast House,
Having imported
ng of hostilities,
supply 20,000 MEN for 2 months. In other departments
e Grocery trade the BELFA
OUSE has KILLED BY THO
AND those who assume to transa siness by purchasing of small d s exorbitant rates of interest on edit. Our imports of
RESERVED MEATS, SALMO
LOBSTERS, SARDINES, HAMS
BACON, ASSORTED PICKLES
l every articles in the grocery tra
LIQUORS
the best brands and quality. W Sacramental purposes warrant
e. Brandies direct from the ma cturer and all other kinds of liquo offees, Teas and Tobaccoes can to give satisfaction. Orang nons, &c. Family Flour supplie owest Rates.
THOS. McNEA,
FAST HOUSE, - MARKDA
W GROCERY STOR
IN CONNECTION WITH
wes' Flour and Feed Store
Having just received a icce, Fresh and Selec
STOCK OF
as,
Sugars,
Tobacco, &c
h will be sold VERY CHEA respectfully solicit the public nage.
J. PLEWES.
ATSWORTH HOUS
(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)
THATSWORTH, Ont.
UCK & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.
best brand of liquors and cigars
stock. Good meals and comfortab guaranteed. Good stabling and c oster. 134
ENRY GILL,
USE PAINTER
ER, GLAZIER AND PAPE
NGER, CALCIMINING
ND WALL TINTING.
ce opposite Planing Factory
ARKDALE.
OLICITED. ESTIMATES GIVE
109-19
HAGYARD'S
PECTORAL
BALSAM.
no equal for the permanent cure of olds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup ping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.
y bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.
LBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.
KE'S BAKERY.
EAD, the staff of life and
TRY that will please
always on hand, to supply
the demand.
n your stock is low
in and let us know,
'll your wants supply,
ou'll know the reason
y.
E. ROOKE,
Markdale.
IRVING,
MARKDALE,
nufacturer of all Kinds of UMPS,
e, Cylinder, Force, and Chain
All kinds of
N - PUMPS
SUPPLIED.

Markdale Standard

L. 4.--No. 213. MARKDALE, ONT., OCT. 9, 1884. { COPIES OF THE STANDARD FIVE CENTS EACH. }

Markdale Standard

very Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if within three months.

onal and business cards one inch or under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
olumn.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
umn.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
olumn.....	15 00	10 00	6 00
space.....	7 00	4 00
space.....	10 00	5 00

dvertisements 8 cents per line first 3 cents per line each subsequent nonpareil measure.

al notices, or notices in local col- cents per line first insertion 5 cents quents insertion.

ramals &c., advertised 3 weeks for dvertisement not to exceed twelve er discontinued until all arrears except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.—

NDARD office has a splendid equip- oster as well as fine job type. Spe- tion to orders by mail. Orders dispatch.

W. RUTLEDGE

ITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

NDS & PERRY,

CESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),

ISTERS, Solicitors, Proctors, No- ies, Conveyancers, &c. Money to west rates of interest.

Offices 16 King Street East, TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,

ISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT , Solicitors in Chancery, Convey , Owen Sound, have resumed at n. Office open every Thursday, as

Frost, J. W. FROST, LL. B. er Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

STER, MASTER AND DEP. REG ancery, Notary Public, Conveyan

UMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE. s—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block ; Branch office in Markdale, over 's Store, on Friday and Saturday 57-ly

easor & Morrison,

S, SOLICITORS, CONVEY- &c. &c, in Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, Wolf's Store and in MARKDALE; McFarland's Store on Thursday of each week. ds to lend on reasonable terms. son, Q. C. DUNCAN MORISON le, March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown,

of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Insurance Agent. Commissioner &c. Conveyancer and Licensed for the County of Grey. Farmers, and Land Sales, Punctually at- and charges made very moderate. e, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c missioner in B. R. &c. neing in all its branches promptly and carefully executed. Money to Lend on Real Estate se

NSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Bryan, Proprietor.
TY HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
McAleer, - Proprietor.
ouse is fitted up in good style, situ- ill street, where the travelling pub- depend on the very best accommo- Union bus to all trains. 194
RKDALE HOUSE,
RKDALE, - - ONT.
RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.
A. HILL,
shionable Tailor,
ER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
F CT FIT GUARANTEED.

★DR STARR'S★
★CATARRH CONQUEROR.★
THE GREAT CURE FOR CATARRH,
And all diseases arising from it. A Speedy and Certain Antidote for Catarrh, Influenza, Bronchitis, Cold in the Head, Hay Fever and Polypus. It gives immediate relief and effects a cure in a short time. Sold by Medicine Dealers at 50 cents.
TRIAL SIZE, BY MAIL, 15 CENTS.
J. T. FLINT & CO., Pharmacists, Proprietors, Rock Island, P. Q., and Derby Line, Vt.

Medical.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O.
Physician and Surgeon, Priceville,
Graduate of University. Vict. College.
" " New York, and
Hon. Graduate, of the same,
" " Ayleth Medical Institute.
" " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y.
Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at Rutledge's Hotel, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.
122-47.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT.—Residence on Mill Street, Markdale.
124ly

HAMILTON'S
PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY
MARKDALE.
OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.
Fine work executed in all the latest sizes and shapes, fully equal to city work. Special attention given to
FRAMING
A large stock of moulding to choose from.
Call and leave your measure for a picture.
Jas. Hamilton.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larde well supplied with the best the market af fords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.
Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at ahe STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

Dr. Hixon,
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, AND ACCOUCHER,
PRICEVILLE.
All calls promptly attended to.

ISAAC STINSON,
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

SAMUEL WARDELL,
WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine.
187-239

ALEX kAY
BooT & ShoE
MAKER,
Mill Street, - Markdale

GLENELG FALL SHOW.

Last Thursday and Friday, Glenelg Agricultural Society held their fall exhibition. The first day was wet throughout, and no doubt hindred many from bringing articles to the hall which were previously entered; however the hall was well filled. The following morning was very gloomy but towards 10 o'clock, old saul broke through the scattering clouds, and a lovely day followed. The grounds presented a very handsome appearance being clean and dry notwithstanding the great quantity of rain which had recently fallen, and had only a few hours to dry off. The hall presented a very creditable appearance, being well arranged with the various exhibits which surpassed in appearance and quality that of East Grey Show. The hall is not more than half large enough for the proper display of exhibits in this rapidly growing fair. The poultry house attracted considerable attention and called forth many expressions of admiration on account of the neat and convenient arrangement of the building, as also the number and quality of the exhibit in this class. The show of horses was very good, as also the cattle. W. J. Shepherdson, of Euphrasia, had a fine lot of sheep, but had that department nearly to himself. There were also a good grade of pigs. Everything passed off quiet, orderly and most satisfactory, and those who attended were highly pleased with the general management and fair throughout. The gate receipts were some $20 in excess of any former year. The following is the list of prizes awarded:

HORSES.

Span General Purpose—A Mercer, jr., Geo Dinwoodie, Thos Mathews.
Span Carriage—W J McNea, Jas Henderson, Angus Plewes.
Buggy Horse—Mrs A Rutledge, Ed Davis.
Saddle Horse—Ed Large, Robt Walker.
Brood Mare—Jas Brady, Thos Elliott.
Spring Colt, General Purpose—Jas Brady, Jas O'Brien.
Spring Colt, Roadster—Jas Nelson, S Boyce.
Colt, 2 years, General Purpose—Jas Brady, Mr Burnside.
Colt, 1 year, General Purpose—Richard Douglass, Wm Walker.
Colt, 2 years, Roadster—D J Shanahan, Adam Shiel.
Colt, 1 year, Roadster—Ed Large, Wm Douglass.
Special prize of $5, by J B Trimble, for most valuable Team—A Mercer, jr.
Special by J MacLeer for Brood Mare—Jas Brady.
Special by David Madill for Colt by Lord Byron—Jas Nelson.

CATTLE.

Bull over 2 years—Robert Wright, Robert McBride.
Bull under 2 years—C C McFayden, Frank Taylor.
Grade Cow—Robert Walker, Ed Davis.
Heifer, 2 years—Robt Wright, Robt Wright.
Heifer, 1 year—Wm Walker, Wm Walker.
Spring Calf—Wm Walker, Thos Grandy.
Yoke Oxen—Robt Walker, Adam Shiel.
Pair Steers, 2 years—Frank Taylor, Robt. Walker.
Pair Steers, 1 year—Ed Rutledge, Robt Walker.

SHEEP—LONG WOOL.

Aged Ram—W J Shepherdson, W J Shepherdson.
Shearling Ram—W J Shepherdson, W J Shepherdson.
Pair Shearling Ewes—W J Shepherdson, W J Shepherdson.
Ram Lamb—W J Shepherdson, W J Shepherdson.
Pair Ewes, aged—W J Shepherdson, W J Shepherdson.
Pair Ewe Lambs—W J Shepherdson, W J Shepherdson.

SHEEP—LONG WOOL.

Shearling Ram—Thos Ellis.
Pair Shearling Ewes—Thos Ellis, W J Shepherdson.
Ram Lamb—W J Shepherdson.
Pair Ewes, aged—Thos Ellis.
Pair Ewe Lambs—Thos Ellis.

SWINE—BERKSHIRE.

Aged Boar—Robt Freeborn, B Coleman.
Spring Boar—Robert Freeborn, B Coleman.
Aged Sow—B Coleman, J W Ford
Spring Sow—B Coleman, D McDuffie.

SWINE—SUFFOLK.

Spring Boar—Robt McBride.
Spring Sow—B Coleman.
Spring Boar, any other kind—B. Coleman.

POULTRY.

Collection Barnyard Fowls—B Coleman, Wm Haskett, R Montgomery.
Pair Geese—B Coleman, J W Ford.
Pair Turkeys—Thos Elliott, Jas Nelson.
Pair Ducks—Thos Gilray.
Plymouth Rock Rooster—Wm Haskett, Ed Large.
Plymouth Rock Hen—Wm Haskett, James Nelson.
Leghorn Rooster—J McGee, B Coleman.
Leghorn Hen—J McGee, Ed Large.
Brahma Rooster—Robt Montgomery, Robt Montgomery.
Brahma Hen—Robt Montgomery, Robt Montgomery.
Spanish Rooster—Robt Montgomery, Wm Haskett.
Spanish Hen—Wm Haskett, Robt Montgomery.
Hamburg Rooster—Robt Montgomery, J McGee.
Hamburg Hen—J McGee, Robt Montgomery.

GRAIN.

Fall Wheat—Thos Ellis, Thos Kells.
Spring Wheat—J Boland, C Irwin.
Barley—Thos Kells, C Littlejohns.
Large Peas—W & J Anderson.
Small Peas—Wm Henry, C Irwin.
White Oats—C Irwin, Wm Henry.
Timothy Seed—2nd Wm Douglass.
Corn—H Mathewson, C Littlejohns.
Beans—C Littlejohns.

ROOTS.

Collection Potatoes—Thos Ellis, J H Heard
Early Rose Potatoes—Andrew Nodwell, Wm Douglass.
Potatoes, any other kind—Ed Purvis, Wm Walker.
Swede Turnips—W Robinson, J Boland.
Turnips, any other kind—Wm Robinson, Wm Douglass,
Mangold Wurtzel—Jas Nelson. William Walker.
Blood Beets—C Littlejohns, J Boland.
Field Carrots—Thos Ellis, J Boland.
Early Horn Carrots—Wm Walker, Ed Rutledge.
Parsnips—Ed Rutledge, Wm Henry.
Celery—2nd R D Bigger.
Cauliflowers—Wm Douglass.
Cabbages—S Boyce, Ed Rutledge.
Tomatoes—Wm Douglass.
Seed Onions—R Watson, Wm Henry.
Onions, any other kind—R Watson, C Littlejohns.
Squashes—H Mathewson, C Littlejohns.
Pumpkins—C Littlejohns.
Cucumbers—C Littlejohns.
Citrons—J McGee, C Littlejohns.

FRUIT.

Winter Apples—W J McNea, Thos Gilray.
Fall Apples—Thos Gilray, S Boyce.
Collection Apples—S Boyce, Thos Gilray.
Crab Apples—Jas Nelson, Thos Ellis.
Collection Crab Apples—G S Bowes, Thos Gilray.
Pears—J McGee, T Gilray.
Grapes—T Gilray, J H Heard.
Blue Plums—G S Bowes, J H Heard.
Green Gages—G S Bowes, Ed Davis.
Plums, any other kind—Isaac Miller, S Boyce.

DAIRY.

Tub Butter—Ed Rutledge, Robt Walker, S Boyce.
Roll Butter—Jas Nelson, Ed Rutledge, S Boyce.
Factory Cheese—Thos Elliott.
Wheat Flour—J W Ford.
Bakers Bread—J Montgomery, J Montgomery.
Home-made Bread—Wm Douglass, Jas Foster.
Maple Sugar—C Littlejohns, C Littlejohns.
Honey in Comb—J H Heard.
Maple Syrup—Jas Nelson, Ed Rutledge.

MANUFACTURES.

Farmers' Waggon—J H Heard.
Democrat—D J Shanahan.
Buggy—D J Shanahan, J H Heard,
Cutter—J H Heard.
Team Harness—T Mathews. T Mathews.
Carriage Harness—T Mathews, T Mathews.
Coarse Boots—A Kay, A Kay.
Fine Boots—A Kay, A Kay.
Horse Shoes—D J Shanahan, D J Shanahan.
Cabinet Work—Moffatt Bros, Moffatt Bros
Panel Door—Ed Purvis, Ed Large, Window Sash—Ed Large, Ed Purvis.
Cooperware—J H Hull, J H Hull,
Tinware—Haskett Bros.
Collection Photographs—Jas Hamilton.
Home-made Satinet—Robt Walker, B Coleman.
Fancy Flannel—B Coleman,
Plain Flannel—Ed Davis, Jas Foster.
Horse Blankets—Ed Rutledge, R Watson.

LADIES' WORK.

Pair Woollen Mitts—J McGee, Ebenezer Jones.
Pair Socks—C Littlejohns, J McGee.
Patch Quilt—W A Brown, Thos Gilray.
Fancy Quilt—B Watson, Robt Walker.
Log Cabin Quilt—Richard Douglass, Robt. Askin.
Embroidery in Cotton—Robt Askin, C Littlejohns.
Berlin Wool, raised—Thos Gilray.
Berlin Wool, not raised—J B Trimble, W A Brown.
Fancy Knitting in Cotton—W Anderson, Wm Henry.
Fancy Knitting in Wool—Mrs Turner, Thos Gilray.
Braiding in Cotton—Mrs G S Bowes, Wm Henry.
Knitted Lace—C Irwin, Isaac Miller.
Collection Berlin Work—Mrs Turner, Thos Gilray.
Gent's Fine Shirt, hand-made—H Mathewson, Wm Douglass.
Rag Mat—J B Trimble.
Mat, any other kind—Mrs Turner, Wm Anderson.
Rag Carpet—A Shiel.
Collection Flowers—Wm Douglass, Mrs A Rutledge.
Macrame Lace—R Watson, Mrs Turner.
Ornamental Leather Work—Thos Gilray.
Ladies' Stockings—Robt Askin, Isaac Miller.
Seed Drill, manufactured by J W Mann, of Brooksville, and shown by Thos Elliott, highly recommended.
Darned net Pillow Shams, shown by W J McNea, highly recommended.
Arrasene Work, shown by Mrs Trimble, highly recommended.

Teachers' Association.

The next regular meeting of the South Grey Teachers' Association will be held at Durham on the 16th and 17th October next, commencing, the first day, at 10 a.m. All teachers of this inspectorate are required to be present; public school trustees too, and friends of Education are cordially invited to attend. A Grand Literary and Musical Entertainment will be held in the evening of the first day. Admission 15 cents.

THE PROGRAMME.

President's Address.
"Advantages of Cramming"—Joseph Reid, B.A.
"Corporal Punishment"—S. Neilly.
"Teaching History" to a class—D. C. Cameron.
"Geography to beginners"—W. J. Sharp.
Report of Delegate to Provincial Association.
Drawing—J. S. Campbell.
"Grammar to beginners" with a class—W. M. Atton.
"Investigation of Pupils' Difficulties"—G. McFarlen.
"Teachers and Teaching"—H. C. Rose.
Uniform Promotion Examinations—Dr. Hixon of Priceville.
Practical Illustrations of Class Work—J. Winterbern.
Dietetics—Dr. Gun of Durham.
"Public Opinion"—David Grier.
"Teachers' Position"—William Gorsline.
"Encouragements and Discouragements of Teachers"—James Binnie.
School Songs—Miss Elliot.

W. FERGUSON, I. P. S., President.
W. L. DIXON, Sec. Managing Com.

P. S.—It is expected that J. Morgan, B.A., of Walkerton High School, will be present and address the association on "The Study of English."

THESE ARE SOLID FACTS.
The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly the Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Weak Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetizer, tonic or milk stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by A. Turner & Co. Markdale. 4

Landsdowne Lodge, C. O. O. F.

The following is the list of officers elected for the next quarter in Royal Landsdowne Lodge, C. O. O. F., Blantyre. The installation services by Bro. J. C. Patterson, P.G. Landsdowne Lodge was organized in August last, and is making good progress and working harmoniously with a membership of 20. The officers are:

Bro. A. C. Patterson, N. G.
" H. M. Patton, V. G.
" J. Dillon, Sec.
" W. E. Cook, Treas.
" W. H. Shepherdson, Warden.
" W. Dillon, Conductor.
" J. M. Reynolds, R. S. N. G.
" B. Clark, L. S. N. G.
" Jas. Patterson, sen., R. S. V. G.
" J. Boyd, L. S. V. G.
" T. Wright, I. G.
" G. L. Sewell, O. G.
" J. W. Patton, Ass. Sec.
" J. C. Patterson, L. M.—Meaford Mirror.

The Manitoba Crop.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 2.—Telegraphic reports, covering nearly all the districts of importance, say that the wheat harvest is completed; some oats are yet left out. A good deal of threshing and some marketing has been done. Wheat is reported as averaging from twenty to forty bushels; in various districts it will probably average at least twenty five. The quality is reported good. Fall plowing is rather backward, though the weather is now fair and settled.

A BLUE GRASS PENELOPE.

BY BRET HARTE.

CHAPTER V.

The two men kept their secret. Mr. Poindexter convinced Mrs. Tucker that the sale of Los Cuervos could not be effected i the notoriety of her husband's flight been fairly forgotten, and she was forced to accept her fate. The sale of her diamonds, which seemed to her to have realized a singularly extravagant sum, enabled her to quietly reinstate the Pattersons in the tienda, and to discharge in full her husband's liabilities to the ranchero and his humble retainers.

Meanwhile the winter rains had ceased. It seemed to her as if the clouds had suddenly one night struck their white tents and stolen away, leaving the unvanquished sun to mount the vacant sky the next morning alone, and possess it thenceforward unchallenged. One afternoon she thought the long sad waste before her window had caught some tint of gayer color from the sunset; a week later she found it a blazing landscape of poppies, broken here and there by blue lagoons of lupine, by pools of daisies, by banks of dog roses, by broad outlying shores of dandelions that scattered their lavish gold to the foot of the hills, where the green billows of wild oats carried it on and upward to the darker crest of pines. For two months she was dazzled and bewildered with color. She had never before been face to face with this spendthrift Californian Flora, in her virgin wastefulness—her more than goddesslike prodigality. The teeming earth seemed to quicken and throb beneath her feet; the few circuits of a plough around the outlying corral were enough to call out a jungle growth of giant grain that almost hid the low walls of the hacienda. In this glorious fecundity of the earth, in this joyous renewal of life and color, in this opulent youth and freshness of soil and sky it alone remained—the dead and sterile Past—left in the midst of buoyant rejuvenescence and resurrection, like an empty churchyard skull upturned on the springing turf. Its bronzed adobe walls mocked the green vine that embraced them, the crumbling dust of its court yard remained ungerminating and unfruitful; to the thousand stirring voices without its dry lips alone remained mute, unresponsive, and unchanged.

During this time Don Jose had become a frequent visitor at Los Cuervos, bringing with him at first his niece and sister in a stately precision of politeness that was not lost on the proud Blue Grass stranger. She returned their visit at Los Gatos, and there made the formal acquaintance of Don Jose's grandmother—a lady who still regarded the decrepit Concha as a giddy muchnaha, and who herself glittered as with the phosphorescence of refined decay. Through this circumstance she learned that Don Jose was not yet fifty, and that his gravity of manner and sedateness was more the result of fastidious isolation and temperament than years. She could not tell why the information gave her a feeling of annoyance, but it caused her to regret the absence of Poindexter, and to wonder, also somewhat nervously, why he had lately avoided her presence. The thought that he might be doing so from a recollection of the innuendoes of Mrs. Patterson caused a little tremor of indignation in her hot pulses. "As if——" but she did not finish the sentence even to herself, and her eyes filled with tears.

Yet she had thought of the husband who had so cruelly wronged her less feverishly, less impatiently than before. For she thought she loved him now the more deeply, because, although she was not reconciled to his absence, it seemed to keep alive the memory of what he had been before his one wild act separated them. She had never seen the reflection of another woman's eyes in his; the past contained no haunting recollection of waning or alienated affection; she could meet him again, and clasping her arms around him, awaken as with a troubled dream without reproach or explanation Her strong belief in this made her patient; she no longer sought to know the particulars of his flight, and never dreamed that her passive submission to his absence was partly due to a fear that something in his actual presence at that moment would have destroyed that belief for ever.

For this reason the delicate reticence of the people at Los Gatos, and their seclusion from the world which knew of her husband's fault, had made her encourage the visits of Don Jose, until from the instinct already alluded to she one day summoned Poindexter to Los Cuervos, on the day that Don Jose usually called. But, to her surprise the two men met more or less awkwardly and coldly, and her tact as hostess was tried to the utmost to keep their evident antagonism from being too apparent. The effort to reconcile their mutual discontent, and some other feelings she did not quite understand, produced a nervous excitement which called the blood to her fair cheek and gave a dangerous brilliancy to her eyes—two circumstances not unnoticed nor unappreciated by her two guests. But instead of reuniting them, the prettier Mrs. Tucker became, the more distant and reserved grew the men, until Don Jose rose before his usual hour, and with more than usual ceremoniousness departed.

"Then my business does not seem to be with him?" said Poindexter, with quiet coolness, as Mrs. Tucker turned her somewhat mystified face toward him. 'Or have you anything to say to me about him in private?"

"I am sure I don't know what you both mean," she returned with a slight tremor of voice. "I had no idea you were not on good terms. I thought you were! Its very awkward." Without coquetry and unconsciously she raised her blue eyes under her lids until the clear pupils coyly and softly hid themselves in the corners of the brown lashes, and added—"You have both been so kind to me."

'Perhaps that is the reason," said Poindexter, gravely. But Mrs. Tucker refused to accept the suggestion with equal gravity and began to laugh. The laugh, which was at first frank, spontaneous, and almost childlike, was becoming hysterical and nervous as she went on, until it was suddenly checked by Poindexter.

"I have had no difficulties with Don Jose Santierra," he said, somewhat coldly ignoring her hilarity; "but perhaps he is not inclined to be as polite to the friend of the husband as he is to the wife."

"Mr. Poindexter!" said Mrs. Tucker, quickly, her face becoming pale again.

"I beg your pardon," said Poindexter, flushing; "but——"

"You want to say," she interrupted coolly, "that you are not friends, I see. Is that the reason you have avoided this house?" she continued, gently.

"I thought I could be of more service to you elsewhere," he replied, evasively." I have been lately following up a certain clue rather closely. I think I am on the track of a confidante of—of—that woman."

A quick shadow passed over Mrs. Tucker's face. "Indeed!" she said, coldly, "Then I am to believe that you prefer to spend your leisure moments in looking after that creature than in calling here?"

Poindexter was stupefied. Was this the woman who only four months ago was almost vindictively eager to pursue her husband's paramour? There could be but one answer to it—Don Jose. Four months ago he would have smiled compassionately at it from his cynical pre-eminence. Now he managed with difficulty to stifle the bitterness of his reply.

"If you do not wish the inquiry carried on," he began, "of course——"

"I? What does it matter to me?" she said coolly. "Do as you please."

Nevertheless, half an hour later, as he was leaving, she said, with a certain hesitating timidity, "Do not leave me so much alone here—and let that woman go."

This was not the only unlooked for sequel to her innocent desire to propitiate her only friends. Don Jose did not call again upon his usual day, but in his place came Dona Clara, his younger sister. When Mrs. Tucker had politely asked after the absent Don Jose, Dona Clara wound her swarthy arms around the fair American's waist and replied, "But why did you send for the abogado Poindexter when my brother called?"

'But Capt. Poindexter calls as one of my friends," said the amazed Mrs. Tucker. "He is a gentleman, and has been a soldier and an officer," she added with some warmth.

"Ah, yes, a soldier of the law—what you call an oficial de policia—a chief of gendarmes, my sister; but not a gentleman—a camarero to protect a lady."

Mrs. Tucker would have uttered a hasty reply, but the perfect and good natured simplicity of Dona Clara withheld her. Nevertheless she treated Don Jose with a certain reserve at their next meeting, until it brought the simple minded Castilian so dangerously near the point of demanding an explanation which implied too much that she was obliged to restore him temporarily to his old footing. Meantime she had a brilliant idea. She would write to Calhoun Weaver, whom she had avoided since that memorable day. She would say she wished to consult him. He would come to Los Cuervos. He might suggest something to lighten this weary waiting—at least, she would show them all that she had still old friends. Yet she did not dream of returning to her old Blue Grass home. Her parents had died since she left. She shrank from the thought of dragging her ruined life before the hopeful youth of her girlhood's companions.

Mr. Calhoun Weaver arrived promptly, ostentatiously, circularly, and cordially—but a little coarsely. He had—did she remember?—expected this from the first. Spencer had lost his head through vanity, and had attempted too much. It required foresight and firmness as he himself—who had lately made successful "combinations" which she might perhaps have heard of—well knew. But Spencer had got the "big head." "As to that woman—a devilish handsome woman, too!—well, everybody knew that Spencer always had a weakness that way—and he would say—but if she didn't care to hear any more about her, well, perhaps she was right. That was the best way to take it." Sitting before her, prosperous, weak, egotistical, incompetent, unavailable, and yet filled with a vague kindliness of intent, Mrs. Tucker loathed him. A sickening perception of her own weakness in sending for him, a new and aching sense of her utter isolation and helplessness, seemed to paralyze her.

"Nat'rally you feel bad," he continued, with a large air of a profound student of human nature. "Nat'rally, nat'rally you're kept in an uncomfortable state, not knowing just how you stand. There ain't but one thing to do. Just rise up, quiet like, and get a divorce agin Spencer. Hold on! There ain't a Judge or jury in California that wouldn't give it to you right off the nail, without asking questions. Why you'll get it by default if you wanted to—you'll just have to walk over the course! And then, Belle"—he drew his chair nearer her—"when you've settled down again—well! —I don't mind renewing that offer I once made ye, before Spencer ever came round ye—I don't mind. Belle, I swear I don't! Honest Injin! I'm in earnest; there's my hand!"

Mrs. Tucker's reply has not been recorded Enough that half an hour later Mr. Weaver appeared in the courtyard with traces of tears on his foolish face, a broken falsetto voice, and other evidence of mental and moral disturbance. His cordiality and oracular predisposition remained sufficiently to enable him to suggest the magical words "Blue Grass" mysteriously to Concha with an indication of his hand to the erect figure of her pale mistress in the door way, who waved to him a silent but half-compassionate farewell.

At about this time a slight change in her manner was noticed by the few who saw her more frequently. Her apparently invincible girlishness of spirit had given way to a certain matronly seriousness. She applied herself to her household cares and the improvement of the hacienda with a new sense of duty and a settled earnestness, until by degrees she wrought into it not only her instinctive delicacy and taste, but part of her own individuality. Even the rude rancheros and tradesmen who were permitted to enter the walls in the exercise of their calling began to speak mysteriously of the beauty of this garden of the almarjal. She went out but seldom, and then accompanied by the one or the other of her female servants, in long drives on unfrequented roads. On Sundays she sometimes drove to the half ruined mission church of Santa Inez, and hid herself during mass in the dim monastic shadows of the choir. Gradually the poorer people whom she met in these journeys began to show an almost devotional reverence for her, stopping in the roads with uncovered heads for her to pass, or making way for her in the tienda or plaza of the wretched town with dumb courtesy. She began to feel a strange sense of widow-hood, that, while it at times brought tears to her eyes, was not without a certain tender solace. In the sympathy and simpleness of this impulse she went as far as to revive the mourning she had worn for her parents, but with such a fatal accounting of her beauty, and dangerous misinterpreting of her condition to eligible bachelors strange to the country, that she was obliged to put it off again. Her reserve and dignified manner caused others to mistake her nationality for that of the Santierras, and in "Dona Bella" the simple Mrs. Tucker was for a while forgotten. At times she even forgot it herself. Accustomed now almost entirely to the accents of another language and the features of another race she would sit for hours in the corridor, whose massive bronzed enclosure even her tasteful care could only make an embowered mausoleum of the past, or gaze abstractedly from the dark embrasures of her windows across the stretching almarjal to the shining lagoon beyond that terminated the estuary. She had a strange fondness for this tranquil mirror, which under the sun or stars always retained the passive reflex of the sky above and seemed to rest her weary eyes. She had objected to one of the plans proposed by Poindexter to redeem the land and deepen the water at the embarcadero, as it would have drained the lagoon, and the lawyer had postponed the improvement to gratify her fancy. So she kept it through the long summer unchanged save by the shadow of passing wings or the lazy files of sleeping sea fowl.

On one of these afternoons she noticed a slowly moving carriage leave the high road and cross the almarjal, skirting the edge of the lagoon. If it contained visitors for Los Cuervos they had evidently taken a shorter cut without waiting to go on to the regular road which intersected the highway at right angles a mile further on. It was with some sense of annoyance and irritation that she watched the trespass, and finally saw the vehicle approach the house. A few moments later the servant informed her that Mr. Patterson would like to see her alone. When she entered the corridor, which in the dry season served as a reception hall, she was surprised to see that Mr. Patterson was not alone. Near him stood a well dressed handsome woman, gazing about her with good-humored admiration of Mrs. Tucker's taste and ingenuity.

"It don't look much like it did two years ago," said the stranger cheerfully. "You've improved it wonderfully."

Stiffening slightly, Mrs. Tucker turned inquiringly to Mr. Patterson. But that gentleman's usually profound and melancholy appeared to be intensified by the hilarity of his companion. He only sighed deeply and rubbed his leg with the rim of his hat in gloomy abstraction.

"Well!—go on, then," said the woman laughing and nudging him. "Go on—introduce me—can't you? Don't stand there like a tomb stone You won't? Well, I'll introduce myself." She laughed again, and then, with an excellent imitation of Patterson's lugubrious accents, said: Mr. Spencer Tucker's wife that is—allow me to introduce you to Mr. Spencer Tucker's sweetheart that was! Hold on! I said that was. For, true as I stand here, ma'am—and I reckon I would'nt stand here if it wasn't true—I haven't set eyes on him since the day he left you."

"It's the Gospel truth every word," said Patterson, stirred into a sudden activity by Mrs. Tucker's white and rigid face. "It's the frozen truth and I kin prove it. For I kin swear that when that there young woman was sailin' outer the Golden Gate Spencer Tucker was in my barroom; I can swear that I fed him, lickored him, give him a hoss, and set him on his road to Monterey that very night."

"Then where is he now?" said Mrs. Tucker. suddenly facing them.

They looked at each other and then looked at Mrs. Tucker. Then both together replied slowly and in perfect unison. "That's —what—we—want — to—know now." They seemed so satisfied with this effort that they as deliberately repeated. "Yes—that's—what—we—want—to—know."

Between the shock of meeting the partner of her husband's guilt and the unexpected revelation to her inexperience, that in suggestion and appearance there was nothing beyond the recollection of that guilt that was really shocking in the woman—between the extravagant extremes of hope and fear suggested by their words, there was something so grotesquely absurd in the melodramatic chorus that she with difficulty suppressed a hysterical laugh.

'That's the way to take it," said the woman putting her own good-humored interpretation upon Mrs. Tubker's expression. "Now look here! I'll tell you all about it." She carefully selected the most comfortable chair. and' sitting down, lightly crossed her hands in her lap. "Well, I left here on the 13th of last January on the ship Argo, calculating that your husband would join the ship just inside the heads. That was our arrangement, but if anything happened to prevent him, he was to join me in Acapulco. Well! He didn't come aboard, and we sailed without him. But it appears now he did attempt to join the ship, but his boat was capsized. There now—don't be alarmed—he wasn't drowned, as Patterson can swear to—no, cato him! not a hair of him was hurt —but I—I was bundled off to the end of the earth in Mexico, alone, without a cent to bless me. For, true as you live, that hound of a Captain, when he found, as he thought, that Spencer was nabbed, he just confiscated all his trunks and valuables and left me in the lurch. If I hadn't met a man down there that offered to marry me and brought me here I might have died there. I reckon. But I did', and here I am. I went down there as your husband's sweetheart; I've come back as the wife of an honest man, and I reckon it's about square!"

There was something so startlingly frank, so hopelessly self-satisfied, so contagiously good-humored in the woman's perfect moral unconsciousness that even if Mrs. Tucker had been less preoccupied her resentment would have abated. But her eyes were fixed on the gloomy face of Patterson, who was beginning to unlock the sepulchres of his memory and disinter his deeply buried thoughts.

"You kin bet your whole pile on what this Mrs. Capting Baxter—as used to be French Ines of New Orleans—her told ye. Ye can take everything she's onloaded. And its only doin' the square thing to her to say she hain't done it out o' no cussedness, but just to satisfy herself, now she's a married woman and past such foolishness. But that ain't neither here nor there. The gist of the whole matter is that Spencer Tucker was at the tienda the day after she sailed and after his boat capsized." He then gave a detailed account of the interview, with the unnecessary but truthful minutiæ of his class, adding to the particulars already known that the following week he visited the Summit House and was surprised to find that Spencer had never been there, nor had he ever sailed from Monterey.

"But why was this not told me before?" said Mrs. Tucker, suddenly. "Why not at the time? Why," she demanded almost fiercely, turning from the one to the other, "has this been kept from me?"

"I'll tell ye why," said Patterson, sinking with crushed submission into a chair, "When I found he wasn't where he ought to be, I got to lookin' elsewhere. I knew the track of the hoss I lent him by a loose shoe. I examined, and found he had turned off the high road somewhere beyond the lagoon, jist as if he was makin' a bee line here."

"Well," said Mrs. Tucker, breathlessly.

"Well," said Patterson, with the resigned tone of an accustomed martyr, "mebbee I'm a God-forsaken idiot, but I reckon he did come yer. And mebbe I'm that much of a habitual lunatic. but thinking so, I calkilated you'd know it without tellin'."

With their eyes fixed upon her, Mrs. Tucker felt the quick blood rush to her cheeks, although she knew not why. But they were apparently satisfied with her ignorance, for Patterson resumed, yet more gloomily:

"Then if he wasn't hidin' here beknownst to you, he must have changed his mind again and got away by the embarcadero. The only thing wantin' to prove that idea is to know how he got a boat, and what he did with the hoss. And that's one more idea, and ez that can't be proved," continued Patterson, sinking his voice still lower, "mebbee it's accordin' to God's laws."

Unsympathetic to her as the speaker had always been and still was, Mrs. Tucker felt a vague chill creep over her that seemed to be the result of his manner more than his words. "And that idea is?" she suggested with pale lips.

"It's this! Fust, I don't say it means much to anybody but me. I've heard of these warnings afore now, ez coming only to folks ez hear them for themselves alone, and I reckon I kin stand it, if it's the will of God. The idea is then—that—Spencer Tucker—was drownded in the boat—the idea is"—that it was no living man that kim to me that night, but a spirit that kem out of the darkness and went back into it! No eye saw him but mine—no ears heard him but mine. I reckon it weren't intended it should." He paused, and passed the flap of his hat across his eyes. "The pie, you'll say is agin it" he continued in the same tone of voice—"the whiskey is agin it—a few cuss words that dropped from him, accidental like, may have been agin it. All the same they might have been only the little signs and tokens that it was him."

But Mrs. Baxter's ready laugh somewhat rudely dispelled the infection of Patterson's gloom. "I reckon the only spirit was that which you and Spencer consumed," she said cheerfully. "I don't wonder you're a little mixed. Like as not you've misunderstood his plans." Patterson shook his head. "He'll turn up yet alive and kicking! Like as not then. Poindexter knows where he is all the time."

"Impossible! He would have told me," said Mrs. Tucker quickly.

Mrs. Baxter looked at Patterson without speaking. Patterson replied by a long lugubrious whistle.

"I don't understand you," said Mrs. Tucker drawing back with cold dignity.

"You don't?" returned Mrs. Baxter, "Bless your innocent heart! Why was he so keen to hunt me up at first, shadowing my friends and all that, and why has he dropped it now he knows I'm here, if he didn't know where Spencer was?"

"I can explain that" interrupted Mrs. Tucker hastily, with a blush of confusion. "That is—I——"

"Then mebbee you kin explain too," broke in Patterson with gloom significance, "why he has bought up most of Spencer's debts himself, and perhaps you're satisfied it isn't to hold the whip hand of him and keep him from coming back openly. P'raps you know why he's movin' heaven and earth to make Don Jose Santierra sell the ranch, and why the Don don't see it at all."

"Don Jose sell Los Cuervos! Buy it, you mean?" said Mrs. Tucker, "I offered to sell it to him"

Patterson arose from the chair, looked despairingly around him, passed his hand sadly across his forehead, and said: "It is come! I knew it would. It's the warning! It's suthing betwixt jim jams and doddering idiocy. Here I'd hev been willin' to swear that Mrs. Baxter here told me she had sold this yer ranch nearly two years ago to Don Jose, and now you——"

'Stop!" said Mrs. Tucker in a voice that chilled them.

She was standing upright and rigid, as if stricken to stone. "I command you to tell me what this means!" she said, turning only her blazing eyes upon the woman.

Even the ready smile faded from Mrs. Baxter's lips as she replied hesitatingly and submissively: "I thought you knew already that Spencer had given this ranch to me. I sold it to Don Jose to get the money for us to go away with. It was Spencer's idea ——"

"You lie!" said Mrs. Tucker.

There was a dead silence. The wrathful blood that had quickly mounted to Mrs. Baxter's cheek, to Patterson's additional bewilderment faded as quickly. She did not lift her eyes again to Mrs. Tucker's, but slowly raising herself from her seat, said, "I wish to God I did lie; but it's true. And it's true that I never touched a cent of the money, but gave it all to him!" She laid her hand on Patterson's arm, and said, "Come! let us go," and led him a few steps toward the gateway. But here Patterson paused and again pressed his hand over his melancholy brow. The necessity of coherently and logically closing the conversation impressed itself upon his darkening mind. "Then you don't happen to have heard anything of Spencer?" he said, and vanished with Mrs. Baxter through the gate.

Left alone to herself, Mrs. Tucker raised her hands above her head with a little cry, interlocked her rigid fingers, and slowly brought her palms down upon her upturned face and eyes, pressing hard as if to crush out all light and sense of light before her. She stood thus for a moment motionless and silent, with the rising wind whispering without and flecking her white morning dress with gusty shadows from the arbor. Then with closed eyes, dropping her hands to her breast, still pressing hard, she slowly passed them down the shapely contours of her figure to the waist and with another prayerful effort lifted and went stripping herself of some loathsome garment. Then she walked quickly to the gateway, looked out, returned to the corridor, unloosening and taking off her wedding-ring from her fingers as she walked. Here she paused, then, slowly and deliberately re-arranged the chairs and adjusted the gay colored rugs and draped them and quietly re-entered her chamber.

Two days afterward the creaking wheels of Capt. Poindexter was turned loose in the corral, and a moment later the Captain entered the corridor. Handing a letter to a decrepit Concha who seemed to be utterly disorganized by its contents, and the few short words with which it was delivered, he gazed silently upon the vacant bower, still fresh and redolent with the delicacy and perfume of its graceful occupant and her dark eyes filled with unaccustomed moisture. But his reverie was interrupted by the sound of jingling spurs without, and his old humor struggled back into his eyes as Don Jose impetuously entered. The Spaniard started back, but instantly recovered himself.

"So I find you here. Ah!—it is well!" said passionately, producing a letter from his bosom. "Look! Do you call this hand? Look how you keep your compact!"

Poindexter coolly took the letter. It contained a few words of gentle dignity from Mrs. Tucker, informing Don Jose that she had only that instant learned of his just claim upon Los Cuervos, tendering him her gratitude for his delicate intentions, but positively declining to accept the property. "You must know that a moment's further acquaintance of his courtesy was impossible.

"She has gained this knowledge from my word of mine," said Poindexter, coldly. "Right or wrong, I have kept my promise to you. I have as much reason to account of betraying my secret in this," he added coldly, as he took another letter from his pocket and handed it to Don Jose.

It seemed briefer and colder, but was neither. It reminded Poinderter that he had again deceived her, she must take the government of her affairs into her own hands henceforth. She abandoned all the future and improvements she had put in Los Cuervos to him to whom she now knew she was indebted for them. She could not thank him for what his habitual generosity impelled him to do for any woman, but she could forgive him for misunderstanding her for any other woman—perhaps she should like a child. When he received this he would be already on her way to her home in Kentucky, where she still hoped to be able by her own efforts to amass enough to discharge her obligations to him.

"She does not speak of her husband—the woman," said Don Jose, scanning Patterson's face. "It is possible she rejoins him eh?"

"Perhaps in one way she has never left him, Don Jose," said Poindexter significantly.

Don Jose's face flushed, but he returned carelessly, "And the rancho—naturally it will not buy it now?"

"On the contrary, I shall abide by my offer" said Poindexter quietly.

Don Jose eyed him narrowly, and then said, "Ah, we shall consider of it."

He did consider it, and accepted the offer. With the full control of the land Capt. Poindexter's improvements, so indefinitely postponed, were actively pushed forward. The thick walls of the hacienda were the first to melt away before them: then the lines of corral were effaced, and the soft breath of the summer trade winds swept, uninterruptedly across the now leveled plain to the embarcadero. where a newer structure arose. A more vivid green alone marked the spot where the crumbling adobe walls of the casa had returned to the parent earth that gave it. The channel was deepened and the lagoon was drained until one evening the magic mirror that had so long reflected the weary waiting of the Blue Grass Penelope lay dull, dead, lustreless—an opaque quagmire of noisome corruption and decay that put away from the sight of man forever. On this spot the crows—the titular tenants of Los Cuervos—assembled in tumultuous congress, coming and going in mysterious circles or laboring in thick and writhing masses as if they were continuing the work of improvement begun by human agency. So it had they done their work that by the end of a week only a few scattered white objects remained glittering on the surface of the quickly drying soil. But they were the bones of the missing outcast Spencer Tucker!

* * * * * * *

The same spring a breath of war rose over a foul decaying quagmire of the world land before which such passing deeds as these were blown as a vapor. The called men of all rank and condition to battle for a nation's life, and among the first to respond were those forty-two boyish hands had been placed the nation's honor. It returned the epaulets to Poindexter's shoulders, with the addition of a double star, carried him triumphantly to the front and left him at the end of a summer's day and a hard won fight sorely wounded at the door of a Blue Grass farmhouse. And the woman who sought him out and ministered to his wants said timidly as she left her hand in his, "I told you I should live to pay you."

[THE END.]

Ingleside Reflections.

I have a morbid love of truth. It is wrong, I know. It is even false to use a microscope when all others employ a field-glass.

There is a wide distinction between good taste and the intelligent discussion of character.

There is an element of the ridiculous in a man who is graceful at all times and in all places.

A child's questionings seriously answered supply the chief's basis for that child's education.

How I hate an Irish woman. She occupies the whole atmosphere. She breathes up all the air; and leaves one gasping, for lack of breath,

The one thing which most agitates the world is that dreadful question of expense.

We wish for God, for He completes life. We wish for love for that completes life. [San Francisco Ingleside.

The Antiquity of Advertising.

In all ages people seem to have needed to be reminded of their wants and the advertisement enabled the busy or the lazy to supply them without extra trouble. We find mention of the peripatetic advertisements which now greet our eyes on street corners in various outre and ridiculous garbs, but perhaps they may have had their origin from antiquity and the peripatetic philosophers, who studied and discussed their learned theories while perpetually pacing the walks of the gymnasium.—[Philadelphia Times.

...l adjusted the gay colored rug that ...aped them and quietly ...amber.

Two days afterward the ...pt. Poindexter was turned ...rral, and a moment later the Captain ...ed the corridor. Handing a letter to ...crepit Concha who seemed to be ...organized by its contents, and then ...t words with which it was delivered ...ed silently upon the vacant hower, ...sh and redolent with the delicacy ...fame of its graceful occupant. Until ...k eyes filled with unaccustomed ...s. But his reverie was interrupted ...sound of jingling spurs without, and ...humor struggled back into his eyes ...n Jose impetuously entered. The Sp... started back, but instantly recover... himself.

"So I find you here. Ah!—it is well ... passionately, producing a letter fro... bosom. "Look! Do you call this kind ...k how you keep your compact?"

Poindexter coolly took the letter. It co... ...ed a few words of gentle dignity from M... ...ker, informing Don Jose that she ha... ...r that instant learned of his just claim... ...n Los Cuervos, tendering him her grat... ...e for his delicate intentions, but poin... ...out with respectful firmness that ... ...t know that a moment's further acce... ...e of his courtesy was impossible. ... ...She has gained this knowledge from ... ...d of mine," said Poindexter, calml... ...ght or wrong, I have kept my promi... ...u. I have as much reason to accuse y... ...straying my secret in this," he added ...y, as he took another letter from h... ...et and handed it to Don Jose.

...seemed briefer and colder, but w... ...er. It reminded Poindexter that as ... ...gain deceived her, she must take th... ...rnment of her affairs into her own hand... ...eforth. She abandoned all the fur... ...and improvements she had put in h... ...vos to him to whom she now knew s... ...ndebted for them. She could not thank ...or what his habitual generosity impe... ...m to do for any woman, but she cou... ...ve him for misunderstanding her lik... ...ther woman—perhaps she should ... ...a child. When he received this a... ...d be already on her way to her o... ...in Kentucky, where she still hoped ...le by her own efforts to amass enou... ...charge her obligations to him.

...he does not speak of her husband—th... ...n," said Don Jose, scanning Poindex... ...ace. "It is possible she rejoins hi...

...rhaps in one way she has never l... Don Jose," said Poindexter significa...

...Jose's face flushed, but he returne... ...sly, "And the rancho—naturally yo... ...ot buy it now?"

"...the contrary, I shall abide by my o... ...id Poindexter quietly.

...Jose eyed him narrowly, and the... "Ah, we shall consider of it."

...hid consider it, and accepted the o... With the full control of the lan... Poindexter's improvements, so indef... postponed, were actively pushed fro... The thick walls of the hacienda wo... ...t to melt away before them: the lo... ...corral were effaced, and the ear... ...of the summer trade winds swept u... ...ptedly across the now leveled pla... ...mbarcadero, where a newer struc... ...se. A more vivid green alone mar... ...spot where the crumbling adobe wal... ...asa had returned to the parent ea... ...ve it. The channel was deepened th... ...was drained until one evening th... ...rror that had so long reflected the ... waiting of the Blue Grass Penelope... ...d, dead, lustreless—an opaque quag... ...noisome corruption and decay to w... ...by from the sight of man forever. O... ...t the crows—the titular tenants ... ...rvos—assembled in tumultuous co... ...ming and going in mysterious cloc... ...ng in thick and writhing masses, ... were continuing the work of in... ...ant begun by human agency. So w... ...y done their work that by the end o... only a few scattered white objects ... ...d glittering on the surface of th... drying soil. But they were th... the missing outcast Spencer Tuck...

* * * * * *

...me spring a breath of war swe... ...ul decaying quagmire of the winte... ...ore which such passing deeds ... were blown as a vapor. ...nen of all rank and condition ...e for a nation's life, and among ... to respond were those itch who ...nds had been placed the nation's ...t returned the epaulets to Poindex... ...ers, with the addition of a doub... ...ied him triumphantly to the fron... ...im at the end of a summer's day ...d won fight sorely wounded at th... Blue Grass farmhouse. And th... ...no sought him out and ministered ...nts said timidly as she left her ...is, "I told you I should live to ra...

[THE END.]

Ingleside Reflections.

...a morbid love of truth. It is wrong ...t is even false to use a microscop... ...thers employ a field-glass.

...a wide distinction between gossi... ...telligent discussion of character.

... an element of the ridiculous in a ...s graceful at all times and in al...

...s questionings seriously answered ... ...chief's basis for that child's edu...

...ate an Irish woman. She occupies ...atmosphere. She breathes up all ...d leaves one gasping, for lack o...

... thing which most agitates the ...at dreadful question of expense.

... for God, for He completes time ...or love for that completes life.—... ...isco Ingleside.

Antiquity of Advertising.

...es people seem to have needed ... ...of their wants and the advertise... ...ed the busy or the lazy to supply ...out extra trouble. We find ... ...f the peripatetic advertisement ... greet our eyes on street corners, ...outre and ridiculous garbs, but ... ...ey may have had their origin ...uity and the peripatetic philos... ...o studied and discussed them ... ...ories while perpetually perambul... ...alks of the gymnasium.—[Philad... ...mes.

A STRANGE DECEPTION.

Gertie Fuller, the Woman's Wife, Married to a Man—Remarkable Historical Parallel Recalled.

A great sensation was created a year ago by the announcement that two women living in Waupun, Wis., had been quietly married and were living together as man and wife. The case attracted widespread attention, and the developements were closely watched. An investigation showed that Mrs. J. L. Hudson, who came with her husband from a small town in Illinois and resided at Fond du Lac, had deserted her family, and, donning male attire, found work on a farm near Waupun. Mrs. Hudson called herself "Frank Dubois," and in her bifurcated garments readily passed

AN EFFEMINATE-LOOKING COUNTRYMAN.

He was about 30 years old. After living near Waupun for several months Dubois met and began courting a good looking girl named Gertie Fuller, whose mother was a respectable widow living in the outskirts of the village. After a short courtship the couple were married, and took up their residence with the bride's mother. A few weeks after the wedding it began to be whispered around that the groom was a woman, and the village gossips set their tongues wagging. The news spread, and in a few weeks the leading papers of the country contained long despatches in regard to the queer case, and its peculiar phases were discussed in their editorial columns. Dubois and "his" pretty young wife stoutly denied the stories, but they were so bothered by inquisitive visitors and newspaper correspondents that they decided to leave the town, which they did at the dead hour of night, going to a small place named Brandon, where they began living under an assumed name. At last Mrs. Fuller took up the case, and decided to find out for herself whether her daughter's

HUSBAND WAS A MAN OR A WOMAN.

She invoked the aid of officers and followed the couple, overtaking them at a Brandon hotel. She induced them to return to Waupun. But they fled a second time, and were lost sight of for several months. Hudson heard of the case, and after making an investigation, felt satisfied that Frank Dubois was no other than his recreant spouse. Then he began searching for the queerly matched couple. After considerable trouble he discovered them, and sure enough "Frank Dubois" proved to be the missing Mrs. Hudson. She refused to return with her husband at first, but upon being threatened with arrest decided to leave "her wife" and return to her abandoned home and her four children. Gertie Fuller returned to her mother's home in Waupun, where they continued to live until a few days ago. She refused to talk to outsiders about her marriage but contended to the last that Dubois was a man. Hudson took his wife home and later on returned to their former place of residence in Illinois. Last fall Gertie Fuller became a mother, and she strenously asserted that Dubois was the child's father. The strange case has never been explained satisfactorily but all kinds of theories have been advanced. It certainly was one of the strangest matrimonial marriages on record. The last chapter was enacted at Chicton, a small town in the northern part of the State, where Gertie Fuller Dubois was married to a man named Lehman, and they have gone to Maine, Wis., where they will in future reside.

A HSITORICAL PARELLEL.

Chevalier, generally known as Madam, D'Eon, was born of good family at Tonnerre, in France, in 1728. D'Eon was a man of brilliant parts, a writer by no means contemptible on various subjects, an accomplished diplomat and a brave officer, and at one period he was minister plenipotentiary to the British court. A little quarrel with the Court de Guereby, who succeeded him as ambassador, was assigned as a reason for his not returning to France, but, it is probable, that the real cause of his stay in England was his acting as the private agent of Louis XV., by whom he was allowed a pension. D'Eon continued to reside in London for fourteen years, and was in habits of friendship with the most distinguished persons. Rumours, at first faint, but gradually acquiring strength said,

THAT D'EON WAS A WOMAN.

There were certain feminine indications in his voice, and he was known to be averse to all affairs of gallantry and to manifest extreme caution with respect to females. At length it began to be generally believed, both in England and France, that he had no right to the title to wear the dress of a male. Wagers to a large amount were laid upon this subject; and in 1771 one of them produced a most sensational trial before Lord Mansfield. The action was brought by Surgeon Hayes against Jacques, a broker and underwriter, for the recovery of seven hundred pounds, Jacques having about six years before received premiums of fifteen per cent. for every one of which he stood engaged to return a hundred guineas, whenever it should be proved that the Chevalier D'Eon was actually a woman. In this cause three seemingly unexpected witnesses, two of whom were of the medical profession, positively swore that they had obtained such proof as admitted of no contradiction that D Eon was of the female sex.

A VERDICT WAS IN CONSEQUENCE GIVEN

for the plaintiff; but it was afterwards set aside on a point of law. After this trial M. de Vergennes, one of the French Ministers, in a letter which he wrote to D'Eon, declared that it was the king's will that he "should assume the dress of his sex"—meaning the dress of a woman—and this injunction was repeated on the chevalier arriving in France. It was obeyed, and till the end of his long life D'Eon dressed and was looked upon as one of the softer sex. Early in the French revolution he returned to England still as a female, and remained there till his decease in 1810. Death proved the folly of those who forced him into pettiecoats, for his manhood was placed beyond all doubt by an anatomical examination of the body. Why he was metamorphosed, and why he continued to acquiesce in the change, when he might have safely asserted his sex, there appears to be no means of discovering.

A bank of earth caved in on a labourer at Kansas City, and while three or four men in the crowd were trying to figure how long it would take to dig him out the rest waited. He ought to have lived, according to the figures, forty-five minutes, but was dead when they reached him in forty-three.

English Members of the Cabinet.

In countries where the Minister of War is always a General, the Minister of Marine an Admiral, the Minister of Education a Professor, &c., the advent of every new Ministry is the signal for hasty, costly changes in all directions. Every Minister having, as he conceives, ample professional experience, comes to his work with his mind full of crotchets, and thinks he must signalize his term of office, however short, by abolishing something and setting up something else. In England a man of talent, who may have been rather presumptuous and flighty as an independant member, quickly gets sobered when he is set to learn the difficult work of managing a department about which he knows nothing. He must rely at first upon his permanent staff and this prevents him from attempting rash innovations; by and by, when he has acquired experience, whatever reforms he may see fit to propose will be mounted in a prudent spirit, and are more likely on that account to be satisfactory and durable. It is certainly a pity that a Minister of proved abilities should be turned out of office just as his services are beginning to be appreciated; but under our English system the services of a statesman who goes into Opposition are not lost to the country, for he brings his experience to bear in controlling the work of his successor; besides which there is a departmental etiquette which binds a Minister under ordinary circumstances to carry on and complete good work commenced by his predecessor. Two or three little facts will shew how harmoniously both parties in the State combine to keep the mechanism of Government in good working order, despite their struggles for power. An incoming Minister is always received in his department by the outgoing chief, who puts him in possession of all the facts about current business to be transacted. In acknowledgement of this the new Minister during the whole of his stay in office takes care that his predecessor shall be the first informed of all events connected with the department which may be made public. Thus, if important news arrived from abroad, a copy of the dispatch would be forwarded at once by the present Foreign Secretary to the former holder of the office—the idea of this being that the latter, as critic ex-officio of the Indian policy of the Government, has a claim to be supplied with ample and rapid information. These patriotic courtesies are not practised in any other country, and one may allude to them with pleasure as showing that—

"For some true result of good
All parties work together."

But if they have so worked the result is largely due, as we have shown, to the Queen's wisdom in siding with neither party and in establishing relations of personal friendliness with most of her Ministers, so that no jealousies could arise among them. The late King of Bavaria used to make the lives of Ministers whom he disliked unbearable by questioning them about the affairs of their departments until he had exposed their ignorance. This would be a resource always open to an ill-natured sovereign; and it must be remembered again that the personal influence which Mr. Gladstone has praised her Majesty for exerting in her correspondence with foreign rulers is an influence which need not have been given, as it constantly has been, to serve Ministers of either party who happened to want it. The Queen might have refused her good offices to get incompetent Ministers out of scrapes, and she would have had constitutional warranty for so doing since Ministers who are not loth to solicit her Majesty's assistance when they were in distress have sometimes not scrupled to cavil at letters written to help their opponents.—[Temple Bar.

The Height of Waves.

Many experiments have been made to measure the height of waves in all condition of weather. One authority goes as high as sixty four feet, and another as low as five feet, giving it as his reason that the penetrating power of wind cannot reach below that depth. On this philosopher it may be presumed that he was a martyr to sea sickness and that he must have contented himself with making his calculations in his study. On the other hand, a height of sixty-four feet is almost as absurd, though it is true that the earthquake wave has been known to rise to sixty feet; yet surges of this kind are happily scarce, since when they occur they are not only in the habit of razing whole towns upon the coast line where they break, but of carrying some of the vessels they may encounter at anchor in the neighborhood to the distance of a day's walk inland. Practical experience, however, will look with suspicion on most of the scientific theories touching the altitude and velocity of waves. Professor Airy's table couples speed with dimensions, and, as a sample of his calculations, it may be shown that the wave one hundred thousand feet in breadth will travel at the rate of 533 90 feet per second in water that is ten thousand feet deep. This is possible, but it is difficult to accept such conclusion as exact. At all events, there is nothing more deceptive than the height of waves. The tallest seas in the world run off Cape Horn, where whether the wind blows east or west, they have a holiday ground within a belt of eight or ten degrees that compass the globe without the intervention of a break of land. Any man who has run, say, before a strong westerly gale round the Horn will know the magnitude of the seas that follow his ship. Viewed from the stern when the vessels sinks in the trough, the oncoming sea that is about to underrun the ship and lift her soaring to the flying heavens will seem to heave its rushing summit to the height of the mizen-top; but when the summit is gained by the observer and the waves viewed from there, it will then be seen that these crests which from the deck looked a long way up will now appear to be a long way down. It is a common shore-going phrase that the sea ran "mountains high." The idea implied is not very generally accepted by sailors, though the term may be sometimes used by them for convenience. The truth is if waves were as tall as they are popularly supposed to be, no ship could by any possibility live in them. They are lofty to the fancy, because at sea they are usually surveyed from low freeboards. To a spectator on a steamer, with a six foot height of side an Atlantic or Pacific surge would necessarily appear as a mountain compared to the aspect it would take from the deck of an old line-of-battle ship, with a thirty-foot "dip;" or from one of those lofty, glazed and castellated structures which in former times took six months to jog soberly from the Thames to the Hooghly.—[London Telegraph.

A FLOOD OF FLAMING OIL.

A Terrible Scene in the Oil Country Recalled By a Recent Calamity.

The announcement of the death of Wallace Riley, at Saylersville, O., recalls the fifth terrible casualty in the history of the petroleum development in this country, of which disaster he was the last surviving victim. It left him a blind and helpless cripple, and subject at times to fits of insanity during which he seemed to suffer all the agonizing experiences through which he passed on the day of the great disaster, twenty-three years ago.

In April, 1861, there was a cluster of wells, yielding from one hundred to three hundred barrels of oil a day, on the then newly-developed territory on Oil creek. Flowing wells were then as yet unknown. Harley and Merrick sank a well to the depth of two hundred feet, but as the yield was small they took out the pumps, and started the drill to make the well deeper. About 5 o'clock in the afternoon of April 16, the drill had gone to a depth of three hundred feet, when it struck a vein of oil and gas, and instantly the oil rushed up through the five and a-half inch tubing, hurling the tools high in the air, and gushing up in a fountain fifty feet in height. This was the first flowing well ever struck in the region. The great noise made by the escaping oil was heard for half a mile around, and in a few minutes the fountain of oil was surrounded by a crowd of excited men, women, and children. The well was spouting at the rate of one hundred barrels an hour. Above the roaring mass of oil the gas rose so densely as to be visible as a cloud at least sixty feet high. As soon as the oil began to gush forth all the fires of the engines in the vicinity were extinguished. There had been no preparation made to receive so unprecedented and unexpected a rush of oil, and in a few minutes petroleum was running in streams in every direction. Dams were built and trenches dug to collect the fluid that was running to waste, and in a short time a lake of oil surrounded the derrick.

Wallace Riley, then a young man of 24, arrived at the scene of the excitement at 6 o'clock, from Meadville. He was to be married that evening at 8 o'clock to the daughter of a farmer who lived on Oil creek, near the Harley & Merrick well. Riley went with his prospective father-in-law and joined the crowd at the flowing well.

The nature of petroleum gas was then unknown, and while the crowd stood about with no thought of danger, the gas from the spouting well was slowly spreading in every direction and filling the air. There was no fire nearer than a quarter of a mile to the well. That was the boiler-house of a well then drilling. By seven o'clock in the evening the gas from the flaming well had reached the boiler, and, taking fire in a second, the whole air was in a flame with a crash and roar like the discharge of a field of artillery. The fountain of oil became a stream of solid fire, falling back to the ground, over an area of a hundred feet around, in blazing globes of boiling oil. Instantly the ground was covered with flames. A scene of indescribable horror ensued. Scores of people were thrown to the ground by the explosion and surrounded by the burning oil as it seethed on every side, while the flaming gas roared above them. The most of these managed to reach the outer circle of fire with their lives, but were horribly burned. At the time of the explosion everything in the neighborhood for the distance of a quarter of a mile around took fire, and shanties, derricks, engine-houses, and dwellings, were at once wrapped in flames. The boiler at Dobb's well, eighty rods from the original fire, blew up with a tremendous report, instantly killing the engineer, Wesley Skinner. At this time the whole air was afire. The jet of oil, rushing up for fifty feet, was a pillar of living fire, while the gas above it to the distance of one hundred feet was flashing and exploding like some terrific electrical display during a thunder-storm. The sounds of the explosions were almost continuous, and the roar of the flame was like the rushing of a violent hurricane. The heat of the fire was so intense that no one could approach within 150 feet of the limits of the fire.

Among those who were prostrated by the first explosion of gas was the young man Wallace Riley. He succeeded in gaining his feet, and being fortunately only a few steps from the outer edge of the fiery circle, he made his way through the burning oil, and fell, all ablaze, just beyond the limit. He was seized by others, who plunged him into a hogshead of water, extinguishing the fire, and carried him to a neighboring shanty.

Within the circle of flame, not ten feet from the edge, at the spot where Riley escaped, four bodies could be seen boiling in the seething oil. One man who had been digging at a trench to convey the oil to a lower part of the ground, was killed as he dug, and he could be seen, as he fell over the handle of his spade, roasting in the burning oil. H. R. Rouse, of Warren county, one of the most prominent of the early oil producers, for whom Rouseville was subsequently named, and whose revenue from oil wells at the time of the great disaster amounted to $1,000 a day, was standing near the trench this man was digging, when the explosion occurred. He was lifted in the air and thrown more than twenty feet away, alighting in a pool of blazing oil. He rose to his feet, and ran, all ablaze for a short distance, and fell. He was seized by several men, his burning clothes extinguished, and carried to a shanty. Not a vestige of clothing was left upon him except his stockings and boots. His hair was burned off as well as his ears, his eyelids, and his fingers. His eyeballs were entirely burned out. His body was blistered from the breast down. He never lost consciousness, but lived nine hours, during which time he deliberately dictated his will to his lawyer. In this will he left $100,000 to the poor of Warren county, but he died before he could acknowledge and sign the document.

Besides Mr. Rouse, twelve dead bodies were taken from the flames before they were entirely destroyed. Of these only six could be recognized—the brothers Walker, two leading oil men of Clarion county; Wesley Skinner, of Wattsburg; John Stevens, Judd Mason, and Albert Gardiner. Twelve men, who are known to have visited the spot, strangers sight-seeing in the oil regions, were believed to have been among the victims of the disaster, as they could not be found and were never heard of afterward. Thirty-four men were rescued, as Wallace Riley was, but their injuries were so great that twenty-two of them died.

The scene at the height of the fire is described as having been the most frightful and at the same time the grandest spectacle ever witnessed. The flow of oil continued unabated for months, and as no human power could extinguish the flames it continued burning furiously. The well finally gradually exhausted itself, and the fire was at last conquered. Hundreds of thousands of barrels of oil were consumed, and the well which would have been an enormous fortune to its owners ruined them.

Wallace Riley was burned in almost exactly the same manner as the unfortunate Mr. Rouse had been. For weeks his sufferings were intense, and he constantly begged to be killed. The young woman whom he was to have married on that terrible evening was his constant attendant during all his suffering. His life was saved, but he was left sightless and without hands, while his face was terribly disfigured, and his lower limbs were fleshless and drawn out of shape. His mind was also badly affected, and although he recovered in a great measure his mental powers, he was subject to frequent lapses, which lasted sometimes for days. During these spells he raved continuously about the horrors of the scenes at the burning well. It was during one of these paroxysms that he died, apparently in the greatest agony. He had been cared for for twenty-two years by a brother. The young woman to whom Riley had been engaged to be married died within a year after the frightful catastrophe of the burning well.—Philadelphia Item.

Railway Travelling.

A London paper calls attention to the fact that the managers of English railways are now studying to provide for the comfort of passengers instead of trying to secure more gorgeous accommodations and greater speed. This subject should receive the attention of railway managers in this country. With all the recent improvements in cars, railway travel is still very uncomfortable. The time of leaving and arrival of trains running between great cities is often very inconvenient. On some of the trunk lines between Chicago and New York, the trains leave about 5 in the afternoon and arrive at about the same hour in the morning. Persons who leave home at the hour named go without supper. Perhaps the train stops twenty minutes for refreshments at some unimportant station where there is but a single eating-house. If this is the case, half of this time is occupied by the passengers in going from the train to the dining room, in waiting to be served, and in returning to the cars. Ten minutes do not afford a sufficient time in which to eat a meal. Five or even six in the morning is a very inconvenient time in which to arrive in a great city. Especially is this the case if the passenger is a stranger. He does not know where to go, and is generally at the mercy of "hotel runners." There is no opportunity of transacting business for at least three or four hours. To avoid discomfort, it is generally necessary to go to a hotel in a carriage, and be at the expense of paying for a room. The rapid speed of the train is no gain to the traveller. It is in fact a loss in both time and money. The proper time for arriving in a large city in the morning is when public conveyances are making regular trips, the hotels are ready to serve breakfast, and the stores are open for business.

The perpetual annoyance of railway passengers by the venders of worthless books, stale pop corn, unwholesome fruit and prize packages is an abomination that should never be tolerated. Peddling is prohibited or restricted in most cities, and the peddler is a nuisance in a first-class car. He is a train-robber whose presence is almost as objectionable as a back-woods bandit. He renders travelling a burden. The attempt on many railway companies to monopolize the trade in food, drinks, and cigars is not commendable. It shows a very small spirit. The comfort of passengers would be promoted by having several places for the sale of refreshments at the stations where long stops were made. Many people travel who can not pay a dollar for a meal. They should have an opportunity to obtain meals that are within their means. A lavatory should be provided for every passenger car. Passengers, especially in summer, become covered with dust and smoke after riding a few hours. They can enjoy little comfort unless they have an opportunity to wash. Lavatories are needed for cleanliness, health, and comfort. Passengers would care much more for them than for expensive ornamentation. The number of women who travel with young children is always large. The children are generally a source of great annoyance to the passengers. It would cost but little to partition off and fit up an apartment for a nursery on one car on each passenger train. A car having an apartment for women with young children would be a great convenience and would add to the revenue of a road by increasing the number of passengers. Common comfort is in greater demand than highly ornamented cars and very rapid speed.—Chicago Times.

Life in St. Petersburg.

People here all arm themselves for the winter. There can be no question as to its severity. Indeed, one would be inclined to imagine it were almost welcomed as a friend, for keen disappointment is expressed when the snow is tardy in falling. After the heavy rains which fall in the late autumn snow roads are almost a necessity of existence. If frost suddenly sets in before they are made it is under great difficulties that the country people bring supplies to the metropolis; the price of provisions rises in proportion, and distress ensues. Double windows are universal; they are an absolute necessity. For the admission of fresh air one pane in each window is left so that it may be opened at pleasure. The rest of the window is so thoroughly secured that not a breath of the keen air can enter. The process accomplished, the difference of the temperature within doors is sensibly perceptible, and heating by means of stoves may then be delayed for some time. The interior of a Russian house is not familiar to all, so, under favor of the Lares and Penates, we will enter the sacred domicile, first premising that a well kept house in St. Petersburg or Moscow is exceedingly comfortable. A tall portly suisse (house porter) admits you, when a footman ushers you up a mostly spacious, handsome staircase, often of marble, and after passing through the usual double doors you are introduced into an anteroom where you leave your inevitable garment—your fur cloak. The reception rooms are then entered, and these often seem interminable; eight or nine in number in the houses on the Palace or English Quays are not uncommon, generally opening into one another. The inlaid parquets of the rooms are often very beautiful—the floor polisher is an important institution in Russia; of course, some rooms are richly carpeted and do justice to the looms of Turkey and Persia. The silk or damask curtains, wall hangings, and coverings for the ottomans are superb. All is luxurious; vases of apis-lazuli, porphyry, and malachite, pictures, and objects of art in general are in profusion. The Russians are very fond of promenading through their suites of apartments, and ample space is left for this purpose. The winter being so long, every conceivable means is used to shed around the charms of warmer climates; trellises, along which various creepers are trained, are introduced; pretty baskets of plants (tulips, hyacinths, and camellias in full bloom, while winter is still raging outside,) the constant warm temperature indoors being favorable to their cultivation. The Continental fashion of living in flats much prevails here. Sleeping rooms are not invariably numerous in proportion to the reception rooms; but this state of things naturally improves with the increase of civilization.—[Temple Bar.

Cremation of an Indian Rajah.

A case of cremation has occurred at Etretat under very remarkable circumstances. A rich Indian, the Rajah Abussabid Koanderao, with a suite of 12, came lately to the Hotel des Bains, scared from Nice by the cholera. He died of an anthrax, or carbuncle, rather suddenly. His friends asked that his body might be burned with Asiatic rites. The Mayor of Etretat, greatly embarrassed, telegraphed to Paris for instructions, and an authorization was given, but great pains were taken to prevent the public from seeing the unusual spectacle. At 2 in the morning the corpse was placed on a bier on the sands at the foot of one of the great white cliffs of Etretat, where it was set fire to, and continued burning to 6 in the morning. There were scarcely any spectators except the native friends of the deceased and some fishermen, who appeared greatly astonished at the unusual spectacle of which they were witnesses. The ashes, when the incineration was complete, were divided into three portions. One was thrown to the winds, another into the sea, and a third placed in a vase to be sent to relatives in India.

A Venetian Wedding Day.

A Venetian festival is a synonym of all that is magnificent and romantic. From the earliest history the fetes have been events of the greatest popular interest and importance. They have been celebrated most frequently to perpetuate the memory of some triumph of the Venetian army, and the patriotism of the people has been kept alive by these fetes quite as much as by the consciousness of commercial importance and power.

For centuries the Marian festivals were the most important holidays of the year. It was a custom introduced early in the tenth century to select from the different parishes of the city twelve poor maidens, distinguished for virtue and beauty, who were provided with dowry at the cost of the State, and fitted out with wedding trousseaus from the Treasury of St Mark. The girls were dressed in long robes of white, with loosened hair interwoven with threads of gold, and in a rich barge were carried to the Church of St. Peter, followed by a cortege of gayly decorated gondolas, with music and singers, the Doge and Signory accompanying the procession. Each maiden bore in her hand a small box containing her dowry, and met her appointed husband in the church. Mass was celebrated, and the bishop officiated in the marriage ceremony. This was the beginning of the fete, which lasted a whole week. With the growth of luxury and laxity of morals the festival lost its original character, and it became necessary to limit its observance, and during the Genovese war, in the fourteenth century, the celebration was neglected and fell into disuse. An incident which happened in the tenth century during the observance of this festival has long been a favorite theme of artists and poets, and illustrates too well the spirit of the day and the isolation of the new republic to be omitted here. The Trieste pirates long watched an opportunity to rob the festal barge of its treasures, both human and monetary, and one fine morning of St. Mary's eve they burst open the doors of the church, surprised the congregation and escaped with the brides and treasures. The Doge, who was present, urged immediate pursuit. Every boat capable of carrying rowers was manned and put to sea in the greatest haste. Venice rose as one man to join the pursuit of the pirates and to assist in the recovery of the brides. The enthusiasm of the Venetians was so irresistible that the pirates were overtaken and beaten in one of the entrances to the lagoon. Not a pirate escaped, such was the fury of the pursuers. The brides were recovered entirely unharmed, and the ceremony of marriage took place with increased pomp the same evening.

The Standard.

MARKDALE OCT. 9, 1884.

We are called upon this week to chronicle the death fo Mr. Thos. Irwin, who passed away on Monday last after a lingering illness at the age of 49 years. Mr. Irwin was an old resident of Artemesia, well known and highly respected. His remains were followed to their last resting place by a large concourse of surrowing friends and acquaintances.

FLESHERTON.

While visiting the County Show at Flesherton, we were pleased to notice that it is waking up and not at all disposed to give up the competition for trade altho' placed at some disadvantage for railway facilities relatively with other places on the T., G & B. railway. The business buildings in course of erection are of a character that bespeak permanency and durability. J. H. Heard & Sons are preparing for extensive building operations next spring. Dr. Christoe's block is rapidly approaching completion, and is not only handsome, but when finished will be equal to some of the best business blocks in older frontier towns. The new Presbyterian Church is very well situated on an elevation at the eastern end of the village, and it is one of the prettiest ecclesiastical structures in this northern country. The style is gothic with some elements of the French Renaissance which may be observed in the tower at the eastern angle the finale to which, intended we suppose for belfry is the only objectionable point in the building. However as we are not sufficiently skilled in architecture to suggest what it might, could, or should have been, we forbear further criticism other than to say it did not present to our eye the best point for a picture of the edifice. We should not do justice to this subject did we not notice the fine business block erected by M. Richardson, and into which he has recently moved. An attempt was made by our contemporary the Advance, to give its readers some description of the building, and such as it was it might pass, as the most of them live within a limited area of the village and can, from personal inspection, get for themselves the information the Advance attempted, but failed to give. As the STANDARD reaches many a home and greets many an eye far from Artemesia who, from earlier associations, still have a love for and interest in its progress, we will give a short description of this the finest business premises in the County of Grey. The building is of brick and cut stone with mansard roof, three stories, frontage on Sydenham street, and as there is an incline from the corner on Durham street in the length of the building of ten feet, it presents a four-story frontage on that street. The streets do not run at right angles, and the sight is an obtuse or open angle spreading from thirty feet on the front to sixty feet at the rear of the building. The shape of the lot and the unequal level of the streets having been utilized to the very best advantage. There is an annex in the rear of the building which has a front entrance on Durham street to the hardware store, the front of which has a very handsome design, as the window in form of a beautiful arch takes in the upper story which lights the clothing department immediately above. Approaching from Sydenham street we were agreeably surprised to note the wide, lofty door space, the handsome black iron pillars with flutings in gold at the angle of each window, where behind the large clear sheets of plate glass we saw on one side what looked like an array of headless ghosts all out for parade in the nobbiest suits of latest fashions mens' youths and boys, with a background drapery of tweeds and suitings of fine texture and novel patterns. The other window was filled with such a miscellaneous assortment of dry goods arranged with all the attractions of the city window dresser, we shall not attempt to describe or enumerate its contents. On entering we were again agreeably impressed by the beauty and finish of the interior. The ceiling is divided into five large panels, in the centre of each of which is a beautiful specimen of the moulder's art in plaster casts. The divisions are made by a projection in the ceiling, resting at each side on moulded brackets placed on pillasters running up the walls on each side. The floor has a rise of one foot in seventy-two, which has the effect of throwing the interior to better view from the entrance. At this distance from the front there is a rise of four steps to the millinery department, which is lighted from the roof with spacious sky-light. The cashier's desk is placed on the left side entering, about midway up the store. It communicates thro' an arched opening with the business offices. About fifty feet from the front, on the left side, is an opening into the boot and shoe department, which appeared to be filled with every description of boot and shoe ware. In the archway is a door opening into a large wareroom used for storing groceries in unbroken packages, excepting tea, which is stored in the next flat above this. An opening in the corner of the boot ware-room leads up a few steps into the clothing department. It is on the same level as the millinery and above the hardware. It is well lighted with the large arched window, embracing the whole of the south-eastern side. There is a stairway from the arch to the boot room, descending which we found on the level of Durham street. The hardware and crockery store in this is also kept a fine display of silver-plated goods; fine China, beautifully ornamented in gold and hand painting, and a large assortment of glassware and lamp goods. The thousand and one useful articles needed to be kept in a well-furnished hardware store like this would seem enough to tax the full attention of one busy brain to keep supplied everything from ladies pen-knifes to mounted grind stones. Another ware-house was still needed and is being fitted up in which to store window glass, nails, iron, oils, paints, cordage, and all the heavy unsightly, but not the less useful materials which are incorporated in the building and furnishing of our homes. The counters and desks, etc., are beautiful specimens of cabinet art, showing also the beauty of some of our native woods, when wrought into artistic designs by skilled workmen, and the superiority of the natural grain to the most skilled imitations of the painter's art. On the whole we congratulate the village on the acquisition of such a handsome building, beautiful by night as well as by day, as it is brilliantly lit up by gas externally as well as internally, and when it receives the finish of a large mirror to be placed at the back of the millinery department, and which will be so placed as to reflect the whole interior of the main store. It will hardly be surpassed by any of our city establishments. Ten years ago Mr. Richardson built the store he has just vacated. It was then the best in the country—nothing in Markdale to equal it,—how, for our village soon outstripped that style of building may still be seen, and before half another decade passes we hope to see his last effort as far excelled here as his former essay was.

PRESBYTERIAN CONCERT.

The concert held in Rae's new hall on Friday evening last, under the auspices of the ladies of the Presbyterian church, was in every respect a success. This hall is located on the 3rd flat of Mr. Rae's new building, entrance at side, near rear end, and will seat about 200. The place was well filled and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Several amateurs appeared for their first time before a Markdale audience and equitted themselves in a creditable manner. Mr. F. Porter gave a recitation in a most able and masterly manner. while Mr. R. B. Currie appeared to advantage in song, Instrumental music and in reciting. He is a whole team in himself. Messrs. A. Parks and Currie gave, on their violins an imitation of the "Highland Pipes" which was highly applauded. In fact all did well. The songs were of a suitbal character and well rendered. The instrumental music somewhat lively, arousing the mirthful propensities of quite a number, while the Readings and Recitations were such as are seldom equalled. The following persons took part: Mr. Currie, Mr. A. Parks, Miss Katie McDuffie, Mrs. Trimble, Mr. W. A. Brown, Master A. Moffat, Miss Ellie Wilson, Mr. A. McFarland Miss Emma Damude, Mr. F. Porter and last but not least the audience sang "Auld Lang Syne" with great enthusiasm. The receipts of the concert were over $31, while that of the dinner and bazaar, which was held on the Agricultural grounds during the day, and which was also a success, amounted in all to $61, making a total of $92, for the day and evening. There was also a 10 cent social given on Monday evening which swelled the total amount to $100.

HOLLAND CENTRE SHOW.

The second annual show of the above Agricultural Society was held at Holland Centre yesterday (Friday). The weather was very unfavorable, the rain poured from early morning until after noon. Notwithstanding this a goodly number turned out, and the exhibit, both in the hall and field, was surprising both in extent and quality. Had the weather been favorable we have reason to believe this exhibition would have far eclipsed the neighboring township fairs; as it was it was fully up to the average. We will give the list of prizes awarded next week.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY.

Physicians are often startled by remarkable discoveries. The fact that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and all Throat and Lung diseases is daily ouring patients that they have given up to die, is startling them to realize their sense of duty, and examine into the merits of this wonderful discovery; resulting in hundreds of our best Physicians using it in their practice. Trial bottles free at A. Turner, & Co's. Drug Store. Regular Size $1.00. 4

Artemesia Fall Show.

The annual fall show of Artemesia township was held in Priceville on Tuesday, the 7th. The weather was most favorable and as a result a large number turned out. The inside show was held in Watson's, new brick wagon shop, and was a very suitable place. The show was on the whole a success. Further particulars with list of prizes awarded will be given next week.

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsib'e for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the Standard.

DEAR SIR,—How is it that bakers bread still remains 12 cents? which it was when wheat was a dollar, wheat being now only 70 cents. Hamilton, Toronto and Shelburne, where there is no competition, get bread delivered at 10 cts. There is a screw "fast" somewhere.

CONSUMER.

To the Editor of the Standard.

Fort William, Oct. 1st, 1884.

Quite an exciting contest took place here Friday, the 19th ult., between your old townsman Mr. A. McDougall and Mr. Robt. Dunbar of Winnipeg in a match for winner of four in seven games for fifty dollars a side. Mr. McDougall won five games without any training whatever, while his opponent has been putting himself to a lot of trouble the last two months training and trying to arrange a match.

Mr. McDougall still retains his athletic abilities and did some big work, surprising the Port Arthur folks who turned out to see their man an easy winner.

The games were won as follows:—

Standing jump—A. McDougall, 12 ft. 10½ inches. R. Dunbar 11 ft. 9 inches.

Three standing jumps—A. McDougall, 37 ft. 6 inches. R. Dunbar, 35 ft. 9 inches.

Standing hop step and jump—R. Dunbar, 35 ft. 7 inches. A. McDougall, 35 ft. 4 inches.

Putting 13 lbs. shot—A. McDougall 47 ft. 3 inches. R. Dunbar, 47 ft. 2 inches 100 yard race was won by R. Donbar, and the 75 yd. race and hurdle race race by A. McDougall.

E. S. R.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jones, of Mono Mills, visited Markdale this week.

Mrs. Arch. Donaldson, of Muskoka, is visiting friends in this district.

Edward S. Rutledge arrived from Port Arthur on Sunday last.

Mr. Robt. eldest son of the late Mr. Thos. Irwin, arrived from British Columbia last week.

Eddie Reynolds has accepted a situation in Norwood and took his leave of Markdale on Wednesday last for that place.

Wm. R. Burnett returned from Palmerston recently.

SALE REGISTER.

Tuesday, Oct. 14th, at one o'clock, on the farm of R. S. McLaughlin, lot 14 con. 12, Holland, when the above lot 100 acres, will be sold, togather with horses, cattle pigs household furniture, &c. W. J. Shepherdson, Auctioneer.

Thursday, Oct. 15th, at 1 o'clock, on the farm of the late John Manarey, lot 19, con. 9, Euphrasia, a large stock of horses, cattle, sheep, swine, and implements. W. J. Shepherdson, Auctioneer.

Wednesday, Oct. 22nd, at 1 o'clock, Mr. John McArthur will sell on lot 12, con. 8, Euphrasia, an extensive farm stock, consisting of horses, cattle, sheep, swine, and implements, Hay, &c. Joseph Manarey, Auctioneer.

Wednesday, Oct. 22nd, Mr. Richard English, lot 6, con. 15, Glenelg, at 1 o'clock, Farm Stock, Implements, &c. R. M. Galbraith, Auctioneer.

The following is from J. W. Ptolemy, of Winnipeg, formerly grain buyer for William Gillesby, of Hamilton and Grimsby: "I was for many years much afflicted with Costiveness, Biliousness, and ultimately Dyspepsia. I suffered very much and tried many different medicines, which gave me only temporary relief and then I was as bad as ever again. I was recommended by a friend, who had been restored to health by it, to try McGregor's Speedy Cure. I did so, and it was not long before I felt like a new man, and I have enjoyed excellent health ever since. I first commenced taking it February 7th, 1879. Sold by Hill Bro's. A. & S. 5

Market Reports.

MARKDALE.

Fall Wheat	$0 68	to	$0 70
Spring Wheat	0 75	to	0 75
Barley	48	to	60
Peas	55	to	00
Oat	25	to	00
Butter	17	to	00
Eggs	16	to	00
Apples	30	to	35
Potatoes	30	to	00
Hay	7 00	to	0 00
Pork	7 00	to	7 50
Flour	4 25	to	4 50

A RARE PLANT.

The Wild Strawberry Plant possesses rare virtue as a cleansing, cooling, astringent, anteseptic and healing medicine, and when combined with other valuable vegetable extracts, as in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, it is an unfailing remedy in all bowel complaints.

AUCTION SALE

—OF—

VALUABLE FARM,

In the township of Holland, in the County of Grey. There will be sold, on Wednesday, the

22nd DAY OF OCTOBER, 1884,

at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, at

Rutledge's Hotel,

MARKDALE,

By virtue of Powers of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage which will be produced at the Sale, the following Property:

PARCEL I.

Under Mortgage from Thomas English, Lot 27, in the 4th Concession of the Township of Holland, in the County of Grey, containing 117 acres more or less.

The following improvemsnts are said to be on the premises: Ninety acres cleared, one frame dwelling, one log dwelling, two log barns, one stable, good orchard and well.

TERMS—One-tenth of the purchase money to be paid down on the day of sale. For balance, terms will be made known at the sale. For further particulars apply to

JONES BROS. & MACKENZIE,
Solicitors, Masonic Hall, Toronto.
Or to JOHN LYONS, Esq.,
Markdale.

Toronto, 29th Sept., 1884. 212-4in

Strayed or Stolen.

From the farm of Richard Shears, Lot 1, con. 11, Euphrasia, about the 18th Sept. A ram, 3 years old, Cotswold, marked with red lead along back. Any person giving such information as will lead to his recovery will be suitably rewarded. Should any person allow above sheep to stay on their premises without giving public notice of the same they will be dealt with according to law.

RICHARD SHEARS,
Markdale P. O. 112-114.*

Dakota Illustrated.

A 32-page paper descriptive of the Northwest and Far West and a County Map of Dakota sent free for 2-cent stamp. Send your address to A. V. H. CARPENTER, General Passenger Agent, Milwaukee, 212-115.

IN THE GOODS AND CHATTELS.

—OF THE LATE—

JOHN MANAREY,

(DECEASED.)

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Pursuant to Section 34, of Chapter 107, R. S. O. the creditors of John Manarey, late of the township of Euphrasia, County Grey, deceased, who died on or about the 30th May 1884, and all parties having claims upon his estate are, on or before the 1st DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1884 to send by post, prepaid, to Joseph Manarey, giving P. O., in the County of Grey, administerator of the personal estate and effects of deceased, their christian and surnames, adresses and description, the full particulars of their claims a statement of their accounts and nature of the securities (if any) held by them, and in default thereof the assets of said deceased will be distributed, having regard only to the claims then received, or those of them which the administerator then have notice.

JOS. MANAREY,
Administerator

Date September 4th 1884.

FARM FOR SALE.

A valuable property of 75 acres, comprising Lot 40, and west half of 42, 1st East T. & S. Road, Holland one mile from Williamsford Station, the place is in good shape, fit to run a reaper and mower, good orchard, well fenced, picket fence around orchard and front of lot with maple trees planted inside, good dwelling house, also good barn and out houses. Title good, no transfers from the crown. For further particulars apply on the premises to owner. ROBERT CLARK. Williamsford Station P. O. 209—211. Pd.

SEEDS SEEDS

— IMPORTED —

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

The place to buy your Seeds is at

PARKER'S,

Drugstore, - DURHAM.

AN ACROSTIC.
Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a mist
It's true, Lardine's the best
Nothing its equal, can't be
External its use, on every Use Lardine Machine Oil unexcelled for machinery, sold manufacturer, Toronto.

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL

CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS

Are pleasant to take. Contain no Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults

VISITORS TO OWEN SOUND

DON'T FAIL TO CALL AT

THE "BON MARCHE"

THEY HAVE THE

LARGEST, BEST and CHEAPEST

ASSORTMENT OF

CROCKERY

AND WILL SELL

Lower than the Town Houses.

Look at This

A GOOD ENGLISH-MADE

SERGE SUIT

(This is no Shoddy.)

BOYS' - - - - FROM $4
YOUTHS' - - - " 6
MENS' - - - - " 8

Everybody should look at the

Bon Marche

They sell everything at

ROCK BOTTOM PRICES

B. ALLEN'S old stand

OWEN SOUND

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and completeness wherever tried. An assortment of Furniture and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGIRR

New Butcher Shop

The best meats the country can afford kept on hand and

DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE TOWN WHERE ORDERED

A share of public patronage respectfully solicited.

Remember the stand in McNee's block.

W. H. RUTLEDGE

181

NOTICE.

TO ALL TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

A Chattle Mortgage, made by John Hewitt and Joseph Payne of the township of Glenelg, in the County of Grey, in favor of Alexander McPhee, of the same place, dated 22nd March, A.D. 1884, on certain stock and chattles mentioned in said mortgage, and for which the Mortgagee received no value. The public are hereby cautioned against purchasing said property as no value has been received for the same.

JOSEPH HEWITT,
JOSEPH PAYNE.

Dated Glenelg, 20th Sept., 1884.

ESTRAY.

FROM the premises of John Atkinson, Lot 8, Con. 8, Holland, about the 1st May, 8 head of yearlings—6 heifers and 2 steers, all spotted and grey.—Each one has a nick out in the left ear, and a hole through same ear, made with hot iron.

Any person giving such information as will lead to their recovery will be suitably rewarded.

JOHN ATKINSON,
Massie P. O.
114

Holland, Sept. 18, 1884.

WALTHAM,

ELGIN. SWISS

WATCHES.

LARGE STOCK OF CLOCKS
Quadruple Plated Ware
Wedding Rings, 18
RINGS, CHAINS, SEALS
Lazzarus & Morris and Specks, good Violin Strings Musical Instruments.

Careful and accurate repairing personally attended to and fully warranted.

Square Dealing. - Fair Prices

W. A. BROWN.
MARKDALE

Local and Other Items

NOTICES in these columns intended to be charged for, any individual or Society will be charged 10 cents a line for the first insertion and 5 cents a line each subsequent insertion.

DID any person see the eclipse?

FOR Sash, Doors and Mouldings go to grant & Co., Markdale.

DON'T forget the splendid show at Rae's hall on Saturday evening.

THE Weekly Mail to the end of 1885 for $1, subscription taken at STANDARD office.

A FINE speciman of North West Red man may be seen in J. Trimble's shop window.

FOR sideboards, dressing cases, bedsteads, lounges and cradles, go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

REV. MR. CASSON will preach a funeral sermon in the Methodist Church on Sunday at 10:30 o'clock on the occasion of the death of Mr. Thos. Irwin.

THE Weekly Globe for $1, to the end of 1885. Leave your name at this office.

IF the person who took the wrong parasol from the hall one day at the Exhibition will leave at the office to the Secretary, the owner will be exceedingly obliged.

THE Montreal Star will be sent to new subscribers from the 1st October '84 to the 1st January 1885 for 25c. Now is your time to secure the best family paper published; 15 months for $1. Subscribe at this office.

MISS BURCH calls attention to her new stock in Dress and Mantle Trimmings. Patterns etc., Dress and Mantle making promptly executed. Mantles a specialty. NOTE—Bargains in Millinery.

CALL at the STANDARD office if you want Bill Heads, Letter Heads, Envelopes, Blank Notes, Receipts, Business Cards, Shipping Tags, Sale Bills, Streamers, Dodgers, Circulars or anything from a calling card to a double sheet Poster.

REV. MR. CASSON will preach in the Presbyterian church, Markdale, on Sabbath next at 2:30 instead of 10:30 as announced, The change was made owing to the death of Mr. Thos. Irwin whose funeral sermon will be preached by Mr. Casson in the Methodist Church at 10:30.

SEE HERE.—If you have lost any cattle, sheep or other stock, or if any such have strayed into your premises advertise them at once in the STANDARD. This paper circulates largely through Artemesia, Glenelg, Holland, Euphrasia and Osprey townships.

CATTLE FAIR.—Markdale cattle fair last Saturday was a decided improvement on any former one. There were two buyers from Toronto, two from Owen Sound and a host of local dealers besides, all of whoom meant business. Some 250 head of fine cattle were on the fair ground, and ever $4,000 was paid for 125 out of that number.

THE Rev. Alfred Andrews, Sunday School Agent of the Guelph Methodist Conference, will visit the Euphrasia Methodist Mission on Monday 13 inst., and will lecture on "Sabbath School work." Meeting at New England at 10:30 a. m. and Ebeneze at 2:30 p. m. in addition to his lecture he will give a discription of the Tabernicle of Moses. Illustrated the same by charts and diagrams.

AN ACROSTIC.
Live to a good old age
And be wise as a sage
Read all you can
Doubt's dispel, like a man
It's true, Lardine's the Fe
Nothing its equal, cast's aside
External its use, as every sc machinery, sold manufacturer, McC
Toronto.

HAGYARD'S
YELLOW OI
CURES RHEUMATIS

FREEMAN'S
WORM POWDER
Are pleasant to take. Contain their Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effec destroyer of worms in Children or A

VISITORS TO OWEN S
DON'T FAIL TO CALL AT
THE "BON MARCH
THEY HAVE THE
LARGEST,
BEST and CHEAPE
ASSORTMENT OF
CROCKER
AND WILL SELL
Lower than the Toron Houses.

Look at Thi
A GOOD ENGLISH-MADE
SERGE SU
(This is no Shoddy,)
BOYS' - - - FROM $4
YOUTHS' - - " 6
MENS' - - - " 8
Everybody should look
at the
Bon March
They sell everything a
ROCK BOTTOM PRICES
ALLEN'S old sto
OWEN SOUND

SCHOOL TRUSTE undersigned is manufacturing a cellent assortment of
School Furniture
sting of SCHOOL SEATS and DE CHERS' DESKS, etc., of the and most approved pattern. B mended by School Trustees and T r cheapness, comfort and compac yer tried. An assortment of Farm l Bells kept always on hand. Sen gue to Chatsworth P. O.
ANDREW McGI

ew Butcher Sho best meats the country can pro hand and
VERED TO ALL PARTS
TOWN WHERE ORDERE are of public patronage respect ll.
ember the stand in McNeil's bloc
W. H. RUTLEDGE

NOTICE.
LL TO WHOM IT MAY CONCER
attle Mortgage, made by Jo witt and Joseph Payne of the t
Glenelg, in the County of Grey Alexander McPhee, of the ated 22nd March, A.D. 1884, tock and chattles mentioned in e, and for which the Mortgagee o value. The public are he d against purchasing said mort ue has been received for the sa
JOSEPH HEWIT
JOSEPH PAYNE
Glenelg, 20th Sept., 1884.

ESTRAY.
the premises of John Atkin
8, Con. 8, Holland, about the ead of yearlings—6 heifers a spotted and grey.—Each one h n the left ear, and a hole thro made with hot iron.
erson giving such information to their recovery will be suita
JOHN ATKINSON,
Maxwell P. O
Sept. 18, 1884. 111-1

WALTHAM,
ELGIN. SWISS
WATCHES.

LARGE STOCK OF CLOCKS,
Quadruple Plated Ware,
Wedding Rings, 18 k.,
RINGS,
CHAINS,
SEALS,
Lazzarus & Morris and Boss Specks, good Violin Strings, Musical Instruments.

Careful and accurate repairing personally attended to and fully warranted.

Square Dealing. - Fair Prices.

W. A. BROWN.
MARKDALE.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

Did any person see the eclipse ?

For Sash, Doors and Mouldings, go to grant & Co., Markdale.

Don't forget the splendid show in Rae's hall on Saturday evening.

The Weekly Mail to the end of 1885 for $1, subscription taken at the Standard office.

A fine speciman of North West Red man may be seen in J. R. Trimble's shop window.

For sideboards, dressing cases, bedsteads, lounges and cradles, go to Grant & Co., Markdale.

Rev. Mr. Casson will preach a funeral sermon in the Methodist Church on Sunday at 10:30 o'clock on the occasion of the death of Mr. Thos. Irwin.

The Weekly Globe for $1, to the end of 1885. Leave your name and subscription at this office.

If the person who took the wrong parasol from the hall one day of Exhibition will leave at the office of the Secretary, the owner will be exceedingly obliged.

The Montreal Star will be sent to new subscribers from the 1st October 84 to the 1st January 1886 for $1. Now is your time to secure the best family paper published; 15 months for $1. Subscribe at this office.

Miss Burch calls attention to her new stock in Dress and Mantle Trimmings. Patterns etc., Dress and Mantle making promptly executed. Mantles a specialty. Note—Bargains in Millinery.

Call at the Standard office if you want Bill Heads, Letter Heads, Envelopes, Blank Notes, Receipts, Business Cards, Shipping Tags, Sale Bills, Streamers, Dodgers, Circulars or anything from a calling card to a double sheet Poster.

Rev. Mr. Casson will preach in the Presbyterian church, Markdale, on Sabbath next at 2:30 instead of 10:30 as announced, The change was made owing to the death of Mr. Thos. Irwin whose funeral sermon will be preached by Mr. Casson in the Methodist Church at 10:30.

See here.—If you have lost any cattle, sheep or other stock, or if any such have strayed into your premises, advertise them at once in the Standard. This paper circulates largely through Artemesia, Glenelg, Holland, Euphrasia and Osprey townships.

Cattle Fair.—Markdale cattle fair last Saturday was a decided improvement on any former one. There were two buyers from Toronto, two from Owen Sound and a host of local dealers besides, all of whoom meant business. Some 250 head of fine cattle were on the fair ground, and over $4,000 was paid for 125 out of that number.

The Rev. Alfred Andrews, Sunday School Agent of the Guelph Methodist Conference, will visit the Euphrasia Methodist Mission on Monday, 13 inst., and will lecture on "Sabbath School work." Meeting at New England at 10:30 a. m. and Ebenezer at 2:30 p. m. in adittion to his lecture he will give a discription of the Tabernicle of Moses. Illustrated the same by charts and diagrams.

The St. Marys Carriage Manufacturing Company, an enterprise managed by capitalists of that town is meeting with great success, having sold already over twenty-three thousand shares. The surplus stock of the Company amounting to $106,000 will be divided on October 22nd. Shares are $2 each and all those desiring to participate in this Grand Division, should buy a share at once. Address: H. A. L. White, Sec'y., St. Marys.

*112-115

In the report of Glenelg Council Minutes which appeared three weeks ago the following paragraph appeared which was somewhat misleading "The Reeve and Mr. Neil reported on the dangerous condition of the road at Barrdead Mills, the council granted $225; towards putting the road in good condition. The proprietor of the mill agreeing to remove the Sawmill for that amount." The above is the total amount for the right-of-way, and the proprietor has agreed to remove the mill and clear the road without further compensation.

Cute.—A citizen says: We had the fun of witnessing rather a "cute" trick this week; a farmer sold a load of hay; after unloading he returned to weigh the wagon when the buyer noticed that the absent minded farmer had forgotten the binding pole, (a 75 lb. sapling) and also that he himself had been on the hay when weighed, after being thoroughly reminded of those minor matters the pole was fetched and weighed together with the man which made a difference in favor of the buyer of 230 lbs. such exhibitions of absent mind, and rustic innocense should have publicity.

Coming.—The celebrated Comedian R. H. Baird, supported by an excellent Company, will give an entertainment in Rae's hall Markdale on Saturday evening next, 11th, under the auspices of A. O. U. W. of this place. "To please all and offend none" is Mr. Baird's Motto. The piece selected for this occasion is "Joshua Whitcomb." This Company has received very flattering notices wherever they have played, see what the Barrie Advance says:—"Nip and Tuck was played by the Bijou Comedy and Dramatic Company in the Barrie town hall on Tuesday night. The audience, which was a large one for this time of the year, was thoroughly appreciative and many times applauded the performances of the actors. Miss Voughan and Messrs. Baird and Mulligan are excellent on the stage, and made during the course of the evening many hits. The Company was successful enough to warrant them in again appearing here, and we shall shortly have the pleasure of announcing their reappearance. The remainder of the cast was good."

Honor Roll S. S. No. 8. Artemesia.

4th class—(Total 702 marks)—Esther McNally 409, Alice Nicholson 349, Bella Thompson 338.

3rd class—(Total 648)—Hannah Stafford 547, Charlie Stafford 501, George McNally 227.

2nd class—(Total 624)—Eleanor McKee 458, Sarah McKee 407, Elsie McKee 263.

2nd part first—(Total 524)—Annie Gamey 372 Annie Badgers 256 Sammy McNally 198.

Elsie Inkster,
Teacher.

September.

Honor Roll for month September, S. S. No. 6, Holland

First class—Mary Brown, Willie Smith.

Part second—Minnie David, Annie Smith, Louis Heslip, Robt. Sanderson.

Second A—Robbie Welsh, Ida Allen.

Second B—Sarah Brown, Mamie Welsh, Emma Ewart, Lizzie Ritchie.

Second C—Sadie Rowe, Bella Gillespie, Willie Sanderson.

Third A—Albert Allen, Letita Sanderson, James Blaney.

Third B—George McNeely, Maggie Montgomery, Herbert Ewart.

Fourth class—Addie Allen, John Sargent, Mattie Gillespie.

E. J. Bailey,
Teacher.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions received at this office for any of the following papers to the end of 1885 for one dollar in advance each, viz: Markdale Standard, Toronto Weekly Mail, Weekly Globe, Montreal Star, Montreal Witness, or the Farmers, Advocate. Now is the time to subscribe and get the balance of this year free.

Credit Sale.

Mr. McLaughlin Lot 14, con. 12 Holland is giving up farming in this section and will sell his farm of 100 acres, and the following property without reserve on Tuesday the 14th October commencing at one o'clock, 1 pair matched Horses, steel grey, rising 4 years; 4 Milch Cows; 2 Steers, rising 2 years; 3 Heifers, rising 1 year; 1 Steer, rising 1 year; 1 Brood Sow; 7 young Pigs; 1 Waggon, new; 1 Buggy, nearly new; 1 pair Sleighs, new; 1 Boss Gang Plough, new; 1 Stubble Plough; 1 Monarch Fanning Mill, new; 1 Massey Rake, new; 1 Set Harrows; 1 Set Team Harness; 1 Set Single Harness; 1 Hay Rack; 1 Stoneboat; 1 Grinding Stone; 1 Grain Cradle; 1 good Cooking Stove, new; 1 Wanzer C Sewing Machine; Tables, Chairs, Bedstead, Churn, Milk Pans, Pails, Tub, etc., etc.

Whiffletrees, Neckyoke, Forks, hoer, Shovel, Chain, and other articles too numerous to mention. Terms of Farm $200 on day of sale, $400 on 1st of Febuary next, balance secured by Mortgage at 7 per cent. For Hay and Pigs, $10 and under, cash; over that amount 15 months credit on approved joint notes.

The Chatsworth correspondent to the O. S. Advertiser says:—"There appears to be real desperadoes about fifty sideroad in Holland. Mr. Robt. Carter, a quiet, inoffensive farmer of that neighborhod was shot at by two of them a few evenings ago and had a very narrow escape with his life. The bullet grazed his forehead, cutting its track through the skin. It appears that when he came in, in the evening his children informed him there were two men up stairs. Immediately making his way up, he just got there in time to see them escape through the window. It was later in the night, while standing in front of the door, that a shot was fired at him from behind a pump platform in front of the house. Mr. Carter has always more or less money about him and it was doubtless this the scoundrels were after. This is the second attempt that has been made to rob him."

About a month ago considerable stir was caused in the northwestern part of Toronto where the news spread that Johnathan Madell, builder, of Lippincott street, had eloped with Mrs. Martin, organist in the College street Babtist church. Madell sung in the choir. The tuneful pair were both married and had two children each. They disappeared suddenly, and their exact whereabout could not be ascertained. At 2.30 Sunday morning they put in an appearance at their respective homes, and as both were truly penitent they were welcomed back, promising never to do it again. Both were heartily ashamed of themselves and were covered with grief, not only for their own conduct, but also for the sorrow they have brought on their families.

BIRTHS.

Sarjeant—On the 5th October, at Hawkstone, Co. Simcoe, the wife of Mr. Fred Sarjeant, of a son.

Apprentice Wanted.

To learn blacksmithing, a smart stout boy A good opportunity to learn the business. Apply to Thos. Sargent, Berkeley. 113-15

WANTED.

Sealed tenders will be received up to the 25th October for "care taker" of the Societies; Hall, to light fires, light and clean lamps, &c., for three seperate lodges. A member of one of the orders preferred. Apply at this office where specifications of duties to be performed can be seen. 113-15

WANTED.

3 Teachers for Markdale Public School, duties to commence 1st January next, one male holding second, and two females with third class certificates. Give Salary wanted and grade of certificate held. Applications taken up to 1st of November

B. COLEMAN,
Secretary.
Markdale, Ont.

213-15

Notice to Contractors.

A Committee of the Glenelg council, consisting of the Reeve, Deputy-Reeve and Mr. McCuaig will attend at Saugeen Bridge, 1½ miles east of Durham, on Saturday, the 25th October, 1884, at 2 p. m., to let contract of re-building said bridge. Plans and Specifications may be seen at Thos. Davis, Esq's lot 2, con. 3, N. D. R., on and after the 10th inst.

By order of Com.,

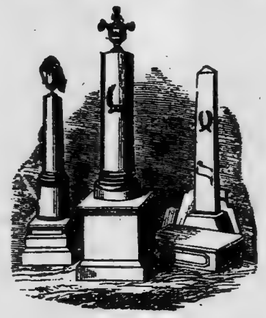
J. S. BLACK,
Clerk.

Glenelg Oct. 7th 1884.

INVALUABLE TO EVERY LADY!

"MAY DEW"

The Great French Lotion for Beautifying the Face.



It conceals the evidence of age. One application will make the most stubbornly red and rough hands beautifully soft and white. Remember that "MAY DEW" is not a paint or powder that fills up the pores of the skin, and that is injurious to the skin, but a new and great discovery, a vegetable liquid, that causes the cheek to glow with health, the neck, arms and hands to rival the Lily in whiteness. Impossible to detect in the beauty it confers any artificial character. It cures greasy Skin, Freckles, Wrinkles, Pimples, Black Heads, Crow's Feet, Blotches, Face Grubs, Sun Burn, Tan, Ringworm, Chapped Hands, Sore or Chapped Lips, Barber's Itch, Tetter, etc. It frees the pores, oil glands, and tubes from the injurious effects of powders and cosmetic washes. By its use all redness and roughness are prevented; it beautifies the skin, and will make it soft, smooth and white; imparting a delicious softness; imparting a perfectly healthy, natural and youthful appearance. The best face lotion that the world ever produced. We will send "A large bottle" to any address on receipt of price, $1. When ordering mention this paper.

Address all letters to the MAY DEW AGENCY, 167 Church Street, Toronto, Ont. Parlor and Reception Room for Ladies.

Trade Mark.

OFFICE OF THE

Flesherton Marble

And Granite Works.

E. VANZANT.

All kinds of Marble and Monumental Works, such as Monuments, Tomb Tables, Headstones, Counter and Table Tops,—in American and Italian Marble, and made on short notice. Also Mantles in Marble and Marbeleized Slate, &c., &c.

Satistaction Guaranteed in Every Respect

ROBT. S. RAE, Sydenham St., Markdale. TAILOR,

Toronto House.

We are now showing special drives in New, Stylish and Fashionable

Dress Goods, Mantle Cloths,
Laces, Trimmings, Buttons, Hosiery,
LADIES & GENTS UNDERCLOTHING ETC.

TWEEDS, CANADIAN, SCOTCH and WEST of ENGLAND for Men's and Boys' Suits, Overcoats and Garments—Cheap, Fashionable and Stylish.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

For all ages and conditions from the heavy Stoga to the finest Kid. These goods are unsurpassed—price, value and quality considered.

We invite special attention to our
BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED TEA SETS,
Suitable for Wedding Gifts or Birthday Presents.

TEAS A Spesialty from 15c to 60c per lb. Every grade. Splendid value. TEAS.

Give us a call. Examine & compare goods & prices.

Markdale, Sept. 1, 1884. 109-tf

WM. BROWN.

A SAILOR'S GHOST STORY.

the Swede and the Man who Haunted Him.

"I have never yet seen a ghost, but I think I have been taken for a ghost, and unless I am out of my reckoning there's a man, if he is still alive, who has been haunted by me these 30 years." So said an intelligent looking man who represented himself as the second mate of an East Indian clipper one day recently in the office of a South street chandler shop. There was much in the remark to excite curiosity, and the man who had undergone the strange experience referred to was begged to spin his yarn, which he readily consented to do.

"About thirty years ago—perhaps more," he began. "I was in London, where I landed a lad of 15 after my first voyage. It was the time of the gold fever out in Australia, but I wasn't anxious then to go to the diggings so I shipped on a bark of about 800 tons that was bound for Singapore. The skipper was the greatest tyrant I have ever sailed under, and his mate was nearly as bad as him. Both were Englishmen, I am sorry to say, because I'm English myself. The second mate was a decent enough fellow, I thought, but he didn't seem to be of much account on board. The skipper and the mate thrashed me every now and then, but I was a hardy youngster, and managed to stand it. The chap who came in for the most thrashings was a Spanish sailor we called Antone. He took the lickings quietly, but at times he looked mighty revengeful. There was a big, heavy-built sailor that we called Pete the Swede. Somehow neither the mate or captain ever tackled him. Early one afternoon, when we had got into the Straits of Malacca, and were, as we understood, within less than a day's sail of Singapore, Antone dropped a bucket of slush on the clean deck. The skipper and mate knocked him down and, springing upon him, and began to pound him. Suddenly the skipper sprang up and I saw blood spurting out of a gash in his side. He staggered forward on his knees, and, seizing his own knife, plunged it into Antone. The latter was then struggling with the mate. Several of the watch ran up and pulled the two apart. But there was a wound near the heart of the mate which had been made by the knife of Antone. The latter was stone dead, and the skipper and mate never spoke again. The mate did not live 10 minutes, while the skipper died within thirty minutes.

"The second mate was called on deck by one of the sailors, but he did not get up in time to see the stabbing. All hands, of course, debated as to what we should do. The second mate was entitled to take command, but he had little to say in the matter. Pete the Swede did all the ordering, and every one obeyed him. We had been running close to the wind, but Pete had the yards squared and we stood in toward the shore. We all went afoul that the man at the wheel could have his say in the council of war. The crew were divided, Pete and the majority wanted to scuttle the bark and to divide the money in the cabin, and to leave it to be supposed that the bark had been lost in a storm. The second mate agreed with Pete. The carpenter said that we ought to keep on our regular course until we fell in with a pilot and to report the killing of the skipper and mate. Pete said our story would never be believed. We would probably all be arrested, and perhaps hanged on the charge of mutiny. The carpenter had only the steward, cook, one able seaman, and myself to back him, while Pete and the second mate had eight men besides themselves on their side. We were rapidly getting in toward the shore, but we were leaving the track of other vessels and of the pilots. The carpenter protested against this, but Pete kept on just the same. Shortly afterwards soundings showed about 10 fathoms of water, and Pete ordered one of the anchors to be let go. The sails was simply clewed up, and no attempt was made to furl them. The matter was talked over again, but the carpenter's party still held out. Pete went into the cabin and burst open the locker where the money was kept. He said that there was several thousand pounds, and that we had only got to divide it up evenly. The carpenter called us that were backing him to one side and told us that we had better pretend to give in. I noticed at the time that Pete and some of his men were looking at us suspiciously.

"We agreed to the carpenter's proposal with the understanding that as soon as we got in to Singapore to report the matter to the proper authorities. Pete said that before we divided the money we had better lower the long boat and drop it astern. Weights were then made fast to the bodies of the three dead men and they were dropped overboard, and the deck where they did the killing was washed up. It was getting near dark, and Pete said that we could not very well scuttle the bark before morning, and proposed that we should break into the stores and get a drink or two. Then I felt myself suddenly seized from behind. I was overpowered and my hands tied. I looked around and saw that the carpenter and his other three backers were in the same fix. We were walked to the forward hatch, which was opened and were pushed down into the hold. Pete the Swede said as he put down the hatch over us: 'I don't want to kill you fellows, but I can't trust you; if we hit on a plan to-night for saving you we'll give you a chance when we scuttle the bark.' Then we found ourselves in the dark. We knew that we were in a tight fix, but while there was life there was hope. We turned to and helped one another until we got our hands free. Then we sat down on the boxes of cargo and talked our case over. We could hear occasional yells, which showed us that the men had got at the whisky and were making the most of it. The steward said there was a good deal of it in the cabin, and he was afraid that the men wouldn't be apt to deal kindly with us while they were in liquor.

"The hold was filled with bales and boxes of cargo up to within a few feet of the forward end where a bulkhead of heavy boxes left a place where you could climb down into the fore peak. Here we supposed was where they would go to work to scuttle the bark. 'I wish I had my tools here,' said the carpenter. 'What good would they do you—would you scuttle the bark now?' asked the cook. 'No,' says the carpenter, 'but I could cut a hole through the planking here for one of us to crawl through, and swim aft to the boat. Then he could bring her around here, and we could all climb out into her and escape.' The cook seized the carpenter and said, 'I saw them putting in the cargo at London, and they stowed right down here about twenty carpenters' chests.' In just one second we five were groping around for that sort of cargo. In about two minutes the carpenter found a chest under some bales. We got this out and broke it open, and the carpenter felt for the tools he wanted. 'We must wait a bit,' said he 'they'll all be dead drunk in a little while, and no one will be on the lookout.' The shouts of Pete's gang soon stopped altogether. Then the carpenter slid down into the fore peak with his tools. He decided on a spot which he thought was a little above watermark and went to work. It took him some time to start a place for his saw to begin work. In the meantime we listened, ready to warn him in case any of Pete's gang came to the fore hatch. The carpenter's saw was music to us. Finally we saw a ray of what looked like light, although it was long after dark. We all climbed down into the fore peak, and the cook undressed, and, putting a knife in his teeth, got through the hole the carpenter had made and dropped into the water and swam away. It seemed an age while we listened for the sound of an oar. Frequently water would dash through the hole on to us, but we paid no attention to it. Finally the sound of an oar reached us, and the cook came round with the boat, into which we all got. He told us that he had cut the painter close to the boat. Then we rowed away. I'll never forget the black hull of that bark as it looked when we began to draw away from it.

"There was a little bread and water in the boat, but no compass, and no one knew the coast. We soon rested on our oars and drifted about. It was probably then a little before midnight. It was clear, but no moon was out. Toward morning the sea grew rough and we had to bail out the boat with our hats several times. As soon as day broke we began to look about for some passing vessel. The land seemed to lay about as it did the afternoon before, and we steered toward it. In a moment one of us noticed two poles sticking out of the water. We got nearer to them and could make out the fore and main royal masts of the bark. We could tell them by the gilt balls at the ends. The bark was scuttled and the hole we made had done done the business. 'They might have done it themselves,' said the carpenter. 'Not as long as the whisky lasted,' said the steward. We concluded that the men had remained in a drunken stupor until the ship in sinking, had heeled over to one side, and then water had filled the cabin, drowning every one there. We agreed that we did not intend to drown the fellows and our consciences did not trouble us. The carpenter might have cut the hole a little higher up, but we all thought he ought to be excused for his mistake. And we didn't mourn much for Pete and his gang. We got in close to the shore, but found no place where we thought it safe to land. So we rowed along keeping the land in sight, until it was nearly evening, when we found ourselves approaching the harbor of Singapore.

"A sailing vessel came along and we hailed her. The Captain agreed to take us in tow, and asked few questions. He may have taken us for a pleasure party which we were not. The vessel dropped anchor well in the harbor, but it was late at night before we reached the quay. We agreed to say nothing about the loss of the bark to any one until we had reported to the agent, whose name the steward knew. We were making inquiries along a street fronting on the water when the carpenter pointed out a public house on the corner a little way ahead and told me to ask the people there if they knew where our agent could be found. As I came up to the public house I mistook the window on the side street for the door. The latter was on the main street. But as the latter was open I looked in. At the bar stood a large man drinking. I looked at him closely and saw that it was Pete the Swede. He laid down his glass and glanced toward the window just outside of which I stood. When he saw me his eyes seemed to stick out of his head and his hair seemed to stand on end while he shook like a leaf. I stood looking at him. I was frightened out of my senses and I must have stood like a block of stone or a ghost. I didn't know whether to cry out or run. Pete looked at me for a few seconds and then backed slowly away, keeping his eyes on me till he reached the door. Then I heard steps as if some one was running. I waited for a moment and then went in to the public house and asked if any one knew where our agent stopped. No one there did. I went back to the carpenter and told him what I had seen. We concluded that the whole gang had escaped. We kept up our search until nearly morning before we could find the agent. We told our story, and he tried to have Pete and his gang arrested. All the vessels bound for Australia were searched during the next day, but we afterwards found that Pete and his fellows paid their passage on a ship bound for Europe, which sailed early in the morning after I had appeared to Pete the Swede. That made it seem as if the fellows had got away with the money in the cabin. The agent gave us our wages and shipped us on a bark bound to Melbourne, where we separated, all but the cook and I going to the diggings. We made up our minds that the fellows come to just before the bark sunk, and that they launched one of the other boats, thinking that the painter of the one lowered the day before had parted. They probably thought the bark had in swinging struck a rock, and that we were still in the fore hold when the bark went down. They couldn't have dreamed of our cutting our way out. They knew the coast better than we, so that accounted for their getting into Singapore before us.

'Pete must have taken me for a ghost as I stood in the dark just outside the window of the lighted taproom of the public house. Somehow the real facts about the loss of the vessel didn't get out. It was generally believed that she was wrecked. And I believe that Pete and the fellows of his gang took care afterwards to give a wide berth to Singapore, and rarely said anything to strangers about the voyage that came so near winding up with the drowning of them. And I have no doubt, up to the present day, if he's alive, Pete the Swede once in a while sees just outside some public house window the ghost of a lad in whose death he believes he bore a hand."

"Will you have your oysters scalloped?" asked the waiter at an Austin restaurant, of a green customer. "Have the oysters scalped? Has every thing in the restaurant got hair on it? Why don't you scalp the butter?"

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Interesting Items About Prominent People.

Alma-Tadema contributes to the Royal Academy Exhibition of Berlin a life-size portrait of his daughter. A shell necklace encircles her neck, and she wears a gray dress.

A daughter of Dr. Pavy, the physician of the Graely expedition, who died at Cape Sabin, lives, in Paris Kentucky. She is a little girl, and her father left no money for her support.

President Arthur is talked of for the presidency of Union College after his reign at Washington. He is a graduate of the institution, and it elected will still be President Arthur.

"I would sooner have the cordial support of the women in an audience than the men," says Mr. Robert Mantell, the actor; "first, because they lead the men, and secondly, because they are always able to catch the finer points of a play more quickly than the coarser part of the audience."

Mr. Myone, Foreign Minister of Japan, lives in a beautiful cottage in the neighborhood of Tokio. It is furnished partly in the European style. The hard woods used in the interior are highly polished. The coloring of the walls would please a French artist.

The celebrated English painter G. F. Watts, whose highly imaginative works are soon to be exhibited, was the first husband of Ellen Terry. He did not suit the charming actress, and she left him for an architect named Godwin. Her present husband is an actor named Charles Kelly, with whom, however, she does not live,

Mr. Hurbert Herkomer is building a mediæval tower at Lech, Bavaria, his birth-place. It will contain five rooms, and be used as a studio. Many of its decorative pieces will be of hammered iron, Mr. Herkomer, like Mr. Louis C. Tiffany, having a keen appreciation of the artistic possibilities of that metal, as well as a practical acquaintance with them.

Miss Cobbe thinks that the position of women is improving. Fifty years ago, one Ash-Wednesday, in England, she heard the principal of a young ladies' school tell her pupils, after giving them salt fish and roast mutton for dinner, that fasting was very meritorious, and that they were free to take meat or not, as they pleased, but that it was to be hoped that they would fast—it would be good for their souls and their figures.

Miss Anderson has been telling a London reporter that during her late tour of six weeks in Edinburgh, Glasgow, Manchester, Liverpool, Dublin, and Birmingham, she met "audiences of a generous and enthusiastic character, and my efforts to please them were recognized most cordially. The Scotch people I found more eager and responsive than I had expected them to be; they are not cold people but equally warm-hearted and intellectual."

De Nittis, the Italian painter, who died recently in Paris, was told by King Humbert a few years ago that "Italian artists should work at Rome on Roman subjects," "Sire," he replied, "had I remained in Rome I surely should not enjoy the reputation I have. It is to Paris that I owe the pleasure of being claimed by Italians as a compatriot." This story is of a kind to be appreciated by American artists who have been successful abroad.

Frenchmen claim that the inventor of the steamboat was not Robert Fulton, but one of their own countrymen, Jouffroy. They raised a statue to his memory at Besancon on the 18th of August, in which he is represented as standing thoughtful, with one hand on his first steam engine. The Minister of Public Worki, who unveiled the statute, coupled the names of Jouffroy and De Lesseps—the one the inventor of the steamboat, the other the enlarger of the sphere of its use.

William Earl Dodge, grandson of William E Dodge, and a member of the firm of Phelps, Dodge, & Co., who died recently at Riverdale, New York, in his twenty-sixth year, was a graduate of Princeton, and at his funeral Dr. McCoth said: "He was the most influential man in his class, and he was one of the few students with whom I conferred as to class matters. I had anticipated for him a long career of usefulness, and looked upon him as the one on whom his venerated grandfather's mantle had fallen."

Du Maurier's studio is described as lighted by two large mullioned windows. An Indian matting dado runs around its walls, and above this a sage green paper, adorned with mythic forms or fruit. The carved stone chimney-piece supports a reduction of the Venus of Milo, and a pedestal clock of ancient date ticks on a bracket. There is a semi-grand piano of oak and brass, at which the artist and many of his friends have often "uttered themselves in song." The orange-tawny skin of his famous dog Chang, nearly eight feet long from tip to tip, hangs opposite. Du Maurier's lasting affection for that fine brave beast is well known.

The "King of Cyprus," as he entitled himself, has died in St. Petersburg. His name was Colonel Louis de Lusignan, and his descent was from the Crusaders and Lusignans of France. A soldier in the Russian army, he nevertheless preserved the hope of becoming King of Cyprus and Armenia, and advanced his claims with the persistency of a Henry V, as often as a crisis arose in the affairs of the Ottoman Empirer. When Lord Beaconsfield attached Cyprus to the English Empire he issued a solemn protest, and demanded from Turkey a bonus of $100,000 000 for the surrender of his rights. He was an excellent specimen of the almost extinct species of royal pretenders.

The late Duke of Wellington, son of the Iron Duke, says that the famous words attributed to his father, "Up, Guards, and at them," were really uttered by Lord Saltoun, or rather that the latter's correct words were, "Up, Guards, and grow low." The Iron Duke's horse, Copenhagen, came from Spain, and was ridden by the great soldier during all his Spanish campaigns. When the animal was buried in Strathfieldsaye Park, England, the old Duke, then very infirm and feeble, surprised his family and servants by appearing at the ceremony. He had one of his hoofs made into an inkstand.

The famous French chemist M. Chevreul, now ninety-nine years old, has told a friend "the secret of long living." "I have never been a pessimist," he says, "and I have cautiously kept myself from being too much of an optimist. Let us not trouble ourselves about tomorrow. Let us enjoy the present. I had a model of a wife, the mother of a most exemplary family. She has left me a posterity that I love, and by whom I am loved. Why, one of my little great-granddaughters—she is three years old—salutes the bust of her old great-grandfather every morning. I have always put in practice the adage, 'Seek and ye shall find.' I have sought and I have always found something, at the domestic fireside as well as in the laboratory."

Optical Illusions.

Many of you know about optical Illusions and the curious mistakes which the eye sometimes makes concerning an object at which it is looking; but few of us know how frequently we ourselves are the victims of optical illusions of one sort or another. The fact is, we see nearly as much with our experience as we see with our eyes. We know an object to be of a certain form in one position, and of a certain color in one light: and we are too apt to fancy that we see it of that form and color in all positions and lights regardless of the fact that, seen from another stand point, the contour of it may appear entirely different, and that a different light may totally change the color of it. We all know that the actual color of clean boots is black, and a beginner in painting almost always paints them perfectly black, whereas the direct rays of the sun or of an artificial light may make them appear nearly white in parts, while it they be placed near some bright substance, such as a piece of orange-peel, or a crimson scarf, they will reflect the color of that object, and so become orange or red in parts and an expert painter would so represent them. We hear people speak of "the white of the eye," and beginners with the brush often give a very ghastly expression to their attempts at portraiture by painting the white of the eye pure white; whereas owing to the projection of the brows, the lids, and the lashes, it is often thrown into deep shade, and may be even darker than some of the flesh tints. Now, if their eyes were trained like those of a skilled artist, they would know the true color of all objects they beheld. But this is the very hardest thing an artist has to learn, namely, to know really what he does see.

In coloring almost everything depends upon the nature of the light. A white handkerchief is black in a dark room. An excellent aid to the study of color is to take a white card, and with your paints try to match on it some tint in any oil-painting, chromo, or even colored fabric which you may have, Then cut a small hole in the card adjoining your tint, and place the card over the tint you have copied, so that you can see it through the hole, side by side with your own attempt. Then you will see at once how nearly you have matched the tint.

Monte Carlo.

It is impossible that evils so gigantic as the gaming establishments at Monte Carlo should long outlive the chorus of reprobation they have aroused. I am reluctant that they should expire without having lifted a finger to aid in their subversal Europe in the last century was studded with gambling resorts. Apart from the public gaming tables at Baden, Homburg, or elsewhere, there was scarcely a watering place, or a place of Summer resort like Grenoble or Aix, where a man burdened with loose cash might not find a congregation of gamblers and chevaliers d'industrie ready to ease him of it. Slowly public opinion has put down public gambling as immoral, and now Monte Carlo is a solitary representative of one of the most mischievous of human institutions. Gorged with the spoils of its predecessors, it stands a moral pesthouse. In the midst of the loveliest scenery Europe can boast, in the chief health resorts of the South, it remains a centre of contagion. Seventeen million francs it annually draws from its victims, which means, according to the calculations which cannot be disputed, that between £20 000,000 and £30,000,000 are annually won and lost at the tables. The difficulty seems to be how to get at the owner. If a principling were to maintain in Europe—and close to such countries as Italy, France and Switzerland, practically Spain also—a physical pesthouse, a seat of disease whence smallpox or cholera spread to adjoining countries, he would find himself compelled to put his house in order. A collective remonstrance from the powers would, in such case, bring about an immense change. If not, the process described by an Eastern Prince as that he would employ to England if he went to war with it might be recommended, and an army of sappers and miners might be sent to tumble the entire Principality into the sea.

The Bantu Negro and His God.

I believe that much that is said about fetich-worship rests on no solid foundation; neither a kind of worship nor any serious service is addressed to the harmless toy we call a fetich, but only a mysterious good or evil spirit is fancied to dwell within it. A negro, as is his habit, is sitting and thinking about nothing. Casually he casts his eye upon a knotty limb of strange growth that may bear some indistinct resemblance to a human face. Amused at it, he takes a knife and makes an effort to help out Nature by scratching the nose, mouth and eyes into plainer prominence. At last the thing appears so curious that he concludes he will take it home and set it up before his hut. It becomes his "fetich," and grins to-day pleasantly, to-morrow with a cross air, at him. To heighten the effect, he paints it red around the eyes, or adorns it with bright ornaments. In some such way as this, I believe, we may explain the origin of the first images of the gods, new illustrations of which we may still observe to be brought before us from time to time. I do not regard the process as a religious one, but rather as an instance of the development of the first idea of art.

They Were Marked Down.

Old Moneybagge stood in front of his store the other morning, hanging a "reduced price" mark on several rolls of carpeting. Along comes Harris, and him to Moneybagge:

"Those ain't feathers."

"Well, who said they was?" retorted Moneybaggs, with ungrammatical testiness.

"Why, you; that is, you've marked them down."

And Moneybaggs fell through a plate-glass window with a sickening thud.

Thus it is shown that every man will have his joke, feather it be good or feather it be evil.—[Rockland Courier Gazette.

SCIENTIFIC ITEMS.

In twenty years the sales of stock ages of patent medicines in Great have increased from 6 661,057 to 18,

Scientists propose to employ as a emergency power for ships of war into which petroleum is sprayed superheated steam and hot air.

Diphtheria has recently been observed pigeons in Germany. According to veterinary reports the disease is and highly contagious.

Professor Ball, the Astronomer Royal Ireland, in an address on comets, ed that the meteoroids seen as shooting in 1866 were actually the remains of comets.

Dr. Et. Guenot reports that he moved a large crop of warts the hands of a patient by giving daily grain dose of calcined magnesia in the ing before breakfast.

The Lancet informs a correspondent "the possibility, nay the certainty, in cases, of flies being a medium of especially in warm climates, has peatedly pointed out, though perhaps fact is not sufficiently borne in mind.

Struve upholds Dr. Bedent's that only cream should be used earliest nourishment of young brought up by hand, as the digestibility any milk is inversely as the quantity casein which remains in the skim milk.

The Gazette Medicale de l' Algerie tention to a great number of facts pear to show that cider drinkers troubled with stone, and that patients ing this affection are either cured relieved by that beverage.

According to Professor Young the portion of the sun is probably for the part a mass of heated gases, the is a sheil of luminous clouds, the sphere is composed mainly of incandescent gases, and what constitutes the entirely unknown.

According to the Journal de Medicine Brussels, if the normal temperature of kind were 1,000, that of a moderate would be represented by 1,008, and normal pulse under like circumstances increase to 1,180. The heart is overto just the extent represented by the figures.

Tabulated results of 250 experiments forty-two distinct explosive compounds were published in March by MM. Berthelot and Vieille, of the Academy of Paris, bearing on the amount of pressure veloped at the moment of explosion, temperature produced, and the specific of the gases, especially those of the pound ones, at various temperatures.

A recent writer on the emotions of says curiosity shows itself the minute a begins to take interest in other things sides its food, and when, though it carries everything to its mouth, it does merely because the tongue is the finest well as the most exercised organ of touch. At this stage the child handles things, at them closely, pulls them to pieces, in playing instructs itself.

The height and velocity of clouds determined by means of photography. cameras are placed 600 feet apart and vided with instantaneous shutters, are released by electricity at the same ment. The angle of inclination of cameras, and the position of the cloud photographed are thus obtained, and trigonometrical operations give the distance from those data.

The microscope reveals that there more than 4 000 muscles in a caterpillar and that the eye of a drone contains mirrors. There are spiders as small grain of sand, and they spin a thread so that it would require 400 of them to the size of a single hair.

According to the Journal of the Society la Chimie Industrelle, bituminous coal fire at 392° F., coke at 482° and anthracite at 578° F. This spontaneous combustion has been attributed to the presence of phate of iron, but recent experiments demonstrate that the coals absorb oxygen, ignite quicker than the sulphate, and the rate of this absorption depends entirely upon the temperature and other conditions or the air and upon the size of the coal.

The Chicago Druggist recommends following for the cure of severe scalds burns: Cover the injured parts freely softsoap. If the burn be severe apply after linseed oil, with a plentiful dredge of flour. This cakes on, and fresh oil flour can be added. When this corrugated falls off a new skin will have formed, scar left. Carron oil is also regarded as excellent remedy where the skin is unbroken care, of course, being taken to exclude air from the injured part.

Sir J. Freyer inclines to the belief notwithstanding the fact of the toothless upper jaw, deer do actually consume shed horns. He picked up recently at deer forest at Dunrobin, Scotland, a which appeared to show that it had been great part eaten away, and this, it was the belief also of the members of Zoological Society of London, to whom recently exhibited the gnawed specimen. The marks on the horn are such as would made by the broad incisors of the lower and here scientific observation seems to firm popular opinion.

The Popular Science News says that agreeable beverage known as champagne according to a French recipe, made as lows: Take sixty gallons of water; add pounds of ginger cut in small pieces, gently boil for half an hour, carefully moving any froth that may arise. Cool liquor as quickly as possible, and when a blood-heat (100° F.) add nine pounds raisins chopped fine and the juice of dozen oranges and six dozen lemons. Allow the liquid to ferment, and after standing month it may be bottled in the usual manner. If desired, the ginger may be omitted and the number of oranges increased to eighteen dozen.

Must be Distinguished.

"Who is that old gentleman going down the beach?"

"I don't know, but he must be a distinguished personage."

"Are you sure?"

"Oh, I know it."

"But what do you judge by?"

"The fact that no one knows him, his name does not appear in any of the side papers.—[Philadelphia Call.

AGRICULTURAL.

...creasing the number of cattle does ...arily imply decrease in the amount ...grown, as very many suppose, ...ly decrease in the number of bushels ...coarser grains sold. It means increase ...the amount of grain grown, whenever ...on sense is exercised in the care of ...e, but usually on a less acreage sown ...h should be welcome tidings to the farmer ...who very well knows that the main ...ence between the cost of labor expended ...a good crop and a poor one mainly consists ...in the handling.

...stock-raising it is of the utmost importance ...to make the most of the pasture-land ...ro to manage it as to get from it the ...est possible returns. Many portions ...ura-land possessing a soil of undying ...lity, are comparatively valueless from ...of drainage. We feel curious to get an ...roximate idea of the amount of land ...er pasturage in the Dominion that ...in a manner lying waste. At some ...ons the draining of these lands would be ...nded with much difficulty from the ...essing a great excess of moisture; but ...so during the months of September and ...ber, when there is less of water on the ...the surface than during any other ...ths of the year. Draining should therefore ...be pushed vigorously forward during ...e months, as no investment can be made ...will so well repay the outlay. It is also ...well to spend a few days at fairs, but ...usually a serious matter to spend weeks ...y at a season when a greater variety of ...r can be done, to better advantage, than ...y other. Prizes may be paid for at too ...a rate. If you can do nothing more ...in at least one main drain, which cannot ...from the result to stimulate to higher ...er.

Earthing up Celery.

...ere is a way to earth up celery to ...ch: First, the earth is worked up to ...with the hands, the leaves being held close ...ther with one hand; this is what is ...ed handling. Then it is allowed to ...for a week or ten days, when common ...n wrapping paper is wrapped around ...talks and tied with twine, and the earth ...orked up to within one inch of the top ...e paper. In about a week or ten days ...wrapped and tied as before, and the ...h is partially worked up to the top of ...paper. In a short time it will be blanched ...fficiently for use, which may be known ...the blanched stalks growing out at the ...of the paper. For crispness, tenderness, ...fine flavor, I think celery grown in this ...cannot be excelled. Certainly, it takes ...k to tie and wrap it, but I think all lovers ...his excellent vegetable will feel repaid ...the extra work when they have eaten it ...ted in this fashion.

Keep the Best.

The New York Tribune says that one ...ital error—because a waste of capital on ...farm—is to keep poor horses and cows. ...50 horse is not worth one-fourth as much ...one that is worth $100. It will eat as ...h and cost as much for harness, and will ...her do as much work nor live so long. ...$20 cow, that makes three pounds of ...ter in a week, costs as much for every-...g, labor and utensils included, as one ...th $100 that makes 10 pounds a week. ...other error is to work poor land. Many ...an has broken his back and lost his heart ...a poor farm which he has suffered to run ...n by bad management. He has spent ...labor and capital over 100 acres, when, ...confining himself to 25 or 30, he might ...e become happy and rich. The way to ...air such a capital error is to begin with ...field and get that into good condition, ...let the rest lie, and so go on through ...farm. One rich field will then make it ...y to enrich another or two; and while ...beginning is slow, it is downhill work, ...as the end is nearly reached progress is ...and easy.....The worst of all capital ...rs is for the farmer to neglect his own ...rovement and education. A man who ...$10 000 in a farm and stock, may easily ...e twice as much in himself and make his ...k pay 10 per cent. on his value. He is ...greatest part of his capital and it is the ...atest of all errors to misuse himself.

Ensilage.

When is the question of the value of ...ge to be determined? The battle still ...s in Britain, and America, as to its com...ative value, between the friends and op...ents of this system of curing fodder. ...periments have been conducted by ...men on both sides of the Atlantic for ...rs, and are we now, we ask, any nearer ...nitenese than we were long ago? Nu...rous improvements have been carried on ...ding to show that ensilage fodder is in...pensable in dairying, while other experi...nts, made by parties equally able, go in ...te the opposite direction. While we ...e every faith in the propriety of calling ...the aid of science in farming and stock...ing, we at the same time should be very ...tious in receiving the conclusions of ...ence where these are contradictory or even ...concurrent. The idea forces itself upon ...r minds that this question will be settled ...re by a certain class of farmers than by ...entists and that it will resolve itself into ...matter of dollars and cents, the degree of ...value to be determined by those men ...o somehow have a wonderful tact in de...mining what pays and what does not. ...n argued for years, some do yet, that ...tening cattle does not pay, their figures ...garding this matter seeming most conclu...e, as they dwelt upon the comparative ...ces of grain and beef and the value of the ...or involved. The answer that those en...ged in the fattening business gave was, ...t they grew rich by the business—a very ...nsive answer. If there is virtue in en...ge it will be discovered, and the value of ...as a food adjunct may by and by be safely ...ged by the number of silos erected and ...tained throughout the land. If we may ...ture an opinion it is this, that its prin...al value will be found as an adjunct to ...er cured foods used in this country in the ...nter season, a less proportion being re...ired than in Britain, on the principle that ...ess portion of turnips is beneficial. It ...ems clear to us that in this cold climate ...e food ration for man and beast should ...terially differ in winter and summer. ...lads are in a manner indispensible in ...mmer, in our climate, but who will say ...s of them in winter? However, where ...r. Henry Wood and Sir J. B. Lawes are

SCIENTIFIC ITEMS.

In twenty years the sales of simple ages of patent medicines in Great have increased from 6 661,057 to 18 457

Scientists propose to employ as a source emergency power for ships of war forc into which petroleum is sprayed along w superheated steam and hot air.

Diphtheria has recently been observed pigeons in Germany. According to Pro veterinary reports the disease is incurab and highly contagious.

Professor Ball, the Astronomer Royal Ireland, in an address on comets, consid ed that the meteoroids seen as shooting st in 1866 were actually the remains of the ta of comets.

Dr. Et. Guenot reports that he ha moved a large crop of warts occurring the hands of a patient by giving daily a grain dose of calcined magnesia in the mor ing before breakfast.

The Lancet informs a correspondent th
"the possibility, nay the certainty, in ma cases, of flies being a medium of infectio especially in warm climates, has been peatedly pointed out, though perhaps t fact is not sufficiently borne in mind.

Struve upholds Dr. Bedent's suggesti that only cream should be used for earliest nourishment of young childr brought up by hand, as the digestibility any milk is inversely as the quantity caseine which remains in the skim milk.

The Gazette Medicale de l' Algerie calls tention to a great number of facts which pear to show that cider drinkers are n troubled with stone, and that patients ha ing this affection are either cured or great relieved by that beverage.

According to Professor Young the cent portion of the sun is probably for the mo part a mass of heated gases, the photosphe is a shell of luminous clouds, the chrom sphere is composed mainly of incondensib gases, and what constitutes the corona entirely unknown.

According to the Journal de Medicine,
Brussels, if the normal temperature of ma and were 1,000, that of a moderate amok would be represented by 1,008, and t normal pulse under like circumstances wo increase to 1,180. The heart is overwork just the extent represented by the lati figures.

Tabulated results of 250 experiments, w forty-two distinct explosive compoun were published in March by MM. Berthel and Vieille, of the Academy of Scienc Paris, bearing on the amount of pressure developed at the moment of explosion, temperature produced, and the specific he
of the gases, especially those of the co and ones, at various temperatures.

A recent writer on the emotions of infa says curiosity shows itself the minute a chi begins to take interest in other things t takes its food, and when, though it st carries everything to its mouth, it does merely because the tongue is the finest tool as the most exercised organ of touc
At this stage the child handles things, loo at them closely, pulls them to pieces, and by playing instructs itself.

The height and velocity of clouds may be determined by means of photography. T cameras are placed 600 feet apart and p ated with instantaneous shutters, whi are released by electricity at the same m ment. The angle of inclination of t cameras, and the position of the clouds photographed are thus obtained, and sim trigonometrical operations give the heig and distance from those data.

The microscope reveals that there more than 4 000 muscles in a caterpill while that the eye of a drone contains 1,0 facets. There are spiders as small as grain of sand, and they spin a thread so fi that it would require 400 of them to eq
the size of a single hair.

According to the *Journal of the Societe
Chimie Industrielle*, bituminous coal ta fire at 392° F., coke at 482° and anthracit at 788° F. This spontaneous combusti has been attributed to the presence of oxide of iron, but recent experiments d demonstrate that the coals absorb oxygen, a absorb it quicker than the sulphate, and th the rate of this absorption depends entire upon the temperature and other conditio of the air and upon the size of the coals

The Chicago Druggist recommends t following for the cure of severe scalds a burns: Cover the injured parts freely w soap. If the burn be severe apply so linseed oil, with a plentiful dressi of flour. This takes on, and fresh oil a flour can be added. When this cover is off a new skin will have formed, and is left. Carron oil is also regarded as excellent remedy where the skin is unbroke but of course, being taken to exclude from the injured part.

J. Freyer inclines to the belief th notwithstanding the fact of the toothl lower jaw, deer do actually consume th horns. He picked up recently at forest at Dunrobin, Scotland, a ho which appeared to show that it had been part eaten away, and this, it seem to the belief also of the members of t Zoological Society of London, to whom lately exhibited the gnawed specime Marks on the horn are such as would made by the broad incisors of the lower ju and are scientific observation seems to co with popular opinion.

The Popular Science News says that t palatable beverage known as champagne
according to a French recipe, made as f Take sixty gallons of water; add for pounds of ginger cut in small pieces, and boil for half an hour, carefully skimming any froth that may arise. Cool as quickly as possible, and when blood-heat (100° F.) add nine pounds sugar, chopped fine and the juice of oranges and six dozen lemons. All liquid to ferment, and after standing 24 it may be bottled in the usual w bottles. If desired, the ginger may be omit and the number of oranges increased two dozen.

Must be Distinguished.

"Who is that old gentleman going tow Beach?"

"I don't know, but he must be a re distinguished personage."

"Are you sure?"

"Oh, I know it."

"But what do you judge by?"

"The fact that no one knows him, and the fact does not appear in any of the papers.—[Philadelphia Call.

AGRICULTURAL.

Decreasing the number of cattle does not necessarily imply decrease in the amount of grain grown, as very many suppose, but simply decrease in the number of bushels of the coarser grains sold. It means increase in the amount of grain grown, whenever common sense is exercised in the care of the cattle, but usually on a less acreage sown, while should be welcome tidings to the farmer who very well knows that the main difference between the cost of labor expended on a good crop and a poor one mainly consists in the handling.

In stock-raising it is of the utmost importance to make the most of the pasture-land and to manage it as to get from it the greatest possible returns. Many portions of pasture-land possessing a soil of undying fertility, are comparatively valueless from want of drainage. We feel curious to get an approximate idea of the amount of land suitable for pasturage in the Dominion that is lying in a manner lying waste. At some places the draining of these lands would be attended with much difficulty from their possessing a great excess of moisture; but in passing during the months of September and October, when there is less of water on or near the surface than during any other season of the year. Draining should therefore be pushed vigorously forward during these months, as no investment can be made that will so well repay the outlay. It is all very well to spend a few days at fairs, but it is usually a serious matter to spend weeks together at a season when a greater variety of work can be done, to better advantage, than at any other. Prizes may be paid for at too high a rate. If you can do nothing more, drain at least one main drain, which cannot fail from the result to stimulate to higher efforts.

Earthing up Celery.

There is a way to earth up celery to blanch: First, the earth is worked up to it with the hands, the leaves being held close together with one hand; this is what is called handling. Then it is allowed to stand for a week or ten days, when common brown wrapping paper is wrapped around the stalks and tied with twine, and the earth worked up to within one inch of the top of the paper. In about a week or ten days the paper is wrapped and tied as before, and the earth is partially worked up to the top of the paper. In a short time it will be blanched sufficiently for use, which may be known by the blanched stalks growing out at the top of the paper. For crispness, tenderness, and fine flavor, I think celery grown in this way cannot be excelled. Certainly, it takes more pains to tie and wrap it, but I think all lovers of this excellent vegetable will feel repaid for the extra work when they have eaten it blanched in this fashion.

Keep the Best.

The New York Tribune says that one great error—because a waste of capital on the farm—is to keep poor horses and cows. A $50 horse is not worth one-fourth as much as one that is worth $100. It will eat as much and cost as much for harness, and will not make do as much work nor live so long. A $20 cow, that makes three pounds of butter in a week, costs as much for everything, labor and utensils included, as one worth $100 that makes 10 pounds a week. Another error is to work poor land. Many a man has broken his back and lost his heart on a poor farm which he has suffered to run down by bad management. He has spent his labor and capital over 100 acres, when, confining himself to 25 or 30, he might have become happy and rich. The way to repair such a capital error is to begin with one field and get that into good condition, and let the rest lie, and so go on through the farm. One rich field will then make it easy to enrich another or two; and while the beginning is slow, it is downhill work, and as the end is nearly reached progress is rapid and easy.....The worst of all capital errors is for the farmer to neglect his own improvement and education. A man who has $10 000 in a farm and stock, may easily be twice as much in himself and make his farm pay 10 per cent. on his value. He is the greatest part of his capital and it is the greatest of all errors to misuse himself.

Ensilage.

When is the question of the value of ensilage to be determined? The battle still rages in Britain, and America, as to its comparative value, between the friends and opponents of this system of curing fodder. Experiments have been conducted by leading men on both sides of the Atlantic for years, and are we now, we ask, any nearer unanimity than we were long ago? Numerous improvements have been carried on tending to show that ensilage fodder is indispensable in dairying, while other experiments, made by parties equally able, go in the opposite direction. While we have every faith in the propriety of calling in the aid of science in farming and stock-feeding, we at the same time should be very cautious in receiving the conclusions of science where these are contradictory or even not concurrent. The idea forces itself upon our minds that this question will be settled before by a certain class of farmers than by scientists and that it will resolve itself into a matter of dollars and cents, the degree of value to be determined by those men who somehow have a wonderful tact in determining what pays and what does not. Ensilage argued for years, some do yet, that fattening cattle does not pay, their figures regarding this matter seeming most conclusive, as they dwelt upon the comperative prices of grain and beef and the value of the labor involved. The answer that those engaged in the fattening business gave was, that they grew rich by the business—a very decisive answer. If there is virtue in ensilage it will be discovered, and the value of it as a food adjunct may by and by be safely gauged by the number of silos erected and maintained throughout the land. If we may hazard an opinion it is this, that its principal value will be found as an adjunct to home-cured foods used in this country in the winter season, a less proportion being required than in Britain, on the principle that less portion of turnips is beneficial. It seems clear to us that in this cold climate the food ration for man and beast should materially differ in winter and summer. Foods are in a manner indispensible in summer, in our climate, but who will say as of them in winter? However, where Mr. Henry Wood and Sir J. B. Lawes are not agreed, it is doubtless the part of wisdom for us to stand uncovered at a respectful distance and maintain a prudent silence. We may add that the system seems to be gaining ground in Britain. We notice that in the British papers machines designed for cutting ensilage are being advertised, while silos are becoming more and more numerous. —[Canadian Stock Raisers' Journal.

More than a "Spectre Bark" Roving the Sea.

The lumber-laden schooner Maggie M. Rivers which was abandoned waterlogged, near Cape Hatteras, on January 7, still outlives the raging Atlantic gales. A vessel arriving at Halifax last week reported passing this derelict on the 11th inst. in latitude 37 deg. 05 min. north, longtitude 64 deg. 16 min, west, dismasted and covered with barnacles. After the crew left her she drifted 300 miles in an easterly direction right across the Gulf Stream current, then altered her course, travelling 120 miles due southeast: then for forty days moved to the northeast. In May she was heading for the Florida coast; in June she turned towards Savannah, and since then she has been twice reported drifting to the northeastward in the Gulf Stream current.

She is now probably about 250 miles southeast from New York, and having gotten by the aid of ocean currents fairly within the "anti-trade" wind belt, she will be speeded by combined wind and current agency into the great ship routes between America and Europe. She is not a "spectre bark," but an almost solid mass of lumber, and hence a grave menace to navigation, which may for years survive the disintegrating power of the waves unless someone blows her to pieces. The government would do a good service to commerce by dispatching a naval steamer to find and sink, or else to bring into port this seemingly indestructible rover of the deep.—[New York Herald.

CURRENCY.

A Kansas woman and a bulldog and a club drove four cowboys a distance of two miles and then she let up because she stuck a sliver in her foot.

It is estimated that $50,000,000 has been squandered in trying to solve the problem of perpetual motion. It's a good thing to keep a man home nights.

The horse of a Russian peasant is first in his estimation; then comes his cow; then his dog, and if he has anything left it is bestowed upon his wife and children.

A Duluth man who was jealous of his wife hid her bustle so as to keep her at home, and the papers speak of it as "an outrage worthy of the dark ages."

A case has been found in Chicago where a woman was paying a pawnbroker $58 per year for the use of $25 That's about the average female idea of finance.

A druggist in a new town in Wyoming advertises a good opening for a doctor who knows how to read, write and spell. Any other sort will be given the cold shoulder.

A Philadelphia burglar has his opinion about burglar-alarms in houses. He says that not more than one in twenty five will ring in an alarm after the house has been occupied three months.

New York's death rate comes close to a thousand a week, and they are wondering how long they can continue to spare a good-sized city out of their population each week and keep smiling.

The woman who wants to look utterly flat and silly in the eyes of common-sense people has only to pin a sunflower to her left shoulder. It answers just as well as if she carried her tongue hanging out.

The doors in Japanese dwellings are made so small that a person must turn sideways and squeeze in. This is the reason why a Jap throws his wife out of the window when she gets on a spree.

"I'm a plumber!" answered a burglar who was discovered in a chamber in a house in Cincinnati at midnight, and the owner turned over in bed with the remark: "Oh, I was in hopes it was a burglar, and he might leave me something."

After half a dozen persons had died in a fine-looking dwelling house in Washington, an investigation was demanded, and it was found that the plumbing had been done without a single trap. The owner saved about $12 by leaving them out.

Newspapers Afloat.

On board the Hecla, one of the ships belonging to Capt. Edward Parry's expedition in search of the northwest passage, a paper was printed called the North Georgia Gazette and Winter Chronicle. The first number was dated the 1st of November, 1819, and its twenty-first and last the 20th March, 1820. The Great Britain steamer, which started for Australia on the 21st of August, 1852, may claim to have inaugurated the practice of publishing a newspaper on board ship, as a paper, entitled the Great Britain Times, was published every week during the voyage and distributed among the passengers. At the present time these seaborn broadsheets are a source of considerable amusement and go a long way to relieve the monotony of the passengers, At the present time these seaborn broadsheets are a source of considerable amusement and go a long way to relieve the monotony of the passage, as the passengers not only read but supply the articles. Burlesque telegrams, jokes made by the passengers, and all the news, whether social nautical, or personal, of the voyage, are published in their columns.

Plantation Philosophy.

Er tired mind kain' hab er rested body. No matter how healthy a tree looks, ef de sap ain't right, de fruit ain't gwineter be good.

'Ligion sorter 'pens on sarcumstances. I doan b'lebe dat er hongry man ken sen' up ez putty er prayer ez de man what hab had er good meal an' has er putty good idea whar he's gwine ter git de naixt one.

De man whut spen's his time in groanin' bout de wickedness o' dis hear worl' may cut or bigger figger ab er camp meeting den de hustlin' sort o' feller, but he ain't gwineter raise nigh so much cotton. Er little sweat mixed with "Oh, Lawd, gin us so and so," heps de cause mightily.—[Arkansaw Traveller.

What are the North American Indians?

Dr. E. B. Taylor made some remarks before the American Association on North American races and civilization. In attempting to answer the question: "What are the North American Indians?" he stated that whenever he had been among the Indians the thought had always struck him that, if these people were dressed up as Asiatics, there would be little observable difference. Admitting this supposition the next question that arose would be: "How came they here?" To answer this question, Dr. Taylor warned his hearers that they must beware of taking for granted that the physical geography of this continent has not changed. The next question would be: "How it is that among tribes, physically so similar, there should be such a diversity in language as we find among the North American Indians?" For the solution of this question, we must look to the geologists to prove the antiquity of man. Dr. Taylor remarked that even if the North American Indians was the result of the migration of one stock to this continent, the remoteness of the time when that migration must have taken place, would fully account for the great diversity in speech. We are so accustomed to consider the patricharchal system the only natural one, that we do not look for any other, yet the matrimonial system which Sir George Gray found among the Australians is also prevalent among the Indians. This system is not so uncommon as may be supposed, and lingers in many curious customs. Thus among the Kaffirs of South Africa there is a custom by which a man is supposed to completely ignore the existence of his mother-in-law. If the two should meet in the street they turn away from each other. This custom, traces of which, Dr. Taylor thought, existed among the Spartans in historic times, points to a matriarchal system of society in which marriage is surreptitious and unrecognized. These speculation were strangely confirmed by the report during the past year of some Dutch residents in Sumatra. The inhabitants of that island still live in the matriarchal system. When a man and woman marry they do not set up housekeeping for themselves, but both stay in their mother's house. The father has no control whatever over his children, the head of the family being the maternal uncle. It would be considered a grave offense against his wife's family were a man to undertake to reprove or chastise his children. The curious state of affairs which exists in Sumatra is the key to customs, common to the Kaffirs of South Africa, to the hill-tribes of India, and the Indians of North America.

Don't Worry.

One of the crimes of the age—and it is really a crime—is the hurry and bustle with which nearly everything is done. The business and professional man, the farmer and mechanic, hurry themselves in their clothes in the morning, hurry their breakfasts into their stomachs, and rush off to their work as though it was their last day on earth. A certain amount of energy is always to be commended, and the sin of overwork is better than the sin of laziness. But among those who earn their bread by the sweat of their brows there is entirely too much worry, for they are the men and women whose lives should be prolonged as being beneficial to the community. The lazy, trifling person is of no consequence, and it really matters little whether his good-for-nothing form reposes on a dry goods box or in the grave, but no man or woman can be in a continual state of worry and excitement and do a full day's work without soon breaking down. In very many instances the useless worry and excitement in regard to tasks to be performed is much harder on the vital forces than the work itself—and the premature gray hairs which adorn the heads of most middle aged men can be attributed to needless concern and mental strain in regard to their daily tasks. While attending as strictly as possible to work, let all worry as little as they can in regard to their various occupations and matter concerning them.—[Detroit Chaff.

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

Nothing so cements and holds together in union all the parts of a society as faith or credit; which can never be kept up, unless men are under some force or necessity of honestly paying what they owe to one another.

What a vast deal of time and ease that man gains who is not troubled with the spirit of impertinent curiosity about others; who let his neighbor's thoughts and behavior alone, who confines his inspections to himself, and cares chiefly for his own duty and conscience.

The only way for a rich man to be healthy is by exercise and abstinence, to live as if he was poor; which are esteemed the worst parts of poverty.

We can be thankful to a friend for a few acres, or a little money, and yet for the freedom and command of the whole earth, and for the great benefits of our being, our life, health and reason, we look upon ourselves as under no obligations.

Nothing hinders the constant agreement of people who live together but vanity and selfishness. Let the spirit of humility and benevolence prevail, and discord and disagreement would be banished from the household.

Detect in manners is usually the defect of fine perceptions. Elegance comes of no breeding, but of birth.

There should be, methinks, as little merit in loving a woman for her beauty as in loving a man for his prosperity; both being equally subjected to change.

Men of quality never appear more amiable than when their dress is plain; their birth, rank, title, and its appendages are at best invidious; and as they do not need the assistance of dress, so, by their disclaiming the advantages of it, they make their superiority set more easy.

Keenness in a man is not always to be taken as a sign of capacity, for it is generally observed the most in those who are selfish and over-reaching; and his keeness generally ends in that kind of penetration into other people interests which will tend to benefit his own.

Were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without a government, I should not hesitate to prefer the latter.

Next to the Clergyman.

"Are you the Rev. Dr. B.?" a young man inquired of a citizen on the street.

"No, sir, but I am frequently taken for him. We resemble each other closely. I am a lawyer, and make a specialty of divorce cases. Has your object in finding the Rev. Dr. B. any connection with matrimony?"

"Well, yes." the young man blushingly acknowledged.

"H'm, I thought so. Just put that card where you won't lose it."

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinay succes that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star.

Death, the great overtaker, prepares the way for the undertaker.

Those who have Tried it Say

The best proof of the great power of Polson's Nerviline over every kind of pain is obtained by the use of a ten cent bottle. Nerviline requires no puffing; every bottle tells its own story. It cannot fail, for it is a combination of the most powerful pain-subduing remedies know to medical science. Nerviline is equally useful in external or internal pains. Try the great remedy. Ten cent bottle at any drug store. Large bottles only twenty-five cents.

Those three Kings could raise the deuce in Europe if they felt so disposed.

Young Men!—Read This.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., of Marshall, Mich., offer to send their celebrated ELECTRO-VOLTAIC BELT and other ELECTRIC APPLIANCES on trial for thirty days, to men (young or old) afflicted with nervous debility, loss of vitality, and all kindred troubles. Also for rheumatism, neuralgia, paralysis, and many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk is incurred as thirty days' trial is allowed. Write them at once for illustrated pamphlet free.

Is it any wonder that "boards of aldermen should sometimes be wooden-headed?"

Have You Thought of It.

For four thousand years or more the world groaned, suffered, and fumed about its corns, for there was no positive relief—no certain and painless cure until Dr. Scott Putnam gave to the world his great Corn Extractor. If there is suffering now it is a result of carelessness, for the remedy is at hand. Try Putnam's Corn Extractor. It is sure, painless, and prompt. Beware of substitutes. N. C. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston. BOTTLES BOTTLES

The widow of a Hindoo is about the only individual whose career really "ends in smoke."

Important.

When you visit or leave New York City, save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire, and stop at the GRAND UNION HOTEL, opposite Grand Central Depot. 600 elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, $1 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroads to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the City.

"Are shrouds classed as kilt suits?" asks the Pittsburg Telegraph We have heard them called "spric wrappers." Although they are intended for the close of life they are not designed for the clothes of life.

A.P. 198

PHRENOLOGY. EXAMINATIONS GIVEN BY WALLACE MASON, at 362 Yonge st., Toronto.

GRAND OPPORTUNITY FOR A FARMER ENTERprising and able to command from $12,000 to $20,000, large city estate, embracing about 30 houses, will bring such rental as will give good interest on investment and handsome return for necessary attention; property compact. W. HAMILTON, 231 Talbot street, London.

F. E. DIXON & CO.

Manufacturers of Star Rivet

Leather Belting!

120 King Street, East, Toronto.

Large double Driving Belts a specialty. Send for Price Lists and Discounts

SMOKED SAUSAGES.

The most convenient meat for farmers in their busy season. These meats are cooked and ready for use Sold by grocers through the Dominion Send for price to W. CLARK P. O. Box 342 Montreal.

BRITISH AMERICAN

BUSINESS COLLEGE, ADELAIDE, YONGE ST., TORONTO. Finest rooms in America. Practical in every department. Teachers pushing and energetic, and know what they teach. Endorsed by the leading business men of Ontario, its Graduates are filling positions of trust in every city, town and village of Canada. Send for new circular. C. O'DEA, Secretary.

H. WILLIAMS,

SLATE AND FELT ROOFER.

Manufacturer and Dealer in

Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building Paper. Carpet Felt, &c., at lowest Prices.

4 ADELAIDE ST. EAST, - - TORONTO.

W. & F. P. Currie & Co

100 Grey Nun St., Montreal.

Importers of

Drain Pipes, Portland Cement, Chimney Tops, Canada Cement, Vent Linings, Water Lime, Flue Covers, Whiting, Fire Bricks, Plaster of Paris, Fire Clay, Borax, Roman Cement, China Clay

Manufacturers of

Bessemer Steel Sofa, Chair Bed & Springs

The Ready Mixed Paints

MANUFACTURED BY

A. RAMSAY & SONS, MONTREAL,

are ground in Pure Linseed Oil and Turpentine. The American Mixed Paints are to a large extent ground with Silicate of Soda, and are dear at any price. Ask for Ramsay's, and see that you get them. Apply to your local dealers.

I will supply two year old vines of the NIAGARA.

WHITE GRAPE

without any conditions whatever at

Two Dollars Each.

Agents wanted, apply to

D. W. Beadle,

ST. CATHARINES.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Portland every Thursday, and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter between Portland and Glasgow, and Boston and Glasgow alternately; and during summer between Quebec and Glasgow and Boston and Glasgow every week.

For freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; D. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans, Rae & Co., Quebec; H. A. Allan Portland, Boston. Montreal.

Dominion Line of Steamships.

Running in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. Sailing from Quebec every Saturday, during the summer months, and from Portland every Thursday during the winter months. Sailing dates from QUEBEC TO LIVERPOOL.

Brooklyn, Aug. 23 | Montreal, Sept. 13
Toronto, Aug. 30 | *Vancouver Sept. 20
*Oregon, Sept. 6 |

Rates of passage: Cabin, Quebec to Liverpool $50, $60, $65, $80. Return, $90, $108, $117, $144, according to steamer and berth. Intermediate $35, Steerage, at lowest rates. The saloons and staterooms in steamers marked thus: * are amidships, where but little motion is felt, and no cattle or sheep are carried on them. For further particulars apply to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent or local agents of the Company, or to

DAVID TORRANCE & CO.,
General Agents, Montreal

Coleman Patent Harness.

Improved, works without whiffletrees. Cool, light and durable, much easier on man and teams. This harness is a specialty in orchards, as no trees can be injured; working qualities guaranteed. Price $10. Territory for sale in United States and Canada.

Address—

J B Dewey & Co.

COLBORNE, ONT.

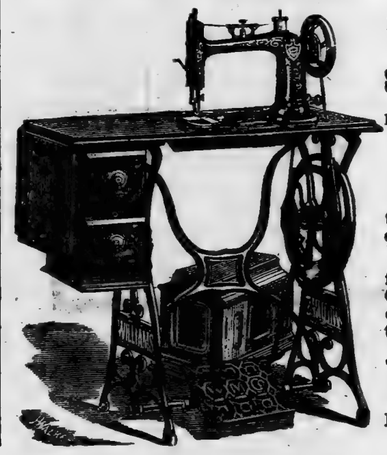
GURNEYS & WARE,

STANDARD SCALES.

THE BEST,
THE STRONGEST,
THE MOST RELIABLE.

Unrivalled in material, construction and finish, perfect in accuracy and unequalled in durability. Guaranteed to give entire satisfaction.

THEY EXCEL ALL OTHERS.



RAILROAD, WAREHOUSE AND MILL TRUCKS.

Mills' Alarm Money Drawers.

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED PRICE LIST.

GURNEYS & WARE,

THE NEW WILLIAMS

High Arm Machine is now recognized as the

Sewing Machine of the Period.

It is Light and Easy to run.

Silent and Rapid in movement!

Plain and Simple to learn!

It is strong, durable, and well built, the very best material that money can buy or skill produce.

It was awarded five medals and three first prizes at the Dominion Exhibition last October. It is rapidly superseding all the old fashioned makes everywhere. See it try it, buy it, and make sure that you get it.

THE WILLIAMS' MFG CO.

1783 Notre Dame St., Montreal, and 'King St., West, Toronto.

The Canadian Mutual Aid Association.

INCORPORATED AUGUST 20TH, 1880.

HEAD OFFICE, - - TORONTO.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

Wm. Rennie, Esq., Toronto, President; E. H. Hilborn, Esq., Uxbridge, Treasurer; G. H. Watson, L.L.B., Toronto, Solicitor; C. H. Mackintosh, M.P., Ottawa; Thos. Menzies, Peterboro; Peter Graham, M.P.P., Warwick; A. Gifford, Esq., Meaford, Vice-President; W. Pemberton Page, Esq., Toronto, Sec'y; R. H. Robertson, M.D., Toronto, Med. D'tr; Lewis Wigle, M.P.P., Leamington; J. P. Bull, Downsview; S. W. Hill, Esq., Ridgeville, Memb. Supt.

The Directors have filed with the Hon. S. C. Wood, (Ex-Provincial Treasurer of Ontario) Trustee for the Association, Bonds to the amount of $60,000.00, as a guarantee for the honest carrying out of the terms of Certificates issued to members.

Reliable Aid to Families of Deceased Members at Small Cost.

The Association will do business on the following plan:

Applications.

All Applications for Membership shall be made upon printed forms furnished by the Association, (and applicants must pass a satisfactory medical examination). If accepted, a certificate will be issued within thirty days from date of such acceptance.

Membership.

The payment of TWELVE DOLLARS admits any of sound body and mind between the age of 18 and 60 years, to all the benefits of the Association. If the application is not accepted the money is promptly returned to the applicant.

Plan of Business.

The following table shows the amount for which Certificates of Membership will be issued by the Association, according to age:

AGE.	Amount at Death	AGE.	Amount at Death
From 18 to 30	$3 000	From 45 to 46	$2 200
30 to 31	2 950	46 to 47	2 150
31 to 32	2 900	47 to 48	2 100
32 to 33	2 850	48 to 49	2 050
33 to 34	2 800	49 to 50	2 000
34 to 35	2 750	50 to 51	1 900
35 to 36	2 700	51 to 52	1 800
36 to 37	2 650	52 to 53	1 700
37 to 38	2 600	53 to 54	1 600
38 to 39	2 550	54 to 55	1 500
39 to 40	2 500	55 to 56	1 400
40 to 41	2 450	56 to 57	1 300
41 to 42	2 400	57 to 58	1 200
42 to 43	2 350	58 to 59	1 100
43 to 44	2 300	59 to 60	1 000
44 to 45	2 250

HALF RATE PLAN.

Certificates will be issued for half the above amounts should the applicant so desire.

Assessments.

An Assessment of One Dollar upon each member will be made in case of death or total disability of a member, except when there is money enough in surplus funds to pay said claim.

Special Features.

1—Great inducements to provide for families in case of death, at small cost.
2—Equal benefits to both sexes.
3—Uniform assessments of one dollar only.
4—Careful medical examination required.
5—No annual dues or extra charges.
6—No large salaries or expenses.
7—Two hundred dollars advanced for funeral expenses when necessary.
8—Benefits secured at actual cost.
9—Members becoming totally disabled, may draw half of their claims, the balance being payable at death.
10—Ladies accepted in this Association as well as men.

For particulars apply to S. W. HILL, Membership Superintendent, Ridgeville, or to W. PEMBERTON PAGE, Secretary, 87 King Street West, Toronto.

AGENT FOR MARKDALE, - - THOS. MANN.

Also Agent for Dominion Grange Mutual Fire Insurance Association.

SAW MILL AND TIMBER LAND FOR SALE OR TO LET

In the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, 4 miles from Flesherton Station, on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The mill is situated at Little Falls, in a block of about 400 acres timber lnd, with other timber land surrounding. The building is substantially built on stone foundation. The machinery is all good and driven with great power by a 23 inch Leffell wheel, under 36 ft. head of water. There are one large circular saw for cutting logs, 2 small circulars for sawing lath and broom handles, 1 guage lathe for turning broom handles, etc., 1 shingle machine with jointer and packer complete. The water power is excellent, the stream being very regular. There are several other good mill sites on the proyerty. The land in the valley is considered the best in the country. The place would make an excellent stock farm when the timber is taken off.

This offers a good opportunity for a practical, energetic man to go into this kind of business, as the place will be sold or let on liberal terms.

The bush is so convenient to the mill logs can be trucked in summer time. Immediate possession given.

Apply to the proprietor, WM. HOGG,
FLESHERTON STATION P. O., ONT.

—Good Work Guaranteed—

—AT—

Bulmers Photograph Gallery

FLESHERTON.

Call at once and see samples of work which we ared not ashamed to show.

All kinds of Framing done cheap at

JAS. BULMER'S, FLESHERTON.

Burdock Blood Bitters

Cures Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver and Kidneys, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Erysipelas, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Deranged Stomach, or irregular action of the Bowels.

RESPECT AGE.

Age should always command respect, in the case of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry it certainly does, for 25 years that has been the standard remedy with the people, for Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colic and all bowel complaints.

Owen Sound has now a Telephone company, and are giving it a liberal support by using the telephone.

A STRONG ENDORSEMENT.

The Clergy, the Medical Faculty, the press and the people all endorse Burdock Blood Bitters as the best system renovating blood purifying tonic known. Its work bears out their best recommend.

Specimens of Penmanship from the Northern Business College of Owen Sound took 1st prize at Toronto Exhibition and Ottawa.

AN EX-ALDERMAN TRIED IT.

Ex-Alderman Taylor of Toronto, tried Hagyard's Yellow Oil for rheumatism. It cured him after all other remedies had failed.

The Fifth Division Court of the County of Grey will hold its regular sittings in the Town Hall, Flesherton, on Thursday, October the 30th next.

A SAD NEGLECT.

Neglecting a constipated condition of the bowels is sure to bring ill-health and great suffering. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate the bowels in a natural manner, purifying the blood and promote a healthy action of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

J. J. Middleton, Esq., Reeve of Proton, will take up his residence in Toronto shortly. Mr. Thos. Hanbury is looked upon as the coming Reeve.

Prof. Low's Sulphur Soap is highly recommended for the cure of Eruption, Chafes, Chapped Hands, Pimples, Tan, etc.

MARKDALE POST OFFICE.

Mails at Markdale are closed as follows, commencing Monday August 11th, closed bag for Toronto 8, a. m. General Mail South 3:45 p. m., General Mail North 11:30 p. m. close bag for Owen Sound 7, p. m.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best Salve in the world for cuts, bruises sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by A. Turner & Co.

Freeman's Worm Powders require no other purgative. They are safe and sure to remove all varieties of Worms.

If you should be so unfortunate as to Burn Scald or Wound yourself in any way the proper thing to keep clean and heal it is McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Insist on having, and be sure you get, McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. Price 25 cents. Hill Bro's. has the genuine. J. & J. 2

National Pills acts promptly upon the Liver, regulate the Bowels and as a purgative are mild and thorough.

Monthly Fairs.

Markdale—Saturday before Flesherton.

Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.

Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.

Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.

Mount Forest—Third Wednesday in each month.

Priceville—Monday before Durham.

Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.

Hanover—Monday before Durham.

Walkerton—Last Wednesday in every month.

SCOTT ACT PETITION.—The petition asking for the submission of the Scott Act in Grey was fyled in the office of the Registrar on Saturday last. The number of signatures from the different municipalities are as follows: Meaford 114, St. Vincent 320, Collingwood 245, Sullivan 280, Euphrasia 180, Proton 136, Glenelg 207, Artemesia 310, Osprey 299, Keppel 293, Bentinck 224, Derby 158, Owen Sound 241, Egremont 244, Sydenham 394, Durham 53, Normanby 148, Holland 190, Sarawak 104—total 4050. The Act requires that the petition shall be signed by at least one-fourt of the whole number of voters in the county. We have not at hand any statement of the total number of voters in the county at present; but according to the last statement we have (that of 1882,) the total numbers of voters at that time was 14,489, and on the basis the petition would require to have 3623 signatures. It is probable there has been some increase in the number of voters since that time, and possibly a scrutiny might strike off some of the signatures as not qualified, but it is not likely these would reduce the number below the requisite one-fourth. The petition has to remain for public inspection ten days in the Registrar's office, after which it is sent to the Secretary of State, and the Government passes an Order-in-Council fixing a time for the voting.—O. S. Times.

Dr. Low's Worm Syrup has removed tape worm from 15 to 80 feet in length. It also destroys all kinds of worm.

A CURE FOR CHOLERA MORBUS.

A positive cure for this dangerous complaint, and for all acute or chronic forms of Bowel Complaint incident to summer and fall, is found in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry; to be procured from any druggist.

McGREGOR'S SPEEDY CURE.

Every purchaser of common sense business capacity, when requiring an article for a certain purpose, purchases only that which has been tried or is allowed first to test before buying. You are allowed a free trial bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure, the great remedy for Dyspepsia, Impure Blood and Liver Disorders at Hill Bro's. Sold at 50 cents and $1 per bottle. See testimonials from persons in your own town. A.&S. 6

The magical power over pain that Hagyard's Yellow Oil possesses, outrivals the marvels of ancient times. It acts in a natural manner to subdue inflammation; cures Rheumatism, Croup, Deafness, Sore Throat, and painful injuries.

Prominent among the greatest medical discoveries, by the many cures it has effected, McGregor's Speedy Cure leads the van. Subjected to the minutest chemical analysis, it has been found to contain none of those injurious ingredients characterizing the worthless specifics daily offered to the public. Every ingredient possesses a peculiar adaptability to the various complaints for which it has been compounded, and its efficacy is being established by testimonials hourly received. We are therefore confident that we have a preparation which we can offer to the public with the assurance that it will be found not only a relief but an absolute cure for Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Constipation and Impure Blood. Free trial bottles at Hill Bro's. A. & S. 4

ROBT. ASKIN,

MARKDALE,

Has opened out a First-Class

UNDERTKING ESTABLISHMENT,

And therefore has supplied a want long felt,

COFFINS,
CASKETS, SHROUDS,
and all

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

MARKDALE

HARNESS EMPORIUM

ESTABLISHED 19 YEARS.

THOS. MATTHEWS, Proprietor

Nothing but good stock used and the best mechanics employed. A stock of Double and Single, Heavy and Light Harness always on hand. Also Whips, Trunks, Valises, Blankets, Robes, &c., always in stock.

EUGENIA

Grist, Saw and Lath Mills

Having made extensive improvements in my Grist Mill I feel confident I can give good satisfaction.

GOOD FLOUR ALWAYS ON HAND

Chopping Done Every Day.

Custom Sawing and Bills Filled on the shortest notice.

LUMBER AND LATH ALWAYS ON HAND.

Cherry, Butternut, White Ash, Black Ash Basswood, Pine and Hemlock Logs wanted

69ly. M. AKITT, Eugenia.

HEAP'S PATENT

Dry Earth or Ashes Closet Factory

UNION STREET, (B. Allans Old Stand,)

OWEN SOUND.

By this system you can have a closet inside your house (if desired) and yet have no smell from it.

By their use you ensure Health, Comfort and Cleanliness.

CALL AND SEE THEM WORKING.

Wm. Heap, SANITARY ENGINEER.

Agent for Markdale; W. Cornwall.

NEW GROCERY STORE

IN CONNECTION WITH

Plewes' Flour and Feed Store.

Having just received a

Choicee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF

Teas,
Sugars,
Tobacco, &c,

Which will be sold VERY CHEAP.

I respectfully solicit the public's patronage.

193 J. PLEWES.

CHATSWORTH HOUSE

(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)

CHATSWORTH, Ont.

TUCK & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.

The best brand of liquors and cigars always in stock. Good meals and comfortable rooms guaranteed. Good stabling and attentive hostler. 114

HENRY GILL,

HOUSE PAINTER,

GRAINER, GLAZIER AND PAPER HANGER, CALCIMINING AND WALL TINTING.

Residence opposite Planing Factory,

MARKDALE.

ORDERS SOLICITED. ESTIMATES GIVEN. 192-205

HAGYARDS PECTORAL BALSAM

Has no equal for the permanent cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, and all Lung Diseases.

Every bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.

ROOKE'S BAKERY.

BREAD, the staff of life and PASTRY that will please your wife, always on hand, to supply the demand.

So when your stock is low
Step in and let us know,
And we'll your wants supply,
Or you'll know the reason why.

E. ROOKE,
Markdale.

J. G. IRVING,

MARKDALE,

Manufacturer of all Kinds of

PUMPS,

Drop Valve, Cylinder, Force, and Cistern Pumps.

All kinds of

IRON - PUMPS

SUPPLIED.

JOHN NOBLE,

MARKDALE

GENER'L BLACKSMITH

HORSE SHOEING

SPECIALTY.

Also agent for the celebrated

CHATHAM WAGONS.

DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY

CURES

CHOLERA

CHOLERA INFANTUM

DIARRHŒA

AND

ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS.

Markdale Standard

...esday Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

...$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if ...within three months.

...onal and business cards one inch ...nuder, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
...mn.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
...n.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
...umn.....	15 00	10 00	6 00
...space.....	7 00	4 00
...space.....	10 00	5 00

...dvertisements 8 cents per line first ...3 cents per line each subsequent ...nonpareil measure.

...l notices, or notices in local col...nts per line first insertion 5 cents ...quents insertion.

...imals &c., advertised 3 weeks for ...vertisement not to exceed twelve

...r discontinued until all arrears ...cept at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

...NDARD office has a splendid equip...ster as well as fine job type. Spe...tion to orders by mail. Orders ...dispatch.

...RUTLEDGE

...TOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

...DS & PERRY,

...ESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS)

...STERS, Solicitors, Proctors, No...es, Conveyancers, &c. Money to ...west rates of interest.

...ffices 16 King Street East, Toronto.

... Frost & Frost,

...STERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT ... Solicitors in Chancery, Convey... Owen Sound, have resumed at ... Office open every Thursday, as

...ost, J. W. FROST, LL. B. ...y Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,

...TER, MASTER AND DEP. REG... ...ancery, Notary Public, Conveyan...

...MBER OF FARMS FOR SALE. ...—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block ... Branch office in Markdale, over ...'s Store, on Friday and Saturday 57-ly

...easor & Morrison,

...RS, SOLICITORS, CONVEY...&c. &c,
...n Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, ... Wolf's Store and in MARKDALE; ... McFarland's Store on Thursday ...of each week.
...s to lend on reasonable terms.
...OR, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON
..., March 15, 1882. 794y

...lexander Brown.

...of Marriage Licenses, Fire and ...surance Agent. Commissioner ...&c., Conveyancer and Licensed ...for the County of Grey. Farmers, ... and Land Sales, Punctually at... ...nd charges made very moderate. ..., Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,

...OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c ...issioner in B. R. &c. ...cing in all its branches promptly ... and carefully executed. ...oney to Lend on Real Estate se

...SION HOUSE,

...ARKDALE,

...Bryan, Proprietor.

...Y HOTEL,

...ARKDALE,

...Aleer, - Proprietor.

...se is fitted up in good style, situ... ...l street, where the travelling pub... ...spend on the very best accommo... ...nion bus to all trains. 194

...KDALE HOUSE,

...KDALE, - - ONT.

...UTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

... HILL,

...ionable Tailor,

...R MACFARLAND'S STORE.

...T FIT GUARANTEED.

W GROCERY STORE
IN CONNECTION WITH
ves' Flour and Feed Store.
aving just received a cee, Fresh and Select STOCK OF
s,
Sugars,
Tobacco, &c.
will be sold VERY CHEAP.
spectfully solicit the public's
age.
J. PLEWES.
TSWORTH HOUSE
(LATE MORROW HOUSE,)
HATSWORTH, Ont.
CK & McLEOD PROPRIETORS.
est brand of liquors and cigars al-tock. Good meals and comfortable arranteed. Good stabling and attender. 114
ENRY GILL,
SE PAINTER,
ER, GLAZIER AND PAPER
GER, CALCIMINING
D WALL TINTING.
opposite Planing Factory,
ARKDALE.
LICITED. ESTIMATES GIVEN.
192-205
HAGYARDS
ECTORAL
BALSAM.
equal for the permanent cure of ds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, ing Cough, Bronchitis, and
all Lung Diseases.
bottle guaranteed to give satisfaction.
BURN & CO., Proprietors Toronto.
E'S BAKERY.
AD. the staff of life and
TRY that will please
always on hand, to supply
the demand.
your stock is low
and let us know,
your wants supply,
'll know the reason
E. ROOKE,
Markdale.
IRVING,
ARKDALE,
acturer of all Kinds of
MPS.
Cylinder, Force, and Cistern
All kinds of
- PUMPS
SUPPLIED.
N NOBLE,
RKDALE
L BLACKSMITH
E SHOEING
SPECIALTY.
t for the celebrated
M WAGONS.
OWLER'S TRACT-WILD
AWBERRY
CURES
OLERA
RA INFANTUM
RRHŒA
AND ER COMPLAINT
ALL DEALERS.

Markdale Standard

VOL. 4.--No. 214. MARKDALE, ONT., OCT. 16, 1884. { COPIES OF THE STANDAR FIVE CENTS EACH.

Markdale Standard

Every Thursday, at the office, Mill Street, Markdale.

$1 per year in advance; $1.25 if within three months.

Local and business cards one inch and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
Column.....	15 00	10 00	6 00
Space.....	7 00	4 00
Space.....	10 00	5 00

Advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 4 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Local notices, or notices in local columns 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents per line each insertion.

Marriages &c., advertised 3 weeks for each advertisement not to exceed twelve lines.

The STANDARD will be discontinued until all arrears are paid, except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

The STANDARD office has a splendid equipment for job work as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. Orders promptly dispatched.

J. RUTLEDGE
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Legal.

HODS & PERRY,
SUCCESSORS TO LAUDER & HANDS),
LICITORS, Solicitors, Proctors, Notaries, Conveyancers, &c. Money to lend at rates of interest.
Offices 16 King Street East,
TORONTO.

Frost & Frost,
BARRISTERS, AND ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW, Solicitors in Chancery, Conveyancers, &c. Owen Sound, have resumed at Office open every Thursday, as
J. W. FROST, LL. B.
Crown Attorney. 1

J. MASSON,
MASTER, MASTER AND DEP. REGISTRAR Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, NUMBER OF FARMS FOR SALE.
Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block
Branch office in Markdale, over Store, on Friday and Saturday
57-ly

Creasor & Morrison,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, CONVEYANCERS, &c. &c.
In Owen Sound, Dufferin Block, Wolf's Store and in
MARKDALE;
McFarland's Store on Thursday of each week.
Money to lend on reasonable terms.
Owen Sound, Q.C. DUNCAN MORISON
Dated March 15, 1882. 79-ly

Alexander Brown.
Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Fire and Insurance Agent. Commissioner &c. Conveyancer and Licensed Auctioneer for the County of Grey. Farmers, Sales and Land Sales, Punctually attended to, charges made very moderate.
Markdale, Sept. 17, 1880. 1-y

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c
Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
Money to Lend on Real Estate se

MANSION HOUSE,
MARKDALE,
Bryan, Proprietor.
COMMERCIAL HOTEL,
MARKDALE,
McAleer, - Proprietor.
The house is fitted up in good style, situated on Main street, where the travelling public can depend on the very best accommodation. Omnibus to all trains. 194

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - ONT.
RUTLEDGE, PROPRIETOR.

J. HILL,
Fashionable Tailor,
OVER MACFARLAND'S STORE.
PERFECT FIT GUARANTEED.

A PLEASANT & ELEGANT TOOTH POWDER
FOR WHITE TEETH AND A SWEET BREATH USE
FLINT'S SAPONACEOUS TOOTH POWDER
THE PEERLESS DENTIFRICE
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS
AT 25 CENTS
J. T. FLINT & CO. PROPRIETORS
PHARMACISTS
DERBY LINE, VT. & ROCK ISLAND P. Q.

Medical.

B. Ghent, M.D., M.R.C.P. & S., O.
Physician and Surgeon, Priceville,
Graduate of University. Vict. College.
" " New York, and
Hon. Graduate, of the same,
" " Ayleth Medical Institute.
" " Opthalmic Hospital, N.Y.
Member Coll. Physicians & Surgeons, O. 104

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at Rutledge's Hotel, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.
122-47.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT.—Residence on Mill Street, Markdale.
124ly

HAMILTON'S
PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY
MARKDALE.
OVER THE STANDARD OFFICE.
Fine work executed in all the latest sizes and shapes, fully equal to city work. Special attention given to
FRAMING
A large stock of moulding to choose from.
Call and leave your measure for a picture.
Jas. Hamilton.

COMMERCIAL HOTEL.
PRICEVILLE, Ont.
Large and commodious Sample Rooms Good Bed Rooms, &c. The Bar and larder well supplied with the best the market affords; good Stabling and attentive Hostler's
THOS. ATKINSON, Proprietor

JOSEPH GIBSON
CONTRACTOR.
Contracts taken for all kinds of
BRICK AND STONE WORK,
Plain Ornamental Plastering.
Calsomining in all Shades and Colors.
Charges moderate and satisfaction guaranteed. Orders left at the STANDARD office will receive prompt attention.
126-ly.

Dr. Hixon,
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, AND ACCOUCHER,
PRICEVILLE.
All calls promptly attended to.

ISAAC STINSON,
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given.
All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
195-6m* MARKDALE P. O.

SAMUEL WARDELL,
WELL DIGGER AND DRILLER. ALL orders promptly attended to. Residence—Snider's Hill Owen Sound 122-35

A PRIZE Send six cents for postage, and receive free, a costly box of goods which will help all, of either sex to more money right away than anything else in this world. Fortunes await the workers absolutely sure. At once address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Maine. 187-239

ALEX KAY
BOOT & SHOE
MAKER,
Mill Street, - Markdale

Poetry.

Don't Stop My Paper.

Don't stop my paper, printer;
Don't strike my name off yet;
You know the times are stringent,
And dollars hard to get;
But tug a little harder,
Is what I mean to do,
And scrape the dimes together,
Enough for me and you.

I can't afford to drop it;
I find it does not pay
To do without a paper,
However others may,
I hate to ask my neighbors
To give me theirs on loan;
They don't just say—but mean it—
"Why don't you buy your own?"

You can't tell how we miss it,
If it, by any fate,
Should happen not to reach us,
Or come a little late.
Then all is in a hubbub,
And things go all awry,
And, printer, if you're married,
You know the reason why.

So, printer, don't you stop it,
Unless you want my frown;
So here's the year's subscription,
And credit it right down;
And send the paper promptly
And regularly on,
And let it bring us weekly
Its welcome benison.

Artemesia Show.

Last week we gave a short notice of this Show. There is a material improvement in this fall exhibition, and we would here mention, that we notice a greater improvement, and keener competition where the products of the township only, in which the show is held, are allowed. This question should be well discussed at the coming annual meetings of the various township agricultural societies.

Following is the prize list, for which our thanks are due the Secretary Mr. J. Brodie.

HORSES.

Span Draught Horses—M McDonald, A Currie.
Span General Purpose—J Stewart, A McMillan.
Span Carriage—J Bentham, J Gilles.
Lady Driver—Miss Black.
Hack Horse—J Dennis, R Cook.
Brood Mare—D McDonald, —— Gowland.
2-year-old Gelding or Filly—D McDonald, W H Huddy.
1-year-old Gelding or Filly—D McDonald, D Harrow.
Spring Colt—R Plant, W Reid.
Blood Colt—J Bentham.

CATTLE.

Durham Bull—R Plant.
Devon Bull—R Oliver.
Devon Milch Cow—R Oliver.
Ayrshire Bull—A Cairns, W W Trimble.
Ayrshire Milch Cow—A Cairns.
Grade Bull—J Fletcher, D McMillen.
Grade Milch Cow—R Oliver, W McAuly.
2-year-old Heifer—H King, J White.
1-year-old Heifer—R Oliver.
Heifer Calf—M Reily.
Yoke Oxen—J McLean, R Oliver.
Yoke 3-year-old Steers—C McKinnon, A McMillen.
Yoke 2-year-old Steers—R Oliver, J White Yoke 1-year-old Steers—R Whitaker, R Oliver.

SHEEP—LONG WOOL.

Aged Ram—R Oliver, G Swanton.
Shearling Ram—G Swanton, R Oliver.
Ram Lamb—G Swanton, R Oliver.
Pair Aged Ewes—G Swanton, R Oliver.
Pair Shearling Ewes—G Swanton, G Swanton.
Pair Ewe Lambs—R Oliver, R Whitaker.

LEICESTER.

Aged Ram—J Stewart.
Shearling Ram—G Stewart, J Stewart.
Ram Lamb—J Stewart, J Stewart.
Pair Aged Ewes—R Oliver, G Stewart.
Pair Shearling Ewes—A Cairns.
Pair Ewe Lambs—J Stewart, R Oliver.
Special for best pen, by W J Dennis—G Swanton.

SWINE.

Berkshire Boar, one year or over—R Oliver, G Swanton.
Berkshire Sow—J Watson, G Swanton.
Suffolk Boar, 1 year or over—R Oliver.
Suffolk Sow—R Oliver.
Suffolk pair, special by T Atkinson—R Oliver.

POULTRY.

Pair Game—T Conkey.
Pair Hamburgs—W McAuly, W W Trimble Pair Brahmas—J Brodie.
Pair Leghorns—W Wilcock, W H Campaigne.
Pair Plymouth Rocks—W W Trimble, J Fletcher.
Pair Ducks—W McAuly, A Stewart.
Pair Turkeys—W Watson, W J Cooey.
Pair Geese—W H Campaigne, J Brodie.

GRAIN AND SEEDS.

Fall Wheat (Clawson)—R Plant, J Stewart.
Fall Wheat, any other kind—D McMillan.
Bushel Spring Wheat, White Russian—J Stewart J Brodie.
Bushel Spring wheat, white Fyfe—J Stewart J Brodie.
Bushel any other kind of Spring wheat—J Stewart, J Brodie.
Bushel Barley, 6 rowed—J Brodie, W J Cooey, Bushel oats, white—J Stewart, J Brodie.
Bushel oats black—J Stewart.
Bushel Peas, large—J Brodie, W J Cooey.
Bushel Peas small—J Stewart, J Brodie.
6 ears Corn—W Watson, H Mathewson.
1 Peck timothy seed—J Brodie.
Collection Beans—J Brodie, W J Cooey.

ROOTS & VEGETABLES.

1 bushel Potatoes, early rose—D McMillan, J Simson.
1 bushels any other kind—A Millan, D McMillan.
Collection potatoes, 6 varieties, 1 peck each—J Brodie, D McMillen.
6 Turnips, Swede—C McKinnon, G Swanton.
6 turnips, any other kind—J Brodie.
6 Mangold wurtzels—J. Brodie, W J Cooey.
6 Beets—W J Cooey, D McLean.
6 Heads Cabbage—R Plant, J Watson.
1 quart potato onions—W J Cooey, J Brodie.
12 Onions raised from tops—W McCauley.
6 Parsnips—W McCauley, J Brodie.
6 Carrots, field—W J Cooey, R Whitaker.
6 Carrots table—R Whitaker, W. McCauley,
2 Pumpkins—J Assum, T Conkey.
2 Squash—H Mathewson.
3 Roots Celery—J Vause, S Damude.
3 Citrons—J Watson, J Brodie.
6 Tomatoes—J Brodie, Watson.

FRUIT.

6 Winter apples—J Stewart W Conkey.
6 Fall apples—J Brodey, W J Cooey.
3 varieties of Apples, 3 of each variety—J Brodie.
12 Crab apples—J Stewart, R Cook.
6 Plums—R Plant, W Conkey.
6 Pears—J Brodie.
3 Bunches grapes—J H Heard.

FLOWERS

Hand bouquet—J Brodie, W Wilcocks.
Table—W Wilcocks.

DAIRY & OTHER PRODUCE.

5 lbs. Honey in comb—J H Herd, J Watson,
10 lbs. rolled Butter, 1st by John Latimer, $2.00 worth of goods—J Assum, D Harrow.
50 lbs. Tub butter, 1st by John Brown a wringer worth $4.00,—H Mathewson.
Special by James Brander for the best crock of Butter, weight 20 lbs., one Ladies Mantle worth $4.00—C McKinnon.

MANUFACTURES.

Set of horse Shoes, hammer finished, 1st by John McArthur—D McLean, M Riley.
Lumber waggon—J H Heard, J Watson.
1 set Iron Harrows—J Watson.
1 sen Team harness—J Gordon.
1 pair Mens' boots sewed or pegged, T Conkey.
1 pair Women's Sewed boots, by John McLeod—T Conkey.
5 yards Full cloth, home made—A McMillan, D McMillan.
5 yds plain Flannel—A McMillan, A McLean

LADIES' WORK.

1 pair men's socks home made—A McLean, Mrs. Wilcocks.
Pair mitts, home made—A McLean, Mrs Bentham.
Pair mens' Gloves, home made—Mrs Brodie, Mrs A McMillan.
1 Quilt, Patchwork, hand made—1st $1.75 (75 cents by T A Conkey) Mrs Brodie, Mrs Wilcocks.
1, Quilt any other kind—Mrs Brodie.
2 Loaves home made Bread, 1st prize copy of Flesherton Advance 1 year—2nd, copy of same paper 6 months—Mrs Harrow, Mrs Mathews.
Berlin wool work, raised—Mrs, W Watson, Mrs. Tryon.
Col. Berlin wool work—Mrs. W Trimble, Mrs W Watson.
Hooked mat—Mrs W Trimble.
Crotchet work in cotton—Mrs Mathewson, Mrs Plant.
Crotchet work in wool—Mrs J Fletcher, Mrs F Tyron.
Fancy knitting in cotton—Mrs A Currie, Mrs J Brodie.
Braiding in cotton—Mrs W Trimble, Mrs D Harrow.

JUDGES.

Horses and cattle—D McCormick, John Martin and James Lawson.
Sheep Pigs and Poultry—John Nichol, W C Parker and Thos. Paul.
Grain & Seeds—D K McArthur, J Latimer and John Brown.
Ladies Work—Mrs T Buchanan, and Mrs A Webster.

Talks With The Girls.

M. Quad's "Talks With the Boys' has sot me tew thinkin' that sumbody ought tew take up the girls' cause and havin' ben a girl myself for quite a number of years, and bein' full prepared tew 'preciate their feelin's in this matter, I feel jest as if it was my solem duty tew undertake the task, and if my services is accepted I'll garantee not tew teach 'em anything injurious or otherwise.

Now cum rite here, girls, and set yourselves down alongside of yewr "Aunt Mehetible" and listen tew her while she pleads yewr case like a cheap lawyer with both ears open. The old saying, and it's a trew one, that "the hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world" teaches me the great importance of the subject before me and I shall try tew act accordin'. Girls, yew are the buds that air goin' tew blossom intew "the mothers of our land" in a few years, consequently I want tew tell yew sumthin', and I want yew should remember every word I say, if not more'n that. Yew are rosey-cheeked torments, full of pie and mischief now, but yew've got a mishum tew perform besides makin' mud pies and faces at the teacher. Them little dirty hands has got tew mix biskit, and rock the cradle, and play the peanner and and break the hearts of them little freckle-faced Congressmen sittin' on the other side of the school-room, with a stone bruise on each heel, and a geolgrafy losson in the book. In a few years yew'll think the world is made out of love, tolu gum, tight shoes, bangle bracelits, bows, ice-cream, and moonshine, and caramels, but it ain't. Its made up of reality and solid facts, and the sooner yew find it out the more good sound sence yew'd have tew fall back on. Yew all want tew live tew be 99 years old, but yew won't never own yourself tew be more'n 27, 'cause wimmen never dew, and how air yew goin' to accomplish it? With don'ts! Don't crowd both of yewr lungs intew a single bed and plant the seeds of early death amomg yewr dijestive organs 'cause yew think yew'll look better with a slim waste. God made yew just as He wanted yew tew look. If He'd wantid yew made in tew seckshuns and hung together with a almost invisible thread of the same material He'd dun it on the start. He kalkerlatid on yewr lungs expandin' insted of bein' jammed away intew one corner of yewr sistim, like a last year's bunnit in a clothes-closit. He yew a pair of feet tew match your body and tew carry it comfortably threw life, and if He'd tuought cosns and bunions was a improvement He'd put 'em on himself, and saved yew the trouble of wearin shoes tew sizes and a half tew small in order tew manufacture 'em. If He'd thought yew'r heels needed elevation tew inches off'n the ground He'd build them up on the start, and made the corns and mussels tew fit 'em, instid of leavin 'em, to the mercy of fashun and French heels.—Mehitable Hopkins in Detroit Free Press.

WELL REWARDED.

A liberal reward will be paid to any person who will produce a case of Liver, Kidney or Stomach complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure. Bring them along, it will cost you nothing for the medicine if it fails to cure, and you will be well rewarded for your trouble besides. All Blood diseases, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation and general debility are quickly cured. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Price only fifty cents a bottle, For sale by A. Turner & Co. 5

Monthly Fairs.

Markdale—Saturday before Flesherton.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Mount Forest—Third Wednesday in each month.
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Hanover—Monday before Durham.
Walkerton—Last Wednesday in every month.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best Salve in the world for cuts, bruises sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For Sale by A. Turner & Co.

Barrie is building a Public Building at a cost of $50,000. The building will accomodate the postoffice, custom house, inland revenue and an office for Daniel Spry, post office inspector.

NELLO.

THE STORY OF MY LOVE.

CHAPTER I.

Mine—all mine! Mine the grand sweep of meadow-land, green and fertile, looking like a sea of gold when the wind stirred the yellow buttercups! Mine the range of purple-tinted hills that lay in the distance, clothed with trees which had been the growth of centuries! Mine the pine forest stretching down to the sea, with its rich aromatic odours, and its never ceasing music as the wind swayed the heads of the stately pines! Mine the shady woods with their open glades, their leafy cloisters, where the sunlight fell on the sward, filtered, as it were, through the boughs of the interlacing trees, where the wild-flowers grew in lavish abundance—a lovely verdant kingdom wherein the merry brown hares roamed at will and the bright-eyed squirrels leaped fearlessly from bough to bough! Mine the magnificent gardens said to be the finest, the most extensive, and the best laid out in the country, with their wealth of ferneries, and greenhouses, fountains, and statuary! Mine the fine trout stream that ran through the wide domain! Mine the numberless little brooks that meandered along peacefully and found their way to the river Floy, and were then swept on to mingle their waters with the ever restless ocean! Mine the grand old mansion called Jesmond Hall, one of the most ancient and picturesque houses in the country, a stately pile of gray stone standing on the slope of a hill! Originally it had been a castle, held by one of the early Saxon chiefs. It had changed hands many times, and had been added to, taken from, and altered until it became what it was now a confusion of architectural styles, in which the original was almost obliterated by the later additions; yet withal it was a picturesque home. The terraces and gardens had a gentle slope, and the deep swift river Floy ran at the foot of the hill; and in the distance there was a glimpse of the blue waters of the sea—for Jesmond stood on the fair coast of Hampshire. Mine the fine old ruins, with their ivy-clad walls and well-preserved keep! Mine all the wealth that had been hoarded in hidden coffers, the countless thousands that had been accumulating for long years! Mine the diamonds and rare jewels—Jesmond heirlooms! Mine the pictures—literally worth a king's ransom—the fine old silver, the treasures of gold, of rare old china, of buhl, of jaspor, and of marqueterie—all that the old Hall contained was mine—all mine!

As I, Felicia Gordon, stood on the summit of the steep grassy hill, everything on which I gazed was my own, except the vast expanse of sea which bounded my estate on the south.

I was not vain; but, looking back, I should imagine that my heart swelled at that moment with a sense of my own importance. On this large domain there were many tenants. Pretty little farms nestled in the valleys, quaint old-fashioned homesteads dotted the meadows, the straggling little village of Mead was all mine, and I owned many houses in the town that lay nearest to the Hall—Honton; so that numbers of men, women and children were dependent on me, many lives lay as it were in my hand; and on this bright May morning, when I stood on the hill top, looking over my miniature kingdom, my heart and mind were full of good resolutions.

This splendid fortune which had come so unexpectedly to me should not be spent on myself in lavish luxury, in gaieties, frivolities, or senseless extravagance. That I seriously resolved. Heaven had given it to me, and I would do good with it and use it wisely. There should be no bitter abject poverty, no sickness should go unrelieved, there should be no want of education on my fair estate of Jesmond? I would be queen and mother to my people. My heart warmed to them yearned over them, as I stood and contemplated how bounteously Dame Nature had dealt with the fruitful lands before me. No motherless children should weep on these fertile lands. My first undertaking would be an orphanage, to be built down by the sea, yet so near Jesmond that I could visit it every day. No old men or old women should live half starving and die forlorn within the limits of my domain, for I would have almshouses that should yet be comfortable homes. The sick should not lie neglected and helpless in the cottages that were mine, for I would build a large hospital near the village of Mead, where the air was clear and bracing. The children should have their schools and play grounds and education should be free to all. I would be queen and mother in a true and real sense to those whom Heaven had in a measure confided to my charge. My heart and soul were fired with these resolves.

The blue heavens shone above me; the yielding earth laughed beneath my feet; the air was full of the luscious odours of May, the scent from the pine forest, the brine from the sea, and nearer to me came heavily-laden gusts of perfume from lilac and magnolia blossom. I shall never forget the moment when, standing on the green hill top, the shining, shimmering sea in the distance, I registered my vow to live for others and not for myself alone.

The will which gave me all this wealth was indisputably clear and simple, and had in it no flaw. My uncle Sir William Jesmond had but one son, Paul, who was his natural heir and successor.

The Jesmonds of Jesmond Dene were a very old family, but at the time when my story begins their number had greatly decreased, They had died away—fathers, mothers, sisters and brother—until there was no one left of the once numerous race except Sir William, the owner and lord of Jesmond Dene, and his sister, my mother, Teresa Jesmond.

Sir William was at heart a miser. He loved money for its own sake, and the sight of it never failed to bring a smile to his hard mean face. Although my mother was his own and only sister, when she married he gave her no dowry, but very unwillingly made her a present of a few hundred pounds with an intimation that she must ask for no more. She never did: but in those days, when she deplored my uncle's meanness, she never thought that all his gold was accumulating for me.

My mother had married a clergyman, the Rev. Arthur Gordon, and I was their only child. They both died when I was a girl of thirteen, and my father's sister, Annette Gordon, took charge of me.

Sir William Jesmond was married, and a son and heir had been born unto him; but in his lifetime the home at Jesmond Dene was not a happy one. I went there once. Lady Jesmond had asked aunt Annette to bring me for the summer holidays, and I well remember the magnificent old house with its treasures, the gardens and grounds, the woods and the sea. I remember Sir William, a tall spare man with a mean face and small cunning eyes; I vividly recollect Lady Jesmond, a faded elegant woman, who seemed to me to be tired of life; but I remember best of all my handsome bright-faced cousin Paul. I was thirteen years of age then, he five years older. He was very kind to me, and I loved him with all the ardor of a childish love. He was a young prince and a veritable hero in my eyes.

"Cheer up, Felicia!" he would say to me twenty times a day. "I am going out to see the world, and, when I have seen it, I shall come home and marry you."

"But Sir William will never give us any money," I would remark, with a keen conviction that nothing could be done without it.

"I will make plenty of money, dear. My father may keep his," he would answer cheerfully.

And, of all the memories of my girlhood that of my handsome, generous laughter-loving cousin stands out the brightest and the best. How little I dreamed in those days that I should ever take his place!

My life was spent quietly enough with my aunt Annette. She had a small annuity, out of which she fed, clothed, and educated me for I had not in the wide world one shilling of my own.

It may be imagined therefore what a change it was for me—a penniless orphan—when I became sole heiress of Sir William Jesmond of Jesmond Dene, his land, shares, untold gold, all mine.

Lady Jesmond died when her son was nineteen, and after her death, Sir William became, if possible, a greater miser than ever, and almost refused himself the necessaries of life. None but the old servants bound by strong ties to the family would tolerate his meanness: even his son Paul could not endure it. He wanted to see the world, as he had alway desired, and, after many disputes and arguments, Sir William purchased for him a commission in the —th Hussars. Three months after he joined the regiment it was ordered off to India, and Paul thankfully embraced the opportunity of getting away from the paternal roof and "seeing the world" at the same time. Five years passed, and there was little communication between father and son. Sir Williams was a wretched, miserable life, and it ended as miserably as it had been spent. He was found dead in his chair, holding in his hand a letter written by Colonel Brownlow, of the —th Hussars, telling him that his son Captain Paul Jesmond had died suddenly of a malignant fever without having had time to write him one word of farewell.

The old Baronet had never seemed to care much for either his wife or child, but that letter killed him. He had given his life, his heart, his soul, to gold—he had worshipped his accumulating wealth to the exclusion of everything else in life; yet he could not live on, knowing that his handsome, careless, generous son had been snatched away in the bloom of early manhood, and he,—his father—denied the consolation of one parting word or one last look at the face he loved.

Sir William was buried in due course; and, when his will was read, it was made clear that I, Felicia Gordon, was sole heiress of all his wealth. The terms of the will were simple enough. He left everything he had in the world—land, houses, money, scrip, and shares—to his son Paul Jesmond. If his son married and had issue, the property, was to descend intact to his eldest son. If Paul Jesmond died unmarried, it was to go without reserve to his niece Felicia Gordon, the only child of Teresa Gordon, his sister. It was to descend to her children if she married; if she did not, it passed to some distant relatives to whom Sir William had always entertained a strong antipathy. That I was next of kin there was no doubt. Sir William was dead, Paul was dead; Jesmond Dene, with its rich revenues, was mine.

It was early in February when I came with aunt Annette to take possession of my new home, and it was the beginning of May when I made my resolve to live for others and not for myself.

I had been at Jesmond Dene, about three months, and had grown to love the place and the people I had just begun to put my philanthropic resolutions into shape, and my buildings were slowly rising beneath the hands of the many workmen engaged. The grand old mansion had been renovated—some of Sir William's hoarded thousands had been spent upon it—and the grounds and gardens had been rescued from the weeds and long standing neglect. I had increased my staff of servants—indeed everything was in the very perfection of order—I was unboundedly happy. I was to be happier still, although the full light of the sun was hidden from me for the present.

CHAPTER II.

A smile came over the kindly face of my aunt Aunt Annette when I told her of my resolves.

"Mother and queen!" she repeated. "I wish you health, strength, and wisdom to keep to them."

The May sun never shone on a brighter fate than mine or on a lighter heart. It was true the shadow of death lay over my new inheritance: but then I had seen my uncle only once, and that some years before. For the bright-faced handsome cousin dead in a far-off land I had the deepest pity, and one of my first acts was to erect to his memory a beautiful marble cross—and that memorial was always surmounted by fragrant flowers.

All the novelty of my position had died away when the month of May came round. I might have been Miss Gordon of Jesmond Dene all my life, everything came so natureally to me. The tenants liked and trusted me, the servants showed me absolute devotion; my buildings were all in process; my aunt and I were happy beyond words in the grand old mansion. Our neighbors had called upon us; but it was too soon after Sir William's death for us to receive or pay visits. We were happy enough without that—indeed the hours of the day were not sufficiently long for all the pleasant occupations we found to engage us. Aunt Annette was as young at heart as I was myself and, when the moon was silvering the ripples of the sea, it was no unusual thing for us to wander down to the shore and gaze in rapturous awe and delight at the majestic scene before us.

I was nearly twenty when this great change of fortune came to me, but still a girl in lightness of heart, in want of knowledge of the world and its ways—a girl, with all a girl's fresh innocent love of fun and frolic. I had had no lover; my heart was fresh and untouched.

It is a hard thing for a girl to tell her own love-story as I have to tell mine—to tell of the dream that came to me before I knew that my fair inheritance was to be the scene of a tragedy—to disclose the beautiful love dream that came to me as the revelation of a newer, brighter, higher life than any I had yet known.

In the same green county, on the shore of the same shining sea, stood an old mansion called Dunroon. It was larger than Jesmond Dene, though not quite so picturesque; still there were not many finer old places than Dunroon. The great feature of it was the river Doon, which ran through the grounds. From the hill-top I could see the tall towers and turrets of Dunroon the ancestral home of the Saxons.

When we had been some time at Jesmond Dene, Lady Saxon called upon us, and was pleased from the first moment she saw me to take great interest in me,

"The Jesmonds and the Saxons have been friends for many generations," she said: "they have loved and intermarried. It seems strange that you and I—you a young woman and I an old one—should be the sole representatives of two such ancient families."

"But you have a son," I remarked—for I had heard much of Lord Saxon.

"I do not mean that," she interrupted hastily. "Of course my son is the representative of the Saxons. What I intended to say was that it seems strange we should both have the care of house and estate. My son is away in Italy, and I do know when he will return." Here she looked at me with sudden emotion in her face. "My son is more than the whole world to me," she went on. "He is the very core of my heart, the very light of my eyes. The world is shadow to me, but he stands out clear and distinct. It is the great pain of my life that he lives away from me, that he seems to love art better than nature, Italy better than England. I cannot understand it; but it is so."

Lady Saxon was still a handsome well-preserved woman, with a penchant for rich dresses and costly furs, diamonds and priceless lace. I had heard others say that her son was "art mad." He had now been five years from home, during which time his mother had lived at Dunroon, and had managed everything for him. Indeed it was often said that but for his mother's continual mention of him Lord Saxon would have been forgotten on his own estate. My aunt and I both liked Lady Saxon, and I often listened patiently by the hour while she expatiated upon the virtues of her darling son. He was the handsomest, the dearest, the best. There was no face, no voice like his. The only flaw in his otherwise perfect character was that he would loiter in Italy instead of coming home.

"Have you ever dreamed how beautiful a man's face can be?" she asked me. "Imagine one that is dark, proud, tender, and imperious, drawing the hearts of all women who look upon it—a face that seems always raised to the skies and hardly to see the lowly earth. That is my son. He is like that. I have seen women watch for the gleam of his eyes, for his smiles, for the words from his lips; but he did not see them. He sees the stars that illumine the skies, but he does not see the daisies that grow in the fields. When you come to Dunroon, I will show you his portrait, and when you see his face you will understand better."

So it happened that I thought a great deal and formed a very high opinion of Lord Saxon because his mother talked to me incessantly and almost always in praise of him.

"If he were but more like other men," she would say, with a sigh, "if he had ambition, I should not care at what he aimed. He thinks more of a broken statue than of a seat in Parliament. An old picture has a greater charm for him than any wordly honors. Music, painting, and sculpture are the three things he loves best; and he is an English nobleman, master of a large estate, and head of a grand old race!"

I ventured to suggest that all noblemen need not have the same tastes; but she was dissatisfied because her son frittered away his time and his opportunities upon art instead of cultivating the ordinary life of an English nobleman.

"My husband," she said, "was a staunch Conservative, yet I do not believe that my son knows the difference between a Whig and a Tory. My husband never allowed one foot of timber to be cut down on his estate; my son writes always about the preservation of pictures. But he is so good that I ought to be ashamed to grumble at his one great failing."

"My son is a dreamer of dreams," she told me one morning, when she had driven over to Jesmond Dene. "He is led astray by a passionate love of beauty. He detects loveliness where others see none. The curve of an arm, the graceful arch of a neck, the beauty of a dark straight brow, delight him. He is, in fact, one of those people, half artist, half genius, who 'can hear a leaf fall.' Do you know all that that phrase means?"

"I can imagine it," I replied.

"My son has a theory that the world can be set straight by a right understanding of beauty, and by a proper cultivation of it. He is a dreamer in a world of stern reality, and some day or other I am sorely afraid his dreams will bring him bitter sorrow. If he would but marry!"

"That would perhaps cure him of dreaming," I said laughingly.

After that we paid a visit to Dunroon. While aunt Annette talked to some visitors, Lady Saxon, addressing me in a low voice, said—

"Come with me to my boudoir. My son's portrait hangs there, and I want you to see it."

I went with her. There was a strange wild beating at my heart, a strange sense of something unusual. I felt more as though I were going to see a living person than a picture.

The boudoir was an elegant room facing the west; a soft light fell on the picture of the master of Dunroon, Lord Saxon.

We stood silent before it. She did not even turn to me and say, 'That is my son.' Looking at the portrait, I seemed to know by instinct why he could not help his love of beauty, and why women loved him as they looked upon him. It was a handsome, even fascinating face. The kingly poise of the head, the well chiseled features, the dark straight brows, the keen dark eyes that seemed full of pride and passion—eyes that had in them the power of controlling others—the shapely mouth, combining the firmness of a man with the tenderness of a woman—the face altogether was one that seen either in a picture or in real life must haunt you for ever. The eyes looked into mine as I stood silently marvelling at the beauty portrayed on the canvass.

'That is my son," said Lady Saxon, after we had gazed for some time upon the strangely fascinating picture.

Why did I stand there with fast beating heart and flushed face? Why did my hands tremble? Why did those dark tender eyes flash into mine as it were? I turned to her ladyship.

"What is your son's name?" I asked.

"Lionel," she answered, smiling; "but at home he was always called 'Nello.'"

Again I relapsed into silence.

"His face is full of power," said his mother proudly.

"Yes," I answered, with unconscious prophecy; "but the power is latent. It will not develop yet. He must dream out his dreams, and then——"

"Ah, then!" his mother echoed, with a sigh.

I had seen no face like the one before me. I had not believed that nature was so lavish in the bestowal of her riches upon mortal man. I went home haunted by Lord Saxon's portrait. If I looked at the western sky where the great rosy clouds were gathered, it was there; if I looked along the serried rows of dark pine trees, it was there; when the moon shone out at night, and I walked down to see it glittering on the sea, the face was there. It came to me in the starlight, in my dreams, in the rays of the sun. I saw it in the chalice of the white lilies and the hearts of the red roses.

"I am haunted," I said to myself. And even as the face seemed to be photographed on my brain, so the name rang like music in my ears, "Nello, Nello!" The birds sang it, the wind whispered it, and I laughed at my strange fancies.

(TO BE CONTINUED).

The Armless Artict of Antwerp.

In Antwerp the only one of these mechanical artists who has gained more than a bare subsistence is "Felix," a man born without hands or arms, but who uses his feet instead, and with such dexterity that he paints three pictures while the every day young man whom nature has in no way distinguished barely gets through two of the same size. Needless to say, Felix finds customers while better pictures than his remain unsold at lower prices. There are too many, especially of the tourist order, who infinitely prefer a poor copy of the "Descent of the Cross," regarding which they can say: You see that picture? Painted by who do you call 'em—I forget the name—some great gun of a painter; well, sir, this copy was painted by a man named Felix—a fellow without any arms—he done it, every inch of it, sir, with his feet. I seen him to work on it myself in one of them everlasting galleries, I don't remember which one, they're all alike to me. I don't take so much stock to paintings, you know, but, by George! that fellow can do as good a picture with his feet as those big painters they make such a fuss over could do with their hands, and, as far as I can see, one's just as good as another. My daughter don't think so, but you know she's been to one of these here schools in New York. She don't take no stock in anything less its 600 or 700 years old in the way of a picture. It suits me, though. Yes, sir, painted it with his feet. I seen him do it." And so Felix, the armless artist of Antwerp, has through his affliction made enough money to purchase the house he lives in, and he could, if report be true, retire from his labors and live upon his income, while the better artist, his neighbor, in no way differing from the average brother in respect to legs and arms, starves under the shadows of the Sacred Tragedy!

Burmese Housekeeping.

The dwellings of the Burmese are built on small wood or bamboo posts; of bamboo mat walls; roofs of palm leaves, or dried grass; each house has a front verandah, closed only at the ends, if at all; the door from one to three feet from the ground, made of rough boards or of bamboos. Then the main or sleeping room is from four to six feet higher than the verandah, with its floor from seven to ten feet above the ground. The veranda is the place of cooking, eating, visiting, buying and selling. But you would look in vain for stove, oven, fireplace, or chimney. A bed of earth, or ashes, in one end of the veranda, is the centre of the kitchen; a large jar of water, two or three small earthern pots for cooking, one for rice and the other for some kind of curry, are usual sufficient; a water dipper, made of cocoanut shell, a wooden ladle for the rice pot, a bread wooden platter in which to put the rice when cooked, and around which the family squat to eat, with one or two brass or iron spoons for the curry, with perhaps two or three earthern dishes, constitute the furniture of the kitchen. Tablet, chairs, spoons, knives, forks, cups and saucers, etc., were not seen among them. To shuffle and manipulate a dozen and one articles that can't be eaten in order to get a simple meal into one's mouth is a vain display and an endless hindrance; at least, so a Burman would say. A young Burman left his jungle home to follow an English officer; when he returned he entertained the astonished household with a description of the Englishman's table—its dimensions, splendid spread, rich china, plated and glassware, cutlery, etc., and the beautiful chairs. The old mother asked, "and do they eat all these things?" "O no, of course not," replied the young man "Well, then, what's the good of it all?" was the old lady's poser.

How Slaves are Made on the Congo.

